364.13 Rosenberg, Julius. Rosenberg, Ethel (Greenglass). Communism 53-11656

"Developed from author's articles in American Legion Magazine and Reader's Digest, this work is more an exposition of the Communists' exploitation of the Rosenberg Case than the Case itself." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 50:195 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by Philip Dodd

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 20 '53
500w

"While the definitive work on the case remains to be written, this is for the time being a useful report. Recommended for larger public libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 78:2099 D 1 '53 130w

"The actual issues in the trial are treated concisely and fairly by the author, who also supplies a useful chronology of the legal and extralegal developments. There are, in addition, some sidelights on the course of Soviet 'justice,' including encomiums on that brutal system by Dennis N. Pritt, the British lawyer whose strictures on American legal processes were widely circulated by the Rosenbergs' supporters. The end of the Rosenberg case is not yet; it is still being used by the Communists. Therefore, this summary of most of the pertinent facts has ■ continuing value." H. W. Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 My ■ '54 450w

Reviewed by F. S. Adams

N Y Times p20 F 21 '54 380w

FINK, HAROLD KENNETH. Long journey: a verbatim report of a case of severe psychosexual infantilism. 320p $3.95 Julian press

131.34 Psychoanalysis 54-10737

"Selections from the case history of a patient undergoing analysis are presented [here]. The author, a practicing psychotherapist in New York city, has compiled an account of one patient's search for reality by using the record of the patient's own words and his own interpretations of his dreams. The author has excluded his comments, interpretations and the discussions that accompanied the sessions. . . . The patient, diagnosed as an ambulatory paranoid schizophrenic made a good adjustment to reality and urged the publication of his story." Springf'd Republican

Kirkus 22:302 My 1 '54 150w

"An engrossing book of considerable importance, Long Journey is recommended for acquisition by both public and special libraries." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1313 Jl '54 190w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 10 '54
70w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 27 '54 90w

FINLAY, WILLIAM WALTER, and others. Human behavior in industry. 247p $4 McGraw 658.3 Industrial relations. Human relations 53-12428

"This book was written to assist men in industry—executives, supervisors, and foremen—in meeting and solving the personnel and human relations problems which constantly confront them on the job." (Pref) It is based on a course on human relations for foremen and supervisors, developed by the Institute of Management at Southern Methodist University, and is written by an engineer, a psychologist, and a sociologist.

Booklist 51:77 O 15 '54

Reviewed by D. K. Oko

Library J 79:1062 Je 1 '54 80w

FINLETTER, THOMAS KNIGHT. Power and policy; US foreign policy and military power in the hydrogen age. 408p $5 Harcourt

327.73 Military policy. U.S.—Foreign policy 54-11328

"This book combines the military and foreign policy aspects of the problems which America faces today. Mr. Finletter was the Secretary of the Air Force from 1950 to 1953. . . The book is divided into four parts. Part I deals with the atomic threat to the United States and to our NATO Allies. . . Part II deals with the problems of the United States in the Gray Areas—all the rest of the world outside of NATO where the Free World is in contact with the Communist World. Part III deals with specific problems of military planning. . . Part IV takes up the statements of President Truman and President Eisenhower calling for a system of enforced disarmament." Publisher's note

"Together with its dramatic thesis (which is rather repetitively stated), Mr. Finletter's book has a good many persuasive and important things to say. The thesis itself is forcefully reasoned and documented, and from the standpoint of pure logic there is no contradiction in prescribing both rearmament and fresh approaches to disarmament. But pure logic operates only on the abstract or mechanical plane. If the human element is fully taken into account it would seem utopian to expect the average tax-payer to fork out more dollars for large-scale military expansion and, simultaneously, to accept the idea of presently scrapping all the nation's armaments." C. J. Rolo

+ — Atlantic 194:95 N '54 370w

Booklist 51:98 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:57 O '54 20w

"This is a book of grave warning about the peril of nuclear weapons to the United States. As secretary of air 1950-53 Mr. Finletter is in an excellent position to know whereof he speaks." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Christian Century 71:1463 D 1 '54 1200w

"We may question [Mr Finletter's] emphasis on massive retaliation to the exclusion of limited wars and ask at least for tolerance for the endeavors of diplomats to seek some middle ground to the stark alternatives posed by the 'balance of terror' and unlikely disarmament. However we are immensely indebted to Mr. Finletter for having been the first to pose these questions in so clear a framework and for having called with such great responsibility and vigor for the measures urgently necessary to meet our constantly growing dangers." G. W. Jaeger

+ — Commonweal 61:314 D 17 '54 2500w

"A book of outstanding importance and terrifying immediacy, this is the most convincing exposition of the facts of life in the hydrogen age." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1891 O 15 '54 120w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Nation 179:466 N 27 '54 850w

"Seven years ago Thomas K. Finletter wrote a government committee report which read almost like a best-seller. . . Now Mr. Finletter has written another report. It is readable, alarming, brilliant, and important. Like its predecessor it is a sober analysis of military reality and a plan for survival. Tragically, this time it does not represent official thinking." Gordon Harrison

+ New Repub 131:20 O 18 '54 1400w

"Rarely do public issues of the highest importance receive so lucid and responsible a discussion as in this book." August Heckscher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 O 3 '54 900w

"Mr. Finletter has launched an 'Operation Candor' of his own. That is the most important thing—more important by far than differences I might note on the hope for eventual disarmament or the fault I might find with his misstating of problems of allocation as problems of priorities. May the book help to generate the wisdom without which there cannot be resolve!" C. B. Marshall

+ N Y Times p7 O 3 '54 1100w

Reviewed by S. L. A. Marshall

+ Sat R 37:25 O 2 '54 1400w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 10 '54 650w

Reviewed by Herbert Feis

Yale R n s 44:282 winter '55 470w

FINLEY, MOSES I. World of Odysseus. 179p $3 Viking

883 Homer, Civilization, Homeric 54-9598

A discussion of the civilization of the Greek world for which the poet Homer wrote. It describes Homer's influence on world literature, economic and social factors of Greek civilization of the time, and the nature of the ethical and religious standards. Bibliographical essay. Index.

Booklist 51:1; 79 S 1 '54; O 15 '54

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 16 '54 360w

"This is a book primarily for scholars and students of Greek civilization. But it brings into focus the realities of that bygone time with great simplicity and even greater interest which should contact a public beyond the academic field."

+ Kirkus 22:514 Ag 1 '54 210w

"Excellent bibliographical essay, and foreword by Mark Van Doren. Highly recommended." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:1497 S 1 '54 110w

Reviewed by Jacob Korg

Nation 179:470 N 27 '54 50w

FINNEY, JACK. 5 against the house. 221p $2.95 Doubleday

54-5366

"Boredom at a small Illinois college spurs Jerry, Guy, Brick and Al, who tells the story in the first person, to prove their ingenuity at crime. Brushed off by the local police, they dream of robbing Harold's Club, in Reno, where they'd worked the previous summer, and the dream edges into reality as they solve, through Al's girl, Tina, the problem of getting there almost invisibly (in a trailer) and that of the gimmick to hoist the loot from the casino." Kirkus

Kirkus 22:10 Ja 1 '54 150w

"What it all probably needed was a sort of genially amoral treatment à la Arsene Lupin. What it gets is the goods complete with adolescent romance (viewed from the inside) and a moral lecture to close. The essential gimmick is worth a look for its preposterous ingenuities and Mr. Finney gives the events some nice panic-striking swerves." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 28 '54 90w

"The admirable short-story writer Jack Finney has come up with a wonderful idea in his first novel, 5 Against the House. . . The elaborately ingenious gimmicks with which the raid is carried out would stir the admiration of Raffles or even Arsene Lupin; it's a pity that the modern temper does not condone those gentlemen's casual amorality." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p27 Mr 7 '54 130w

"This yarn may be crazy, but it's hard to stop reading. B minus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 28 '54 90w

FINNEY, JACK—Continued

"Implausibilities abound, but story is well paced." Sergeant Cuff
 Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 30w
 Springfield Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 60w

FIRTH, JOHN D'EWES. Rendall of Winchester; the life and witness of a teacher. 273p il $4 Oxford

B or 92 Rendall, Montague John

Biography of an English scholar-schoolmaster, who served Winchester for thirty-seven years as classical master, Second Master, and Headmaster. After his retirement he toured the Commonwealth on behalf of the Rhodes Trustees, and served on many public committees. Index.

"It would be most unfortunate if this biography by a most distinguished Wykehamist and schoolmaster were read merely by the small circle of those who knew Rendall or who are connected with the school he served. It is far too good for that. The book is, in fact, a brilliant piece of work that has much to give to anyone concerned with education, or, indeed, to the general reader interested in social history." Eric James

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 21 '54 450w

"As a loyal Old Wykehamist and in his generation a 'character' as complex as Rendall himself, Mr. Firth has steered a skillful course. . . Succeeding paragraphs cancel each other out in a way that will only confirm the vulgar view that one characteristic of the Wykehamist is his ability to laugh at institutions of which he would resent the slightest criticism by anyone outside the charmed circle." R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 48:328 S 18 '54 1550w

"Headmasters are by profession remote; doubly remote when dead. The affairs of a great public school are apt, in print, to seem parochial. It will be a pity if considerations like these limit the appeal of a wise and fascinating biography. Mr. Firth writes as one who felt Rendall's spell, but he shows not only the man's extraordinary energy and magnetism, but also his emotionalism and his bachelor indifference to the material needs of others." A. O. J. C.

+ Spec p351 S 17 '54 240w

"Admirably smooth and ordered narrative. . . After reading Canon Firth's book it is impossible to call 'Monty' Rendall anything other than great. Everything about him was on so generous a scale that he takes his place unquestioned among the giants. The feet of clay are there for all to see (and Canon Firth enlivens his narrative with some excellent analysis and hilariously funny examples of 'Monty's' weaknesses), but they do not alter the giant's stature."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p603 S 24 '54 750w

FISCHER, BERNHARD, and JACOBS, HERBERT. Elements of mathematics for radio, television and electronics. 569p $7.20; college ed $5.40; Macmillan (N Y)

510 Mathematics 54-9573

"An introduction to the minimum of mathematics needed in such work as radio and television servicing. One of the first chapters deals with common fractions and the account is carried only into elementary algebra. However, the use of the slide rule is explained. Applications are constantly indicated both in the exposition and in the problems. Suitable for home study as well as for courses at the vocational school level." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1234 Je 15 '54 60w
 N Y New Tech Bks 39:45 My '54

FISCHER, HANS. The birthday; a merry tale with many pictures. [21p] $3 Harcourt

54-8571

A picture-story book for ages four to eight. It is all about the wonderful birthday party prepared for old Lisette by the animals who lived with her and loved her.

Booklist 51:116 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:11 O '54 20w

"Everyone, young and old, loved Pitschi, the kitten in last year's beautiful big picture book of that name. Now the author, distinguished Swiss artist, tells an even better companion story." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 14 '54 110w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '54 120w

+ Horn Bk 30:326 O '54 60w

"Another grand picture book by the author-artist of the feted Pitschi."

+ Kirkus 22:633 S 15 '54 80w

"It is a gay, birthday book, with brief text, just pointing to the fun to be found by long looking at the big pictures. Mr. Fischer's very individual style has a humor happily contrasting to current American caricature. His masterly pen line and quaint curlicues combine with a modern use of floating spaces of color." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ pt2 p5 N 14 '54 290w

"This is as successful a picture book as will be found in a month of shopping Saturdays." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times pt2 p38 N 14 '54 110w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinhead

New Yorker 30:202 N 27 '54 20w

Reviewed by B. B. Thorpe

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 14 '54 40w

"An altogether endearing picture book." Maria Cimino

+ Sat R 37:66 N 13 '54 110w

FISCHER, ROBERT BLANCHARD. Applied electron microscopy. 231p il $4.85 Ind. univ. press

578 Electron microscope

53-10021

"Basic information on microscopy in general and on electron microscopy in particular is presented first in this book. After this introductory matter the space is devoted to explicit information on the preparation of materials for examination in the electron microscope, and on techniques of using the instrument, including specialized techniques such as dark field microscopy. The book should be useful to anyone in need of an introduction to the use of the electron microscope in biological and medical research." (Library J) Index.

"The major emphasis is on experimental methods and the principles underlying them. The explanations and discussions are clear and well illustrated. Although, as the author states, his experience has been solely with commercial instruments of a particular make (RCA), most of what is written is equally applicable to work with other types of electron microscope. Applications to a variety of problems are dealt with, but rather sketchily." M. L. Huggins

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:1460 Mr 5 '54 160w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:778 Ap 15 '54 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:40 My '54

FISCHER, WILLIAM von. See Von Fischer, W.

FISHBEIN, MORRIS, ed. Children for the childless; with chapters by Sidonie Matsner Gruenberg [and others]. 223p $2.95 Doubleday

618.17 Sterility. Fertility 53-5603

"A concise explanation of the medical, scientific and legal facts about conception, fertility, sterility, heredity and adoption." (Sub-title) With each chapter written by an authority in the particular field, this book provides accurate information for, and answers to practically every question a layman might ask concerning the topics noted above." Library J

Kirkus 22:29 Ja 1 '54 160w

"Highly recommended for all public libraries. Includes good bibliography for the general reader." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:447 Mr 1 '54 70w

Wis Lib Bul 50:66 Mr '54

FISHBEIN, MORRIS. Popular medical encyclopedia. rev & enl ed 514p il $4.95 Doubleday

616.02 Medicine, Popular 53-10246

"The author's preface indicates the range and viewpoint of the book more accurately than does the title. 'This volume,' writes Dr. Fishbein, well known author in the medical field, 'discusses in simple language the diseases that affect mankind, some of the more important symptoms . . . some of the methods that are employed in the treatment of disease, and the methods by which disease is spread and prevented.' The scope of the book extends beyond diseases, however, to include discussion of various organs of the body, and other topics as diverse as left-handedness, child care, swimming pools, freckles, and clothing. The arrangement is alphabetical with see and see also references, and there is a detailed 30-page index." Subscription Bks Bul

"Recency of information and extent of revision were checked. . . These checks indicated that, although the revision is not extensive, it is sufficient to bring the book up to date on the important medical developments of the last three years. . . Among omissions noted are cerebral palsy, prefrontal lobotomy, and poison ivy. In the discussion of cyanosis, no mention is made of the 'blue baby operation' developed by Doctors Taussig and Blalock. . . The lack of pronunciation is a disadvantage in a book intended for laymen. The book appears to achieve its purpose: 'to be helpful to the physician, for it has long been established that an informed patient is more co-operative.' The Popular Medical Encyclopedia should be useful in the home and in any general reference collection, and is recommended."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 25:29 Ap '54 600w

FISHER, MRS AGNES ADAMS. The quiet woman. 299p $3.75 Funk

54-6358

"An appealing story of a courageous young woman who, leaving New York for frontier Wisconsin at the turn of the century with the man she could never legally marry, eventually wins the respect of the community." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:237 Jl '54 30w

"Told with quiet warmth, reflecting an abundant family life, this is skilled handling of an unusual theme. Marguerite Steen's 'Anna Fitzalan' takes a parallel case, but sets it in so different a milieu that—by contrast—it makes this book seem muted and undramatic. Despite the ethical aspects, it is pleasant reading."

+ Kirkus 22:271 Ap 15 '54 190w

"Character drawing is extraordinary for a first novel while descriptions of the countryside and the inexorable problems of wrestling a livelihood from its soil are drawn with real understanding. Highly recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 79:1315 Jl '54 80w

"The author never manages to attain a deep, moving reality, although it is to her credit that she avoids a happy ending. With the country setting, and the wealth of domestic details, Mrs. Fisher succeeds in giving this unconventional love tale a story-book atmosphere that is as fuzzily authentic as a sampler of Home Sweet Home." Andrea Park

N Y Times p18 Jl 11 '54 210w

Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54 150w

FISHER, CLAY. Tall men. 182p $2.50 Houghton; pa 35c Ballantine

54-5702

Tale of a great drive of 3000 head of Texas cattle in 1866. Nelson Story, a real person, but called Nathan Stark in this book and the Allison brothers drove the herd north and across the Plains and the mountains to Montana. There were obstacles in their way: Indians; rustlers; weather and the land itself; but they were "tall men" and they succeeded.

Booklist 50:322 Ap 15 '54

"Sombre, sanguine and generally exciting stuff."

Kirkus 21:804 D 15 '53 70w

"A mighty good story, but its history is thinner than cigarette paper." Hoffman Birney

+ — N Y Times p33 Ap 11 '54 70w

"Mr. Fisher's tall men are the Texan cowhands. . . In his telling they are both tall and alive." S. M. Agnew

+ Sat R 37:15 Mr 27 '54 70w

FISHER, MRS DOROTHEA FRANCES (CANFIELD). Vermont tradition; the biography of an outlook on life. 488p $4.50 Little

974.3 [917.43] Vermont 53-10226

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"This is a fascinating book. The organization and approach are original, the author's convictions are as staunch as her research was diligent, and her style is delightful." R. A. Brown

+ Ann Am Acad 293:172 My '54 400w

"Vermont traditions are shown as they developed among the early English settlers and as they grew. . . From the beginning the process of growth was not easy, and the author has analyzed with sound documentation that process from the pioneer days down to the present. . . The inner essence of the book reveals a deeper theme—an emphasis on democracy as it thrives in Vermont." A. W. Peach

+ Cath World 178:398 F '54 300w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 71:1434 N 24 '54 70w

Nation 178:244 Mr 20 '54 280w

"It is a sound book but I found it difficult to read. Mrs. Fisher, in her endeavor to make her points, at times belabors them rather wearisomely. But for all that it is a book that presents Vermont history and life from the point of view of an eminent and articulate daughter of that state who has thought on these things for a lifetime." E. S. Dodge

+ — New Eng Q 27:269 Je '54 150w

"Clearly, Mrs. Fisher enjoyed writing this excellent book about the Vermont outlook on life, in which she makes a notable addition to the literature of that state. . . Although the case for Vermont is probably overstated in it, as a picture of what is best in the American way of life, Vermont Tradition should be widely read and enjoyed."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:99 Mr '54 240w

"It is not always easy for the reader of this book to see just where Mrs. Fisher leaves off and Vermont begins. Nor is it always clear whether she is telling time by her own or her grandfathers' clocks. This, I think, is as she would have it. So would I, for one of the pleasures in following her text lies in the interweaving it discloses of dates, places, and people. To the people the times are all Modern Times, and however they may range, their foundations stand within the borders of the Green Mountain State." Helen MacAfee

+ Yale R n ■ 43:464 spring '54 800w

FISHER, HUGH. The ballet [Eng title: Ballet for boys and girls]. 95p il $2.50 Crowell
792.8 Ballet 53-8411

A primer for hopeful balletomanes. The book is an English publication. It discusses the qualities that make a dancer; qualifications and functions of the choreographer; the story, music, scenery and costumes; the history of the ballet; and Russian and English ballet. Contains many photographs. Glossary; bibliography; list of ballets to see.

Booklist 50:302 Ap 1 '54

"Of circulation value but only recommended to the largest ballet and theatre collections which seek completeness. Beautifully written. I enjoyed it and recommend it to your readers." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1407 Ag '54 20w

Reviewed by R. J. Woody

N Y Times p14 D 27 '53 130w

FISHER, JAMES. Wonderful world; the adventure of the earth we live on; art ed: F. H. K. Henrion. (Hanover House publication) 65p col il $2.50 Garden City bks.

551 Earth—Juvenile literature. Geology—Juvenile literature 54-12524

A picture-and-text book which in non-technical language describes the earth and the way men live on it, from the solar system's obscure beginnings in a possible celestial explosion, to a prophetic view of the city of the future, clean, quiet, and easy to get around in.

Booklist 51:47 S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:13 O '54 30w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 14 '54 150w

"A fascinating book for either children or adults, but perhaps intended chiefly for children. It may be remarked in this connection that the best modern books for children contain a great deal of information that today's adults missed when they were children." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:1271 O 20 '54 140w

"For use at home or in the classroom as a springboard to specialized studies."

+ Kirkus 22:339 Je 1 '54 80w

"A unique presentation. . . Book has special value for the study of geography in grades 5-7." E. C. Alexander

+ Library J 79:1663 S 15 '54 70w

"By its size (ten by thirteen inches), wealth of color, variety of kinds of pictures and fresh approach to oft-told facts, this book will be most attractive to children of various ages. Actually, its material will be best comprehended by those at least eleven or twelve years old, and to junior high age. But many younger children already have been fascinated." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p12 N 14 '54 350w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 14 '54 20w

"While designed primarily for juveniles, this excellent book also ought to be of interest to many adults." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 8 '54 100w

FISHER, JAMES, and LOCKLEY, RONALD MATHIAS. Sea-birds; an introduction to the natural history of the sea-birds of the North Atlantic. 320p il maps $6 Houghton

598.2 Water birds 54-9568

"Two well-known British ornithologists take stock of their work on sea-birds and offer here an informative account of the studies that have been made on the birds of the North Atlantic Ocean. . . Maps throughout the book show distribution of many species, and an appendix summarizes this information in tabular form. There is a bibliography, an index to authorities, and an index to vertebrate species arranged in systematic order. Forty black and white plates and 8 color plates add to the attractiveness of the book." Library J

Booklist 51:33 S 15 '54

"The 'Sea-Birds' is a scholarly book, with many a citation, map, and statistic; it is full of human interest." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 26 '54 250w

"'Sea-Birds' is a beautifully produced book about scores of species whose lives are very little known, the sailors of the skies of the North Atlantic ocean. It contains eight color plates and more than 40 black-and-white plates—and the sum of the knowledge, experience, and deductions of three indefatigable authorities." J. A. May

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 J1 15 '54 370w

"Recommended for all special collections on birds and for libraries along the Atlantic Coast." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:1228 Je 15 '54 150w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 23 '54 40w

"A book of real value. It strikes a nice balance and is as much for the student who seeks a sound basis on which to build his conclusions from later personal observation, as for the coastal observer who is aware of a lack of technical data behind his activities and has reached a point where he is in need of authoritative confirmation." Jon Wynne-Tyson

+ Spec p409 Ap 2 '54 180w

"The volume is illustrated with a number of excellent photographs and many maps, some of which, owing to their small size, are a little difficult to follow. There is much interesting information in this book, but it is written in rather too discursive a style."

Times [London] Lit Sup p426 J1 2 '54 550w

FISHER, M. F. K., pseud. See Parrish, M. F. K.

FISHER, STEPHEN GOULD. Giveaway. 276p $3.50 Random house

54-7798

Eddie Shelton, aged seventeen, ran away from his Gary, Indiana home, partly because he was tired of education. In Hollywood, where he ended his trek, he met Jane Sutton and her mother, a pair of TV chiselers. Eddie was taken for quite a ride before he overheard a conversation not meant for him. After that he headed right back for Gary and more education.

Booklist 51:15 S 1 '54

"A depressing half world, the story line here is shadowed by the case histories of an occupational disease. Reportage rather than racontage."

Kirkus 22:368 Je 15 '54 180w

"In relating the story of Jane and Eddie, Steve Fisher has written his most pungent novel. A Hollywood script writer by trade, Mr. Fisher has adapted the economy of that medium with telling effect to this story of two confused youngsters." Alden Whitman

+ N Y Times p10 D 26 '54 450w

New Yorker 30:139 S 25 '54 130w

"All this could hardly be more depressing. Yet, because Mr. Fisher is so expert a storyteller, if you start it you'll probably go along. It is hard to believe that people can be reduced to such mean expedients to live, to an existence so like what Hobbes described as 'poor, nasty, brutish and short.' But Mr. Fisher brings his characters to life so sharply that you cannot doubt him." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 30 '54 450w

"Mr. Fisher writes in a pulp-schooled style that is almost pure dialogue, and that never allows the story to lag. The glibly sentimental conclusion of 'Giveaway,' though, seems out of keeping with its otherwise clear-eyed tone." Martin Levin

Sat R 37:37 S 18 '54 200w

FISHMAN, JACK. Seven men of Spandau. 276p il $3.50 Rinehart

923.243 Spandau prison, Berlin. World war, 1939-1945—War criminals 54-7073

"Purporting to be factual, this is a description of the Berlin fortress in which are imprisoned the political prisoners who survived the Nuremberg Trials: Hess, Doenitz, von Schirach, Funk, Raeder, Speer and von Neurath. The author doesn't disclose how he got his information but he quotes from letters, diaries; interviews the prisoners' wives; and must have spent—if his report is true—considerable time in the prison and examined the prisoners at first hand." Library J

Bookmark 13:216 Je '54 40w

Kirkus 22:227 Mr 15 '54 120w

"This is the most ambitious and exhaustive account we have. It is also an account of the maneuvering to get the seven released, and their roles in neo-Nazi organizations. The book is fascinating, compelling, but not always credible reading. Recommended for medium and large public libraries." W. K. Harrison
+ — Library J 79:978 My 15 '54 140w

"The picture he draws of the ill-assorted little band of men who just escaped the gallows is inevitably incomplete, but it is supremely honest and detached." Terence Prittie
+ Manchester Guardian p6 Mr 19 '54 500w

"It is not the size of his material that seems to have defeated Mr. Fishman. His somewhat breathless approach to his subject shows that this English journalist (Mr. Fishman is news editor of The Sunday Empire News) understands the importance of his material. But compared with other studies of the Nazis and their creatures, such as H. R. Trevor-Roper's 'The Last Days of Hitler' and John Wheeler-Bennett's 'The Nemesis of Power,' this is light, frothy stuff." Drew Middleton
N Y Times p16 My 30 '54 800w

Reviewed by J. R. Hunter
Springf'd Republican p5C Jl 4 '54 500w

FITCH, FLORENCE MARY. Book about God; il. by Leonard Weisgard. [22p] $2 Lothrop
231 God—Juvenile literature 53-6735

A picture book with brief text explaining the analogies between God and the sun, the air, etc. For very young children.

Booklist 50:208 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 D 20 '53 30w

+ Kirkus 21:787 D 15 '53 90w

"Recommended for picture-book age and up." M. C. Skinner
+ Library J 79:70 Ja 1 '54 40w

"It is a beautiful, gentle book for a bedtime talk with a small child." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 20 '53 120w

"Written for believers of all faiths, it necessarily shuns specific doctrines, such as the uniqueness of Christ. It provides a foundation on which any parent can help his child build a more definite structure of faith and the text is reinforced with especially good illustrations by Leonard Weisgard." Chad Walsh
+ N Y Times pt2, p40 N 15 '53 60w

Wis Lib Bul 50:79 Mr '54

FITE, GILBERT COURTLAND. George N. Peek and the fight for farm parity. 314p il $4 Univ. of Okla. press

338.1 Agriculture—Economic aspects. Agricultural administration. Peek, George Nelson 54-5934

"It is less the story of [George N. Peek] himself than the struggle during the 1920's for a better deal for agriculture. The account of Peek and his movement should be of interest alike to agricultural historians, economists, and political scientists concerned with pressure groups and the evolution of a political program from its inception to its final acceptance." Current Hist

"This is much more than the story of one man. It is the vital chronicle of an important period of re-examination of and definitive change in one part of our national economic institutions. Professor Fite has diligently combed public records and private papers to bring together a historical document that is both authentic and alive. The rich detail of incident, needed by the serious student, would be almost overwhelming to the general reader, but the author has handled his materials with a skill that keeps the many strands from tangling and that keeps the reader conscious of a growing pattern of development. . . I must express an uneasy suspicion that while the scholar was busy elsewhere—no doubt with his teaching chores—a nasty little gremlin sneaked into his study one day and got access to his manuscript. This alien sprite wrote in a number of colorful words and phrases extraneous to the objective narrative being unfolded." E. G. Nourse

+ — Am Hist R 60:136 O '54 550w

"Professor Fite's study will be welcomed as a significant contribution to our understanding of Peek and of the part he played in this struggle. . . The picture of Peek that emerges is, we believe, a different one from what the author felt he was presenting. Peek does not appear as a great thinker or student of the problem. He is rather a genial, likable, and tireless salesman of an idea. His sincerity and selflessness can scarcely be challenged but his lack of understanding of economic issues stands out with almost equal clarity." M. R. Benedict
+ — Ann Am Acad 295:158 S '54 500w

"Mr. Fite's book is a tribute to a remarkable man, as well as a valuable historical record of the development of national policies with respect to agriculture." Josephine Ripley
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 24 '54 500w

"This fascinating work does an excellent job of bringing to the public's attention a man generally too little known."

+ Current Hist 26:123 F '54 260w

FITTS, DUDLEY, tr. Lysistrata, an English version. See Aristophanes.

FITZGERALD, KEVIN. Quiet under the sun. 222p $3 Little 54-5143

International intrigue, chiefly in a Spanish setting, with English and Spanish characters among others.

Booklist 50:360 My 15 '54

"Quite a yarn that satisfies in its attention to detail and devotion to its duty—entertainment."

+ Kirkus 22:132 F 15 '54 150w

"Creating two strands of narrative by interrupting the courtly Sir Henry's tale with a third-person account of his rescue provides novel style and very elegant cloak-and-dagger. Spanish settings and characters are wonderful. Recommended as thistle-down reading." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:450 Mr 1 '54 120w

"This is the stuff of old Oppenheim upon which Mr. Fitzgerald grafts an urbane hero not unlike the Saint in lazy competence and amused dismay. The peninsular background is obviously familiar and dear and so are the engaging local cutthroats among whom some of the rest of the cast has been recruited." James Sandoe

FITZGERALD, KEVIN—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Mr 14 '54 120w

"It's all rather like a 40-year-old melodrama retouched by Geoffrey Household and Manning Coles, and grand fun—except, of course, for the usual sloppy proof-reading of the incidental Spanish." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p27 Ap 4 '54 100w

"Full measure of thrills in this one, and a peculiar charm that makes it amazingly plausible." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 11 '54 60w

"Good fun." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat ■ 37:32 My 15 '54 20w

"A fine, rousing spy-and-chase novel in the excellent tradition of John Buchan with sprinklings of Mickey Spillane and Ernest Hemingway to bring the style up to date." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 21 '54 60w

FITZ GIBBON, CONSTANTINE. The holiday. 151p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

53-10811

Fleeing from the unhappiness of his marriage, Charles Warren, middle-aged American doctor, takes refuge in a small Italian village he had known during the war. There at first everything goes well, but gradually the once friendly villagers turn against the stranger and finally he finds only one way out.

Booklist 50:221 F 1 '54

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 24 '54 250w

Kirkus 21:718 N 1 '53 210w

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 S 25 '53 130w

"So dramatically does Constantine FitzGibbon tell the story of a man who ran to seek peace and found destruction that one reads without stopping, caught in the tension of swiftly moving events. It is not until the last page is turned that the mind turns back to examine the details of ascending horror and the causes that made the man a target for them." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 31 '54 600w

"'The Holiday' is not a pleasant story. But it is tense, original and—with an apology for using the word—chilling." Rex Lardner

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 17 '54 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 7 '54 190w

Reviewed by Nicolas Monjo

Sat R 37:42 F 13 '54 230w

"Mr. Fitz Gibbon shows fine control of the trivial incidents that lead up to the climax of his short novel. Yet as an illustration of the power of fate over a predestined victim the story is not satisfactory, because on a purely literal plane Warren's inaction is not made plausible. . . . It is a pity that Mr. Fitz Gibbon has not taken more trouble with the story's development, for its climax has a compelling conviction and power."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p625 O 2 '53 320w

FITZGIBBON, RUSSELL HUMKE. Uruguay: portrait of a democracy. 301p il $5.75 Rutgers univ. press

989.5 Uruguay

54-6837

A study of the historical, economic, and political background of Uruguay, "one of the hemisphere's and the world's great leaders of the democratic way of life." Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:60 O 1 '54

"Scholarly and valuable work." R. M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 30 '54 600w

"A thorough, sympathetic study."

+ Current Hist 27:64 Jl '54 70w

Foreign Affairs 33:170 O '54 50w

"Russell Fitzgibbon, professor of government in the University of California, has long been writing solid sense about the Latin Americans. His analysis of Uruguay tells more about that little nation whose population is scarcely larger than that of Connecticut than has any other writer." Hubert Herring

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Jl 18 '54 600w

Reviewed by Milton Bracker

N Y Times p3 Ag 1 '54 480w

"The thesis that communism is not likely to gain much ground in a country in which some other social movement has captured the imagination of the people is borne out by this very well-written book by Professor Fitzgibbon, though he nowhere specifically makes this point." R. J. Alexander

+ Pol Sci Q 69:635 D '54 850w

FLANDERS, MRS HELEN (HARTNESS), and OLNEY, MARGUERITE, comps. Ballads migrant in New England; with an introd. by Robert Frost. 248p $6 Farrar, Straus

784.4 Folk songs, American. Ballads

M53-552

Presents ninety-six songs or ballads which have been continued by New England singers as they heard them from older generations. The collector is the wife of the senior senator from Vermont; Miss Olney, who supplied the musical versions, is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music. Index of titles.

"Mrs. Flanders is better as collector than she is as editor. She does not follow the American ballad collector's custom of listing other American texts of ballads, nor does she in any way identify such a ballad as 'The Wife of Auchtermuchty' to be a version of the song usually called 'Father Grumble,' a ballad Sean O'Casey made into a one-act play. . . . She does more important things. She walks and rides New England with the divining rod of her instinct for folksong, and we are all the richer for her peregrinations. She follows its dips, and sometimes its dips point into books. . . . Again we students of folksong have occasion to be grateful to Mrs. Flanders' zeal. Anyone who has heard Mr. Elmer Barton of Quechee, Vermont, sing his and Mrs. Flanders' version of 'The Farmer's Curs't Wife,' has had good earnest of the interest and value of this new volume." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor D 3 '53 650w

Reviewed by E. K. Wells

Music Lib Assn Notes 11:300 Mr '54 650w

"There is much to recommend this book: the fascinating data on the folk singer George Edwards, neglected except for a few isolated recordings; the numerous tunes; and the happy manner in which the collectors have gone about their job."

+ Nation 178:36 Ja 9 '54 160w

"The two collectors have done an important job that is also both musically and literarily appealing to any one who has a genuine interest in the American past. Mrs Flanders' comments on the joys of collecting, on the values of ballads to historians, on the qualities and characteristics of the ballads themselves are delightful reading." Carl Carmer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 20 '53 700w

"It must be admitted that her personal observations and sketches of informants add color and first-hand interest, but her notes on ballad motifs, traits, and history are tantalizingly fragmentary and impressionistic, informal and intimate rather than documentary and narrative. Although the arrangement is roughly both topical and geographical, there is much skipping back and forth among the states."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:44 Mr '54 280w

FLAUBERT, GUSTAVE. Bouvard and Pécuchet; tr. by T. W. Earp and G. W. Stonier; with an introd. by Lionel Trilling. 347p $3.75 New directions

54-8413

During the last eight years of his life Flaubert was engaged in writing this fictional attack on the French bourgeoisie. In it two retired clerks set out to educate themselves; but whatever they touch seems to fall to pieces. Their story is told with a blend of satire and sympathy.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 193:78 Je '54 290w

Reviewed by Milton Crane
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 11 '54 370w

"It is a queer work, alike funny and tedious, a monstrous and magnificently overblown joke, a compendium of mental folly—and by the same token a monument of despair." Leon Edel

Nation 178:362 Ap 24 '54 140w

Reviewed by Marvin Lowenthal
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 15 '54 200w

"Lionel Trilling has provided this welcome translation with a provocative introductory essay in which he presents his own interpretation of Flaubert's dilemmas. 'Bouvard and Pécuchet' is, indeed, a profound book. It can be and has been many things to many men. To a fascinating degree it retains the sphinx-like and challenging ambiguity of the greatest art." Francis Steegmuller

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 11 '54 600w

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin
New Yorker 30:145 S 11 '54 750w

"Comic in its representation, 'Bouvard and Pecuchet' is Flaubert's cynical animadversion on human folly. It is pessimistic yet thoroughly entertaining, superficially a novel but more profoundly reminiscent of the satiric attitudes of Rabelais, Voltaire, and Swift." E. A. Bloom

+ Sat R 37:34 Jl 24 '54 200w

"In many places the hand of the master is apparent and some passages are amusing, but like poor old Bouvard and Pécuchet, who ruined their strawberries with too much dung, Flaubert has crushed his farce with too many fatuities."

Time 63:120 Mr 22 '54 500w

FLAUBERT, GUSTAVE. Dictionary of accepted ideas; tr. with an introd. and notes by Jacques Barzun. 86p $2 New directions

847 54-8412

"This is a little compilation of mid-nineteenth century clichés and bromides. All of his life Flaubert hated the habitual unthinking thoughts with which men clog and foul their minds—especially middle-class men and middle-class minds. . . . The 'Dictionary' is a distillation of what one may believe were the thousands of verbal insipidities which infuriated this peer among the masters of language." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by Milton Crane
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 11 '54 20w

"In translating the 'dictionary' Jacques Barzun has been highly imaginative and resourceful. His task was, in reality, to find English equivalents for the spoken and printed nonsense of Flaubert's time. How far the equivalent imparts a twentieth-century flavor to nineteenth-century material it is difficult to say. But he has caught the spirit of this 'dictionary,' and many of its definitions are highly relevant." Leon Edel

+ Nation 178:362 Ap 24 '54 100w

"The 'Dictionary' can be read with considerable diversion and great profit if we have the skill to transpose, where necessary, a nineteenth-century French cliché into its twentieth-century American equivalent. Such transpositions need be few, however, for it is instructive to observe how eternal are the 'only' things ever said on most subjects by the average man." Marvin Lowenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 15 '54 220w

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin

New Yorker 30:145 S 11 '54 750w

"Devotees of Frank Sullivan and Gelett Burgess will find Flaubert's nonsense (well, almost nonsense) definitions a welcome addition to their shelf of platitudes." E. A. Bloom

+ Sat R 37:34 Jl 24 '54 190w

FLAUBERT, GUSTAVE. Selected letters; tr. and ed. with an introd. by Francis Steegmuller. (Great letters ser) 281p $4 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 53-7086

"The letters of Flaubert, selected from the bulky French edition of his correspondence, reveal the personal side of an impersonal artist, who let himself go in writing to his friends with a spontaneity that is rare in his novels. Although these letters on travel, the French middle class, the art of fiction, and great contemporaries furnish a clue to Flaubert's novels, they can be enjoyed for their literary merits alone. The editor, who also performed the admirable translation, has included full biographical notes on both Flaubert and his illustrious correspondents." Booklist

Booklist 50:258 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 7 '54 400w

"Mr. Steegmuller has wisely given the largest part of his space to letters which have a direct bearing on Flaubert's art. For these letters offer us something that is not to be found in the novelist's biography or in the works themselves. They offer us a unique view of the artist engaged in the composition of his books." Martin Turnell

+ Commonweal 61:189 N 19 '54 1850w

"There is no comprehensive compilation of these letters in English and, until a larger collection comes along, this excellent selection is heartily recommended." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:384 F 15 '54 110w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 15 '54 300w

"They are among the finest literary letters in the whole of epistolary literature, and Francis Steegmuller, Flaubert's biographer, has edited them with discretion after translating them with authority. The relevant information is unobtrusively given, the minimum of commentary added; the voice of Flaubert speaks to us freely with all its sonorities." Leon Edel

+ Nation 178:361 Ap 24 '54 130w

Reviewed by Joseph Frank
New Repub 130:18 F 15 '54 370w

Reviewed by John Raymond
New Statesman & Nation 47:835 Je 26 '54 2300w

"In every way, Flaubert has been well served. There emerges cleanly the portrait of a great literary artist as a man." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 31 '54 1000w

"The new translator, Francis Steegmuller, favorably known for his biographical studies of Flaubert and Maupassant, is admirably qualified for the present undertaking. His English is lively and readable throughout, yet remains fairly close to its idiomatic text. . . . The editor's task is probably harder than the translator's; the standard edition of Flaubert's correspondence, which is far from exhaustive, runs to nine substantial volumes. Though Steegmuller's choice is perforce fragmentary, it conveys a representative overview in which each particular item is thoroughly interesting." Harry Levin

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 24 '54 1100w

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin
New Yorker 30:145 S 11 '54 750w

FLAUBERT, GUSTAVE—Continued

"Unfortunately Mr. Steegmuller saw fit to suppress almost all Flaubert's underlinings and to correct the syntax of the nineteen-year-old budding author. A few slips and moments of over-anxiousness cannot diminish the essential value of this volume. It does full justice to the human figure of Flaubert and to his elaboration of 'the axiom that there is no such thing as subject, style in itself being an absolute manner of seeing things.'" Roger Shattuck

+ Sat R 37:23 F 20 '54 700w

"More than enough has been written of Flaubert's novels; but the letters, now: do they really deserve the epithet 'puerile'? Those nine volumes of letters, to which four supplementary volumes have, lately been added, and from which Mr. Francis Steegmuller has extracted ■ skilfully representative selection? Puerile? surely not. Exasperating, yes; often astonishingly vulgar; theatrical; self-pitying: one could attach various terms of abuse to various sections of this vast correspondence, but the childish streak is noticeably absent. . . . Beyond all questions of personality these letters, whether in French or in English, present an irresistible picture of life."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p590 S 17 '54 1350w

FLEISHER, SIEGEL. Lion and the honeycomb. 314p $3.50 Houghton

54-5255

"Mr. Fleisher plots the courses of two lonely seekers after the sweetness inherent in reality. One of them is Ralph Taber, a young man running away from grief caused by his wife's death. The other is Mabel Barnum, the common-law wife of a small-time criminal. Their lives run parallel through most of the book, touching only occasionally, and the contrast between them serves to emphasize the simple human aspirations which both share." Sat R

"Mr. Fleisher hasn't much of ■ story to tell; he spends much too much time doing it, and his sincere and earnest type of realism has a long-haired look to it and casts a sort of chilly pall."

— Kirkus 21:798 D 15 '53 140w

"The characters are carefully detailed, and if at times they do not seem quite to emerge as individuals the reason may lie in part in the author's obvious unwillingness to put down what he has not himself felt or observed. One senses that the characters and incidents here have been built up from many out of the author's experience, and that these real elements have not always been perfectly fused in the creative imagination. The multitudinousness comes through, rather than ■ unity and singularity." Coleman Rosenberger

+ — N.Y. Herald Tribune Bk ■ p6 F 21 '54 500w

"His hero, the widower who is saved by love and friendship, is scarcely a believable character. The inordinate guilt he feels is never explained. In style the book is ■ potpourri. . . . Outrageously derivative and generally inchoate, 'The Lion and the Honeycomb' now and again touches briefly and suggestively on moods and themes that could bear some developing. Judged against the current run of novels it is a not uninteresting one. As presented, it is competing out of its class." John Brooks

— + N.Y. Times p23 F 21 '54 500w

"This is ■ solidly written novel, with ■ quality that suggests Mr. Fleisher will go on writing simply because he is ■ writer." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 18 '54 700w

"'The Lion and the Honeycomb' is at its best when Mr. Fleisher is directly saying what he sees and feels. At other times, the cold shadow of erudition falls between the idea and reality of Mr. Fleisher's prose." M. L.

Sat R 37:52 Mr 13 '54 220w

FLEMING, DONALD. William H. Welch and the rise of modern medicine; ed. by Oscar Handlin. (Library of American biography) 216p $3 Little

B or 92 Welch, William Henry 54-6867

"Professor Fleming, Brown University historian, tries 'to rethink Welch's career from the primary sources.' . . . The reader will be educated by this theme: Between 1880 and 1900, European thought revolutionized stagnant American Medicine. After World War I, the U. S. became global medicine's center. William H. Welch (1850-1934) was the critical figure in this phenomenal transformation. Medical history will remember him, among other things, for his first American pathology laboratory at Bellevue Hospital (1878) and for his 50-year academic-medical career at Johns Hopkins University." (Library J) Index.

"Welch died in 1934, and this is his second major biography. The present volume is briefer and less intimate than the Flexners' biography of 1941, but Fleming has tried to 'recheck Welch's career from the primary sources,' and has come up with an excellent short history of American medical education since the 1880's and of Welch's towering influence in it." H. M. Cavins

+ Am J Pub Health 44:1203 S '54 320w
Bookmark 13:233 Jl '54 30w

"A sober study, which pays tribute to the accomplishments of the man, documents the reconstruction and re-invigoration of his profession, but demands a pre-established interest in the field."

Kirkus 22:145 F 15 '54 150w

"Comfortably brief and lucid biography." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 79:767 Ap 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by Bennett Epstein

Nation 179:135 Ag 14 '54 270

"Mr. Fleming contributes interesting information on the atmosphere in America during this historic age, a time when any attempt to devote one's life to medical science was tantamount to a vow of poverty and almost a revolt against the established order." R. J. Dubos

+ N.Y. Times p1 Jl 4 '54 1150w

"Mr. Fleming gives us a portrait of an exhilarating man and a stimulating period that can hardly be too highly recommended."

+ New Yorker 30:73 Jl 10 '54 230w

"One does not get far into Mr. Fleming's book before he senses that the author has a hero worship for his subject. Perhaps it would have been better if he had allowed the reader to judge for himself whether Welch was a hero. . . . Mr. Fleming might have helped us to understand Welch better if he had told us more about him as a human being." R. S. Bowles

Sat R 37:11 Jl 3 '54 1100w

Spring'd Republican p4C Ag 1 '54 220w

FLEMING, IAN. Casino Royale. 176p $2.75 Macmillan (N.Y.)

54-1306

A British agent, Service Operative 007, gambles against a corrupt French communist trade union official until he breaks the Frenchman's bankroll and his power. The place is a casino in the south of France.

Kirkus 22:74 F 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by H. I.A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 17 '53 50w

Reviewed by J. D. Scott

New Statesman & Nation 45:558 My 9 '53 60w

"Mr. Fleming, in a style suggesting a more literate version of Cheyney's 'Dark' series, manages to make baccarat completely clear even to one who's never played it and produces as exciting a gambling sequence as I've ever read. But then he decides to pad out the book to novel length and leads the weary reader through a set of tough clichés to an ending which surprises no one save Operative 007." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p27 Ap 25 '54 140w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 30 '54 60w

"Fine thriller by new hand." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 37:37 Ap 24 '54 20w

"A Secret Service thriller, lively, most ingenious in detail, on the surface as tough as they are made and charmingly well-bred beneath, nicely written and except for a too ingeniously sadistic bout of brutality—very entertaining reading." R. D. Charques

+ Spec 190:494 Ap 17 '53 200w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 2 '54 90w

"Author Fleming keeps his incidents and characters spinning through their paces like juggling balls."

+ Time 63:98 Mr 29 '54 150w

"Mr. Ian Fleming's first novel is an extremely engaging affair."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p249 Ap 17 '53 180w

FLESCH, RUDOLF FRANZ. How to make sense. 202p $2.75 Harper

808 Rhetoric, Communication 54-6012

The author's aim is to show his readers how to improve their communication either oral or written with each other. He states, "The first few chapters of this book will deal with some of the current superstitions in the field of language. . . . The rest of the book deals mainly with basic, essentially simple things: your choice of words, the rhythm of your speech, the relation between you and your audience, how to get ideas."

Booklist 50:316 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:181 My '54 20w

"'How to Make Sense' is so heterodox it is bound to unnerve a lot of people. It will help many more to attack their language difficulties with new hope." La Tourette Stockwell

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 21 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:57 Ja 15 '54 130w

"In the main this is a useful work for libraries—circulation and easy reference." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 79:624 Ap 1 '54 140w

FLETCHER, FRANK THOMAS HERBERT.

Pascal and the mystical tradition. (Modern language studies) 156p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Pascal, Blaise. Mysticism 54-12050

"This inquiry into Pascal's life and thought was undertaken partly to discover whether, as Droz claimed, he belonged to the true Christian mystical tradition, partly in order to define Pascal's special appeal to the writer. It has no pretension to offer a complete picture of the man and his work. It is, indeed, concerned with a very narrow, though deep and vital, aspect of his life, which it endeavours to relate to the mystical or unitive life of the saints and prophets, ancient and modern, secular and religious. Its point de départ is a remarkable religious experience which occurred to Pascal on the night of November 23rd, 1654, when, in a state of mystic rapture, he became aware of the immediate presence of God." (Foreword) Index.

"More account might usefully have been taken of the trends of French mysticism and religious life during the early seventeenth century, especially as in recent years they have become far better known. Nevertheless, in spite of the author's self-imposed limits, this clearly and agreeably written book is an excellent guide and will no doubt render invaluable service." G. G.

+ — Manchester Guardian p6 Mr 26 '54 360w

"An inquiry undertaken to discover whether Pascal belonged to the true Christian mystical tradition might easily end in an academic discussion. But Mr. Fletcher, though haunted by his question, is more concerned to define Pascal's special appeal to the writer. Once clear of the mystical wood this unpretentious account of Pascal is lucid and fresh."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p269 Ap 23 '54 900w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH FRANCIS. Morals and medicine. 253p $4.50 Princeton univ. press

610 Medical ethics. Medicine and religion 54-9019

"Has a patient who is slowly dying from an incurable disease the right to know the truth from his physician? Have we the right to practice birth control? Have we the right to overcome childlessness by artificial insemination? Have we the right to sterilize the unfit? Has a man the right to die mercifully and legally at the hands of a physician when he and his family know that he is doomed to an agonizing death? It is with these five moral problems that Dr. Fletcher concerns himself." N Y Times

"Dr. Fletcher writes with scholarship, conscience and concern—and his argument is at all times reasoned and unflinching."

+ Kirkus 22:513 Ag 1 '54 200w

"The author has courage, and a force that compels all thoughtful persons to take him seriously. Many, like this reviewer, will not only agree with what is most basic in his conclusions but will also approve their grounding in the Protestant interpretation of Christian ethics." Seward Hiltner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 21 '54 550w

"Most of the issues raised by Dr. Fletcher have been evaded by organized medicine. They cannot be evaded forever. In the effort to settle them his book will be an aid to legislators as well as to physicians and the public, if for no other reason than that the whole subject of the patient's right to be considered as a personality is discussed." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p38 O 31 '54 950w

"Dr. Fletcher approaches these controversial questions in a scholarly and tolerant fashion, dealing generously with those who would differ with him. . . . His fine presentation of the problems of morals in relation to medicine serves a valuable function as a Protestant counter-balance to the extensive and able Catholic writings on the subject. Both points of view should be available to the interested reader." D. W. Atchley

+ Sat R 37:37 O 2 '54 1250w

FLETCHER, STANWELL, pseud. See Stanwell-Fletcher, J. F.

FLEXNER, JAMES THOMAS. American painting: the light of distant skies, 1760-1835. 306p 102pl $10 Harcourt

759.1 Painting, American 54-9727

This is the second in a series of books in which the author intends to trace the entire history of American painting. The present volume covers the period from 1760 to 1835. Bibliographies arranged by artists. Catalog of illustrations. Index. For first volume see Book Review Digest 1947.

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 2 '54 110w

Kirkus 22:609 S 1 '54 240w

"Elaborate bibliographies and indices, together with 100 moderately good plates, support the authoritative character of this very readable and intelligent book." S. L. Faison

+ Nation 179:492 D 4 '54 50w

"As was the case in 'First Flowers of Our Wilderness,' with which the Flexner series began, the book contains much new material brought out by the author's own research. It also draws encyclopedically upon the published literature in its field and provides extensive, valuable bibliographies. Mr. Flexner has mastered his books, however, and has not let them master him; the feeling of the whole is one of fresh study and appraisal." Alfred Frankenstein

FLEXNER, J. T.—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 31 '54 1000w

"The author tends in this reviewer's opinion to overrate some artists (Stuart, for example) and to underestimate others. His zeal to demonstrate a point tempts him at times to oversimplify a situation or to make a statement which is more trenchant than strictly accurate. . . . Those colleagues who challenge some of Mr. Flexner's evaluations and qualify some of his assertions will nevertheless appreciate the vigor and general cogency of his interpretation of a period. They will also be grateful for his 102 illustrations, his bibliographies of general sources and of individual artists, and his list of source references for each chapter." Oliver Larkin

+ — N Y Times p7 O 24 '54 850w

"Every new presentation of American painting when done as well as Mr. Flexner does it is important for spreading the kind of national self-awareness which is essential to any possible culture under democratic conditions. So it is to be hoped that the foundation grants will be continued to allow Mr. Flexner to complete his 'many-volume history.'" Virgil Barker

+ Sat R 37:63 N 6 '54 850w

FLOHERTY, JOHN JOSEPH. Deep down under. 146p il $2.85 Lippincott

387.55 Diving, Submarine 53-8912

"Diving of many kinds is the subject of this book: for salvage, construction, pearling, and diving in various kinds of apparatus: suits, shells, etc. There is also interesting information on frogmen and the under-water demolition service during World War II. Quite a bit of historical explanation." (Library J) No index.

Booklist 50:148 D 1 '53

"The whole family will enjoy reading about the Aqualungers, Frogmen, Mask and Fin Swimmers, and just plain divers." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 178:207 D '53 30w

"This is a book of justified human interest and vocational disclosures." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 D 31 '53 200w

Kirkus 21:492 Ag 1 '53 70w

"Recommended for ages 12 up." E. S. Yonshige

+ Library J 79:76 Ja 1 '54 30w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p24 N 15 '53 20w

FLOHERTY, JOHN JOSEPH. Men against distance; the story of communications. 148p il $2.85 Lippincott

384 Communication—Juvenile literature 54-7127

The story of communications, from jungle toms-toms to television. Included are profiles of Morse, Bell, Marconi, De Forest, Sarnoff, and other pioneers in the field. For ages 12 up.

Booklist 50:344 My 1 '54

Kirkus 22:67 F 1 '54 110w

Reviewed by Dorothy Schumacher

Library J 79:993 My 15 '54 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 16 '54 30w

FLOHERTY, JOHN JOSEPH. Troopers all; stories of state police. 148p il $2.85 Lippincott 351.7 Police, State 54-9034

History of the state police and highway patrol in various states, told by means of informal interviews and case histories. For ages twelve to sixteen.

Booklist 51:153 D 1 '54

Kirkus 22:490 Ag 1 '54 120w

"There is much sobering information for youth embodied in this exciting account. It will be bait for the reluctant reader, even as it provides lively material for civic classes and preaches the lesson that 'crime does not pay.'" A. B. M.

+ Sat R 37:86 N 13 '54 180w

FLOOD, RICHARD THOMAS. Fighting short-stop; il. by Lee Ames. 210p $2.50 Houghton 54-6488

Eddie was seventeen and a Junior League baseball player. When he found out that the American Legion felt they could not sponsor the team any longer Eddie was fighting mad and went out to get new sponsors. In twenty-four hours he had the required number to sponsor the team. For ages twelve and up.

Reviewed by Harry Molter

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13 '54 50w

Kirkus 22:267 Ap 15 '54 80w

"Nothing above the average in plot, characters, or action but all right for 12-16-year-olds if you need a new baseball title." Lillian Morrison

Library J 79:1327 Jl '54 90w

"A fast action tale with elegant pictures by Lee J. Ames. Boys will like the seventeen-year-old hero; a realistic portrait by one who has known a variety of boys well, as a coach and as an assistant head-master." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 4 '54 30w

"I salute Mr. Flood for writing a good baseball book while putting first things first." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 18 '54 100w

FLORENCE, PHILIP SARGANT. Logic of British and American industry; a realistic analysis of economic structure and government. 368p $5 Univ. of N.C. press

338 Industry—Organization, control, etc. A54-8807

"An American citizen, Professor Florence has been Professor of Commerce at Birmingham University since 1929, and in 1940-41 he served as Consultant to the United States National Resources Planning Board. After presenting pertinent information concerning the prevailing size of industrial firms and the pattern of industrial location in Britain and America, Professor Florence interprets the facts in basic terms, such as technical requirements and consumer habits. The contrast between the two countries is discovered mainly in certain social attitudes and motivation, while unexpected similarities are found in industrial structure and government. A wealth of statistical material is presented in easily digested tables." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"While [certain] criticisms are basic, emphasis must also be put on the value of a comprehensive portrayal and attempt at interpretation of the structural aspects of industrial economies. The intereconomy comparisons are particularly useful. These and the author's proposals as to the logic of the industrial structure are both summarized in the concluding chapter and constitute a check list of what we would like to know on this subject. As such, even where the conclusions are questionable, they provide the basis for discussions out of which should come still more definitive knowledge about this phase of economics." R. B. Heflebower

+ — Am Econ R 44:687 S '54 700w

Reviewed by M. E. Murphy

+ Ann Am Acad 294:193 Jl '54 550w

Foreign Affairs 33:158 O '54 30w

"The author has tried to explain as well as to describe. In this attempt, however, he has not always been successful, for the wide scope of his book has meant that he has sometimes failed to carry his analysis of situations far enough. Some of his arguments are loosely constructed and at times his conclusions lack precision." G. C. Allen

+ — Manchester Guardian p2 Je 8 '53 550w

"At a time when so much ill-informed, tendentious and jejune nonsense is talked about monopoly and its possible control, and the problems of nationalised industry, Professor Florence's analysis is refreshing in its detached and factual approach."

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:540 O 31 '53 250w

"Florence's work is characterized by insufficient care in the exploitation of the statistical data, and fairly loose reasoning. It is, moreover, written in an irritating style, with much repetition and many 'asides'. Nevertheless, the book contains many significant contributions to our knowledge of industrial structure. Florence's technique for measuring the geographical concentration of industry, and his exploration of the relation between geographical concentration and plant size are major contributions. His discovery of many similarities in the measurable aspects of industrial structure in Great Britain and the United States is also of considerable interest." G. Rosenbluth

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:605 D '54 900w

Reviewed by Siegfried Mandel

Sat ■ 37:33 My 22 '54 230w

FLORY, PAUL JOHN. Principles of polymer chemistry. 672p $8.50 Cornell univ. press 547.013 [541.7] Polymers and polymerization 53-13473

Covers polymer properties, polymerization and copolymerization reaction mechanisms, and kinetics. Includes molecular configuration and associated properties of polymers and their solutions." (Chem & Eng N) Glossary. Indexes.

"The reviewer has no hesitancy in recommending this book to anyone seeking authoritative information concerning the whole field or any part of it. The cost of the volume is very small, relative to its value." M. L. Huggins

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:2854 My 20 '54 120w

Chem & Eng N 32:88 Ja 4 '54 20w

Library J 79:915 My 15 '54 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:27 Mr '54

FLUGGE-LOTZ, IRMGARD. Discontinuous automatic control. 168p il $5 Princeton univ. press

621.8 Control equipment 52-13156

"A visual presentation making use of diagrams to show how tedious computations can be replaced by graphical solutions." Special Libraries

"It is valuable because it is a relatively full treatment of a class of automatic control which has been more or less neglected in the books on the subject published up to now. A feature that will be appreciated by many engineers is the liberal use of graphical methods in analyzing various situations and phenomena." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:149 Ja 15 '54 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:2 Ja '54

Special Libraries 45:40 Ja '54 10w

"The book should serve the needs of engineers who prefer visual, graphical presentation to formal mathematical development. It will also be interesting to mathematicians who enjoy an occasional excursion into graphical techniques."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:270 Je '54 220w

FOLEY, ALBERT SIDNEY. Bishop Healy: beloved outcaste; the story of a great priest whose life has become a legend. 243p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Healy, James Augustine 54-7305

"This is a biography of James A. Healy who was born in slavery near Macon, Ga. in 1830, went north as a child, studied theology in Montreal and Paris, and was ordained as a priest in the Catholic Church. A man of Irish and Negro parentage, he finally became Bishop of Portland, Maine. He died in 1900 beloved by the people whose spiritual leader he had been for a quarter of a century." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) No index.

Booklist 51:60 O 1 '54

"Father Foley tells this remarkable story with delicacy and restraint. He does it so well, indeed, that the book is a rediscovery of a man who has been a living legend even in the diocese where once he was chief shepherd." J. B. Code

+ Cath World 179:316 Jl '54 750w

Commonweal 60:127 My 7 '54 50w

"The book is significant chiefly because of the light it throws on the early Catholic approach to the race problem."

Kirkus 22:188 Mr 15 '54 260w

"This biography is a monument to the supreme courage of an individual who faced not only the strong anti-Negro sentiment of New England in the last half of the nineteenth century, but also the strong antipathy to the Catholic Church during the same period. Recommended only for specialized collections." L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 79:768 Ap 15 '54 150w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p15 My 2 '54 40w

"Though James Healy's story contains the seed of drama, the author is satisfied to record it in a quiet, matter-of-fact way, but with many details of ecclesiastical life and policy. He has most efficiently cleared up the mystery of the 'Beloved Outcaste.' There is unfortunately no index." John La Farge

+ N Y Times p6 Je 13 '54 650w

FOLEY, MARTHA, ed. Best American short stories, 1954; and The yearbook of the American short story. 432p $4 Houghton

Short stories—Collections

Contents: A great reckoning in a little room, by Geoffrey Bush; A beautiful night for Orion, by Richard Clay; The sense that in the scene delights, by Benjamin DeMott; A stop on the way to Texas, by Ward Dorrance; The firebird, by L. S. Doughty; Apple seed and apple thorn, by Elizabeth Enright; My brother down there, by Steve Frazee; A change of air, by Ivan Gold; Farewell, sweet love, by Priscilla Heath; The house on the esplanade, by Anne Hébert; Char on Raven's bench, by Frank Holwerda; Gertrude and Sidney, by Randall Jarrell; No way down, by Almet Jenks; The latter end, by George Loveridge; The game, by F. G. Patton; The red mountain, by Robert Payne; The mango tree, by R. S. Robinson; In the French style, by Irwin Shaw; The shorn lamb, by Jean Stafford; The pale green fishes, by Kressmann Taylor; The third guest, by B. Traven; The man in gray, by Christine Weston; The indomitable blue, by Ira Wolfert; The rock, by Vurrell Yentzen.

Booklist 51:41 S 15 '54

"The great majority of these stories—not the few arty ones, nor the few standardized ones (both of which minor categories may be dismissed as merely so much stuffing)—are remarkably responsive to and expressive of the peculiar pressures, anxieties, and dilemmas of our own immediate times." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 5 '54 200w

Kirkus 22:403 Jl 1 '54 180w

Reviewed by William Saroyan

New Repub 131:20 O 11 '54 2600w

"Some of the authors' names are familiar and some are not, but each has something to say that is rewarding both in content and style. According to Martha Foley's excellent foreword, 'there is no ivory tower for the writer' in this Age of Anxiety. 'There is only an ivory tower for the reader. He can open a book and find there delights either of adventure or of new kinds of recognition.' This new volume compiled by her with a fine sense of values offers these delights." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 S 5 '54 750w

FOLEY, MARTHA—Continued

"Here are tales to suit many tastes—tender, tough, heroic, quietist, sadistic, historical or philosophical." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 22 '54 450w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 23 '54 550w

"The task of selecting and editing such a volume must be prodigious, so prodigious that a reviewer feels guilty if he is less than extremely enthusiastic about its results. But I must confess, albeit unhappily, that Miss Foley's latest anthology seems less rewarding than any of its predecessors. The collection is characterized, to be sure, by admirable variety. . . This is praiseworthy, but the quality of more than few of the selections is something else again." William Peden

+ — Sat R 37:17 Ag 21 '54 700w

Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54 360w

FOLEY, RAE, pseud. See Denniston, E.

FONSECA, RODOLFO LUCIO. Tower of Ivory a novel; Turrus eburnea, tr. from the Spanish by Walter Starkie. 279p $3.75 Messner

54-6766

"Fifteen nuns, raped during the Chinese revolution, are returned to Italy, segregated from all other nuns and relieved of their vows. One decides to return to civil life while all the others, two of whom are with child, renew their vows. The growth, education, and marriage of one of these children supply the drama in this Uruguayan novel." Library J

Booklist 50:358 My 15 '54

"Many readers will be appalled by the book's inflated prose and wild use of coincidence; others will find the general situation, however reverently handled, inherently distasteful." Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:312 Jl '54 250w

Kirkus 22:78 F 1 '54 240w

"Though this novel won the José Jané's International Prize, it is not convincing in either its picture of life among the nuns or its characterization. In spite of this, its theme will make it a 'good story' to many readers and may even surprise in the Pay Collection. Recommended for all fiction collections." M. S. Byam

Library J 79:771 Ap 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Jl 18 '54 550w

"'Tower of Ivory' has consummate craftsmanship and the poetry of truth that transcend the time and place of its religious setting." Anzia Yezierska

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 25 '54 600w

"Had the novel ended with Part I it would have had an emotional as well as a structural unity; as it is, the freshness and honesty of the early conception is blurred by the false drama of the ending." T. G. Bergin

+ — Sat R 37:39 Ag 7 '54 360w

"The story is written from a Catholic point of view but the consolations of the conventual life as compared with its pains are made to appear so meagre that a reader is left aghast at the sufferings which these particular innocents are called upon to endure."

Times [London] Lit Sup p485 Jl 30 '54 200w

Wis Lib Bul 50:210 O '54

FOOTE, HORACE S., ed. Opening of the California trail. 115p $3.75 Univ. of Calif. press

978 [917.8] Overland journeys to the Pacific 53-11248

"The story of the Stevens Party from the reminiscences of Moses Schallenger as set down for H. H. Bancroft about 1885, edited and expanded by Horace S. Foote in 1888, and now edited with introduction, notes, maps, and illustrations by George R. Stewart." Subtitle

Reviewed by L. R. Hafen

Am Hist R 60:220 O '54 200w

"The Schallenger story itself is thoroughly good reading. . . But as in all such cases there are contradictions, that need to be straightened out. There are gaps in the narrative as Foote printed it, gaps in what is known about the Stevens Party itself, gaps in information on portions of the route. Here is where Dr. Stewart's detective talents become apparent. In fact, his Introduction goes even farther than this; it lets the reader in on some of the techniques of the historical investigator. . . The book belongs in every collection of material on early California." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 D 9 '53 600w

"Mr. Stewart has performed two noble services in the editing of this journal. He has not only been a good sleuth and critic in assembling and clarifying the text, but he has also given the modern reader a pictorial concept of the country through which the emigrants passed. His photographs are graphic and forbidding even to the modern traveler." T. D. Clark

+ Sat R 37:19 Je 12 '54 440w

FOOTE, SHELBY. Jordan county; a landscape in narrative. 298p $3.50 Dial press

54-7122

Seven tales or episodes ranging in time from 1797 to 1950. The background in each case is Bristol, county seat of Jordan in the Mississippi delta.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 193:82 Je '54 60w

Reviewed by Robert Molloy

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 25 '54 280w

"Despite great skill of the author of Shiloh, this small public librarian questions [this book's] usefulness in her collection." F. A. Boyle

Library J 79:771 Ap 15 '54 100w

"One of this writer's better books, and I like it. It has the advantage of its milieu—the Mississippi Delta country—good prose, and dramatic structure. Mr. Foote has one more asset: he does not write like Faulkner or Truman Capote." Maxwell Geismar

+ Nation 178:367 Ap 24 '54 70w

"To call the collection a novel, as the publishers do, is to miss something of the book's particular excellence, which lies in Mr. Foote's mastery of the shorter form—the complete and self-contained narrative more complex than the short story and more compressed than the novel." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 2 '54 600w

"The best work is found in two of the longer pieces 'Pillar of Fire' [and] runner-up is 'Ride Out' . . . The longest piece of all, 'Child by Fever,' reads like a grotesque parody of the Southern-decay school. It has family hatred, seduction, insanity, infidelity, death, ghosts, contemplated axe-murders, dreams of mutilation and blue babies. But of merit I think it has none." Edmund Fuller

+ — N Y Times p29 Ap 25 '54 450w

"Mr. Foote's angry, muffled tone seems to promise a great deal, but the unfortunate fact about these stories is not that they lack life but that the life in them is stale."

— + New Yorker 30:119 My 1 '54 140w

"Jordan County displays an extraordinary inventiveness of narrative and descriptive detail which give it a lively vitality; a sense of relevant documentation which enables its author to set forth locale and historical epoch with great economy and vividness; and a supple, emotionless prose style which supplies a whiplash effect to the unexpected turns of events with which its stories bristle. But Mr. Foote moves over the Southern landscape with such adroit rapidity that he fails to dig as deeply as he might into that subsoil of temperament and character which he finds, superficially at least, so fascinating." Jerome Stone

+ — Sat R 37:34 Je 5 '54 370w

FORBES, ALEXANDER. Quest for a northern air route. 138p il maps $4 Harvard univ. press 998 [919.8] World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations. Arctic regions 52-12262

An account of the attempt of the United States government to establish air bases in Labrador, Baffin Land, and Greenland, during the early years of World war II. Bibliography. Index.

"This is a shipshape book. It is launched by a Foreword by that historian of seafarers, Samuel Eliot Morison. Nine maps, 36 photographs, a bibliography, and a handsome job of printing enhance the nautical trimness of the narrative." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 20 '53 350w

Foreign Affairs 32:669 Jl '54 20w

"There are no fireworks in this short autobiographical accounting, but Dr. Forbes writes well in a sure, courtly, good-humored manner, and he manages quietly to convey a sense of the awesome ruggedness of the territory." J. M. Flagler

+ Sat R 37:31 F 27 '54 270w

"Although the book will probably not have a great appeal for the general reader, it helps to relate such comparatively minor but very difficult tasks as the location of a few airfields to the overall effort of fighting a global war. It goes some way, also, to show on what small things—even an uncharted rock in an unknown bay—large military operations may hinge."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:4 Mr '54 200w

FORBES, ESTHER. Rainbow on the road. 343p $3.75 Houghton

53-9248

Novel of New England in the 1830's. It describes a few months in the life of Jude Rebough, an itinerant portrait painter. The narrator is his companion, the boy Eddy, whose aunt had married Jude. Part of the excitement is caused by the fact that Jude resembled the legendary New England Robin Hood, Ruby Lambkin.

"I want to say that I have been having a lovely time with Esther Forbes's newest and brightest novel, Rainbow on the Road. Not in many a year have I read a book so meadow-sweet, so quizzical, so full of Yankee life and talk." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 193:78 Mr '54 220w

Booklist 50:157; 168 D 15 '53

+ Bookmark 13:85 Ja '54 30w

"Jude and Eddy's odyssey is one of the freshest, downright funniest, and warmly affectionate stories I have ever read. It's a masterpiece of its kind, a high water mark in Miss Forbes' distinguished career." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 7 '54 400w

"'Rainbow on the Road' is that rare literary achievement, a novel of no pretensions and enormous charm. All the best impulses of the historical novel, the picaresque novel, and the local color movement, together with exhaustive but quite invisible research, have gone into its making, and they blend into a small evocative masterpiece." Ruth Chapin

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 28 '54 480w

Kirkus 21:713 N 1 '53 240w

"Excellent purchase for the small public library." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 78:2100 D 1 '53 100w

"This view of New England is a welcome change from current fashion, and it is a long time since we have had a book that delighted in the granite ledges and the noisy brooks and the little white villages and the flavor of the villages. . . What is memorable about 'Rainbow on the Road' is the humor and the good humor, the high spirits, the sense of the richness of life and the beauty of the land." Henry Commager

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 31 '54 950w

Reviewed by Frances Gaither

N Y Times p5 Ja 31 '54 1350w

"Miss Forbes evidently knows a good deal about the period and country of which she writes, but her style is garrulous and dull, and the going is very slow."

New Yorker 29:100 Ja 30 '54 90w

"Eddy's narrative preserves the New England rhythms of speech, the words that have fallen into disuse and the legends that are quickly passing from the minds of the new generations. This is a historical novel in the real sense, one in which observation has become insight." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 31 '54 550w

"In other novels Mrs. Forbes has most effectively dipped her brush in somber hues, but this novel is so lyrical, so gay that when she uses darker notes for more than contrast they seem slightly out of key. The book does have a plot in the conventional sense, but all this seems an afterthought; the plot does not make a real appearance until we are halfway through her delightful pages. Although in themselves extremely well done, the scenes of violence necessitated by the plot—they are few—break the mood." J. T. Flexner

+ — Sat R 37:19 Ja 30 '54 500w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p5C F 7 '54 300w

Time 63:78 F 1 '54 470w

"The simple plot is perhaps too episodic, but the novel is redeemed by its brilliant re-creation of a region and an epoch. The New England setting is vividly painted and clearly recognizable to anyone who knows it today, but at the same time is deftly colored to reveal what must have been its appearance more than a century ago."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:193 Je '54 200w

FORBES, JOHN DOUGLAS. Victorian architect; the life and work of William Tinsley. 153p il $5 Ind. univ. press

B or 92 Tinsley, William 53-10024

A biography of William Tinsley, Irish-American architectural designer. The study takes up Tinsley's work in Ireland, and in America as well. The author is professor of history and fine arts at Wabash College. Illustrated with photographs of buildings designed by Tinsley in Ireland and in the United States. Bibliographical note. Index.

"Tinsley's life is not that of a highly sensitive or creative architect. Rather it depicts the struggles of a fine principled, sincere, and faithful scholar practicing at a time when the arts were little understood. It is these struggles, highlighted by his commissions, that hold our attention." A. L. Mell

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 28 '54 200w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1317 Jl '54 30w

"The book is written with considerable charm and provides a thorough picture of the art and business of architecture as it was practiced in the Middle West in Tinsley's time." Alfred Frankenstein

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 4 '54 250w

"Excellent biographical study." Rexford Newcomb

+ Sat R 37:59 Ap 3 '54 750w

"As a biography, this book is, surprisingly enough, vivid, sympathetic, and, in many places, entertaining. The author is the rare sort of scholar who can conduct painstaking research upon an undistinguished person, and yet bring his subject to life."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:153 Je '54 240w

FORD, ALAN W. Anglo-Iranian oil dispute of 1951-1952; a study of the role of law in the relations of states. 348p $4 Univ. of Calif. press

338.27 International law. International court of justice. Anglo-Iranian oil company 54-6470

"While not neglecting the factual aspects and the background of the specific case under discussion, the author has amply justified his choice of subtitle. The book is a rejection of the 'realistic' attitude to international law and a plea for bolder action on the part of the international legal organs." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:55 O 1 '54

"The author raises interesting questions, and provides the material for intelligent appraisal. Appendices include the pertinent documents and statistics. This is valuable reading for all students of international law and international relations."

+ Current Hist 27:64 J1 '54 220w

Foreign Affairs 33:167 O '54 60w

"A valuable commentary." Kurt Schwerin

+ Library J 79:1513 S 1 '54 120w

FORD, EDWIN HOPKINS, and EMERY, EDWIN, eds. Highlights in the history of the American press; a book of readings. 398p $6.50; text ed $5 Univ. of Minn. press

071 Journalism. Newspapers—U.S. 54-5606

"A collection of 27 articles from periodicals published during the past 100 years, arranged to present a chronological account of American journalism from its inception in England, through colonial pamphleteering and yellow journalism, to the giant newspapers of the present." Booklist

Booklist 50:270 Mr 15 '54

"The authors do not pretend to comprehensive treatment. They present an incomplete 'mosaic of myriad fragments,' with the hope that they will supplement established histories of journalism. They hope to attract all persons interested in the American newspaper, but would seem to be aiming especially at landing on the required reading lists of growing schools of journalism." Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 14 '54 450w

FORD, ELBUR, pseud. See Hibbert, E.

FORD, FRANKLIN LEWIS. Robe and sword; the regrouping of the French aristocracy after Louis XIV. 280p il $6 Harvard univ. press

944.03 France—History—Bourbons, 1589-1789. Aristocracy 52-12261

"Explores the struggle for power which took place between two antagonistic groups of French aristocrats during the years 1715-48. The French 'nobility of the robe,' the higher magistracy, the members of the so-called Sovereign Courts, enjoyed the same privileges as the 'nobility of the sword,' yet they were long considered socially inferior. Some of the judicial dynasties were, however, older than certain families of the military or 'feudal' aristocracy; they were wealthier, and much better educated. Dr. Ford here examines the process by which the magistrates recovered their semipolitical functions, enhanced their prestige, and assumed leadership of the whole nobiliary caste after the death of Louis XIV in 1715." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"As for adverse comment on Mr. Ford's excellent book, the worst that can be made is that it is pretty clearly a dissertation, still containing the self-conscious procedural statements of the thesis-writer, and perhaps not as well rounded as it might be. But certainly there is every reason why a few of the best dissertations should be published, without disguising their character as dissertations, lest we forget the standards to which this easily maligned species of literature can attain." R. R. Palmer

+ Am Hist R 59:615 Ap '54 480w

"Important and illuminating book. . . The reviewer's only criticism of this admirable book (incidentally, it is also attractively illustrated—a welcome change in the printing of monographs) is that it might have been carried further, at least to 1771." E. A. Beller

+ Ann Am Acad 292:212 Mr '54 450w

"Although it is highly technical, this book is lucid and well organized, its analysis subtle and thorough. Not only does it explain certain complex and puzzling occurrences on the eve of the French Revolution, but it raises a number of questions about political philosophy and sociology."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:21 Mr '54 240w

FORD, MRS KATHERINE (MORROW), and CREIGHTON, THOMAS HAWK. Quality budget houses. 224p il $4.95 Reinhold

728.6 Architecture, Domestic—Designs and plans 54-6003

"This book has houses ranging in price from $5,000 to $20,000. All 100 of them are architect designed. . . The houses are all 'modern,' in that none is designed to look Georgian, or Cape Cod, or any other period style. They were chosen because they were good examples of answers to specific problems of family needs—lot limitations, orientation, and the like—as well as the all-important problem of restricted budgets." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 50:315 Ap 15 '54

"An excellent presentation of quality budget buildings." Anne Douglas

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 28 '54 400w

"What sort of materials are the best for the least money? Where can one go for standardized building units and plans? Should one buy a development home or have a custom-built? . . . 'Quality Budget Houses' answers these and most other questions not fully understood by the amateur and semiprofessional home builder. And it does this by actual illustrations, practical experience, floor plans, and clearly defined counsel." W. C. Harvey

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 25 '54 450w

Library J 79:914 My 15 '54 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:33 My '54

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 23 '54 650w

FORD, LESLIE, pseud. See Brown, Z. J.

FORESTER, CECIL SCOTT. Barbary pirates; il. by Charles J. Mazoujian. ((Landmark bks) 187p $1.50 Random house

973.47 U.S.—History—Tripolitan war, 1801-1805—Juvenile literature 53-6255

The creator of the Captain Hornblower stories here develops the history of the American expeditions against the Barbary pirates which were the real beginning of the establishment of the United States navy. For ages twelve to fifteen. Index.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p59 N 15 '53 30w

Kirkus 21:536 Ag 15 '53 90w

Reviewed by M. S. Mathes

Library J 78:1942 N 1 '53 50w

"It is serious but lively reading for armchair sailors who will enjoy the stranger-than-fiction exploits of such heroes as Preble, Decatur, Eaton and Bainbridge." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p28 F 14 '54 40w

"C. S. Forester has a fine vehicle for his sea-story gifts, this time for a younger audience than the Hornblower fans." Eleanor Breed

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 15 '53 50w

FORESTER, CECIL SCOTT. The nightmare. 242p $3.50 Little

54-8285

A collection of ten short stories about the Nazis, drawn from the archives of Belsen and Nuremberg.

Booklist 51:15 S 1 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 180:74 O '54 210w

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 18 '54 330w

"A born tale spinner uses novel material."
+ Kirkus 22:295 My 1 '54 200w

"Salutary though not pleasant reading; very well-written like all Mr. Forester's work. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:1309 J1 '54 70w

Nation 179:265 S 25 '54 320w

Reviewed by John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 48:416 O 2 '54 180w

"In these dark and evil settings, even Mr. Forester's fluent hand faltered from an occasional shudder, and the result is a certain unevenness of quality. But all ten stories are absorbing, and at least three are superb examples of this great storyteller's art. I thought the best of all was the story of the swivel chair general, entitled 'Indecision.'" Telford Taylor

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p3 J1 18 '54 600w

"Mr. Forester avoids the pit-fall of a too-shocking immersion in the horrors of his material. As a result, the interest is evenly sustained through all the stories." Henry Cavendish

+ N Y Times p4 J1 18 '54 650w

New Yorker 30:75 J1 17 '54 50w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 J1 29 '54 600w

"All ten cover the same sordid subject matter, yet they exhibit a considerable variety of approach. 'Evidence' and 'Indecision,' for example, are actually documentaries illuminating milestones in the amok career of Hitlerism. . . 'The Nightmare' is not consistently successful. In 'The Wandering Gentle' Mr. Forester undertakes a somewhat strained excursion into fantasy, and in several other pieces, notably 'To Be Given to God' and 'The Bower of Roses,' he lets the white heat of his indignation short-circuit the story with editorials." Frederic Morton

+ — Sat R 37:11 J1 17 '54 460w

"He is intelligent, compassionate, liberal-minded; his writing, if never vivid, is competent; he has—a rare gift in these days—a great power in describing action. And yet something in these stories always seemed lacking." Angus Wilson

+ — Spec p401 O 1 '54 180w

Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 1 '54 320w

Wis Lib Bul 50:180 J1 '54

FORMAN, HENRY JAMES, and GAMMON, ROLAND. Truth is one. 224p $5 Harper

290 Religions 54-8950

"The story of the world's living religions in 75,000 words of text and 250 photographs. Spiritual unity and the essential harmony of all religions are stressed throughout." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:97 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:57 D '54 30w

"More space is devoted to pictures than to text. This tends to undermine considerably the emphasis on oneness, for the pictures necessarily show the objects and forms of worship and the concrete procedures in which the several religions find expression, and these are widely different. The text, though brief (50,000 words, at a rough estimate), gives about as much definite information on the origin and teaching of each of the ten religions as could be put into such limited space." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 71:1398 N 17 '54 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 14 '54 20w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p33 O 17 '54 20w

FORTUNE (periodical). Guide to modern management methods. See Stryker, P.

FORTUNE (periodical). 100 stories of business success; case histories of American enterprise, by the editors of Fortune. 174p $2.95 Simon & Schuster

177 Success

54-2734

"What are the characteristics that make some entrepreneurs successful in spite of little capital, keen competition, and taxes? That is what the editors of Fortune have tried to find out and present in these brief case histories of American enterprise which illustrate what ingenuity, imagination, and abundant energy can do. All have appeared in Fortune magazine." Library J

Booklist 50:443 J1 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

Kirkus 22:355 Je 1 '54 170w

"A good book to add to the small business shelf!" R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:1833 O 1 '54 80w

Springf'd Republican p12D J1 18 '54 70w

FOSCA, FRANCOIS, pseud. See Traz, G. de.

FOSTER, MRS GENEVIEVE (STUMP). Theodore Roosevelt. 106p il $2.25 Scribner

B or 92 Roosevelt, Theodore—Juvenile literature 54-5927

"The fourth title in the excellent 'Initial Biography' series is short, as are the others, but within approximately a hundred pages there is a surprisingly realistic interpretation of the man through personal details of his private life as well as significant events of his public career." Library J

Booklist 50:424 J1 1 '54

Bookmark 13:164 Ap '54 10w

"A remarkably well-rounded picture of this dynamic, many faceted American patriot." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 6 '54 130w

Kirkus 22:312 My 15 '54 80w

"Useful through the intermediate grades for most children and through junior high school for slow readers. Definitely recommended." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 79:1237 Je 15 '54 70w

"The adventurousness and ebullience of Theodore Roosevelt make a lively, enjoyable story." Irene Smith

+ N Y Times p20 J1 11 '54 120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:217 O '54

FOSTER, MARIAN CURTIS (MARIANA, pseud). Hotspur [il. by author]. [38p] $1.25; lib ed $1.60 Lothrop

53-6728

A picture story book for ages four to eight. It tells how the toy horse, Hotspur, escaped from the toy shop and ran away to adventure. When the adventures became too much for him he was glad to return to the shop and Mr Twiddletwicht who made such good toy horses.

Booklist 50:208 Ja 15 '54

FOSTER, M. C.—Continued

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 D 27 '53
140w

Horn Bk 30:29 F '54 110w

"A charming little book, attractively illustrated." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 79:70 Ja 1 '54 70w

"Both story and pictures have the same intimate charm of the author's stories of Miss Flora McFlimsey." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p22 Ja 24 '54 120w

FOSTER, MARIAN CURTIS (MARIANA, pseud). Miss Flora McFlimsey and little Laughing Water [il. by the author]. [30p]
$1.25 Lothrop

54-10293

A tiny picture story book for ages four to eight. This latest in the series about the doll named Miss Flora McFlimsey takes her for a walk in the forest where she meets a new friend, a little Indian girl.

"A lovely wee book." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 O 31 '54
40w

Horn Bk 30:428 D '54 70w

Kirkus 22:633 S 15 '54 50w

"Recommended for ages 4-8." F. W. Butler
+ Library J 79:2492 D 15 '54 60w

"The humor and charm of this fifth in a series of adventures insure Miss Flora's story being attractive even to those who do not already know the doll." S. C. Gross
+ N Y Times p30 O 3 '54 140w

FWLER, GENE. Minutes of the last meeting.
277p $3.75 Viking

B or 92 Hartmann, Sadakichi 54-6425

"Though this is the biography of Sadakichi Hartmann, a charlatan painter who was irretrievably mixed up with all the phases of the theatre and the films, Fowler lays his book largely in the studio home of John Decker which was frequented by Fowler, John Barrymore, W. C. Fields, and other celebrities." Library J

Booklist 50:229; 340 F 15; My 1 '54

Reviewed by Robert Kass
Cath World 179:159 My '54 320w

"Gene Fowler has always written with his heart instead of his head, sometimes giving pats on the head when kicks in the pants were in order. . . . The story is a vivid montage loaded with sentiment and emotion. The characters have solid loyalties despite their clashing personalities—for they were artists, all of them." Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 11 '54
260w

Kirkus 22:55 Ja 15 '54 210w

"Recommended for paid circulation, art, cinema and theatre collections." George Freedly
+ Library J 79:387 F 15 '54 60w

Nation 178:408 My 8 '54 150w

Reviewed by J. K. Hutchens
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 4
'54 800w

"This is a funny book about funny people. The dialogues are full of sardonic thrusts at the stupidity of the world or the foibles of friends. Being egotists, they were probably their own best audience. They lived with exuberance and bravado, and acknowledged the one law that Mr. Fowler proposes as the Eleventh Commandment: 'Thou shalt not quit.' Mr. Fowler, having been fond of them, is now ruefully fond of their memories." Brooks Atkinson

N Y Times p7 Ap 4 '54 800w

"This book, which is among Mr. Fowler's most curious, is diverting, occasionally quite funny, often irritating, and sometimes a little sadistic."

+ New Yorker 30:158 Ap 24 '54 220w

"These were Fowler's friends; he saw in them things others missed. And here he shows them to the reader from the viewpoint of a stubbornly loyal friend. You'll seldom have read a warmer, more affectionate tribute." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 30
'54 600w

"Fowler has made of their stories what appears to me to be the best of his biographical works. The muddy stream of his style has somehow plunged underground and emerged clear, filtered of the denseness and isn't-it-all-too-wonderful heroics which clouded 'Good Night Sweet Prince,' 'Schnozzola,' and 'Beau James.' This volume has dignity, narrative pace, and is infused by a gentle sadness. 'Minutes of the Last Meeting' is a finely-felt epitaph to a group of men who lived intensely as do children and poets and jaguars, men who, in Fowler's phrase, 'were their own executioners.'" Lee Rogow

+ Sat R 37:19 Ap 24 '54 700w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 27 '54
260w

Time 63:108 Ap 5 '54 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 50:133 My '54

FWLER, RICHARD GILDART. Introduction to electric theory. 390p il $7.50 Addison-Wesley

537 Electricity 53-8617

"A college textbook designed for upperclass undergraduate students who have completed courses in introductory physics, analytic geometry and calculus. The author states, 'My object has not been to teach all about electricity, but to build a framework of methods, quantities and attitudes from which a larger knowledge can easily be fitted at will and as needed.' Nevertheless the reader is given a broad view of current ideas in such fields as electromagnetism. The final chapter contains a compact presentation of Maxwell's equations together with illustrations of their uses in solving typical problems in electromagnetic radiation." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:386 F 15 '54 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:87 N '53

FOX, EMMET. Ten commandments, the master key to life. 158p $2 Harper

222.16 Commandments, Ten 53-8369

"This volume is the collection of sermons, modified slightly, which Dr. Fox preached in the Manhattan Opera House, New York, all of which were based on The Decalogue. Moses is not out of date, nor are his sayings, according to this eminent divine, on the contrary, the sayings of Moses are so universal and timeless that no problem exists today that could not be solved by the Ten Commandments. Non-sectarian." Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 29 '53
200w

Kirkus 21:674 O 1 '53 150w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p22 D 6 '53 20w

Wis Lib Bul 50:21 Ja '54

FOX, GENEVIEVE MAY (MRS RAYMOND G. FULLER). Bonnie, island girl; il. by Mary Morton Weissfeld. 242p $2.75 Little

54-5138

A novel for young girls about the people on a small island off the coast of Maine. The heroine is Bonnie Jean Andrews, the lobster man's daughter; her experiences when she goes to the mainland to school, and her joy on coming back to the island make the story.

Booklist 50:326 Ap 15 '54

Kirkus 22:64 F 1 '54 140w

"Recommended for girls 12-14." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 79:789 Ap 15 '54 60w

"Girls in their early teens will enjoy this particularly, with Bonnie at last seeing herself honestly and appreciating the boy we knew all along she would choose. The launching of his boat, the 'Bonnie Jean,' makes a moving ending, with the feeling of Maine and its people at a local celebration well described." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 16 '54 170w

"The sections of the story which deal with island life hold a certain interest. . . For the most part, however, the book is disappointing. Bonnie, her family and her two friends—Jimmy, the strong, steady island boy, and Greg, the carefree son of summer people—never come to life. The book is episodic and the various incidents don't always hang together." Alberta Eiseman

— + N Y Times p24 My 23 '54 120w

FOX, JAMES M., pseud. See Knipscheer, J. M. W.

FRANCIS, PHILIP, pseud. See Callahan, P. J. T.

FRANK, JOSETTE. Your child's reading today. 328p $3.95 Doubleday

028.5 Books and reading. Children's literature 54-5721

"Josette Frank [is] consultant on children's books for Child Study Association of America. . . Miss Frank explains reading motives, need and values; gives guidance through reading lists; and answers questions about the comics, radio and television and their effect on reading habits. Her conclusion is that books are still the backbone of our accumulated knowledge and culture. They will long remain so, fed and stimulated by their rising, ebullient sister arts." (San Francisco Chronicle) Index.

Booklist 51:3 S 1 '54

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 179:399 Ag '54 250w

"This is indeed a timely and welcome reminder in an age when the gulf between youth and their elders seems to grow wider continually." E. C. Ince

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 N 11 '54 750w

"Occasionally readers may take issue with inclusions or omissions, with age levels at which books are placed, but the whole development is sound, imaginative, perceptive and helpful."

+ Kirkus 22:226 Mr 15 '54 210w

"Recommended for first purchase by all public libraries and for special collections as indicated." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:1226 Je 15 '54 170w

"Comprehensive and practical book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 25 '54 700w

"Consultant for the Child Study Association of America, Miss Frank bases her advice on book selection on a sensible and sensitive regard for the individual's needs and tastes." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p34 S 26 '54 450w

"The three hundred pages of brisk discussion contributed by Josette Frank in her new book should be enthusiastically received." Marjorie Ford

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 My 31 '54 450w

Wis Lib Bul 50:171 Jl '54

FRANKAU, PAMELA. Wreath for the enemy. 310p $3.50 Harper

54-6013

Penelope, the young daughter of an Englishman who ran an unconventional but delightful hotel on the Riviera, is the central character in this novel of character. In Penelope's own narrative and in those of several others we have the story of Penelope's life between the ages of fourteen and nineteen.

Booklist 50:369; 400 Je 1 '54; Je 15 '54

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 27 '54 450w

"Miss Frankau would have us accept these oddities as legitimate representatives of British aristocracy, and perhaps they are, but they bring only chaos to the novel's central point. By using them Miss Frankau has substituted for vertical characterization her talent for bright, darting conversation, and so the people dissolve into talk, good talk true, but still just talk. Some real values are fished out.

But this quiet unity of aim comes, for the reader, too late. We have been, so to speak, too long in the carnival to find an answer in the chapel." Doris Grumbach

— + Commonweal 60:326 Jl 2 '54 600w

+ Kirkus 22:247 Ap 1 '54 180w

"The characters are exquisitely developed, conversation sparkling and sometimes thoughtful. For the discriminating reader." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 79:1224 Je 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by H. I'A Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 22 '54 200w

"Miss Frankau's writing has the quality of effortlessness. There are few people handling language to whom it comes so naturally, with such a flow of ease and vitality. . . As if aware of this, Miss Frankau has given herself, in 'A Wreath for the Enemy,' a considerable handicap. The book is sharply divided into three sections, told by a variety of narrators, each setting an interpretation on a series of events in which they all more or less loosely participate. The first two sections are brilliant short stories in themselves; the third attempting to generalize from the particulars that have gone on before, is less satisfying. The sum of the parts almost overbalances the whole." Sylvia Stallings

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Je 27 '54 900w

"Dazzlingly readable. Pamela Frankau's new novel presents a group of characters facing the Problem of Values with which all of us, in today's traditionless society, must grapple. Miss Frankau's skill has enabled her to clothe this serious theme with an entertaining story. This is good craftsmanship." Elizabeth Jane-way

+ N Y Times p4 Je 27 '54 650w

"The best, and longest, part of Miss Frankau's book is laid in a remarkable French hotel, which has more charm, as we look back on it, than any of the human beings in her story—and that is saying a good deal, because she has assembled a number of interesting and likable people here. . . But even Miss Frankau's practiced and persuasive hand cannot convince us that this book is more than a collection of episodes, not very well knit into a whole and not showing anything much except that it is painful to be young and also painful to be middle-aged."

+ — New Yorker 30:90 Je 26 '54 120w

"The section, 'The Duchess and the Smugs,' is especially fine, and the novel as a whole is a long stretch past most of the spring fiction. I should guess that her next will be something worth waiting for." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Jl 8 '54 550w

"Miss Frankau never quite resolves the separate parts of 'A Wreath for the Enemy' into a single, cohesive whole. . . But, as though in a kaleidoscope, the scattered parts fall into unexpected designs. Some of these are particularly effective. Perhaps because in this country we so constantly overemphasize youth and undervalue maturity, her recurrent theme of the moments at which youth, confronted by sophistication, learns or rejects its tentatively proffered wisdom is particularly touching." Pamela Taylor

FRANK, R. Jr. pseud. See Ross, F. X.

FRANKAU, PAMELA—Continued

+ Sat R 37:15 J1 3 '54 550w

"Concerned with the growing-up of two children. . . Miss Frankau, as one might expect, has made a very amiable, lively and well-characterised story out of it, with some really amusing and moving passages." Kingsley Amis

+ Spec p42 J1 2 '54 180w

"A lightly elegant confection made with the most casual-seeming skill; a sweet eagerly consumed, with a very slightly cloying after-taste. . . The third part of the book, which more or less resolves Penelope's and Don's problems, falters a little in the account of what seems a slightly irrelevant love affair. In general, however, Miss Frankau's treatment of scene and characters is marked by great professional assurance, and she succeeds in making almost all of her characters (except perhaps the elder Bradleys) curiously likeable."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p469 J1 23 '54 220w

FRANKEL, GODFREY. Short cut to photography. 128p il $2.50 Sterling

770 Photography 54-9948

A book for teen-agers written in simple, non-technical language. Many illustrations including diagrams. Partial contents: The photographic process; What camera to buy; What makes a good picture? Candid, action and sports shots; Most common picture-making mistakes; Planning your own darkroom; Exhibiting and presenting photos; Breaking in as a professional photographer. Index.

Booklist 50:382 Je 1 '54

"When a photographer with Godfrey Frankel's high standards sets out to teach young people the fundamentals of his craft, this is the happy result: a how-to book with a point of view. 'You create the picture,' he stresses; 'a camera simply records it.' Throughout the book, however, the emphasis is on the promise of the title: to provide a quick working familiarity with practical techniques." Jacob Deschin

+ N Y Times p36 Je 6 '54 180w

FRANKEL, LILLIAN BERSON, and FRANKEL, GODFREY. What to do with your preschooler. 120p il $2 Sterling

790 Play. Amusements 53-13544

These suggestions for enjoyable activities for children two to five years, include such things as painting in various media; visiting stores, the library, a dairy; dancing and dressing up; indoor games, etc.

Booklist 50:199 Ja 15 '54

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 24 '54 30w

FRANKEL, SALLY HERBERT. Economic impact on under-developed societies; essays on international investment and social change. 179p $3.25 Harvard univ. press

301.243 [301.1535] Industrialization. Africa—Economic conditions A53-6251

"The economic development of what are popularly known as 'under-developed' countries is an issue of paramount importance in the world to-day. . . These nine essays, most of which have been published within the last two years, critically analyse current thought and policy in regard to this problem. The essays in Part I examine the conceptual and theoretical framework and symbolism of present economic beliefs and actions in this field. . . The essays in Part II apply the previous analysis to the specific problems of Africa." (Publisher's note) No Index.

"Professor Frankel's profound skepticism about most economic and social development schemes, while perhaps too unrelieved, is a necessary antidote for much uncritical enthusiasm on this subject."

Foreign Affairs 32:506 Ap '54 30w

"If Professor Frankel's book should get less attention than it obviously deserves that will be due not a little to a certain testy sententiousness, heavily crossed and dotted with italics on every page; and to a negative cautiousness which defeats its own ends. He puts the matter very well himself when he says that 'society in the last resort remoulds itself by the process of action,' but then a continuous chorus of 'Watch your step' is not sufficient guide in a revolutionary situation in which action of one kind or another is inevitable." David Mitrany

Manchester Guardian p2 Ja 5 '54 240w

"His book, unfortunately, is not easy reading, since he is addicted to sociological jargon and has a decided penchant for oblique statement. Nevertheless, some of Professor Frankel's observations might well be taken to heart by Point Four planners." Keith Hutchison

Nation 178:134 F 13 '54 160w

"A penetrating analysis of some of the problems of underdeveloped areas."

Pol Sci Q 69:158 Mr '54 500w

"Scepticism is entirely legitimate, and could serve a useful purpose. But Professor Frankel's scepticism lacks balance. His exacting standards in scrutinising the motives and forms of collective action collapse suddenly, indeed disappear, when it comes to the consequences of the economic behaviour of private firms or individuals."

Times [London] Lit Sup p626 O 2 '53 450w

"Despite my fundamental misgivings about Frankel's thesis, I find myself in agreement with him on many particulars—his analysis of the changed role of foreign investment, his views on South Africa, his comments on the importance of noncapital requirements, and many others. Moreover, he has an enviable gift of style and presentation which makes reading the book a pleasant experience." J. H. Adler

+ — Yale R n s 43:469 spring '54 550w

FRANKEN, ROSE D. (LEWIN) (MRS WILLIAM BROWN MELONEY). Rendezvous [Eng title: Quiet heart]. 251p $3.50 Doubleday

54-6250

A quiet story of life in a French village in the south of France, in England, and in Connecticut. The heroine is a French peasant girl, Josephine, who loves her family, but who, when a chance offers to accompany an English family to England and to Connecticut, goes. On her return she has to battle for her integrity and love for her family with her new enlarged experience as background.

Booklist 50:380 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 14:8 O '54 30w

Kirkus 22:210 Mr 15 '54 110w

"Miss Franken writes with warmth and delicacy. Her story has flavor and feeling. Her characterizations, especially those of an unstable but dominating wife, and of a kind of French Thoreau, are sharp and adroit. . . The severely critical will dismiss 'Rendezvous' as being an overly arranged story of sentimentalized trivia. It is true that Miss Franken is not Faulkner. It is also true, however, that she wishes, quite as much as he, 'to uplift man's heart.' She does not do so as memorably, but she does it with skill and tenderness." C. L.

+ N Y Times p27 My 9 '54 500w

"There is an underlying tenderness in Miss Franken's concern for Josephine and a sentimental, self-sacrificing ending which, if you like that sort of thing, gives you a sense of good old safety and security." John Haverstick

+ Sat R 37:37 Je 26 '54 170w

"This is a simple tale which would be pleasing in an unpretentious way if it were not for an impression of condescension and complacency—as if the author were anxious to show how well she appreciates these good people's solid virtues and devotion to work and tradition."

Times [London] Lit Sup p309 My 14 '54 90w

FRANKLAND, EDWARD PERCY. Foster brothers. 310p $3.95 Day

54-10457

A historical novel of England in the eleventh century, relating the adventures there of two young Vikings from Iceland.

Booklist 51:133 N 15 '54

Kirkus 22:457 J1 15 '54 280w

"As Arnold Toynbee (the author's cousin) points out in his Introduction, the people of the Heroic Age 'were infant prodigies as well as juvenile delinquents,' and could transmute historical facts into fiction, in their epics and sagas. The author's impersonal style takes on some of that quality (of the Saga). Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1503 S 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 26 '54 500w

"The characters are well portrayed. The tale moves to a dramatic climax. Nevertheless, the book does not entirely succeed. Its succession of rapes, seductions, drunkenness and brutal murders titillate in the beginning, but end by being monotonous. They may well reflect the period, but when a novelist bores the reader with his repetitions, it is not enough to say that he is true to life." T. C. Chubb

+ — N Y Times p29 O 3 '54 400w

"A lively and cheerful story that is, in the long run, exasperating and unsatisfying."

+ — New Yorker 30:181 O 9 '54 130w

"The novel is beautifully written, perhaps not quite so well constructed. It has much adventure and suspense, and considerable humor with the unusual quality of being dry in its view and lusty in its manner. In the picture of eleventh-century Britain, the native people, and the Northmen whose domination is about to wane, 'The Foster Brothers' is downright fascinating and revealing. It places easily in the elite class of historical fiction." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R 37:16 S 16 '54 460w

FRANKLIN, BENJAMIN. Wit and folly: The bagatelles [ed. by] Richard E. Amacher. 188p $4 Rutgers univ. press

814

53-11052

During the Revolution when Benjamin Franklin was our minister to France, he had a private printing press at Passy. To entertain his friends he often printed little skits and fables on this press. These are some of the articles. There is an annotated list of Franklin's friends and acquaintances. Index.

Booklist 50:274 Mr 15 '54

"Mr. Amacher has ably performed a labor of love. It is doubtful whether the 'Bagatelles' will now contribute largely to the 'enjoyment' of the general reading public," even in his excellent edition. But his careful editing should help at least a few new readers to understand and appreciate them, and will certainly delight all scholars who for any reason are concerned with Franklin or with the history or literature of his time." K. B. Murdock

+ New Eng Q 27:277 Je '54 700w

"The work is obviously a labor of love. Mr. Amacher has collated the printed texts with the surviving manuscript drafts; he has annotated copiously; he has enriched the collection with three items by Franklin, and one by the Abbé Morellet, which Franklin never printed but which are in key with most of the Bagatelles. The result shows the aged Franklin as he liked to portray himself."

DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 F 21 '54 360w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit

N Y Times p25 Ja 17 '54 50w

"Benjamin Franklin had a great gift for clothing gems of wisdom in humor. Nowhere is this gift more evident than in his famous 'Bagatelles.' Now for the first time, all these charming essays are gathered together in one volume." C. G.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 21 '54 200w

"These whimsical writings reflect Franklin's lighter vein; they are measured philosophical escapades; models of literary style and composition. So far they have lain almost unnoticed; disparate essays among the vast scientific, philosophical and political mass of Frankliniana. They have been rescued from their oblivion and annotated with scrupulous care by an editor whose enthusiasm for his subject perhaps a little dims his sense of proportion."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p294 My 7 '54 440w

FRANKLIN, GEORGE CORY. Tuffy [il. by L. D. Cram]. 148p $2.25 Houghton

Beavers—Legends and stories 54-9046

Story of the life of a Colorado beaver, taking him from the time he leaves the parent colony, until he establishes a home and colony of his own. For grades four to seven.

Booklist 51:68 O 1 '54

Kirkus 22:484 Ag 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin

Library J 79:2495 D 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p 14 N 14 '54 80w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 14 '54 30w

"The author writes from years of observation in the Rocky Mountain area and—although he sometimes comes dangerously close to 'knowing what the animals think,' as Abner Sprague observed of Enos Mills—his story does make good reading." R. G.

+ Sat R 37:34 S 18 '54 50w

FRANKLING, ELEANOR. Practical guide to dog breeding. (Enterprise bk) 184p $3.50 Funk, W.

636.7 Dogs

54-9729

A British guide to dog breeding which can be adapted to American use. The author says: "The aim of this book is to offer a thoroughly practical and detailed guide to dog breeding, in the hope that it may help breeders with the difficulties which so often occur. It is based on personal experience. The writer believes also that a short summary of some of the fundamental principles on which practical breeding is founded will not only be of interest to dog breeders but also may help them to solve for themselves those problems which cannot be elucidated by rule of thumb." Index.

Booklist 51:56 O 1 '54

"This is not a book for the average dog fancier, but it should be very useful to those who are eager to learn the principles of heredity, puppy raising and management, and similar topics." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 24 '54 70w

"A compact how-to-book for a special audience."

+ Kirkus 22:302 My 1 '54 150w

FRASER, NORMAN, ed. International catalogue of recorded folk music; with a pref. by R. Vaughan Williams and introd. by Maud Karpeles [pub by] the International folk music council in association with the Oxford univ. press for UNESCO. (Archives of recorded music) 201p pa $2.80 Oxford

789.913 Folk music—Catalogs. Phonograph records—Catalogs

"The first section (174 pp.) lists pressings which were, at the time the catalog was compiled, available on the commercial market or from institutions such as the Library of Congress and the Musée de l'Homme. . . . The second section of the Catalogue (pp. 175-201) lists 'Recordings Held by Institutions,' and is designed to furnish the research scholar with information about the size and general character of collections made up of cylinder, acetate disc, and tape recordings which are not readily available to the general public, or which may be purchased only in instantaneous copies. This is a most useful listing, and one which should result in increased cooperation and exchange on an international basis between the institutions." Music Lib Assn Notes

"All in all, the beginning is good. With the general format and standard set, and with the wide circulation of this edition, future issues should be more nearly complete and still more useful." Duncan Emrich

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:565 S '54 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p107 F 12 '54 110w

FRAZIER, MRS NETA (LOHNES). Somebody special; il. by Henrietta Jones Moon. 148p $2.75 Longmans

54-9204

A continuation of Little Rhody (Book Review Digest 1953). This story is of Little Rhody's twelfth year, when she discovered that she, as well as the other members of her family, had a specialty. For grades four to seven.

Booklist 51:155 D 1 '54

"From its first page to the last, this is a good and wholesome story, as well as highly entertaining." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 D 9 '54 280w

Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 40w

"The charm of this Midwest tale of the 1870's lies in its clearly pictured, as though remembered, family life; its simple excitements of country school, church suppers and birthday parties; and its likeable children. Girls today will love the story and may well envy Rhoda's joyous anticipation and responses. Animated line drawings." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:432 D '54 70w

Kirkus 22:387 J1 1 '54 70w

FREEDMAN, BENEDICT, and FREEDMAN, MRS NANCY MARS. Spark and the exodus. 287p $3 Crown

54-6627

Story of a group of Polish Jews who in the early years of the twentieth century, fled from their home town and after hardships and disappointments finally found their way to Jerusalem.

"A stimulating, evocative book, for the thoughtful reader." Evelyn Eaton

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 29 '54 360w

Kirkus 22:209 Mr 15 '54 210w

Reviewed by C. J. Roth

Library J 79:622 Ap 1 '54 130w

"To one who has lived through the terrors that poisoned life in a Polish ghetto, the secret police that hounded day and night, this pilgrimage to Palestine seems pallid reporting. . . . It is, of course, quite true that 'second book' trouble is endemic in writers; the difficulty is compounded when second-hand reporting is substituted for first-hand living." Anzia Yezierska

N Y Times p22 Je 13 '54 400w

"The authors of the best-selling 'Mrs. Mike' of a few seasons back, the Freedmans have indulged in a rather radical change of pace. 'The Spark and the Exodus' is a deeply-felt Jewish novel, full of Jewish wisdom, humor, philosophy, and homilies. . . . The Freedmans have produced an eloquent novel; more than that, they illuminate the Ben Gurions and other pioneers of Israel who helped create Israel and who lead it today." H. U. Ribalow

+ Sat R 37:36 J1 24 '54 320w

FREEMAN, DON. Beady Bear; pictures by [the author]. 48p $2 Viking

54-12295

A picture-story book about a toy Teddy bear who tried living in a cave, but found it not to his liking. Beady Bear was glad to be rescued by the little boy who had the much-needed key. For ages three to six.

Booklist 51:47 S 15 '54

Reviewed by E. S. Dutton

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 14 '54 110w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christan Science Monitor p11 N 11 '54 80w

"The kind of bedtime story smallest listeners will love. The scratchboard drawings in strong black and white depict two very engaging companions." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:326 O '54 70w

Kirkus 22:479 Ag 1 '54 50w

"Recommended." Juanita Walker

+ Library J 79:2491 D 15 '54 70w

"There is wholesome emotional satisfaction here for those pre-schoolers who have similar toy attachments. With simple page-by-page black and white scratchboard illustrations for each rhythmic sentence, this is the kind of book small children will delight in 'reading' to themselves after a couple of out-loud readings by mother." Pat Clark

+ N Y Times pt2 p42 N 14 '54 150w

Reviewed by B. B. Thorpe

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 14 '54 30w

FREEMAN, DOUGLAS SOUTHALL. George Washington. 6v; v. 6, Patriot and president; with a foreword by Dumas Malone [pref. by Mary Wells Ashworth]. 529p il $7.50 Scribner

B or 92 Washington, George (48-8880)

"Douglas Southall Freeman closed his useful and busy life dramatically when he died at his desk after having written the last paragraph of the sixth volume of his biography of George Washington. This volume, now posthumously published, treats Washington's career from his return to Mount Vernon at the end of the War for Independence to his re-election to the Presidency in 1793." (N Y Times) For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest 1948, 1949, 1951, 1952.

Booklist 51:106 N 1 '54

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 17 '54 240w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p7 O 21 '54 850w

Current Hist 27:388 D '54 150w

Kirkus 22:557 Ag 15 '54 250w

"This volume is a fitting conclusion to the last such task that Douglas Freeman set himself, though regret persists, of course, that he was not permitted to write the final volume which would have been an epitome of the entire work." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1891 O 15 '54 120w

Nation 179:409 N 6 '54 380w

"As a foreword to this volume the publishers have printed an essay by Dumas Malone, the biographer of Jefferson, entitled 'The Pen of Douglas Southall Freeman.' It is a delightful account of Freeman's career as newspaper editor and radio commentator, a revealing analysis of his methods of research, and a perceptive appreciation of his greatness as biographer. Any of the multitude of readers who have come to know Lee and Washington through Freeman's writings will find it a moving and interesting sketch." Douglass Adair

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 O 17 '54 800w

"Had Mr. Freeman begun his work two decades earlier he might have penetrated to the real Washington, but he did not have time on his side. Nevertheless, within these limitations, this is a valuable and often brilliant fragment. The author's treatment of Washington as Commander in Chief is virtually definitive; and the facts of his life as here given will probably never need basic modification, so extensive is the research." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ N Y Times p6 O 3 '54 1200w

Reviewed by Bruce Bliven

+ New Yorker 30:212 N 13 '54 1550w

"Turning from the concluding volume to the series as a whole, what are the outstanding impressions? The first is amazement over the sheer bulk of material unearthed. . . . The second is recognition of the extreme value of the earlier volumes as an encyclopedia of history. . . . When, however, it comes to reading these volumes as biography they are disappointing. There are, to be sure, many fine passages, notably the character surveys and the descriptions of battles in which Washington fought. But much of the going is slow and tedious, the mass of material nearly overwhelming. . . . The most serious defect, however, is Freeman's failure to deal adequately with the evidence that Washington had some serious weaknesses of character." Bernhard Knollenberg

+ — Sat R 37:13 S 16 '54 850w

Time 64:106 O 4 '54 350w

FREEMAN, IRA MAXIMILIAN. All about the wonders of chemistry; il. by George Wilde. 148p $1.95 Random house

540 Chemistry—Juvenile literature 54-7002

"Interestingly presented information on chemistry and the part it plays in our everyday life. Explains the principles and historical development of chemistry, discusses some important materials such as steel, oil, rubber, fibers, and plastics and their uses, considers chemistry in relation to food, medicine, and agriculture, and suggests possible careers in chemistry. Grades 6-8." Booklist

Booklist 51:116 N 1 '54

Reviewed by John Lewellen

Chicago Sunday Tribune p30 N 14 '54 50w

Kirkus 22:446 J1 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by Dorothy Schumacher

Library J 79:2256 N 15 '54 30w

"An informative, crystal-clear examination of the principles of the science and its application to everyday life." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:218 N 27 '54 30w

FREIDEL, FRANK BURT. Franklin D. Roosevelt; 6v; v2, The ordeal. 320p il $6 Little

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano (52-5521)

The second in the proposed six-volume biography of Franklin D. Roosevelt. It covers the period from 1919, to his election as governor of the state of New York in 1928, and includes the period when Roosevelt was stricken by polio, and his struggle to overcome it. Index. For volume 1 see Book Review Digest 1952.

"In this book Professor Freidel has amply fulfilled the high expectations awakened by his first volume. It is hardly possible to speak of a 'definitive' biography of a personality so complex, so subtle, and, in the deep sense, so self-sufficient as Franklin Roosevelt. But it is certainly fair enough to describe this work as indispensable to anyone who would understand one of the most remarkable personalities of our time." Dexter Perkins

+ Am Hist R 59:959 J1 '54 400w

Reviewed by L. B. Wehle

Ann Am Acad 294:189 J1 '54 600w

Booklist 50:258 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:104 F '54 10w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 31 '54 450w

Reviewed by S. R. Davis

Christian Science Monitor p7 F 11 '54 600w

Current Hist 26:190 Mr '54 50w

Foreign Affairs 32:673 J1 '54 50w

"The definitive life of F.D.R., a basic 'source' for reference and university libraries, but also recommended as most interesting and important reading for all libraries." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 78:2210 D 15 '53 210w

"Dr. Freidel has given us an excellent account of the events of an era which has been largely neglected in books about Franklin D. Roosevelt. With few exceptions, people writing about Roosevelt have preferred to record only his years as Governor and President. This volume, dealing with the period between 1919 and 1928, fills an important historical gap." G. G. Tully

+ Nation 178:264 Mr 27 '54 550w

"Cool, indefatigable, wary, and mildly cynical, Freidel is the opposite of a dramatist; he undramatizes the emotional storms of this period, carefully presenting them as meteorology, not as the voice of Jupiter Tonans. Yet he avoids the dull pedantry of Dr. Dryasdust, presenting a living man, not an assemblage of features bereft of vitality. He is an admirable biographer. In one respect, however, it seems to me that he has exhibited too much, not too little imagination. I doubt that any politician ever saw as far ahead and held as consistently to a single purpose as Freidel says that Roosevelt did during these years." G. W. Johnson

+ — New Repub 130:19 F 1 '54 800w

"If there were ever a story to engage the sympathies of a biographer, to soften up his critical detachment, to tempt him to choose the milder adjective and neglect the less flattering incident and to betray him into the position of an apologist—this is it. . . . Franklin Roosevelt's ordeal is his biographer's critical test. If the biographer is going to slip into the role of apologist and turn out five or six volumes of political hagiography about which the reading public should be warned, he will tip his hand here. In the opinion of the reviewer Mr. Freidel passes the test." C. V. Woodward

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ja 31 '54 1350w

"Here is a book that should be required reading for Democrats in 1954. . . . Frank Freidel has written a brilliant case study of how a party out of office can make use of the possibilities open to it. Sustaining the high level of scholarship of the preceding volume, this book gives a complete and authoritative account of Roosevelt's advance from local politician to national leader." A. A. Berle

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 31 '54 1350w

"The author writes a flowing narrative free of any editorializing, with every important statement firmly backed but with no obtrusion of the reference machinery."

+ New Yorker 29:101 Ja 30 '54 170w

"Professor Freidel's account of Roosevelt's struggle to walk again—the 'ordeal' of the title—is a study in human courage which has an appeal wholly apart from Roosevelt's place in history." W. E. Leuchtenburg

+ Pol Sci Q 69:638 D '54 900w

"One suspects that the Roosevelt charm has not been altogether lost on the author, but he writes as a historian, not as a partisan. And, incidentally, he writes well. The day is about done when the professional historian can rest content with writing grade-B English. In general he does not only a far more adequate job of research, but also a far better job of writing than most of the literary lights who invade his field." J. D. Hicks

FREIDEL, F. B.—Continued

+ Sat R 37:21 Ja 30 '54 700w

Reviewed by G. A. Panichas

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 21 '54 750w

"Perhaps the best feature of this volume is the simplicity and clarity of the author's style. The book should find a large and receptive reading public."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:153 Je '54 240w

Wis Lib Bul 50:28 Ja '54

FREMANTLE, MRS ANNE (JACKSON), ed.
Treasury of early Christianity; with an introduction. 625p $6 Viking

281.1 Christian literature, Early—Collections 53-7952

"Comprehensive, topically arranged anthology of prose and poetry by the Church Fathers, providing 'an irreplaceable source of nourishment and delight.' Bibliography, Index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:214 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:83 Ja '54 20w

"This intelligent anthology is welcome. The selections are, on the whole, well chosen and the editing is, in general, competent." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:114 Ja 27 '54 360w

"The great names are here—Augustine, Ignatius of Antioch, Tertullian, Origen, Basil, Gregory of Nazianus—and the great genius of the early Christian spirit is here too. To read in this collection is to touch it. The book represents an impressive achievement." W. P. C.

+ Commonweal 59:291 D 18 '53 120w

"This, to my knowledge, is unique. The material, with few exceptions, has been virtually buried so far as the general reader is concerned. And yet, during several hundred years, the writers among the churchmen kept alive the only literature that survived. . . Some of it is exalted, some is mundane, some is gay, some is learned, much of it is spiced with humor, virtually all of it is alive."

+ Kirkus 21:574 Ag 15 '53 150w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 3 '54 30w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p22 D 6 '53 10w

"The more than 150 excerpts from fifty or so different early Fathers make quite a party indeed. But, unfortunately, the majority of the selections are so short that the affair becomes a little bewildering. In fact, you aren't even quite sure you are meeting an old friend, or whether the new one will be to your liking. . . For all this, there can be no doubt that much fascinating material is made available, some of it never readily accessible before." W. J. Oates

+ Sat R 37:30 Ap 10 '54 750w

FREMANTLE, MRS ANNE (JACKSON), and HOLME, BRYAN. Europe, a journey with pictures; foreword by Lewis Mumford. 248p $7.50 Studio

914 Europe—Description and travel, Europe—Views 54-5621

Text and photographs show the important places in Great Britain, Ireland, France, Belgium, Holland, Norway, Sweden, Finland, West Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy, Greece, Yugoslavia, Spain and Portugal.

Bookmark 13:216 Je '54 30w

Kirkus 22:178 Mr 1 '54 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Je 6 '54 30w

"This is a book to be sampled at leisure, before, after or during one's planned itinerary.

If sampled before, it might even aid in that planning." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p32 My 11 '54 140w

"Anyone who has 'been there' will re-live his trip with this volume. Others may make vacation plans immediately."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 11 '54 60w

"The editors have succumbed neither to the vapid tourist bureau views nor to the unpopulated everybody-is-dead-here school of architectural photo coverage. Wind blows in the sails of ships, haze settles over a Scottish castle, boy delights girl over a fence in Salzburg, and it doesn't look like an airline publicity shot. Captions are simple and direct, and there is a country-by-country accompanying text which is unpretentious, informative, and leans heavily on quotations for proof positive of the charm that exists in the nation under scrutiny." H. A. S.

+ Sat R 37:30 Ag 14 '54 250w

FREMANTLE, SIR ARTHUR JAMES LYON.
Diary; being the journal of [the author] on his three months in the southern states; editing and commentary by Walter Lord. 304p $4 Little

973.782 Confederate states of America. U.S.—History—Civil war—Personal narratives 54-6864

Lieutenant-Colonel Fremantle, of H. M. Coldstream Guards, a Confederate sympathizer, landed at the mouth of the Rio Grande on April 1, 1863, crossed into Texas, and traveled the whole length of the Confederacy, visiting every state except Arkansas and Florida. His account of his experiences was published in England, New York and Mobile before the year was out. This reprint contains notes and comments by the editor.

"The most interesting and valuable portions of this book are the descriptions of the countryside and cities through which he passed, his account of the military situation in Mississippi and the fighting at Gettysburg (some of which he saw from a treetop), and his appraisal of the prominent men with whom he came in contact. . . This journal gives us a good view of life in the South at the halfway point in the Civil War, and one finishes reading it with a good taste in the mouth." O. P. Chitwood

+ Ann Am Acad 295:157 S '54 470w

Bookmark 13:182 My '54 30w

"The diary is well edited. It contains enough solid material to amply justify this republication." Avery Craven

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 My 9 '54 280w

Christian Century 71:765 Je 23 '54 250w

"Fremantle has a rare talent for vivid description and a Boswellian flair for collecting celebrities. His eyewitness account of events during three definitive months of the war, supplemented by Mr. Lord's informative notes, give a richly rewarding study of the solid qualities on which America was soon to build its world power. Thanks to Mr. Lord it now comes out of the discard to take its rightful place among the standard works on the Civil War." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 15 '54 650w

Kirkus 22:100 F 1 '54 180w

"Helpful to the general reader but superfluous for the scholar who will probably use the diary most. For college, historical and public libraries." Dorothy Sinclair

+ Library J 79:768 Ap 15 '54 170w

"Fremantle's often cited diary has now been republished with extensive notes by Walter Lord. They are interesting for sidelights on characters, though Mr. Lord's brightness sometimes turns to banality. Fremantle remains fresh." J. F. Dobie

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 25 '54 380w

"It was long past time for a new edition of this work, which is by far the most interesting and well-written travel account of life in the Confederacy. Many of its descriptions would be no discredit to the pen of Dickens. Walter Lord, whose hobby is research in American history, has made it easier for the reader to follow Fremantle's course by his editorial commentaries and by the attractive map which makes up the end-papers." E. M. Coulter

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 25 '54 750w

"Lieut. Col. Arthur Fremantle had a fine ironic sense and an eye for significant detail, so that his journal is one of the most amusing and absorbing records of the Confederacy. Also, he had the proper spirit of a traveler: wide curiosity, a sympathy for the people, engaging friendliness, and the ability to adapt himself to various uncomfortable conditions." Clement Eaton

+ Sat R 37:18 My 22 '54 450w

FREMINVILLE, RENE MARIE DE LA POIX DE (JEAN MERRIEN, pseud). Lonely voyagers; from Les navigateurs solitaires; tr. by J. H. Watkins. 310p il $4 Putnam

910.4 Voyages and travels 54-10499

True stories of adventurers who went to sea singly or in small groups, in small boats. Some of them met with success, but some met disaster. Among them are the Americans "Centennial" Johnson and Joshua Slocum, and the Frenchmen Alain Gerbault and Dr Alain Bombard. Bibliography. Index.

"For most landlubbers, the opening section which deals with limitations of selection (size of vessels, number of voyagers, terminology) can be skipped, for even to armchair sailors, there is much of the lore beloved by blue water seamen they cannot absorb. But the vignettes and pen portraits of the men who have braved the seas alone—whatever their reason—afford more variety of experience than one might expect."

Kirkus 22:625 S 1 '54 230w

"Recommended for any library, that has readers interested in adventure, and for all libraries in shore cities where small boats stir the imagination." Lee Ash

+ Library J 79:2325 D 1 '54 90w

"This volume by a French sailorman is an indispensable book in any cruising man's library. It is a superb handling of a great body of fact and fancy, in which the bare statistics of a nut voyage are recorded with objective simplicity and the experience of the real innovators from Blackburn and Slocum to Patrick Ellam and Bombard are expanded to include not only the facts but the flavor of the enterprise." Alfred Stanford

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 D 12 '54 550w

"A useful book for the marine library." Walter Hayward

+ N Y Times p28 D 5 '54 500w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 28 '54 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p626 O 1 '54 350w

FRETTER, WILLIAM BACHE. Introduction to experimental physics. 349p $9 Prentice-Hall 530.72 Physics 54-6004

"An introductory survey of devices and techniques which are currently used in research in physics. Although addressed particularly to college students who are majoring in physics it is in no sense a laboratory manual. . . . The typical chapter is a short description of a kind of instrument or a specific technique, and it consists of a description of the scientific principle of the instrument or technique and a discussion of its applications and limitations. The text is illustrated with simple diagrams adapted from blackboard drawings and it is accompanied by a bibliography of books which offer more detailed information on the subject of the chapter." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 79:921 My 15 '54 20w

N Y New Tech 39:25 Mr '54

FRETZ, JOSEPH WINFIELD. Pilgrims in Paraguay; the story of Mennonite colonization in South America. (Herald Press bk) 247p il maps $2.75 Mennonite

289.7 Mennonites in Paraguay

"This is an account of Mennonite colonization efforts in South America since 1920, which by 1950 had built up there a total Mennonite population of 16,000. Three-fourths of these are concentrated in landlocked but hospitable Paraguay, where they form several closed communities and have their largest town, Filadelfia (pop. 546 in 1950). The rest, more loosely organized, are unevenly distributed among Brazil (2500), Uruguay (1200), Argentina (500), and Colombia (90)." Ann Am Acad

"Every aspect of life in these colonies, including their relations with the native South American peoples surrounding them, is discussed clearly and interestingly, and the text is supported by abundant statistical tables, maps, and documentation. Both the author and the institutions which aided him—the Mennonite Central Committee and the Social Science Research Council—are to be congratulated on the results of this study." A. P. Whitaker

+ Ann Am Acad 291:186 Ja '54 420w

"Pilgrims in Paraguay is an accurate portrayal of rural Paraguay, with particular reference to the Mennonite colonies. It contains much of economic, as well as of general, interest. Its primary interest, however, will be to those who have supported the colonization efforts and to those who desire to know more about one aspect of recent Paraguayan development that is generally neglected." W. H. Delaplane

+ J Pol Econ 62:92 F '54 250w

"Apart from being an interesting study of the transplantation of a culture, the account shows the possibilities and problems inherent in the relocation of displaced persons. It is, furthermore, an informative picture of the activities of the Mennonite Central Committee, an organization not so widely known as the American Friends Service Committee but devoted to the same humanitarian ideals and operating with the same eminently practical methods."

+ U S Quarterly Bk 10:102 Mr '54 240w

FREUCHEN, PETER. Ice floes and flaming water; a true adventure in Melville bay; tr. from the Norwegian by John Hambro. 242p $3.95 Messner

998.2 [919.82] Greenland—Description and travel. Eskimos 54-10585

"The framework of the book is Freuchen's rescue of five shipwrecked whalers from the icy hell of Melville Bay. Time and time again the rescue mission itself needed rescuing and the travelers were forced to lay up in a cave or camp during bad weather. To pass the time and keep their morale up, the weary men told true tales of their own experience." Library J

Booklist 51:53; 104 O 1 '54; N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:57 D '54 40w

Reviewed by W. M. Krogman

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 31 '54 230w

Kirkus 22:523 Ag 1 '54 200w

"There's a faint, chilled flavor of Canterbury Tales in this wonderful new work by the author of Vagrant Viking. . . . He is a first-rate story teller whose presence is never conspicuous—the stories seem to tell themselves. A book that should be on the shelf of every library that ever bought a volume on the Arctic or ever intends to do so, and in collections for young people." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 79:1822 O 1 '54 160w

"Scattered throughout the book are bits of fascinating lore. . . . As if this were not enough to content the reader, over and above and in between the trip and the tales and the tidbits we are treated to a running commentary on the relative values, moralities, and pressures of Eskimo and non-Eskimo societies. But even here Mr. Freuchen's words are beguiling, his tone soft, his conclusions unbelabored." Jeannette Mirsky

FREUCHEN, PETER—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 14 '54
600w

"'Ice Floes and Flaming Water' is as good as the best 'Big Pete' has written." Trevor Lloyd

+ N Y Times p32 O 24 '54 550w

"A most enjoyable book."

+ New Yorker 30:171 O 23 '54 120w

FREUD, SIGMUND. Origins of psycho-analysis; letters to Wilhelm Fliess, drafts and notes; 1887-1902; ed. by Marie Bonaparte [and others] authorized translation by Eric Mos-bacher and James Strachey; introd. by Ernst Kris. 486p $6.75 Basic bks.

131.34 Psychoanalysis. Fliess, Wilhelm
[54-14572]

A collection of Freud's letters to Wilhelm Fliess, with drafts and notes, covering the period 1887 to 1902. The letters were first published in German, in London, in 1950. Wilhelm Fliess, a Berlin physician and biologist, was a confidant of Freud's. Bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 50:390 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by John Porter
Canadian Forum 34:163 O '54 700w

Kirkus 22:227 Mr 15 '54 120w

"Although the relationship between Freud and Fliess was traced in considerable detail by Ernest Jones last year in the first volume of his superb life of Freud, students and scholars will be grateful for the publication in this book of the material on which Jones based his study. . . Ernst Kris has contributed an excellent introduction and the editors have provided unusually detailed indexes. Recommended for purchase by university and special libraries." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:978 My 15 '54 170w

Reviewed by John Cohen
Manchester Guardian p4 Je 15 '54 220w

"One of the many pleasures of this book is in the graphic lucidity of Freud's language, brilliantly translated. . . Reference must finally be made to the meticulous editing of this book.
The introduction by Dr. Kris, notes and bibliographies, are deft and informative, contributing appropriately to a production which is in every way memorable." Adam Curle

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:445 O 9
'54 1000w

"This book will serve as a Rosetta stone to Freudian specialists and historians, revealing the lost past of the psycho-analytic movement; but what does it mean, now, to the world at large? This; you will like it and want it if you understand the mysterious joy and torture of creative work, if you like a man who can make the sentences coil and snap, if you can see heroism in the manful bearing of the shocks of daily life." John Dollard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 My 23
'54 1450w

"The insight that the correspondence offers us into Freud's personal psychology is immense. This insight is so valuable not because it would give much satisfaction to the curious, friend or enemy, but because it lifts the veil from the life of a unique genius. It shows what an immense inner price Freud had to pay for what he himself first learned, and then learned to teach others, about the darkest recesses of the so-called healthy mind and its deviations."

Gregory Zilboorg

+ N Y Times p16 My 30 '54 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p477 J1 23 '54
850w

FRICK, CONSTANCE H. Tourney team. 215p
$2.75 Harcourt

54-8572

A basketball story for ages twelve and older.
It is the story of Rocky, a sophomore, who was expelled from the team, and the lessons he learned during his enforced absence.

Bookmark 14:14 O '54 10w

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p42 N 14 '54
50w

Kirkus 22:341 Je 1 '54 180w

Reviewed by J. T. Marsh
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 12 '54
50w

"Crammed with enough dramatic games to satisfy the most voracious young basketball fan." W. C. F.

+ N Y Times p38 N 21 '54 40w

"This author is a newcomer and he certainly knows his basketball." H. F.

+ Sat R 37:35 Ag 21 '54 70w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 40w

FRIEDBERG, ROBERT. Paper money of the United States. 128p $6.95 Coin & currency pub. inst. 134 W. 32d st, N.Y. 1; for sale by Sterling

332.5 Paper money

"According to the foreword, this is intended to be a definitive work on U.S. paper money from the first year of use, 1861, to the present.
It contains descriptions, valuations, and illustrations, showing both the reverse and the obverse, of notes, certificates, and fractional currency of all kinds and denominations; it also covers encased postage stamps, which were acceptable in lieu of small change in the Civil War period. Of interest mainly to collectors."

Booklist

Booklist 50:253 Mr 1 '54

"For numismatists or anyone interested in our monetary story, this volume is recommended." E. G. Bradfield

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 F 7 '54
90w

FRIEDMAN, PHILIP, ed. Martyrs and fighters: the epic of the Warsaw ghetto [initiated and sponsored by the Club of Polish Jews, New York]. 325p il $4 Praeger

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Poland—Warsaw. Jews in Poland 53-11798

"This book does in fact what John Hersey's great novel 'The Wall' did in fiction—relates in episodic form the story of the Nazis' attempt to annihilate Warsaw's Jewish community and how the Jewish Fighting Organization bravely went over to the attack from ghetto bunkers, thereby brightening the flame of resistance movements throughout Europe.
The terrible story is told in the words of survivors and from many official and unofficial sources, including Nazi reports and field orders, last testaments, battle communiqués, broadcasts and archives." (N Y Times) Biographical notes. Index.

"Readers of John Hersey's fine novel, 'The Wall'—which dealt on an imaginative level with this same ordeal in Warsaw—will find here an abundance of verification and confirmation. The facts firmly support the fiction, to the reem-phasis of both as valuable reminders not only of human iniquity but also of human valor."

Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 11 '54
280w

Foreign Affairs 33:160 O '54 20w

Reviewed by Herbert Mitgang
N Y Times p34 Ap 25 '54 450w

Reviewed by H. M. Champness
Spec p151 J1 30 '54 440w

"The book now edited by Dr. Philip Friedman is precious because it brings together only first-hand material collected from eye-witness accounts: further, it is evident that this material has been handled with integrity, for no attempt is made to gloss over discreditable behaviour and display only the virtues of the Jews."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p539 Ag 27 '54
750w

FRIEDMAN, STUART. Free are the dead. 272p
$2.50 Abelard-Schuman

Detective story.

54-5234

"A laudable attempt to go behind the conventional tough brutality and sex to some exploration of the psychology and sociology which produces brutal crime; but the good intentions bog down in ponderous and overwritten wordage." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p28 My 2 '54 30w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 9 '54

50w

"Overdone." Sergeant Cuff

— Sat R 37:31 Jl 10 '54 20w

FRIEDMANN, EUGENE A., and others. Meaning of work and retirement. 197p $3.75 Univ. of Chicago press

331.13 Work. Retirement (from work)

54-2934

"This book reports a set of studies of the significance of work in the lives of people and of the relations between the significance of work and attitudes toward retirement. It aims to lay a partial basis for a retirement policy that is both satisfactory to the individual and wise for the general welfare." (Pref) The groups studied included steelworkers, coal miners, salesmen and saleswomen, skilled craftsmen in the printing trades, and physicians. Index.

"This study, together with those of Hall and Lorge and Tuckman, should put an end to some of the generalizations freely made about work and retirement. Hopefully, it should lead to the focus of more attention on finding new sources of satisfaction for the years in the postwork period." Clark Tibbits

+ Ann Am Acad 296:188 N '54 450w

Booklist 51:4 S 1 '54

"An important volume for public and university collections." Paul Wasserman

+ Library J 79:544 Mr 15 '54 140w

FRIEDRICHS, KURT OTTO. Mathematical aspects of the quantum theory of fields. 272p pa $5 Interscience

530.1 Quantum theory

53-7156

"The author of this volume has stated: 'Our primary object is to present basic sections of field quantum theory in a consistent mathematical language without carrying out all mathematical deductions with complete rigor.' Although the treatment is not completely rigorous, the book is intended for mathematicians rather than physicists. The five parts were originally published as separate papers in Communications on Pure and Applied Mathematics. Apparently they have been reprinted without change. However, the final section of comments and corrections which contains changes and coordinates the notation is new." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 38:74 S '53

"A successful attempt is here made to present some of the aspects of the quantum theory of fields in a consistent mathematical language in a manner that will be useful for mathematicians . . . The methods developed do, indeed, rigorize many of the formalistic aspects of the quantum theory of fields. But they do not seem to suggest physically useful extensions of present ideas."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:125 Mr '54
240w

FRIEND, JOHN ALBERT NEWTON. Numbers: fun and facts. 208p $2.75 Scribner

511 Mathematical recreations

54-8690

"The contents of this little volume are best described by the subject header's phrase 'mathematical recreations.' In it is found a miscellany of mathematical oddities, curiosities, puzzles and problems which will delight the heart of amateur and professional mathematicians. Non-mathematically-minded readers will also enjoy learning how our number system and various mathematical concepts came into being, and of the origin of popular beliefs and superstitions associated with numbers." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 51:99 N 1 '54

Kirkus 22:510 Ag 1 '54 40w

"Recommended if warranted by demand." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:1828 O 1 '54 50w

FRIERMOOD, MRS ELISABETH HAMILTON. Hoosier heritage; il. by Robert Hallock. 221p
$2.75 Doubleday

54-5210

"Pioneer story of Julia, her infatuation with an illiterate Indian, of her obstinate, domineering father and her indomitable grandmother. Leaving their beloved Indiana, the family go to Kansas for greener pastures, but Julia gets no farther than Missouri where she stays to become a rural teacher." Library J

Booklist 50:324 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:165 Ap '54 20w

"This long, full novel for older girls is rich in the homely details of life in the Indiana and Missouri of 1879. The story is continually interesting and in Julia has an appealing heroine, who grows from a girl dominated by her father into a woman of character and courage." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 14 '54
160w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13
'54 160w

Horn Bk 30:101 Ap '54 120w

Kirkus 21:761 D 1 '53 150w

"Marred by family conflict and the belittling of a member of a minority group, the story is otherwise well-written, readable, and gives a fine picture of a dedicated teacher." M. K. Walraven

+ — Library J 79:565 Mr 15 '54 90w

"With all the pioneer stories in which brave girls figure, few stand out as 'junior novels' that girls over twelve would find worth while. Here is a really good one."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 My 16
'54 130w

"The book is nicely balanced to appeal to girls of varying ages. The elder ones will be absorbed in Julia's romances, while younger sisters will relish the details of pioneer life in Missouri and on the covered-wagon trail. There is also a bit of local Indiana history especially for young Hoosiers. The Ozark dialect is badly rendered, but this is a minor fault in a well-rounded junior novel which holds its interest to the very end." N. B. Baker

+ — N Y Times p22 Mr 7 '54 160w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:214 N 27 '54 50w

"This is not only a love story. It is a character sketch of a warm-hearted, impulsive girl who, bewildered by emotions that conflicted with one another, found peace and happiness with a man whom she truly loved." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 37:54 Mr 20 '54 400w

Wis Lib Bul 50:218 O '54

FRISKEY, MRS MARGARET (RICHARDS). True book of birds we know; col. pl. by Anna Pistorius [prepared under the direction of Illa Podendorf]. 47p $2 Childrens press

598.2 Birds—Juvenile literature

54-8735

A "first book" about birds, this arranges material under headings showing what various birds can do or how they live, such as perching birds, scratching birds, wading birds, etc.

"A good primer."

+ Kirkus 22:230 Ap 1 '54 60w

FRISKEY, M. R.—Continued

"Recommended in spite of faults for libraries needing this subject matter in simple form."

Anne Jackson

+ — Library J 79:1063 Je 1 '54 80w

"Margaret Friskey's 'Birds We Know' is even better than her last book, 'Air Around Us.' The color plates of familiar birds are lovely." Jeanne Massey

+ N Y Times p20 J1 25 '54 40w

FRISKIN, JAMES, and FREUNDLICH, IRWIN. Music for the piano; a handbook of concert and teaching material from 1580 to 1952. (Field of music ser) 432p $5 Rinehart

781.97 Piano music

53-8225

"This book should be an eye-opener for those who seek piano repertory (2 hands; 1 piano, 4 hands, 2 pianos, 4 hands; piano and orchestra), so rich and telling is the selection. Essentially an annotated, roughly chronological bibliography for teachers and students. Annotations cover both the bibliographical and descriptive angles. Most of the works cited are in print, and publishers are noted." Library J

"The best and fullest listing of piano repertory available in English, and well set up for quick reference." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:557 Mr 15 '54 70w

"The book is undoubtedly valuable, more so from a practical standpoint than if it attempted anything like encyclopedic completeness. It could certainly give fruitful suggestions and information to a great many pianists, whether performers, students, or teachers. . . The wisdom of certain inclusions and exclusions in the enumerations will inevitably be challenged here and there. But the book in any event is expert, useful, accurate, and comprehensive. If used it will increase the knowledge and practice of old and new music. There are a few unimportant misprints." Arthur Loesser

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:470 Je '54 370w

FRITZ, JEAN. Fish Head; il. by Marc Simont. [36p] $2.75 Coward-McCann

Cats—Legends and stories

54-11356

Story of a tough waterfront cat who picked up a precarious living for himself until the day he found himself on a fishing smack on its way to the fishing grounds. After a brief period of readjustment Fish Head decided where his real home was to be. For ages six to nine.

"Hilariously told and pictured." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 D 26 '54 100w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '54 90w

Commonweal 61:205 N 19 '54 10w

"Full of fun and true to the nature of alley cats!" J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:428 D '54 60w

Kirkus 22:677 O 1 '54 80w

"Recommended for grades 2-4." N. S. Zipf

+ Library J 79:2495 D 15 '54 90w

"Cat stories for children are often oversweetened and sentimentalized to the point where the independent, adventurous feline loses his character and reality. Not so with 'Fish Head.' A down-to-earth, rat-chasing, thoroughly believable wharf cat, Fish Head does what he likes and likes what he does." Shirley Camper

+ N Y Times p36 N 28 '54 120w

FRY, BERNARD MITCHELL. Library organization and management of technical reports literature. 140p il pa $2.25 Catholic univ. of Am. press

025.34 Cataloging. Government publications A53-9952

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Mr. Fry has written the most comprehensive account to date of the nature of the technical reports literature and of the problems and functions of a technical reports library. He discusses in some detail the problems encountered and practices followed in acquiring, distributing, identifying, filing, reproducing, and cataloging reports and in maintaining security control. He describes the major government technical report centers and the services they provide to contractors, to librarians, and to the general public. He gives a good description of the special skills required of a science librarian in a reports library and adds a useful bibliography of 134 items. . . Some errors have slipped through." Robert Tumbleson

+ — Library Q 24:74 Ja '54 600w

Special Libraries 45:40 Ja '54 20w

"Technical librarians, research administrators, and others concerned with the various phases of technical documentation and information retrieval will benefit from this book."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:502 D '53 240w

FRY, CHRISTOPHER. Dark is light enough; a winter comedy [in three acts]. 103p $2.75 Oxford

822

54-10014

Three-act verse play scened in the time of the Hungarian revolution against the Austro-Hungarian empire in 1848-1849. The chief characters are an Austrian countess, whose belief in the sacredness of human life leads to her own death, and the deaths of her family and her many admiring friends.

"The main themes are the value of a human life, and the error of using violence even to redress deep wrongs. But, as always in Fry, the language is the thing, and to my taste a fine thing." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:102 O '54 150w

Booklist 51:58 O 1 '54

"Here is the clearest statement so far of Fry's personal credo, his individualistic brand of Quaker pacifism and apocalyptic optimism. The title, from the nineteenth century French botanist, Fabre, refers to the flight of butterflies under seemingly impossible conditions. For Fry, we, the human butterflies, are flying now in one of the darkest periods of existence, but that darkness is still light enough for us to reach our pilgrimage collectively as well as individually." Donald Harron

+ Canadian Forum 34:167 O '54 300w

"In spite of the heavy themes, the dialog is light and sparkling. There is a quotable epigram on every page. Nonetheless, one's final impression is that there is too much talk and too little action." F. E. Faverty

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 12 '54 200w

"Recommended for drama, poetry and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:2461 D 15 '54 40w

Reviewed by Luther Nichols

San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 10 '54 850w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 3 '54 190w

"Few of the characters of this play have much claim to reality. . . So much of what we know about the countess comes from her own lips. She makes a great many fine speeches. If we examine them more critically than they are examined by her devoted friends there is a danger that we shall reduce the heroine's status to that of a nineteenth-century stage divinity ruling events by irresistible feminine charm. Clearly we are meant to accept the speeches at their full poetic face value. . . Mr. Fry has only imperfectly reconciled the poetic values of a portrait personifying an idea with the poetic values of situation. The dramatic reality and the verse are not one and the same thing, exquisitely as the verse is written and delightfully as it reads."

Times [London] Lit Sup p372 Je 11 '54 700w

FRYER, HOLLY CLAIRE. Elements of statistics. 262p $4.75 Wiley

311.2 Statistics 54-5517

"Designed for beginners. Includes elementary probability, binomial and normal frequency distributions, sampling from binomial populations and from normal populations, and linear regression and correlation." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

Chem & Eng N 32:870 Mr 1 '54 20w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:990 My 15 '54 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:30 Mr '54

FULLER, JOHN FREDERICK CHARLES.

Military history of the western world; 3v; v1: From the earliest times to the battle of Lepanto [Eng title: Decisive battles of the western world]. 602p il maps $6 Funk

909 Military history. Battles 54-9733

"Originally designed as a revised edition of Fuller's two-volume work on decisive battles [Book Review Digest 1940] this turns out to be a greatly expanded version amounting to a new work. It is far more detailed than Liddell Hart's Strategy, but understandably so, since Fuller also describes military and naval tactics and outstanding developments in the art of war. Ranging from 1429 B.C. to 1571 A.D. and covering campaigns mostly fought in the Mediterranean lands and southwestern Asia, volume one contains clear, non-technical descriptions of 29 major battles. Nineteen interchapters, called chronicles, tracing political and military developments in the interim periods, have been much improved over their sketchy counterparts of 15 years ago." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by C. H. Lanza

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 10 '54 440w

"A standard work which should be acquired by public and reference libraries." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1584 S 15 '54 140w

"The most eminent living writer on war, General Fuller not only makes clear the influence of past wars and battles upon history, but also helps his readers towards understanding of deeper aspects of war which are of supreme importance today." Jules Menken

+ Spec p34 Jl 2 '54 900w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p7C N 28 '54 420w

FUMENTO, ROCCO. Devil by the tail. 250p $3.50 McGraw

53-12879

A first novel by an Italian-American author. It tells the story of Cornullo, an anti-clerical patriot who had come back from America to the village in southern Italy. At first he gave money to the village, but when he moved into the country and gave no more money people became suspicious. When he was thought dead twice, and revived, they were sure he was in league with the devil.

"Its predominant tone is light, it reflects Italian vivacity, and in the end evil designs lapse and human kindness predominates. . . The whole novel has a sort of operatic atmosphere—intense, colorful, and yet somehow superficial." Warren Beck

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ap 18 '54 360w

"Some will find this a bit mystical and homespun but there will be those who will find its naturalness in plot and character appealing and refreshing."

+ Kirkus 22:129 F 15 '54 180w

"Mr. Fumento has created a gallery of excellent portraits. Character after character is delicately and yet solidly realized, from the neurotic, coldhearted doctor to the splendid old Cornullo himself. Intricately woven into the story by flashbacks and other devices, they give the book a depth far beyond its superficial surface." Anne Brooks

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 11 '54 450w

"It would be unjust to whisper here ■ word concerning Cornullo's third and final death. It is one of those interesting decisions in which the reviewer has no right to take a Solomon role. But as a novel, one may say that 'Devil by the Tail' is good fun and that when Mr. Fumento learns to integrate his material more expertly he may well reach genuine distinction." J. W. Chase

+ — N Y Times p25 Ap 1 '54 360w

"Among the more interesting of the new novels. . . Mr. Fumento shows promise as ■ novelist, for he has succeeded in the not easy tasks of transmitting to his readers the flavor of peasant life in southern Italy as well as showing himself an expert at character delineation." J. C. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 120w

FUNK & Wagnalls new practical Standard dictionary of the English language; em'pha. type method of pronunciation; Charles Earle Funk, ed [and] Britannica world language dictionary. Britannica world language ed 2v 941;942-1944p il $35 Funk

423 English language—Dictionaries. Dictionaries, Polyglot 54-7771

Contents: v 1 A-O; v2 P-Z and Britannica World language dictionary. Part II presents in parallel columns an English word list plus translations into French, German, Italian, Spanish, Swedish and Yiddish, and lists in reverse for each language. There is also a list of useful expressions.

"The New Practical Standard Dictionary . . . is a thoroughly good dictionary with a wide coverage of new words, many of which are given place on the sound theory that it is the lexicographer's business to record actual usage whether he likes it or not." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:584 My 12 '54 450w

"The usefulness of the [World Language Dictionary] cannot be questioned, although it suffers from one defect common to polyglot dictionaries; it does not sufficiently distinguish, in the foreign language lists, between the different meanings of the same word. While the editors attempt to justify the choice of the languages included, they do so somewhat apologetically. On the basis of the extent of their usefulness to Americans, it is difficult to justify the inclusion of Swedish and Yiddish and the omission, say, of Russian."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:274 Je '54 240w

FURNESS, BETTY. Westinghouse cook book; prepared under the direction of Julia Kiene. 487p il $3.50 Simon & Schuster

641.5 Cookery 54-8645

A general cookbook prepared under the supervision of the director of Westinghouse Home Economics Laboratories. The author has a TV program on the subject of cooking. Index.

Booklist 51:125 N 15 '54

"In an all-round kitchen textbook, Betty Furness and Julia Kiene have done an excellent job for Westinghouse. Their intent was to serve both beginners and more experienced cooks. They have achieved their goal by giving basic and fundamental cooking information in clear terms and recipes not too difficult and yet interesting enough to intrigue every cook." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p41 O 17 '54 100w

FURNISS, NORMAN FRANCIS. Fundamental-ist controversy, 1918-1931. 199p $3.75 Yale univ. press

230 Modernist-fundamentalist controversy 54-5082

A study of the Fundamentalist movement in the United States, culminating in the Scopes trial in Tennessee in 1925. The author seeks to show the characteristics of the fundamentalists, the causes and extent of the crusade, and the reactions to it of the various churches and the public. Bibliographic note. Index.

FURNISS, N. F.—Continued

"While lacking in the color of the late Frederick Lewis Allen's account in Only Yesterday, this book is a thorough, systematic, judicious, and well-documented study. . . One could wish that Dr. Furniss had succeeded better in depicting the personalities and mentalities of such Fundamentalist leaders as William Bell Riley, John Roach Straton, and, above all, William Jennings Bryan. The study might also have been improved by more attention to the earlier history of the struggle over evolution and higher criticism and by more adequate recognition of the persistence of conservative evangelical theology in our own times." I. V. Brown

+ — Am Hist R 60:204 O '54 280w

"Mr Furniss's useful book studies the strange Fundamentalist revival in its reactions on the various denominations. Nearly all of them have something to live down."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 10 '54 190w

G

GABOR, EVA. Orchids and salami; foreword by Lawrence Langner. 219p $2.75 Doubleday

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-5170

A light-hearted account of the life and activities of the youngest of the three Gabor sisters.

Booklist 50:238 F 15 '54

"Exceptionally wise and witty autobiography." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 24 '54 550w

"Entertaining though not enduring."

Kirkus 21:754 N 15 '53 140w

"Popular reading which might attract paid circulation because of the notoriety of the family. Only the largest theatre collections will want it." George Freedley

Library J 79:148 Ja 15 '54 20w

"Miss Gabor is undoubtedly earnest about her work, but no matter how hard she disavows it, she is not completely without that Magyar froth."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 21 '54 140w

"The book reads like an English soundtrack dubbed in for a foreign actress. The reason for this is that it was ghost written. This alone would not be enough to produce the peculiar effect, but the ghost, an obviously persistent humorist, has put into the mouth of Miss Gabor enough soggy wisecracks, bad figures of speech, banal similes and so on to make her read like a gossip column ghosted for a gossip columnist by a press agent." Gilbert Millstein

— N Y Times p16 Ja 24 '54 380w

GAER, JOSEPH. Adventures of Rama; il. by Randy Monk. 210p $3 Little 891.2

54-8317

A retelling of the Hindu epic, the Ramayana, for grades seven to nine.

Booklist 51:48 S 15 '54

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p34 N 14 '54 50w

"Girls and boys who love legends and fairy tales will read it as they do the familiar Greek and Norse stories for the richness of its adventure and for the love story of Prince Rama and Princess Sita. As a vivid and dignified introduction to the great Hindu epic, the Ramayana, it is a real contribution to literature for young people." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:343 O '54 90w

Kirkus 22:445 J1 15 '54 120w

"With his foreword describing the development of folk material into the various written versions, his final chapter on present-day celebration of 'Ram Lila,' and his bibliography, Mr. Gaer gives us also a useful reference book for inclusion on library shelves on India and on world religions. It is for any age readers over twelve, with clear, large type, and many truly illuminating, interesting line cuts." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 26 '54 220w

"This is a valuable, and perhaps a lasting, addition to the library of really good literature for young people." Chad Walsh

+ N Y Times p36 N 28 '54 250w

"The 'Adventures of Rama' by Joseph Gaer is a remarkable feat of retelling the Hindu epic for Western youngsters, and though the fascinating tale it narrates is very much a distillation, it is a lot nearer the original than Mr. Menen's spoof." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:200 N 27 '54 50w

"Using the Valmiki version, Joseph Gaer has made an excellent retelling. Simpler than 'Rama, the Hero of India,' an earlier retelling by Mukerji, still it retains the spirit and flavor of the original. The beauty of the descriptive passages, the vivid accounts of battles and combats, the nobility of characters are particularly notable characteristics of the writing. The introduction gives an appreciative account of the Ramayana." E. N.

+ Sat R 37:82 N 13 '54 180w

GAGLIARDO, DOMENICO. Introduction to collective bargaining. 590p $6 Harper

331.891 [331.116] Collective bargaining. Trade unions 53-9412

"After tracing the institutional and legal framework of collective bargaining—the history of unions, employers' associations, and the Taft-Hartley Act—this introductory text discusses the principal provisions of existing collective agreements. Most of the examples cited are drawn from the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics' compilation of contract provisions. The book concludes with a discussion of the economic and political aspects of collective bargaining, such as wages, hours, employment, and the relation between collective bargaining and capitalism." (Management R) Index.

"In view of the plethora of current textbooks designed for introductory courses in labor economics and labor relations, it seems appropriate to apply to any new entry the conventional alternative criteria: does the book incorporate significant new or different materials in a useful manner; or does it analyze and present familiar data in such a way as to achieve greater clarity of statement, fresh insights, or a more comprehensive integration of data within a coherent system of analysis. It is with regret that this reviewer must state that in his judgment the present volume meets neither criterion. In general approach, the book comes closest to achieving some distinctiveness in the relatively greater emphasis upon the history and organization of the American labor movement, on the premise that 'the attitudes and actions of unions . . . are indelibly colored by that history and structure' (p. xi). This is an eminently sound premise and it is in this area that many introductory texts are seriously deficient. Unfortunately, however, the author's treatment of this area does not fulfill its promise." J. B. Gillingham

— + Am Econ R 44:712 S '54 900w

Booklist 50:253 Mr 1 '54

Management R 43:270 Ap '54 90w

GAINES, THOMAS A. Profits with progress: Latin America's bright investment future. 99p pa $2 Latin Am. Investment Council, 79 Prospect St, Stamford, Conn.

330.98 Latin America—Economic conditions. Investments, Foreign

"The director of the Latin American Investment Council describes for American industry possible areas of development in Latin America, basing his views on observation, personal experience, research studies, and current periodical data. Believing that American business must develop foreign markets, he explodes what he calls the myth of expropriation, revolution, lazy workers, and miscellaneous other miseries feared by businessmen. On the positive side, he points out such factors as competition, expansion, lower production costs, existing and potential investment climate, and market rating of each of 20 republics and Puerto Rico." Booklist

Booklist 51:4 S 1 '54

"The information is based upon on-the-spot observation in Latin America, government and private statistical studies and special research. Should prove of great interest in providing factual data on this area and what it means to the United States and vice versa." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:1318 J1 '54 120w

GAISSEAU, PIERRE DOMINIQUE. Sacred forest; magic and secret rites in French Guinea; tr. from the French by Stephen Becker. 247p il $4 Knopf

572.9665 Ethnology—French Guinea. Toma (African tribe). Magic 54-7204

"Account of four Frenchmen who, loaded with flares, film, and cameras, went into the land of the Toma to record the tribe's rites. Major obstacle in winning the trust of the witch-doctors was partly surmounted when they submitted to tattooing. They witnessed the ritual of initiation, the after-ceremony of excision; heard the voice of the Afwi, the forest god, and participated in the funeral ceremony of a witch-doctor. Finally, suspicion was roused against them, and the French government made them suspend their work." Library J

"A fascinating book. . . Beyond the scientific market there will be the general reader concerned with magic and the occult. It is scarcely less interesting for being obviously somewhat bowdlerized in the transition from French to English."

+ Kirkus 22:563 Ag 15 '54 220w

"Although more of specialized than general interest, this will appeal enormously to anyone interested in the occult, or customs of primitive people. It is a far more convincing book than the recently released Devilman's Jungle." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1598 S 15 '54 120w

"In spite of being written in that most maddening narrative manner, the historic present, this book is excellent in its detail. The end is melancholy." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:734 Je 5 '54 360w

"The complex interweaving of old and new is skillfully presented in Gaisseau's lively descriptions. . . The enjoyment of this book, and its value, are in the vividness with which Gaisseau felt and then was able to re-create an experience he set out to have." Rhoda Metraux

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 28 '54 550w

"The story of the troubles and tribal conflicts surrounding this semi-initiation is moderately interesting, but it is so hoked up with melodrama about devilish rites and dread witchery that it finally becomes just a bore."

New Yorker 30:227 N 20 '54 80w

"The adventures of this dauntlessly inquiring quartet make The Sacred Forest a curious and revealing book because, though they were pursued with the utmost reason and logic and are related as bare matters of fact, irrationality invests the narrative as closely as it ultimately defeated the project itself. Superficially the facts are clear enough."

Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Je 18 '54 330w

GALAXY SCIENCE FICTION MAGAZINE. Second Galaxy reader of science fiction; ed. and with an introd. by H. L. Gold. 504p $3.50 Crown

Short stories—Collections

An anthology composed of thirty-one science fiction stories.

Kirkus 22:46 Ja 15 '54 70w

"There's more than enough good new stuff here to justify your investment—but you may well wonder why you have to plow through so much that you've read before." H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 J1 25 '54 200w

"For sheer magnitude and variety, no offering, of course, touches that of H. L. Gold's 'The Second Galaxy Reader of Science Fiction.'" Don Fabun

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 J1 18 '54 60w

"There is some specialist material here, to be sure, and the ideas put forth in many of the stories will strike the non-specialist as decidedly strange, but the important thing is that every one is logically developed from the hypothesis which is the basis of the story and that every story in the collection has something quite definite to say to the tune of events that cause the reader real concern" Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 37:14 N 27 '54 100w

GALILEI, GALILEO. Dialogue concerning the two chief world systems—Ptolemaic and Copernican; tr. by Stillman Drake; foreword by Albert Einstein. 496p il $10 Univ. of Calif. press

520 Astronomy. Solar system 53-11238

"Completely unabridged, augmented by Galileo's handwritten additions in his own copy of the first edition, this classic in the history of science is presented in a new translation from the definitive Italian text. The translation conveys in modern English the fiery spirit of the original Dialogue." (Publisher's note) Index.

"While Mr. Drake has used the Salusbury translation, he has based his own primarily on the original Italian edition. He has given us a completely modern version of the Dialogo, in which Galileo speaks to the twentieth century in our own idiom. He makes us aware that a great work in science or philosophy, if it is really epoch-making, is something eternal, which may be translated into any language at any time, always retaining its essential validity. A modern scientist or historian of science, intent chiefly upon scientific ideas, will do well to select this translation." Marjorie Nicolson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 3 '54 440w

"Mr. Drake has made a completely fresh and modern translation. The Drake version is more easily read, but it lacks the elegant charm of Salusbury's Jacobean prose. . . The Drake version has the advantage of including the revisions and additions that Galileo entered into his own copy of the book. It also keeps the marginal summaries of the original edition." I. B. Cohen

+ N Y Times p6 N 8 '53 380w

Reviewed by Jack Howard

San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 13 '53 200w

"This new translation is to be welcomed: the only previous English version, made by Thomas Salusbury and published in 1661, is now very rare. Mr. Drake has translated the work afresh from the original colloquial Italian and has included in the text the additions inserted by Galileo in his own copy of the book. The translation succeeds in conveying much of the spirit of the original, especially of the instancy and vigour and clarity of Galileo's thought."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p285 Ap 30 '54 500w

"The [book] is prima facie more readable than the Santillana version, and its accuracy is quite acceptable, if there is also a danger of reading modern meanings into the less crystallized terminology of Galileo's day. The explanatory and historical footnotes, though much less extensive than those given by Dr. de Santillana, do, nevertheless, supplement the latter at several points."

GALILEI, GALILEO—Continued

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:487 D '53 170w

GALILEI, GALILEO. Dialogue on the great world systems; in the Salusbury tr; rev, annot. and with an introd. by Giorgio de Santillana. 505p il $12.50 Univ. of Chicago press

520 Astronomy. Solar system 53-11771

"This is the book for which Galileo was imprisoned by the Inquisition. It was meant to be his great philosophical work, written for the public at large, but the rarity, unreadability, and inaccuracy of the only English translation—that completed in the seventeenth century by Lord Salusbury—obscured it from view. . . . Professor de Santillana has used the Salusbury translation as the basis of his work." (Publisher's note) Index.

"The Santillana translation makes a greater appeal to readers interested in the history of literature or in intellectual history, in part because Mr. Santillana has resurrected for English readers Galileo, the man of letters, in part because, though he has proved timeless, Galileo was decidedly of his own time. . . . The literary historian will welcome the Santillana edition for its many cross-references to Bacon, Donne, Milton and other men of letters." Marjorie Nicolson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 3 '54 850w

"The Salusbury-Santillana version is closer to the spirit of the original and enables us to gain a better perception of the qualities of Galileo's literary style; the annotations place each problem in its historical perspective, an essential aid to our understanding of the issues raised by Galileo." I. B. Cohen

+ N Y Times p6 N 8 '53 380w

Reviewed by Jack Howard

San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 13 '53 200w

"Professor de Santillana has edited, corrected, and presented in readable form a seventeenth-century translation which served the scholar's needs but not the layman's. Furthermore, his superbly organized and written historical introduction reveals the full significance of the 'Dialogue' in speaking out against the blind acceptance of authority with evidence based upon observations and experiments."

John Pfeiffer

+ Sat R 37:17 F 13 '54 320w

"The chief advantage of this version for the student of the history of ideas lies in its retention of the historical flavor of the original, in communicating a vivid sense of the struggle of new concepts towards clarity. A lengthy historical Introduction disentangles some of the still widely misunderstood events attending the publication of the book and the trial of Galileo, and the unusually rich footnotes give further historical perspective."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:487 D '53 170w

GALLAND, ADOLF. First and the last; the rise and fall of the German fighter forces, 1938-1945 [tr. by Mervyn Savill]. 368p il $4.95 Holt

940.544 Germany, Luftwaffe. World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations 54-10520

"This is the history of the Luftwaffe's decline 1939-1945. Galland, General of the Fighter Arm 1941-1945, believes that the loss of air superiority and the defeat of Germany were the same thing—both unnecessary." (Library J) Index.

Kirkus 22:654 S 15 '54 250w

"A book that belongs in all war collections; amateur strategists and tacticians will enjoy it. Recommended." C. R. Gough

+ Library J 79:2206 N 15 '54 90w

"Some of his air-battle stories read almost as fast as the Messerschmitts he flew, and his staff-battle accounts give the clearest picture yet of how the Germans lost their war in the air."

+ Time 64:118 N 15 '54 600w

"A superb book." Telford Taylor

+ Yale R n s 44:289 winter '55 470w

GALLICO, PAUL WILLIAM. Love of seven dolls. 125p $2.50 Doubleday

54-11157

The original story on which the motion picture Lili was based. It is the story of the lonely orphan, Mouche, about to commit suicide in the Seine, who is saved for the time by a collection of wise little puppets.

Booklist 51:151 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:60 D '54 20w

Kirkus 22:685 O 1 '54 170w

"This is a rather charming love story that will appeal to older teen-agers with a fanciful turn of mind. There are one or two rough scenes in the story so some librarians may want to read before purchasing." G. P. Slocum

+ Library J 79:2503 D 15 '54 90w

"It is difficult to describe and impossible to pinpoint the tenuous, even nebulous word magic that successfully carries a reader into the world of fantasy and make-believe. It is perhaps best delineated as a quality, a kind of fragile atmosphere that, once established, cannot be broken. Mr. Gallico creates this atmosphere when he writes the sequences with Mouche and the puppets." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p41 N 28 '54 180w

"A charming bit of whimsy about a French waif and some exceedingly human puppets. As a matter of fact, Mr. Gallico's seven dolls have a lot more life in them than many purportedly flesh-and-blood characters who have creaked through recent fiction." Martin Levin

+ Sat R 37:56 D 4 '54 220w

"There is a good deal of pretentiousness behind Mr. Gallico's self-conscious simplicity." Times [London] Lit Sup p717 N 12 '54 90w

GALLOWAY, GEORGE BARNES. Legislative process in Congress. 689p $6 Crowell

328.73 U.S. Congress. Legislation—U.S.

53-11621

"This book presents a systematic analysis and description of the organization and operation of the Congress of the United States in action. Incorporated in it is much that originally appeared in Congress at the Crossroads [Book Review Digest 1946] by the same author. Not only has this material been revised and rearranged, however, but also much new matter has been added, covering the experience and developments of subsequent years. Thus in a sense the present volume is a successor to, rather than a revision of, the earlier one." (Pref) Chapter bibliographies. Indexes.

"The book is indispensable for all students of American government and of the American legislative process." O. D. Weeks

+ Am Pol Sci R 48:566 Je '54 200w

"Mr. Galloway directs his book towards the student of American government without becoming unduly repertorial. The initial section of the volume is excellent. . . . However, in the second and third sections the author has chosen to separate the consideration of congressional procedures from his chapters on Committees, Hearing, Individual Congressmen, etc., while it would seem preferable to integrate all consideration of congressional action in a single section of the book."

+ — Harvard Law R 67:925 Mr '54 400w

"Most of the subjects treated have excellent historical summaries, usually followed by perhaps the most thorough treatment that exists in any general study of its kind. . . . The en-cyclopedic detail is probably the book's most important contribution. It is especially effective in its treatment of the oversight of the executive branch exercised by Congress, and in the detailed examination of organization and procedure."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:91 Mr '54 240w

GALT, THOMAS FRANKLIN. Rise of the Thunderer; il. by John Mackey. 196p $3 Crowell

292 Mythology, Classical—Juvenile literature. Creation—Juvenile literature 54-5537

A retelling of the ancient Greek story of creation and the struggles of the gods for the control of heaven and earth. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 51:68 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:13 O '54 20w

"There's a crisp brevity here that does not permit of embroidering the tales. I'd say it provided a good introduction, rather than a complete coverage. An appendix of notes on each chapter cites sources and explains versions and references. For many this will prove enough."

Kirkus 22:339 Je 1 '54 90w

"Storytellers will be particularly grateful to find the stirring story of the conflict between Zeus and Prometheus. Fine notes and index add value to the book." Gertrude Herman

+ Library J 79:1663 S 15 '54 80w

"The reader over twelve will find in these connected stories a fresh approach to those old myths which have dominated so much of our English prose and poetry. For here one sees a logical development of a people's religion. In the fascinating notes, which possibly will be read only by adults, a wealth of further explanation and comparison is given, with stimulating comments on the author's use of sources and on the chronology of the myths." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p18 N 14 '54 430w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkad

New Yorker 30:217 N 27 '54 40w

GALTON, LAWRENCE N. New facts for the childless; introd. by Alan F. Guttmacher. 184p $2.75 Crowell

616.6 Sterility 53-8431

"A good book on this specific subject, up to date and conservative in presenting hope for 'cure' of sterility and yet offering many possibilities for investigation of individual situations. A chapter on 'New Frontiers' discusses lines which present-day research is taking but does not promise anything." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Kirkus 21:566 Ag 15 '53 100w

"Dr. Guttmacher, Mt. Sinai Hospital Director of Obstetrics and Gynecology, recommends the small volume both to layman and general physician. . . Very informative in public libraries (where it need not necessarily be closed-shelf)." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 78:1680 O 1 '53 140w

Wis Lib Bul 50:24 Ja '54

GALVAN, MANUEL DE JESUS. The cross and the sword; tr. by Robert Graves. 366p $3.75 Ind. univ. press

54-7974

"Robert Graves has translated an elaborate historical novel about some of the leading figures in the Spanish development of the Caribbean in the Columbus and immediately post-Columbus period. The main hero is Enriquillo, a Santo Domingan Indian who fought for the independence and fair treatment of his people. Another long thread tells of Diego Velasquez, conqueror of Cuba, and his unhappy courtship of a reluctant maiden." Kirkus

Booklist 51:151 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:60 D '54 20w

"The novel has so many characters, love stories and episodes that it lacks a strong sustaining plot, but for those with patience and persistence there lies a wealth of material about an extremely interesting period of history."

Kirkus 22:550 Ag 15 '54 130w

"Strong on incident, weak in character delineation, it is a solidly documented picture of life in the colonies at Spain's greatest moment." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:1890 O 15 '54 120w

"In Robert Graves' English translation the style retains the simplicity and harmony of the original Spanish, with a touch of modernity, for which the reader is grateful." Ramon Sender

+ N Y Times p41 N 28 '54 400w

GAMBLE, SIDNEY DAVID. Ting Hsien; a north China rural community; foreword by Y. C. James Yen; field work directed by Franklin Ching-han Lee. 472p il $6.50 Inst. of Pacific Relations, Int. secretariat

309.151 Ting Hsien, China. China—Social conditions 54-9009

"Contains, to a large extent, materials of a census, but it also includes discussions of customs, folklore, and historical and geographical background of that county. Of great value are the 22 charts and 116 statistical tables which range in content from figures on population, agriculture, cottage handicraft, family budgets, marketing, to those on government, taxes and education—all of which are based on primary sources. The inclusion of folk dramas, complete and summarized, may be justified on the ground that to those who do not have firsthand knowledge of a Chinese rural community, these folksongs express intimately the sentiments and values of the country people." (Am Soc R) Index.

"A critic may object that this book was not done in the light of a sociological perspective, and, as a result, provides primarily numerical, descriptive accounts on many divergent subjects, without a thesis. However, both Mr. Lee, the field director, and Mr. Gamble, the present author, would probably argue that they are interested only in the presentation of concrete data in an objective and precise manner, leaving to others the tasks of generalization and conceptualization." Shu-Ching Lee

Am Soc R 19:642 O '54 450w

"The fascinating texts and summaries of folk songs, plays and proverbs have not been analyzed for the light they can obviously throw on cultural norms. It is ungracious, however, to raise objections which are largely irrelevant to the original objectives of the research. . . The wealth of material in this book, presented precisely and dispassionately, is somewhat overpowering for the general reader; it is made more accessible to the specialist by an introductory summary pointing up the more significant findings in various fields, by well presented tables, and by an adequate index." G. W. Skinner

+ Ann Am Acad 295:206 S '54 400w

GANN, ERNEST KELLOGG. Soldier of fortune. 314p $3.50 Sloane

54-9184

A story of present day Hong Kong. The heroine is an American girl who goes there in search of her husband, a photographer who has disappeared into Red China. She meets and gains the help of another American, the middle-age adventurer, Hank Lee, and together they accomplish her mission.

Booklist 51:84 O 15 '54

"'Soldier of Fortune' is a terrific novel, equal in all respects to the author's 1953 best seller, 'The High and the Mighty.' It is a timely story with special significance for all Americans." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 10 '54 480w

Kirkus 22:501 Ag 1 '54 150w

GANN, E. K.—Continued

"Mr. Gann has written a lively story—the kind that can perhaps be complimented by being called a yarn; and the fact that it is all a little bit rover-boyish does not detract from its readability and exuberance. It should make a good film." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 10 '54 550w

"When Ernest Gann is at the top of his game, as he was last year in 'The High and the Mighty,' he is very, very good indeed. When he is in something less than top form, as in this new adventure story, the seams in his cleverly stitched plots begin to show." Burke Wilkinson

N Y Times p4 O 10 '54 550w

"The woman, Jane Hoyt, is real enough, but the underworld she explores is much too gentle and approachable to seem true, and its chief figure, an adventurer named Hank Lee, only occasionally convincing as his author struggles to persuade us that he is an enigmatic, ruthless colossus, a kindly Samaritan, and a wistful, unsure lover, all at the same time."

New Yorker 30:182 O 9 '54 110w

"His audience will find all the excitement and adventure they could possibly ask, and a bit extra as well. Mr. Gann, I should guess, has made up his mind that he will eventually move out of the pure action-adventure field into something more serious. At the same time since the first business of the novelist is to tell a story, he doesn't forget this aspect of it, either." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p29 O 18 '54 650w

"Mr. Gann has produced an exotic derring-do, a swashbuckling love story, and a vivid picture of Communist China, all rolled into one." Charles Lee

+ Sat R 37:40 O 30 '54 200w

GARD, WAYNE. Chisholm Trail; with drawings by Nick Eggenhofer. 296p $4.50 Univ. of Okla. press

976.4 [917.64] Chisholm Trail. Cattle trade 54-6204

"The Chisholm Trail, named for a trader who laid out a part of it as a wagon road, but died before this was merged with the famous cattle route, was closely woven into the fabric of its time. . . The Trail lent impetus to the development of Chicago and Kansas City as beef-packing centers. . . For the cowboy, Mr. Gard notes, the Trail held 'memories of far horizons, winding rivers, faithful mounts, thundering stampedes.' . . It was the Chisholm Trail, too, that stamped the Texas pattern on the American cowboy. It gave incentive to railroad building, to the development of refrigerator cars, to meat packing, to breeding experiments. Professor Gard tells that side of the story, then trims it with the color that catches the imagination—which is to say the sociological and human side of it all." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 51:11 S 1 '54

"It was a lusty, romantic, and dangerous era of which Gard writes so well. His account of the famous trail has that particular and vital historical interest so intriguing to Americans who glory in their proud heritage." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 16 '54 350w

"By careful scholarship in the widely scattered realm of early western newspapers and personal diaries, Mr. Gard has put together a spare but fast-moving picture of this era in the Southwest." F. W. Foell

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 29 '54 850w

"It is good to find an authentic account of the Trail and of the drives conducted over it within the covers of a single readable book." M. C. Boatright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 13 '54 600w

"Wayne Gard, an editorial writer for The Dallas Morning News, has done a magnificent piece of work. While his book has not the warmth of J. Frank Dobie's 'The Longhorns,' nor of J. Evetts Haley's 'Charles Goodnight: Cowman and Plainsman,' it belongs on the rack with them. Nick Eggenhofer's drawings add flavor and character." Ross Santee

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 25 '54 500w

"An admirable piece of scholarship, the book is also fine reading, for Mr. Gard is the kind of eclectic historian who will discuss the songs of the Trail, for example, just as happily as the Trail's economic or political importance." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 26 '54 700w

"In his new book, 'The Chisholm Trail,' Wayne Gard has focused the lens of scholarship on the subject as no previous student has. He has done more to enable us to see just what it was, where it began, and where it ended, and what went on along and around it than any other." W. P. Webb

+ Sat R 37:15 S 25 '54 700w

GARDINER, HEATHER. Murder in haste. 247p $2.50 Roy pubs.

54-10478

Detective story

Kirkus 22:551 Ag 15 '54 80w

"Heather Gardiner, an Australian newcomer, spins a short-story plot into over 90,000 words of torpid action in the inappositely titled Murder In Haste, but shows some respect for formal whodunit construction, and enlivens things with a gentle ribbing of Australian sports-madness." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p41 S 26 '54 50w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 10 '54 80w

"Try again, young lady." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:64 O 2 '54 20w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Case of the fugitive nurse. 277p $2.75 Morrow

54-5300

Detective story.

Booklist 50:343 My 1 '54

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 F 28 '54 120w

Kirkus 21:771 D 1 '53 50w

"Rather careless for Gardner and not feverish enough to conceal its arbitrary union of the gaudy and the convenient." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 28 '54 90w

"Falls short of Grade A Gardner . . . but it's still high Grade B." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p14 F 7 '54 60w

"A bizarre situation all around, as Miss Street says, and probably as much like a cross-section of a crazy quilt as anything else. Mr. Gardner's admirers, however, will probably be as enchanted as usual."

New Yorker 30:136 Ap 3 '54 140w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 7 '54 50w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 30w

"You can enjoy 'The Case of the Fugitive Nurse' whether you feel alert enough to take part in the case yourself, or just let yourself go along for the ride." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 21 '54 100w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Case of the restless redhead. 274p $2.75 Morrow

54-7103

Detective story.

Booklist 51:152 D 1 '54

"Most of this is pretty good fooling, but the conclusion (where did that rabbit come from?) may with cause annoy you." James Sandoe
 + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 31 '54 100w

"Some intricate defensive maneuvers to confuse ballistic evidence may baffle not only the judge and the prosecution but also the reader; you'll have to keep your mind as sharp and devious as Mason's own to follow this one, but it's a wonderful roller-coaster ride." Anthony Boucher
 + N Y Times p40 N 7 '54 50w

"The plot pattern may make you think you've read this before—but Gardner is Gardner. B. minus." L. G. Offord
 + San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 21 '54 40w

"Fine forensic fireworks in this one, but windup is tricky, contrived. Not his masterpiece." Sergeant Cuff
 Sat R 37:53 D 11 '54 20w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Case of the runaway corpse. 274p $2.75 Morrow

Detective story. 54-9255

Booklist 50:453 J1 15 '54

Kirkus 22:276 Ap 15 '54 50w

"The pace is rapid and Mason thrives on the fresh air of Fresno, springing a massive surprise at the conclusion." James Sandoe
 N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 20 '54 140w

"The case as a whole ranks as B+ Gardner, which is good enough to keep me happy for hours." Anthony Boucher
 + N Y Times p11 J1 4 '54 80w

New Yorker 30:88 Ag 21 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:41 J1 24 '54 20w

"If 'The Runaway Corpse' has more talk than action, it is one of the prolific author's slicker productions." D. B. B.

Springf'd Republican p8C J1 25 '54 100w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Neighborhood frontiers; desert country, Puget sound country, Yucatan peninsula, Yaqui river, barranca country [drawings by Alberta Sordini and others]. 272p $5 Morrow

970 [917] North America—Description and travel. West—Description and travel

54-11006

Descriptions and photographs of the author's trips to the southwestern desert, and to the Puget Sound country in this country; and to Yucatan, to the Yaqui region, and into the barranca area of Mexico.

Booklist 51:173 D 15 '54

Bookmark 14:57 D '54 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 14 '54 360w

"Superb personal adventure on the part of a writer who needs no introduction. Surely popular."

+ Kirkus 22:622 S 1 '54 220w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

N Y Times p24 N 7 '54 420w

"This sense of vitality, of fine, hearty pleasure in what he is doing, comes through his book admirably. . . And Mr. Gardner's photographs—62 pages of them scattered through the volume—are exactly what they should be for a highly personal infectiously enthusiastic travel-narrative like this one."

J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 5 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 21 '54 200w

GARDNER, HY. Champagne before breakfast; foreword by Fred Allen. 304p $3.95 Holt

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-10521

"Hy Gardner, Broadway columnist for the New York Herald Tribune, presents witty vignettes of famous people from all over the world, as well as snapshots of lesser-known weird-do-wells, racketeers and persons who haunt the seamier side of life's byways." San Francisco Chronicle

Kirkus 22:625 S 1 '54 110w

"It's a very readable book, done with a rare good humor by one of the professional Broadwayfarers known to be better equipped for his bright quips than some of his colleagues." Abel Green

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 7 '54 600w

"Reading 'Champagne Before Breakfast' is as invigorating as falling into a barrel of the stuff. . . The author allows no set pattern; his book is loosely constructed. However, it is written in a sparkling style like the bubbling of champagne, and [is] just as enjoyable." R. C. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 21 '54 400w

Reviewed by Allen Churchill

Sat R 37:21 D 18 '54 230w

GARDNER, LILLIAN (L. S. GARDNER, pseud). The oldest, the youngest, and the one in the middle; pictures by Doris Stolberg. 64p $2.50 Watts, F.

54-5949

A short story about the children in a small community who formed a new kind of club. It was for the oldest, the youngest, and the one in the middle, so nobody could be left out.

"Satisfying reading for beginners." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:171 Je '54 80w

Kirkus 22:197 Mr 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:699 Ap 15 '54 30w

"Such inclusiveness is an advanced social point that many an adult organization does not recognize. Most children will regard it as one of those dim propositions that miss the whole idea of a club. However, the book may help some youngsters over the rough spots in those first confused clubbing years." Miriam James

N Y Times p16 Je 20 '54 120w

GARDNER, LILLIAN (L. S. GARDNER, pseud). Sal Fisher, Brownie scout; pictures by Mary Stevens. 192p $2.50 Watts, F.

53-8612

Sal Fisher was so awkward that her sister said she had "two left hands." Sal did not want to be a Brownie Scout until she learned that horseback riding was to be part of the program. Then she was glad to join. For ages seven to nine.

Booklist 50:189 Ja 1 '54

"Recommended." N. S. Zipf

+ Library J 79:73 Ja 1 '54 70w

"Any Brownie Scout will enjoy matching her own experiences and hopes with Sal's. The author quietly fosters appreciation of other girls' national origin or race." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times pt2, p38 N 15 '53 150w

Wis Lib Bul 50:79 Mr '54

GARLAND, JOSEPH. All creatures here below; il. by Rene Martin. 84p $2 Houghton

590 Zoology—Juvenile literature 53-10986

"Following an introductory chapter on the beginning and development of life on the earth, the author, editor of the New England Journal of Medicine, classifies and describes creatures that exist today, from single-cell forms of life to man—their structure, how they exist, propagate, and adapt themselves to their environment. Scientific yet informally presented; the lack of captions lessens the value of the otherwise effective illustrations. Grades 6-8." Booklist

GARLAND, JOSEPH—Continued

Booklist 50:345 My 1 '54

Kirkus 22:288 My 1 '54 90w

"It is a serious, beautiful, unusual book."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 16 '54 140w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkad

New Yorker 30:219 N 27 '54 20w

GARLAND, RODNEY, pseud. Heart in exile. 314p $3.50 Coward-McCann

54-10145

The author is an English psychiatrist, writing under a pseudonym. The book, in novel form, purports to be the story of the London "underground" where homosexuals lead their furtive existence.

Booklist 51:151 D 1 '54

Kirkus 22:452 J1 15 '54 150w

"Long-range value: the novel could become assigned reading in college sociology or abnormal psychology courses to reveal the unbelievable ramifications of the problem into every social stratum." J. M. Scherr

Library J 79:1503 S 1 '54 130w

"It is written with great competence. . . The novel is a pretty successful fusion of documentary and detection; and since the narrator is a doctor the author is given legitimate opportunities to [quote] the latest theories about homosexuality, its causes, possible cures and prevalence. The Heart in Exile is a propaganda work, a plea for the greater understanding and tolerance of homosexuals." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:354 S 26 '53 270w

"At first these vivid, slice-of-life pictures may seem disgusting. But so effective is the author's treatment of a hush-hush subject that he manages to bring home in a remarkable manner the suffering of the homosexual, the grave emotional crises to which his abnormal and usually irresistible urges drive him. It took real courage to write this story, plus a profound insight into human feelings and sensitivities. If more people can, through reading this study in novel form, achieve a better understanding of a difficult social and emotional problem, 'The Heart in Exile' will have done a worth-while thing in exposing the details of what many still consider only a revolting abnormality." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p34 O 31 '54 400w

"Author Garland writes of sordid facts and stunted lives with detached directness and evident perception."

Time 64:120 S 20 '54 100w

GARNETT, DAVID. Golden echo. 272p 1l $4 Harcourt

B or 92

(54-6388)

The first installment of David Garnett's autobiography, which is to be completed with two more volumes. The time covered is from 1892 to 1914, and deals with his childhood and upbringing, and introduces many of the famous literary lights of the time, who were his parents' friends. No index.

Booklist 50:398 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:217 Je '54 30w

"The young David Garnett himself is sketched in with a detachment that is admirable but often unrevealing. Yet the book is full of good things. A single sentence calls up a face, a scene, a moment of happiness that would take many good writers a paragraph." J. R.

+ Manchester Guardian p2 D 31 '53 480w

Nation 178:549 Je 26 '54 200w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Keynes

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:724 D 5 '53 1000w

"There are almost too many names, an over-currant bun for Americans, but when David Garnett expands the record with pictures of Ford Madox Ford embellishing stories, or finishes an account of a visit to D. H. Lawrence and Frieda, with a judgment that D. H. was cruel and not 'a gentleman,' the young conservative-in-the-making expresses himself vividly. . . He grew up in a changing age of manners, and serves forth a vast cafeteria of experiences chosen and digested that all sorts and conditions of readers can read and relish, leaving them with appetite for another volume next year." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 30 '54 500w

Reviewed by James Stern

N Y Times p6 J1 11 '54 800w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Yorker 30:59 J1 24 '54 2850w

"The most captivating chapters of 'The Golden Echo' are David Garnett's recollections of his adventures with the friends of his boyhood and youth, his happy, free companionship on long walking trips, or while sleeping in the scented hay in barns and in the huts they had built in the woods. There is a universality of love and tenderness and vigorous health amongst these young people that has been gilded by the author's memory of days long departed." Harrison Smith

+ Sat ■ 37:19 J1 17 '54 800w

"All this is re-created, rather than remembered; it is the small boy who shares the peasants' meal, the young man who rolls on the carpet in innocent, if misunderstood, jiu-jitsu; we grow up with the book—an exceptional and delightful effect." David Stone

+ Spec p78 D 25 '53 290w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 27 '54 110w

Time 63:108 My 24 '54 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p736 N 20 '53 1350w

GARNIER, CHRISTINE (MRS RAY BRET-KOCH). Salazar; an intimate portrait; tr. from the French. 217p $3 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Oliveira Salazar, Antonio de 54-11069

"This [biography] has been written by a young French writer who on the strength of her publisher's backing, went down to Lisbon to interview Salazar for the purpose of writing this book. After difficulty she got her first interview, thought it was the last and then, with great good fortune, was invited by Salazar to visit his home town, Vimieiro, return to Lisbon and then to go with him to his quinta near Vimieiro for an even more prolonged stay. From these personal contacts with Portugal's austere prime minister, Mademoiselle Garnier gives us some colorful passages about the quiet man whom his country and the rest of the world know so little." Kirkus

Bookmark 14:31 N '54 20w

"For the group of Salazar supporters, Mlle. Garnier's book will make satisfying reading, as it lends unabashed support to one of the main pro-Salazar arguments—that he is a dictator against his will, that public life is actually distasteful to him, and that his motivation is unselfish service to the public weal. . . It is not so much that the book presents the Portuguese dictator in a false light, for Mlle. Garnier must be credited with presenting him as she sees him, but rather in an impossible light. Were one to know nothing else of Premier Salazar and his actions than what are set forth in this volume, one would find no enlightenment on the vast problems which face Portugal today and which the Premier has, despite some twenty-six years of power, been unable to solve." J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 20 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:508 Ag 1 '54 230w

"Recommended for general purchase." B. N. Libaire

+ Library J 79:1497 S 1 '54 150w

"Miss Garnier leaves to others the question of whether Salazar has been good or bad for Portugal. That is her privilege, but she would not have taxed the reader's patience if she had added to this short book a few interviews with Portuguese citizens willing to give forthright opinions concerning the Government. It is to Salazar's credit that such citizens could have spoken freely and without fear. Since the author spoke no Portuguese, all conversations were conducted in French, a language in which Salazar is not perfectly at home. Yet the dialogues as set down here are elegant, almost Platonic, in style. . . . But if we must be cautious about accepting Miss Garnier's elegant paragraphs as genuine quotations, the general picture of Salazar is an accurate one." C. S. Nowell

+ Sat ■ 37:15 S 18 '54 700w

GARRATY, JOHN ARTHUR. Henry Cabot Lodge. 433p il $6 Knopf

B or 92 Lodge, Henry Cabot, 1850-1924
53-6852

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"The fullest, most objective study of Lodge yet published, Professor Garraty's book, within its chosen dimensions an accurate, clear, and sometimes entertaining piece of work, probably obviates the need for another biography. It will be useful to scholars seeking information about most of the affairs that concerned Lodge. It does not, however, significantly alter their understanding of the man or his times, nor does it provide a compelling interpretation of the man and his career." J. M. Blum
Am Hist ■ 59:654 Ap '54 750w

"For all the doings of the scholar, the politician, or the man, Mr. Garraty has diligently dug out of the Lodge papers a first-hand account, seasoning the record with observations with which the normal reader will invariably agree. Seldom has the political scientist had so complete a revelation of a public man's devotion to his country as controlled by the demands of a party which he helped to formulate." D. P. Myers

+ Am Pol Sci R 48:565 Je '54 850w

"A scholarly and fair biography of one of twentieth century America's most controversial Senators."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:336 Ja '54 60w

"Despite Garraty's fairness, and occasional explanatory notes by Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., the impression is left that Lodge's considerable abilities spent themselves not in the construction of an ideology, an alternative program to Cleveland or Bryan or Wilson, but in the maintenance of smooth-running party machinery. . . . If Mr. Garraty's account may be criticized at all, it is perhaps for allowing his mass of biographical detail to blur occasionally the dramatic story of Lodge's intellectual transition; we may hope that he will follow this volume with a brief and pointed analytical treatment." J. P. Mallan
+ — New Eng Q 26:552 D '53 600w

"This is the soundest and best biography of Sen Lodge that has been published. It is also valuable because of the light it throws on the time in which the senator worked and on the many people with whom he was associated during his long career in the Congress." Donald Derby

+ Springf'd Republican p7C Mr 28 '54 340w

"This first scholarly biography of a most controversial public figure is notable for its thorough exploitation of the Lodge papers, hitherto largely unused and now temporarily closed to historians. The book is also to be praised for its dispassionate treatment of Henry Cabot Lodge, who is neither unjustly damned nor uncritically praised, and for its scrupulous fairness to Lodge's rivals and enemies."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:5 Mr '54 200w

GARRETT, CHARLES GEOFFREY BLYTHE. Magnetic cooling. 110p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

536.56 Magnetism. Low temperature research 53-10474

"Magnetic cooling is a valuable technique in low temperature research. It is a development of the last two decades, and most of the literature is scattered in periodicals. This book is an introduction to the technique and a survey of the fundamental knowledge that has been gained with it. It is of interest to physics graduates and other scientists who wish to keep informed on such developments." (Library J) Index.

"There are very numerous references to original papers for those who wish greater detail. We are glad to recommend the book to those interested in phenomena at very low temperatures." W. F. Giaque

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:5577 N 5 '54 360w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1321 Jl '54 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:43 My '54

GARRETT, PATRICK FLOYD. Authentic life of Billy, the Kid, the noted desperado of the Southwest, whose deeds of daring and blood made his name a terror in New Mexico, Arizona and northern Mexico; with an introd. by J. C. Dykes. (Western frontier lib) new ed 156p il $2 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Bonney, William H. 54-10053

"Written in the early 1880s by the Sheriff of Lincoln County, New Mexico, the man who finally hunted down and shot the outlaw, William H. Bonney, this biography served in many respects as the foundation of the Billy the Kid legend. It is reprinted here with an introduction by J. C. Dykes who points out the verifiable, the probable and the unlikely in Garrett's story." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 29 '54 80w

Reviewed by Lewis Nurdyke

N Y Times p15 Ag 29 '54 300w

"Perhaps the most valuable aspect of this book is its introduction by Jeff C. Dykes, who knows more about the printed history of the Kid than any other man alive. . . . There is but one complaint worth voicing. Had the publishers reprinted Colonel Maurice Garland Fulton's own edition of this same work (New York, 1927), with its copious notes together with the Dykes Introduction, then this would have been the single definitive work on Billy the Kid."

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 29 '54 440w

GARRIGUE, MRS KATHARINE C., comp. U. S. citizens in world affairs; a directory of non-governmental organizations; who they are, what they do. 389p $5; pa $3 Foreign policy

061 International cooperation—Societies—Directories 53-2898

"Over four hundred organizations 'with programs in international affairs, some international agencies which work extensively in this country, or whose headquarters are located here, and a few business associations whose work seemed especially pertinent' are listed in this directory. The arrangement is alphabetical, with a subject index. The data includes a brief description of the activities, objectives, program, and financing of each organization. There is also a section on foreign diplomatic offices and information services, and one on foreign chambers of commerce in New York City. The following types of organization were excluded: those related to academic institutions, local organizations, and those cited on the Attorney General's List." U S Quarterly Bk R

Booklist 50:390 Je 15 '54

"Some of the organizations noted seem to have a very slight interest in international relations and might well have been omitted. Inclusion of the names of all the officers of each organization would have been helpful, but taken as a whole, the volume serves its purpose adequately."

GARRIGUE, K. C.—Continued

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:274 Je '54 250w

GARRISON, JAMES HOLLEY. Behold me once more; the confessions of James Holley Garrison, brother of William Lloyd Garrison; ed. by Walter McIntosh Merrill. 146p il $3 Houghton

B or 92 Seafaring life 54-5700

"While all students of American history—and, indeed, most Americans—know something of the stalwart efforts of William Lloyd Garrison toward the abolition of slavery, few have ever heard of his ne'er-do-well brother, James Holley Garrison, drunkard and sailor, whose lugubrious confessions are now published for the first time." N Y Times

"Whether viewed as a temperance tract or a piece of naval history, it's quite a find. Public and university libraries." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 79:546 Mr 15 '54 160w

"The editor has arranged the journal sections well and provided many interesting and illuminating notes, but nowhere can I find the exact dates of birth and death of the author. Possibly they are not known. Actually it might seem more charitable to let such a shockingly futile life be decently forgotten." E. S. Dodge
New Eng Q 27:416 S '54 700w

"Like many personal narratives of old soldiers and sailors written after the event, James Garrison's memoirs harp upon hardships and sufferings. As the motive of expiation of guilt lends particular relish to this theme, the picture presented of life ashore and afloat between 1813 and 1840 is dreary in the extreme." W. M. Whitehill

N Y Times p7 My 30 '54 700w

Reviewed by Berton Roueché
New Yorker 30:96 My 29 '54 1700w

"With all his bad luck and beatings, it is hard to feel very sorry for Garrison no matter how often he whines his remorse. At the same time, his 'confessions' make an interesting and picturesque tidbit of American history." R. H. Dillon

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 4 '54 380w

GARST, MRS DORIS (SHANNON). Joe Meek, man of the West; il. by Albert Orbaan. 179p $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Meek, Joseph Lafayette—Juvenile literature 54-6767

A fictionized biography of Joe Meek, trapper, Indian fighter, and pioneer, who left his Virginia home at the age of eighteen, to try his luck in the West. He became Oregon's first United States marshal, and knew such pioneers as Jedediah Smith, Kit Carson, Jim Bridger, Chief Joseph, and the Whitmans. Bibliography. For grades seven to ten.

Booklist 50:346 My 1 '54

Kirkus 22:122 F 15 '54 80w

"Of the many books that have been written about fur trappers and Mountain Men, none have portrayed this period more vividly than this latest book of Shannon Garst. . . Wonderful story for older boys and girls. Excellent supplementary material." C. W. Field
+ Library J 79:565 Mr 15 '54 70w

"The writing is annoyingly repetitious at times. . . Joe, however, is the story, and this excellent book has all the laughter, adventure and tragedy that occurred in a rugged man's life." G. A. Woods

+ — N Y Times p28 My 9 '54 110w

Wis Lib Bul 50:219 O '54

GARTHOFF, RAYMOND L. Soviet military doctrine; with a pref. by H. A. De Weerd [Eng title: How Russia Makes War]. 587p il maps $7.50 Free press

355 Military art and science. Russia—Politics and government 53-7394

"The main part of the work is devoted to a presentation of the 'Soviet principles of war.' Among those discussed are the offensive, the salient thrust, annihilation, encirclement, morale, training, and leadership. Garthoff concludes with a study of the uses to which these principles are put at various levels of command and in all the branches of the Soviet service. Of particular interest is an appendix assessing the performance in the period June to December, 1941." Nation

Reviewed by J. D. Clarkson
Am Hist R 59:711 Ap '54 240w

"Soviet-Military Doctrine is an important, much needed, and potentially very useful contribution to our knowledge of Russian power. In a field in which accurate information is as vital as it is rare, this painstaking, exhaustive, and thorough analysis represents a most welcome pioneer work which may serve as a model as well as a source book for future students of the subject." A. E. Sokol

+ Ann Am Acad 292:202 Mr '54 490w

Foreign Affairs 32:514 Ap '54 40w

"There is no single volume which so carefully analyzes American military doctrine as Dr. Garthoff's does that of Russia. This admirably thorough study reaches conclusions that are likely to surprise many people in the Western world." Will Starnes

+ Nation 178:74 Ja 23 '54 650w

"It was a reasonable task for Mr. Garthoff to analyze Soviet military doctrine; and he has certainly demonstrated that there is plenty of technical literature from which to draw conclusions. His book suffers from some serious defects. The historical background is curiously weak." A. J. P. Taylor

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:198 F 13 '54 950w

"There are some shortcomings in Mr. Garthoff's book. For instance, discussing Russian military strategists and thinkers of the past, Mr. Garthoff fails to mention Potemkin, one of the greatest organizers of the Russian Army. . . In the chapter on 'Qualities of the Soviet Soldier' Mr. Garthoff might have explained the Russian attitude toward military service, which is quite different from that of Americans. No Russian would ever question the necessity of compulsory military service. On the whole, however, 'Soviet Military Doctrine' adds to the West's understanding of an important subject." Mikhail Koriakov

+ — N Y Times p30 N 29 '53 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p339 My 28 '54 320w

"Originally a doctoral dissertation this timely study shows how a scholarly sifting of the great library resources of the nation can result in an intelligence study useful to the political analyst as well as to the military specialist."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:130 Mr '54 260w

GARTNER, JOHN. All about trailers; how to build, buy, and travel in trailers. 152p il $2.50 Holt

629.226 Automobiles—Trailers 54-5448

Detailed information on how to build and operate a trailer, based on the author's personal experience. Photographs.

Booklist 50:313 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:156 Ap '54 20w

Kirkus 22:50 Ja 15 '54 160w

"This little volume should be required reading for anyone who contemplates joining the more than two million Americans who now live in trailers or who use a trailer for recreational purposes. It is written by an experienced trail-erist and builder of trailers, and offers sound advice." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:447 Mr 1 '54 140w

"This book is most highly recommended for libraries and for people interested in trailers. Subtitled 'How to Build, Buy and Travel in Trailers,' it is at once comprehensive in the how-to-do-it sense, yet light, breezy reading with no troublesome technical jargon." R. H. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 J1 27 '54 260w

GARVE, ANDREW, pseud. See Winterton, P

GASSER, HENRY MARTIN. Oil painting: methods and demonstrations. 128p il col il $10 Reinhold

751 Landscape painting. Painting 53-9172

A book for the novice which takes the student thru the various stages of painting in nineteen illustrated steps. The author, director of the Newark School of Fine and Industrial Art, keeps his text to a minimum, but includes many drawings.

"Once in a blue moon a how-to-do book is written in a concise and thoroughly understandable way. In his book, 'Oil Painting: Methods and Demonstrations,' Henry Gasser, N. A., seems to have fulfilled his objective." K. C. Parris

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 7 '54 300w

"The book is a straightforward presentation of methods he has found successful, and the illustrations naturally reflect his own interests and point of view. It should be a valuable reference for painters." D. K. W.

+ School Arts 53:47 Mr '54 150w

GASSNER, JOHN. Theatre in our times; a survey of the men, materials and movements in the modern theatre. 609p $5 Crown

792.09 Theater. Drama—History and criticism 53-9974

"A review of developments in the American and European theater during the past half century by an authority on modern drama who is concerned with both its forward strides and the setbacks it has suffered. Taking in a wide scope, he appraises established giants like Ibsen and Shaw along with American aspirants like Williams and Miller; he also surveys the trends that have brought the theater to its present impasse, when, he says, it is vulgarized in style, and drained of challenging ideas. These essays, now much revised, first appeared in various publications over the last few years." Booklist

Booklist 50:414 J1 1 '54

Kirkus 22:27 Ja 1 '54 110w

"I must confess to an odd personal experience. In their original form [the essays] sometimes struck me as 'cool,' 'objective,' perceptive, and intelligent, but slightly remote. It is now apparent that this is because Mr. Gassner sees the immediate object of his observation in terms of the larger significance. Collected they appear more unified, coherent, provocative; part of a definite, personal attitude towards the theatre." Lee Strasberg

+ Sat R 37:33 N 6 '54 750w

"The Theatre in Our Times is a book that should be on the shelf of every serious student of the theatre in our times." Norris Houghton

+ Theatre Arts 38:7 O '54 750w

GASTER, THEODOR HERZL. Festivals of the Jewish year; a modern interpretation and guide. 308p $4 Sloane

296.4 Fast and feasts 53-9341

"Traces the evolution of each festival and compares the customs and ceremonies with those of other peoples. Indexes to poems translated, bibliography." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:81 Ja '54 20w

"A book that is so much beyond the usual surface acceptance of today's facts that it may defeat those readers who want quick facts. But for students of religious rites and ceremonies, it is a scholarly piece of research and a masterly presentation."

+ Kirkus 21:620 S 1 '53 100w

"This is a valuable volume for the scholar, the reference collection and for a general understanding of Jewish social history." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 78:2215 D 15 '53 140w

"The fact that many of Judaism's holiest days have roots in unabashed superstition and actually are not, as often supposed, pure commemorations of turning points in Jewish history, does not impoverish their religious significance but enriches it. Of this enrichment and of the transmutation of these festivals from their original ceremonies to the manner of their observance today, Mr. Gaster writes with enthusiasm and erudition." Edme Seton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Mr 7 '54 420w

GAULT, WILLIAM CAMPBELL. Blood on the boards. 192p $2.50 Dutton

53-10864

Detective story.

"Thin plot dragged thru much small talk about the ways of Hollywood." Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ja 10 '54 120w

Kirkus 21:683 O 1 '53 70w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herad Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 31 '54 120w

"A story which is, like all Gault, ironic, vigorous and absorbing." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p15 D 27 '53 80w

"One device, while not quite obvious, is detectable by the alert reader; one lady seems unnecessarily willing. Otherwise the story's okay, with a relaxed style and excellent background. Gault hasn't yet repeated on settings, and knows each one thoroughly." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ja 17 '54 60w

"Easily his best." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 36:40 D 26 '53 20w

Springfield Republican p5C Ja 10 '54 40w

GAULT, WILLIAM CAMPBELL. Gallant colt. 188p $2.75 Dutton

Horses—Legends and stories 54-8852

"Denny Nolan could have lived comfortably as apprentice and future heir to his foster father's thoroughbred stables. Instead, fired by the desire to prove the quality of his favorite colt, Endeavor, he sets out as a jockey, in company with a charming, reckless sponsor. Since the latter has an uncontrollable itch for gambling and loses their stake and the horse too, Denny rides a long, hard stretch before he brings Endeavor pounding across the finish line." N Y Times

Booklist 51:87 O 15 '54

Kirkus 22:534 Ag 15 '54 170w

"The author bears down hard on the evils of illicit gambling, exalts the spirit of free enterprise and still manages to give a colorful picture of the precarious world of the one-horse racers." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p38 N 21 '54 140w

Springf'd Republican p9C D 12 '54 60w

GAULT, WILLIAM CAMPBELL. Run, killer, run. 189p $2.75 Dutton

54-5049

Mystery story.

Kirkus 22:349 Je 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p15 Ag 11 '54 40w

GAULT, W. C.—Continued

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:37 S 25 '54 20w

"A fast moving mystery . . . [with] a surprise ending." A. G. D.

Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54 30w

GAY, MARGARET COOPER. Hatchet in the sky. 500p $4.50 Simon & Schuster

54-9813

Historical novel about the time of the French and Indian war and the conspiracy of Pontiac. The hero is David Caithris, an exiled Scottish laird; the scene is the frontier town of Detroit and the country nearby.

Booklist 51:84 O 15 '54

Reviewed by Lloyd Wendt

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 28 '54 550w

"There's a dash to this and a tremendous (but never overwhelming) amount of historical detail, with honor and understanding accorded the Indians and shame dealt to the English. Certainly a 'must' for the Detroit area and a definite possibility for a popular audience."

+ Kirkus 22:412 J1 1 '54 270w

"Novel of endless intrigue, sentimentality, strained coincidence, and preposterous characters. . . Recommended only for large public libraries." J. R. Willingham

Library J 79:1832 O 1 '54 120w

"Action, adventure, romance and a picture of America's past rather different from what one recalls from the history books make 'Hatchet in the Sky' lively and provocative reading." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune R p6 O 31 '54 450w

"Hatchet in the Sky is successful in one requisite of the historical novel—the presenting of significant materials concerning a time gone by. But the extravagance of its telling prohibits its being considered a work of art." Carl Carmer

N Y Times p53 D 5 '54 550w

"Miss Gay's work has a great good humor about it, and she is obviously enthralled by her subject, but things would be better all around if she were less wordy, because there are long sections of this novel that sound merely like sweetened-up excerpts from any history book."

+ — New Yorker 30:141 O 2 '54 110w

GAY, ZHENYA. Wonderful things [il. by the author]. 62p $2.50 Viking

Horses—Legends and stories 54-12396

"A big, handsome, black-and-white picture book gives us faithful, appealing portraits of a baby colt, from the first moments of his awareness to the time he can race and play with other foals." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:68 O 1 '54

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 14 '54 30w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:582 S 1 '54 40w

"Well-told, attractive picture-story." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 79:2252 N 15 '54 20w

"The gentle, descriptive text tells simply of his gradual discovery of his world, things he can do, things he sees, creatures he meets. Everything is a surprise and each of the surprises makes him happy—a wonderful thing!" L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p7 N 14 '54 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 14 '54 30w

Reviewed by Helen Fuller

Sat R 37:26 D 25 '54 60w

GAYDON, ALFRED GORDON, and WOLF-HARD, HANS GEORG. Flames, their structure, radiation, and temperature. 340p $11 Macmillan (N Y)

536.4 Flame [53-3720]

"Emphasis on the physical rather than the chemical viewpoint. Concentrates on measurement of flame velocity, theories of flame propagation, method of carbon formation in flames, flame radiation, measurement of high flame temperatures, and ionization in flames." Chem & Eng N

Chem & Eng N 32:3378 Ag 23 '54 30w

"It contains new material on solid carbon in flames, on the measurement of burning velocities, on the temperature flames, etc. It will be of interest to other scientists who are conducting research on flames and also to engineers concerned with the design of gas turbines, rockets, internal combustion engines and other devices—even oil burners—in which flame behavior is of critical importance." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:2459 D 15 '54 90w

"An authoritative survey. . . Although the book is limited to theory and experimental results, with applications seldom indicated, it is obviously of interest to scientists and engineers engaged in design of fuel burners, gas turbines and many other devices based on controlled combustion."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 39:38 My '54

GEHMAN, RICHARD. Driven. 307p $3.50 McKay 54-1011

"A clinical study of the forces that led to the million-dollar robbery of a Pennsylvania small-town bank by its assistant manager. The story is told in a series of psychiatric-interview flashbacks which turn up various elements—financial, social and business pressures, mainly—in George Carpenter's background. After the robbery, he runs away, first to New York, then to the Midwest, drinks enormous quantities of whisky, has a number of love affairs, eludes the police and escapes from gangsters, is captured in Tennessee and returned for trial." Library J

Kirkus 22:206 Mr 15 '54 190w

"A worthwhile but overlong attempt, the book is thrilling and suspenseful in some places, tedious in others. Semi-happy ending." Louis Barron

+ — Library J 79:622 Ap 1 '54 90w

"A highly readable story told in a diverting technique." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 4 '54 600w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p18 J1 11 '54 370w

"It will not make happy or pleasant reading; its undercurrents are too close to most people for comfort; the thin line that divides most readers from the overt acts of the book's central character may not furnish sufficient insulation against the book's revelations of what sets human character adrift." D. A. Pitt

San Francisco Chronicle p10 My 30 '54 500w

GEHMAN, RICHARD. Murder in paradise. 278p $3 Rinehart

364.15 Gibbs, Edward Lester 54-6376

"Writing in a mode developed with singular effectiveness and meaning in recent years by John Bartlow Martin, Mr. Gehman recalls (autopsy and milieu) a singularly brutal murder which took place near Lancaster, Pa., in January, 1950. Marian Baker, secretary at Franklin and Marshall College was beaten to death by a student who was never able to say much more about it than that he had been seized by an impulse." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Kirkus 22:284 Ap 15 '54 190w

"Mr. Gehman has been far from economical or deft in selecting from a mass of material the most vital to make the situation lucid or his ultimate comments cogent. It is indeed rather by weight of detail than by more skillful management that he makes his placid, sheltered, conservative setting apparent. Milieu interests him more than murderer or victim." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 18 '54 230w

"I'll venture to say that more first-rate book-length treatments of significant American trials have been published in the past three years than in all previous history; and the latest book in what is becoming almost a new art-form should like its predecessors, command the attention of every reader concerned with the mysteries of human motivation." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p10 J1 11 '54 230w

"I've read a good deal in this field—written in it, too, for that matter—and I can say that Mr. Gehman does an outstandingly brilliant job." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 6 '54 550w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:37 Ag 21 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54 140w

"With deletions and imagination, this could easily be turned into a fictional story. Far above the average."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:203 O '54

GEIRINGER, KARL. Bach family. 530p il $7.50 Oxford

927.8 Bach family

54-13129

A composite biography of seven generations of the family of Johann Sebastian Bach from the sixteenth-century Thuringia miller Veit to Wilhelm Friedrich Ernst (1759-1845) J. S. Bach's grandson. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:174 D 15 '54

"An engrossing account of a remarkable, vital family." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:2454 D 15 '54 120w

"The Bach Family' is an exceedingly expert piece of writing about that one of the fine arts in which such writing is most rare. No attempt to popularize or cheapen, it is also no attempt to obfuscate or address only other experts. The richness of its contents is very compact, but its readability is constant." Herbert Weinstock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 12 '54 850w

"Mr. Geiringer's biographical study, as rounded a sketch as you will find anywhere, is a superb piece of organization, as is the brief run-through of Bach's music. This is a book to which many music lovers will want to turn. It is well written, crammed with information not easily available elsewhere, and it makes a great musical period, as well as the individual characters in it, come to life. . . . An indispensable piece of research, this; and also a fascinating story, well told." H. C. Schonberg

+ N Y Times p5 N 14 '54 450w

"Dr. Geiringer writes clearly in a language not his own (there are occasional oddities, as when he discovers 'romantic sensuality' in some slow movements by Johann Christian, of all Bachs); but he lacks grace, and his painstaking care over detail deadens the general picture. . . . The most valuable chapters are undoubtedly those in which he analyses and quotes from the music of the lesser Bachs, much of it still unpublished. All these Bachs were concerned to reconcile the Italian melodic and dramatic style with their German heritage, as was Sebastian himself, and Dr. Geiringer finds examples of mutual influence among the kinsmen, as well as some cheerful borrowing from the ancestral store. An agreeable side-show is his discussion and illustration of the work of the several Bachs who became professional painters." Winton Dean

+ Spec p532 O 29 '54 650w

GEISEL, THEODOR SEUSS (DR SEUSS, pseud). Horton hears a Who! [il. by the author]. [60p] $2.50 Random house

54-7012

Nonsense story about an elephant who just knew that there were people (the Whos) living on the speck of dust that floated before his eyes. Others in the jungle would not believe his story but were finally convinced.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:94 D '54 70w

Booklist 51:68 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:11 O '54 20w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 10 '54 150w

"Silly rhymes and limpid pictures, those products of a wonderful imagination, make the story tops in excitement, too."

+ Kirkus 22:581 S 1 '54 110w

"Highly recommended." Anne Izard

+ Library J 79:2493 D 15 '54 80w

"The verses are full of the usual lively, informal language and amazing rhymes that have delighted such a world-wide audience in the good 'doctor's' other books. The story, with its moral, does not match the gayety of some of the older books. But the pictures are as wildly original and funny as ever." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 24 '54 200w

"It is probably the most moral tale since the first 'Elsie Dinsmore,' but since it is written and illustrated by Dr. Seuss it is a lot more fun. . . . Children, parents, relatives and friends need not come whimpering to this reviewer to find out what the Whos and their town look like. She knows the limits of her powers of description." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p32 S 12 '54 210w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:207 N 27 '54 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 14 '54 30w

Reviewed by Della McGregor

Sat R 37:67 N 13 '54 180w

GEIST, STANLEY, ed. French stories and tales. 326p $3.95 Knopf

Short stories—Collections

53-6842

"Sixteen stories ranging from brief anecdote to short novel. Stendhal, Balzac, Baudelaire, Gogol, Flaubert, Zola, Huysmans, Villiers de l'Isle-Adam, Maupassant, Renard, Schwob of the 19th, and Gide of the 20th century are represented. While several of the stories may be found in Short Story Index, half have not heretofore been available in translation. The collection has no central theme, but is the editor's selection of noteworthy examples of the creative imagination." Library J

Booklist 50:450 J1 15 '54

"Mr. Geist's biographical, critical and bibliographical notes on each author are short, incisive and informative. Each contains at least one gold nugget of criticism, while his two-and-a-half-page 'Editor's Note' to the entire volume offers an original approach to the big question of the relation between French fiction and French society." Vivian Mercier

+ Commonweal 60:586 S 17 '54 1350w

Kirkus 22:291 My 1 '54 120w

"Brief critical and bibliographical notes on each of the authors are thoughtful and informative. The translations, most of them new for this collection, are modern and adequate. Generally recommended." Harold Lancour

+ Library J 79:1309 J1 '54 130w

Reviewed by Stanley Cooperman

Nation 179:94 J1 31 '54 230w

"This would have been a really good collection of stories . . . if the translators had been content to do their work inconspicuously, but they have mistaken an unpleasant and slangy familiarity for vivacity, so that the reader is frequently jarred out of his absorption and made conscious that he is not alone with the writer—that a third and most unwelcome presence is insisting on getting some attention. Mr. Geist has written notes that are illuminating, if a trifle perky in their expression."

GEIST, STANLEY—Continued

+ — New Yorker 30:81 Ag 28 '54 90w

"Stanley Geist's highly intelligent, slightly over-sophisticated volume, 'French Stories and Tales,' proposes a new and original selection. It sedulously keeps off the beaten track. . . One author alone represents the twentieth century: Gide, with one of his most falsely simple and in truth thinnest pieces, his late 'Theseus.' One wonders why such an inclusion, when many a more striking story by Proust, Giraudoux, Morand, Giono, and Gaspar might have been selected. . . There is ample room for a similar volume which would select a dozen stories and tales of the present century." Henri Peyre

+ — Sat R 37:11 Jl 24 '54 800w

Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54 230w

Time 64:80 Jl 26 '54 450w

GELBER, LIONEL MORRIS. American anarchy [democracy in an era of bigness]. 212p $3.50 Schuman

973 [917.3] Democracy. U.S.—Civilization 53-9524

A discussion of the possibility of danger to the American ideal of democracy, inherent in the American tendency to join organizations, which in growing larger and larger, put the democratic faith in jeopardy.

"It is mankind's old problem brought-up-to-date: How to keep necessary means from subverting their own desirable ends. The argument is thoughtfully sustained without definite outcome, but always with faith in man's chance to survive—and to prosper freedom." T. V. Smith

+ Ethics 64:243 Ap '54 140w

Foreign Affairs 32:675 Jl '54 30w

Kirkus 21:420 Jl 1 '53 170w

"Recommended." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 78:1524 S 15 '53 140w

Nation 178:528 Je 19 '54 260w

"In his effort to awaken moral man to the threat of immoral society Mr. Gelber has, I believe, given us too much of a prophecy of doom. I think he is unduly pessimistic about the chance for the reward of merit, about the publication of books of ideas and their favorable reception, about the trend toward dead-level conformity. But he is certainly not talking about bogies." J. M. England

+ — Sat R 37:66 Ja 2 '54 320w

GELFANT, BLANCHE HOUSMAN. American city novel. 289p $4 Univ. of Okla. press

813 American fiction—History and criticism. Cities and towns in literature 54-5936

"A study of the impact of the metropolis on the characters and plots of the twentieth-century American novel, which has adopted as a major theme the victimization of man by his urban environment. The author divides the city novel into three types: the portrait, the synoptic, and the ecological; she illustrates each category with the novels of Dreiser, Dos Passos, Farrell, Wolfe, Wharton, and others, all of whom used the city as physical background, atmosphere, and a way of life in their novels." Booklist

Booklist 50:415 Jl 1 '54

"Blanche Housman Gelfant has put together all this material in an interesting and able study, very well written, of the American city novel. . . The chapter on Dreiser is one of the best I have seen lately, and Mrs. Gelfant also goes against the tide in her praise of Thomas Wolfe, an author who has been somewhat out of fashion lately. She is perhaps less rewarding in the chapter on James T. Farrell, who is so purely a city writer." Maxwell Geismar

+ — N Y Times p4 Jl 11 '54 550w

"Mrs. Gelfant's study is an important contribution to the rapidly growing body of criticism on the American novel. Unfortunately, she makes no effort to point out American indebtedness to European and English novelists, although she herself is aware of this important obligation. The primary virtue of her book lies in its synthesis. She sees the problem as a whole and as a result can ably illustrate the comparable sense of tradition binding together such seemingly different novelists as Sherwood Anderson, Edith Wharton, Thomas Wolfe, Dreiser, Dos Passos and Farrell." E. A. Bloom

+ — Sat R 37:36 O 23 '54 500w

GENDRON, VAL. Powder and hides; decorations by Rus Anderson. 230p $3 Longmans 54-7681

A story of the Plains Indians in the 1870s and of the American boy, son of an army captain, who learned to know them well and value them highly.

Bookmark 14:14 O '54 20w

"Miss Gendron has fashioned a fast moving and exciting story. But for the sake of historical accuracy she should have had it occur exactly three years later." B. G.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p42 N 14 '54 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

"A well written story that comments thoughtfully on the tragic misunderstanding of the Indians."

+ Kirkus 22:393 Jl 1 '54 160w

"One of the finest books of the year." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 79:1671 S 15 '54 80w

"This is not only vigorous adventure story, but also, in effect, an indictment of the mogul forces behind the extermination of the buffalo—the railroad empires, fur families and the Army. It was an unfortunate chapter in our history, but here in this story are the words of compassion for the Indian and his almost sole subsistence—the buffalo." G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times p11 D 26 '54 210w

Reviewed by D. A. Pitt

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 14 '54 50w

GENET, JEAN. The maids [and] Deathwatch; two plays; with an introd. by Jean-Paul Sartre; tr. from the French by Bernard Frechtman. 166p $4.75 Grove

842

53-7149

"Two one-act shockers by a man who, according to the jacket, was sentenced in 1943 to life imprisonment as a habitual criminal, was pardoned at the request of various literary lights, and is now 'regarded by many critics as the greatest French writer of his generation.'" Nation

"Brilliantly written, they are recommended for belles lettres and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:779 Ap 15 '54 20w

Nation 178:244 Mr 20 '54 240w

GENSTEIN, EDGAR S. Stock market profit without forecasting; a research report on investment by formula plan. 1td ed 86p $3.50 Investment res. press, 45 University ct, South Orange. N.J.

332.67 Stocks. Investments

"This book presents an original formula for investing whereby investors in common stocks may minimize risks. . . To use it effectively presupposes considerable knowledge of and familiarity with financial institutions and the entire investment field. . . The author is a manufacturing chemist, President of Kern Products Company in Newark, New Jersey and has based this book on his own observations in operating a private investment fund most successfully." Library J

Chem & Eng N 32:1154 Mr 22 '54 20w

Reviewed by R. L. Vormelker

Library J 79:986 My 15 '54 210w

GEORGE, JOHN LOTHAR, and GEORGE, JEAN CRAIGHEAD. Bubo, the great horned owl; il. by Jean George. (American woodland tales) 184p $3 Dutton

Birds—Legends and stories 54-8853

Narrative account of a bird community in which Bubo, the great horned owl, lived with his mate. For grades six to nine.

Booklist 51:139 N 15 '54

"A strong portrayal of nature in its wickedness and beauty, illustrated with fine portraits and panoramas in water color."

+ Kirkus 22:680 O 1 '54 150w

"An absorbing tale, based on fact." Lois Anderson

+ Library J 79:2495 D 15 '54 90w

"The nature background is well done and the pictures strikingly beautiful. It will further enrich the knowledge of the many who have been absorbed in Zim's 'Owls.'" L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p14 N 14 '54 100w

Sat R 37:82 N 13 '54 120w

GERSON, LOUIS L. Woodrow Wilson and the rebirth of Poland, 1914-1920; a study in the influence on American policy of minority groups of foreign origin. 166p il $4 Yale univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Poland. Poland—Foreign relations—U.S. Poles in the U.S. Wilson, Woodrow 53-7774

A study of the rebirth of Poland during the years 1914 to 1920, and the part played by the United States in this period. "The conflicting aims of Poles both inside and outside their native land, the policies of the Allies and the Central Powers, the attitude of the American Poles and the bitter clash between Paderewski and Pilsudski are examined in full. Yet the core of this work centers around Colonel House's and President Wilson's all-important decisions regarding Polish independence." (Current Hist)

"This book is more readable than the average doctoral dissertation. It is replete with footnotes, has an excellent essay on bibliography, several appendixes, and an index. There are no maps nor pictures although some of each, aptly chosen, would have added to the book." G. C. Osborn

+ Am Hist R 60:203 O '54 340w

"The subtitle of Mr. Gerson's book promised a study of the little-known effects of activities of pressure groups on American foreign policy. It is too bad that this promise was not fulfilled. Of the 137 pages of text only six (pages 60-66) deal stricto sensu with the subject." W. S. Sworakowski

— Ann Am Acad 294:225 Jl '54 650w

"An engaging study of Poland's birth pangs from 1914 to 1920."

+ Current Hist 26:376 Je '54 130

Foreign Affairs 33:161 O '54 80w

"Since the attention is focused here on the Polish-American phase of the rebirth of Poland, relatively little is said about Pilsudski and internal Polish developments at the end of the war. This approach is justified by the fact that the author is primarily concerned with presenting a carefully documented narrative of the workings of a pressure group and the effects of personal influence. He does not let his documentation obscure his own tart views of the methods used by the Poles in furthering their cause."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:174 Je '54 200w

GERSON, NOEL B. The impostor. 318p $3.95 Doubleday

54-5299

Altho he was a gunsmith's apprentice thru misfortune, Jeremy Stone was a Cornish gentleman by birth. In this historical novel about New York and Port Royal in the late seventeenth century, Jeremy goes to the latter city in disguise. Thanks to him and to the earthquake of 1692 the plot of the Duchess Caroline was thwarted and the American colonies were not betrayed.

Booklist 50:239 F 15 '54

"It is a harrowing tale, with a full quota of flashing swords, booming cannon, arrows in the dark, torture, conspiracy, beautiful women—and convulsions of nature." Richard Blake-sley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 31 '54 250w

"An activation of history that eyes swords and guns more lovingly than the female form. Sturdy."

+ Kirkus 21:746 N 15 '53 140w

"I suspect that Her Grace's bold plot, told in true historical detail from the beginning, would have made a better historical novel than all the fictional by-play involving fictional Jeremy Stone. As it is, Mr. Gerson has used the conspiracy mainly as a peg on which to hang a workmanlike but routine romance about a run-of-the-mill historical-novel hero." Richard Match

N Y Times p21 Ja 31 '54 500w

GERTH, HANS HEINRICH, and MILLS, CHARLES WRIGHT. Character and social structure; the psychology of social institutions. 490p $6 Harcourt

301.15 Social psychology 53-12721

"This book is a meeting of disciplines, a historically-oriented study of human institutions—and human beings—with the purpose of trying to understand human motivations and behavior. The authors write that their objective is 'to present a systematic statement . . . in which political, economic, military, religious, and kinship institutions, and their historical transformations, are connected with the character and personality, with the private as well as the public lives, of those living in the society.'" (San Francisco Chronicle) Bibliography. Index.

"This book reflects, and will undoubtedly further stimulate, the integrative impulse in contemporary social science. It is also an ambitious and often impressive effort to breathe a sense of history into sociology and social psychology. A high aspiration and broad perspective is coupled with an attempt to present a systematic scheme for analyzing a wide range of institutional phenomena." Philip Selznick

+ Am Soc R 19:485 Ag '54 1500w

"Although the book was written as a general text in social psychology, with the tacit hope apparently that it would be used in both sociology and psychology departments, this reviewer does not foresee widespread adoptions because of the abstract nature of the argument and the shot-gun techniques used to illustrate it. This will be unfortunate, for the theoretical orientation has merit. The authors have shown imagination in their use of concepts and in the way they have fitted them together." A. B. Hollingshead

+ Ann Am Acad 293:184 My '54 400w

"This is a technical book, yet not so full of jargon or minutiae as to make it impassable. For the student or even the interested layman, the book is an important addition to contemporary American social psychology." J. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 N 29 '53 260w

Reviewed by H. E. Jensen

Social Forces 32:376 My '54 500w

"This synthesis is limited in scope, and aridly formal in parts, but it is, nevertheless, significant in pointing a direction for the integration of theory."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:103 Mr '54 220w

GHEERBRANT, ALAIN. Journey to the far Amazon; an expedition into unknown territory; tr. by Edward Fitzgerald [Eng title: Impossible adventure]. 353p il maps $5 Simon & Schuster

987 [918.7] Orinoco valley. Amazon river and valley 54-5814

"The members of this Orinoco-Amazon expedition were four: Alain Gheerbrant, the author of this book; Pierre Gaisseau, Jean Fichter, all Frenchmen, and Luis Saenz, a Colombian who met the author in Paris in the classes of Jean-Paul Sartre. All four were under 30 years of age when they started out from Bogota in May 1949. Their itinerary, covering 2,000 miles through jungles and llanos [broad, grassy plains], included a descent to the llanos, a journey down the Orinoco and a penetration of the unexplored Sierra Parima." N Y Times

"I doubt that any of the numerous books about the South American back-of-beyond has told a more fascinating story. But what, above all, makes Gheerbrant's chronicle a classic of Amazonian exploration is that the author is not only an intrepid spirit; a knowledgeable student of ethnology and anthropology; a modest, humane, and perceptive personality—he is also a poet whose writing does justice to his great adventure." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:84 J1 '54 360w

"The author with two other young Frenchmen and a Colombian spent over a year among the barbarous tribes of the Orinoco-Amazon valleys and his superb report conveys rare understanding."

+ Bookmark 14:4 O '54 30w

Reviewed by W. M. Krogman

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 13 '54 270w

"The chief value of the book seems to lie in the fact that where hate, resistance, trickery and violence were feared, the love of humanity even in the deepest jungle found its response. There should be something very heartening for mankind in this." R. M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 24 '54 800w

Kirkus 22:149 F 15 '54 240w

Reviewed by Anthony Smith

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 17 '53 300w

"What is remarkable about Mr. Gheerbrant's book is that he never personally triumphs when intimacy over-rides mistrust; he may get the better of people, but only by getting the best out of them. . . His description of the initiation ceremony of the Piaroa Indians, during which boys submit themselves to be stung by the most venomous of ants, shows his exact tenderness at its best; he can observe emotion without intruding it." Francis Huxley

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:768 D 12 '53 500w

"An obviously honest and always exciting tale, it makes good reading for those who will not risk their necks in canoes which turn over in waters infested by the cannibalistic piranhas; who will stick to pure water and packaged groceries instead of the dubious food and drink these adventurers consumed and survived." Hubert Herring

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 23 '54 550w

"Not since the publication of 'The Sea and the Jungle' (1912) has the great mother forest of South America inspired so penetrating a portrait of a region and its people as 'Journey to the Far Amazon.' This book is good literature—and the expedition which it describes is in the tradition of the great South American explorations of the past." V. W. Von Hagen

+ N Y Times p6 My 16 '54 750w

New Yorker 30:102 Je 19 '54 80w

Reviewed by E. P. Hanson

Sat R 37:22 Je 26 '54 500w

"A fascinating and noble book."

+ Time 63:124 My 17 '54 550w

"This is a book about which possibly no more is needed than a brief and urgent word in the ear of all lovers of courage and understanding: read and be thankful. If more is to be said, let the reader provide himself with what the book lacks, a good map of the basins of the Orinoco and the upper Amazon."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p746 N 20 '53 1050w

GIBBS, MARION. Feudal order; a study of the origins and development of English feudal society. 147p pa $1 Abelard-Schuman

321.3 Feudalism 53-9074

"Gibbs's purpose is to suggest, through a picture of medieval English society, that the reaction against studying the influence of 'the economic context' on political and social institutions that has followed the Western rejection of Marxist's sociology has gone too far. Since he deals mainly with the peasantry, the chief use of his essay will be in reminding readers of England's long essential dependence, for material advance, on the improvement of agricultural yields." Am J Soc

Reviewed by W. D. Wallis

Am Anthropol 56:300 Ap '54 270w

"[Gibbs' purpose is] plainly enough expressed and modestly carried out." S. L. Thrupp

+ Am J Soc 59:486 Mr '54 200w

GIBBS, WILLA. Twelfth physician. 277p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

54-7311

This historical novel of the French Revolution is the story of the adventures and heartaches, the fall from grace and the final redemption, of a young doctor who works with and against the rulers of France.

Booklist 50:400 Je 15 '54

Kirkus 22:240 Ap 1 '54 150w

"Highly recommended. Bound to be best seller—and should be." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1051 Je 1 '54 210w

"The Twelfth Physician' has a double claim to attention. Not only has Willa Gibbs written an historical romance that vividly recreates events and characters during the early Napoleonic period of France but she has probed a human tragedy that is dateless. The self-betrayal of Charlot Florian under the rule of the Directorate and, later, under the command of Napoleon, is, at its core, a conflict that holds meaning for men of good will of every age." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Je '27 '54 550w

"'Twelfth Physician' (Miss Gibbs' third Napoleonic novel) is no mere picaresque tale of adventure. Her characters are flesh and blood. The times are carefully embroidered in all their detail, to re-create the bloody tapestry that was France under Robespierre and the Directoire." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p12 My 30 '54 450w

GIBBS-SMITH, CHARLES HARVARD. Caroline affair [Eng title: Operation Caroline]. 218p $2.75 Viking

54-6423

An English psychiatrist who works with the British Intelligence service is the narrator. He describes one of his cases in which a British underground worker during the war develops a post-war neurosis. The doctor with the help of Scotland Yard and continental police finally solves the mystery and cures the patient.

Booklist 50:249; 297 Mr 1 '54; Ap 1 '54

"A courteous and cultivated tone gentles this down for the mildest tastes in menace."

Kirkus 22:79 F 1 '54 130w

"Mr. Gibbs-Smith who is a British museum director, writes with authority about painting, and his hero, Dr. Harvard, is refreshingly literate. But his real triumph lies in the suspense he has achieved by an oblique method of story-telling. The adventure is there, but it is intensified by the complex and believable characterizations of the psychiatrist and his patient."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 22 '54 320w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p27 Ap 11 '54 30w

"I shouldn't call him quite another Graham Greene (Greene in his 'Brighton Rock' aspect, of course), but he'll do to take along nevertheless." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 8 '54 500w

"Large plus mark." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:35 Ap 17 '54 20w

"This is another superior and literate thriller, embellished with chit-chat about psychology and painting, which fails quite to achieve the authentic grip; the psychiatrist, though more human than most appears at times a little pompous." Penelope Houston

+ Spec p378 O 2 '53 110w

"It's an unusual field for fiction, and very exciting." R. F. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 60w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p609 S 25 '53 80w

GIBBS-SMITH, CHARLES HARVARD. History of flying. 304p il $4.95 Praeger

629.1309 Aeronautics—History 54-6657

"This book offers a short account of man's attempts to fly; of his dreams that preceded and accompanied the attempts; and of his ultimate success. The story begins in legend, and follows the centuries of speculation and endeavour that culminated in balloon flight at the end of the eighteenth century, and aeroplane flight at the beginning of the twentieth. The more detailed chronicle stops with the year 1914, when the first World War broke out. . . . In order to link the first two millennia of dreamers and pioneers with the flying of this generation, what amounts to a long postscript has been added to outline the spectacular development which has taken place over the past forty years. This postscript includes a note on space and interplanetary flight." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Readable, authoritative account emphasizing early theories of flight, pioneers and experiments before the Wright brothers and sketching modern developments to date."

+ Bookmark 13:234 J1 '54 30w

"There's a definite personal enthusiasm here for aviation and an excellent collection of illustrations and drawings that make this a good background book for a market that may, at the half century mark of power flight, not be as uncritical as the earlier one."

+ Kirkus 22:301 My 1 '54 150w

"Considerably more space is given to balloons than is given to the modern airplane. The book is, therefore, not one to be offered to high school students interested in nothing older than jet propelled planes. It can be recommended, however, for mature readers who are more interested in the early ideas and efforts. Recommended for all libraries."

R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1049 Je 1 '54 210w

Reviewed by Arthur Elton

New Statesman & Nation 47:20 Ja 2 '54 100w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 8 '54 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p786 D 4 '53 450w

GIBSON, KATHARINE. To see the queen; il. by Clotilde Embree Funk. 144p $2.50 Longmans

54-9205

A story for girls aged eight to twelve. It is based on the life of Isabella of France, who at the age of seven, left France to go to England to be the bride of Richard II. The rhyme about the cat who went to London "to see the queen" is part of the story.

Booklist 51:179 D 15 '54

"An exquisite tale." Isabelle Lawrence

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 14 '54 120w

"It is a charming and original idea to weave a story around this very young queen and such a famous pussycat; and Miss Gibson has told a tale little girls will love." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:332 O '54 160w

"Fairy tale quality is the distinctive mark of [this] lovely story."

+ Kirkus 22:388 J1 1 '54 130w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 79:2254 N 15 '54 100w

"The plot that brings Sparrow to court to sing, then makes the little Queen release him, is not very exciting, but the whole is a rare, colorful tapestry of olden days. There is a well made point at the end, when the little girl begins to learn how to be a good Queen." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p6 N 14 '54 290w

"Neither preachy nor sentimental, this is an unconventional little tale, not exactly exciting, but sparked with an oblique humor, a lively sense of the period and people." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p44 O 24 '54 160w

"There is an interesting mixture of history and fairytale to make this a 'made-up-story about a real person.' The characters of Fancy and Sparrow emerge vividly while Boots is an important personality and influence. Together they create a story which has drama and adventure, in a true historical setting. Black-and-white illustrations add to the attraction of the book." A. B.

+ Sat ■ 37:80 N 13 '54 190w

GIBSON, ROBERT DONALD DAVIDSON. Quest of Alain-Fournier. 293p il $4 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Fournier, Alain

A54-8829

The first English biography of a French writer who was killed early in the first World war. Alain-Fournier is famous chiefly for his autobiographical novel The Wanderer, and this study deals with both the man and that work.

"'The Quest of Alain-Fournier' is not only a fine tribute to a great work of art. It is in itself an exemplary piece of literary criticism, exceedingly well-written, logical and sympathetic. It provides a moving study of a strange but beautiful character, a remarkable 'case-history' of the spiritual and aesthetic development of an artist. Above all, it supports and gives added depth to a great literary work."

G. H. Favre

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 19 '54 750w

"Mr. Gibson has written a very attractive biography. Temperamentally, he is perfectly suited to his subject and his book is evidently a labor of love. He has not only explored the Alain-Fournier country very thoroughly, but he has had the assistance of Mme. Isabelle Rivière, who has placed a great deal of unpublished material at his disposal. He is able to throw much new light on the autobiographical elements in the novel and on the way in which it is constructed, while his final estimate reveals him as a sympathetic and discerning critic." Martin Turnell

+ Commonweal 59:580 Mr 12 '54 1650w

Reviewed by Harold Lancour

Library J 79:554 Mr 15 '54 110w

"It was an audacious stroke on Mr Gibson's part to attempt to describe the original of the Meaulnes-Fournier pays sans nom. True to the novel, the first part of his 'Quest' is the most captivating. But the pursuit of his hero from childhood to his disappearance in 1914, leading his men into the wood of Saint Remy, is traced with tact and skill. He has kept the strange charm which the life imparted to the work without indulging in amateur psychoanalysis at the certain expense of destroying the spirit of a double illusion. A grateful reader is obliged, however, to add that his book deserved better proof-reading." P. M. Jones

GIBSON, R. D. D.—Continued

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Je 9 '53 300w

"Robert Gibson's thoroughness in research and his critical acumen are of a very high order; yet they add absolutely nothing to the understanding or to the enjoyment of 'Le Grand Meaulnes.'... If you are interested in Alain-Fournier, then read 'Le Grand Meaulnes.' If you are still entranced, read it again. If you were once attuned to Alain-Fournier, no introduction is needed. If you never were, no introduction will serve."

Nation 178:311 Ap 10 '54 360w

"Mr. Gibson, who has had the help of Fournier's sister, Madame Rivière, convinces us that he has missed no significant clue in Fournier's life. His study is far fuller than Henri Gillet's of five years ago, though far less elegantly written." J. A. Smith

New Statesman & Nation 45:780 Je 27 '53 2600w

"Mr. Gibson has gathered more detailed and often unpublished or novel information than any devotee of Alain-Fournier has yet done. And he has steered clear of the pitfalls of such a biographical undertaking: magnifying his hero into a creator of the first order... He indulges in an excessive wealth of details at times. But his biography succeeds, on the whole, in being that of a soul, as it should be, and in recapturing the sense of wonder with which young Alain-Fournier viewed his native province and the world around him." Henri Peyre

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 11 '54 950w

"Mr. Gibson's biography can be recommended only to those who read French easily (great swatches of quoted material are untranslated), are not put off by a style of breathless gush, or have a clinical interest in adolescent mother fixation. All others might better read, or reread, the sad and beautiful story of Augustin Meaulnes."

New Yorker 30:160 Ap 24 '54 120w

"Robert Gibson has written a sympathetic, gently informative, uninflated biography of Alain-Fournier that gradually works into an examination of the creative processes which produced the unforgettable novel... Alain-Fournier deserves this warmhearted book. Mr. Gibson's tolerant, relaxed pace of investigation prevents him from asking questions which search beyond his subject." Roger Shattuck

+ Sat R 37:28 Ap 3 '54 650w

"Mr. Gibson's biography succeeds admirably in conveying the singular charm of the man and the writer. He has been given access to a great deal of unpublished material, and has had the inestimable advantage of the assistance of Alain-Fournier's sister, Mme Isabelle Rivière. The chapters describing the autobiographical elements in the novel and its construction are particularly illuminating, and the final estimate reveals him as a sensitive and discerning critic." Martin Turnell

+ Spec p552 My 1 '53 750w

"It is difficult to imagine that anyone will be able to better Mr. Gibson's biography, at least for a very long time. In their cumulative effect, his affection, sympathy and tact in dealing with his subject form a finer tribute than any explicit praise. He has gone perhaps as far as it is possible to go in entering into Alain-Fournier's vision of the world: he has tramped those same white roads through the bare, isolated yet mysterious Sologne countryside, visited the same village haunts and the same Paris streets. He is at his best in evoking Alain-Fournier's halcyon childhood."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p398 Je 19 '53 1000w

"Mr. Gibson's approach to his subject is inspired, honest, even scrupulous. He makes extensive use of Alain-Fournier's correspondence with his family and with his friend Jacques Rivière, as well as of hitherto unpublished material." V. H. Brombert

+ Yale R n s 43:638 summer '54 360w

GIBSON, WALTER BROWN. Houdini on magic. See Houdini, H.

GIBSON, WILLIAM. The cobweb. 369p $3.95 Knopf

54-5977

The scene of this novel is a mental hospital in a midwestern city. The plot is concerned with the quarrels of four women over who shall decide on the material for draperies in the Community room. The story is centered in the character of Dr Stewart McIver, assistant director, husband of one of the four women, in love with another.

Booklist 50:297 Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by John Cumming
Canadian Forum 34:167 O '54 280w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 7 '54 650w

"Mr. William Gibson's first novel is a curious compound of the commercial, the cosy and the cinematic concocted, one concludes, for Dore and Darryl and the pukka peasants of Pelham, Paoli and Peoria. This reviewer dislikes to indulge in extracurricular insights, but it would appear that Mr. Gibson, a quondam contributor to the Partisan Review, has curbed his passion for poetry to concentrate on cash." R. H. Boyle

— Commonweal 60:100 Ap 30 '54 450w

Kirkus 22:73 F 1 '54 230w

"Recommended, but read before purchasing." Karl Brown

Library J 79:626 Ap 1 '54 110w

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar
Nation 178:367 Ap 24 '54 50w

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson
New Statesman & Nation 48:333 S 18 '54 210w

"The cobweb' is a fresh, informed and honest book—jolting, too, like a flash of lightning down the chimney." John Dollard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 7 '54 700w

"Rebellion against unintelligent anti-psychologism has made Mr. Gibson overpartial to his psychologist. His book, therefore, seems to endorse a mentality that is far too cocksure, jargonish and doctrinaire. He has shown courage in defending an unpopular type; he has not shown good judgment, or novelistic breadth, in the manner of his defense." Gerald Sykes

+ — N Y Times p4 Mr 7 '54 450w

"Mr. Gibson, an earnest, humorless, and intensely conscientious writer, strives valiantly but vainly for almost four hundred pages to establish a distinction between his characters and the farcical pettiness of their circumstances, but he has no doubt realized by now that he should have either left the windows bare or made the old curtains do at least until his novel was completed."

New Yorker 30:130 Mr 13 '54 200w

"Mr. Gibson, who has been writing short stories, poetry and plays for some time shows in this, his first novel, he is already a novelist of stature, a rare find. 'The Cobweb' is a mature book, written for the eye, ear, heart and mind. Don't begin reading until there's time to finish. It isn't easy to put down." Lewis Vogler

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 11 '54 600w

"Mr. Gibson manipulates his complicated story with admirable skill and a keen, if somewhat hectic, sense of drama. He is a master of dialogue. His characters, remarkably alive, are viewed with clarity and charity; he sees them moving through life with ironical unawareness of the disaffections they often inspire in those nearest them, and at the same time he stirs the reader to pity for them all... The author's power (note the reality of his love story) is such that you will overlook his tendency to go into excessive detail whenever one of his characters enters wardrobe or bathroom." Charles Lee

+ Sat R 37:19 Mr 13 '54 550w

"For a first novel, The Cobweb is a remarkable piece of work." John Metcalf

+ Spec p420 O 1 '54 300w

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 14 '54 200w

Time 63:122 Mr 22 '54 500w

"Mr. Gibson allows his characters to describe themselves by the method of recording their thoughts as they occur, without editing and usually without interruption of the narrative. It is, therefore, sometimes difficult to separate the characters' and the author's opinions. There are also in this very promising first novel what seem to be faults of characterization."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p701 N 5 '54 200w

"In a sense The Cobweb is a pot-boiler, with tasty ingredients carefully measured—masterly dialogue, a cleverly simple plot, 'genuine' characters straight out of suburbia, and neurotic sex for what it is worth and not a cent more. Yet The Cobweb cannot be dismissed as a pot-boiler, because it carries the stamp of art, a style so seldom marred that the flaws have the quality of birthmarks."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:194 Je '54 290w

GIEDION, SIGFRIED. Walter Gropius; work and teamwork. 249p il $10 Reinhold

B or 92 Gropius, Walter 54-14245

A study of Gropius' development as designer, teacher, and leader. The author has collected more than 300 photographs and plans of buildings for which Gropius has been responsible in whole or in part. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Alfred Werner

New Repub 131:21 D 13 '54 460w

Reviewed by Peter Blake

N Y Times p5 N 28 '54 500w

GIESE, VINCENT JOSEPH. Apostolic itch. 126p $2.75 Fides (U S) Publishers, 21 W Superior, Chicago 10

267.182 Catholic action 54-8124

"With the imprimatur of Cardinal Stritch, Giese discusses the ways in which the Catholic layman can be more truly Christian in his relationship to society, and how he can help to make society more nearly Christian. The emphasis is on sacrificial service." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"This book is more of a personal document than a manual or a guide. It should be read." S. W. Cassidy

+ Cath World 179:158 My '54 320w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 4 '54 40w

GILBERT, ALFRED CARLTON. Man who lives in paradise; autobiography of [the author] with Marshall McClintock. 374p il $3.75 Rinehart

B or 92 54-9126

A biography of the man who is president of the A. C. Gilbert company, dealers in Erector and Meccano sets, electric trains, etc. In his vaulting), and while in college he became inter-youth he was a world champion athlete (pole ested in magic and started a successful business in magicians' apparatus.

Booklist 51:129 N 15 '54

"A pioneer in educational playthings, a spirited businessman and sports follower puts a best foot forward for his energetic and active life. Something for those grown-up boys."

+ Kirkus 22:427 Jl 1 '54 210w

"Pleasant, relaxing reading, for public libraries, browsing rooms, and the library of the Racquet & Tennis Club." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1497 S 1 '54 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 O 3 '54 80w

"Quite a man, A. C. Gilbert! But when 'A. C.' writes his autobiography (with Marshall McClintock, whose role is not clearly evaluated), he seems hardly human. . . . An excellent book might be written about A. C. Gilbert, but it would have to violate the rules. In this book he looks like a plaster saint, as devoid of real character as a grade-school version of George Washington. When the Gilbert great-grandchildren take the book down from the shelf and read about their progenitor, they will get no impression of the man as a man. Even the dogs that he breeds—one of them, inevitably, an international champion—sound too good to be dogs." J. N. Leonard

N Y Times p36 S 12 '54 450w

Reviewed by Allen Churchill

Sat R 37:23 N 27 '54 140w

Springf'd Republican p9C S 26 '54 150w

GILBERT, ANTHONY, pseud. See Malleeson, L.

GILBERT, DOROTHY B., ed. See Who's who in American art

GILBRETH, FRANK BUNKER, 1868-1924, and GILBRETH, LILLIAN EVELYN (MOLLER). Writings; ed. by William R. Spriegel and Clark E. Myers. 513p $7.35 Irwin

658.01 Efficiency, Industrial

"Here are republished the major writings, long out of print, of those two incomparable pioneers in scientific management, Frank B. and Lillian M. Gilbreth." Library J

"Much misinformation is extant concerning the service scientific management renders to our industrial civilization. This volume is more than justified in the opportunity it affords to correct that situation. The editors have been painstaking in selecting those works which include evidences of permanent principles and practices of scientific management, and to exclude those which were of technological significance only at the time of the early writings." R. L. Vermelker

+ Library J 79:630 Ap 1 '54 280w

"As one commentator has pointed out, the Gilbreths wrote not only from the brain but from the heart. In the present volume, Mr. Spriegel and Mr. Myers as editors have clearly emphasized this fact. Their careful, diligent work has produced a volume of practical and educational value to management, workers and students." Harold Engstrom

+ Management R 43:205 Mr '54 400w

GILBRETH, FRANK BUNKER, 1911- . Inn-side Nantucket; il. by Donald McKay. 231p $3 Crowell

818 Nantucket, Massachusetts. Hotels, taverns, etc. 54-9159

Semi-fictional account of the experiences of two members of the Gilbreth family running an inn on Nantucket island. The author in a foreword explains that, "Since Barbara was the focal point around whom the inn revolved, while Bob went to school teaching on Nantucket, it seemed logical to present the story in the first person, as related by Barbara."

Booklist 50:442; 447 Jl 15 '54

Bookmark 13:234 Jl '54 20w

"Innside Nantucket" will inevitably be a popular 'souvenir' for island visitors, since it is filled with Nantucket tales, traditions, and descriptions. It also laughingly records the inn-side both of visiting and managing a small hotel and so it will probably be chuckled over by rocking chair brigades all over the country." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 8 '54 500w

Reviewed by N. E. Taylor

Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 29 '54 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

Kirkus 22:356 Je 1 '54 130w

GILBRETH, F. B.—Continued

"It is a friendly, happy book brimming over with chuckles. Highly recommended for all public libraries." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1396 Ag '54 100w

"After the first page or two, the reader forgets that Mrs. (Robert) Gilbreth isn't actually doing the telling, and doesn't so much as wince when her brother-in-law Frank turns up by name from time to time. Like the author's other books, this one is cheerful and often funny, and he writes from the feminine viewpoint so effortlessly that the device is unnoticeable." Joanna Spencer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 1 '54 450w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p13 Ag 22 '54 400w

"It's the mixture-as-before, ■■■ Gilbreth's readers will realize. It is also just about the thinnest of the Gilbreth yarns so far, but amusing nevertheless." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 4 '54 550w

Wis Lib Bul 50:206 O '54

GILBRETH, MRS LILLIAN EVELYN (MOLLER), and others. Management in the home; happier living through saving time and energy; il. with drawings by Ingrid Fetz and with charts. 241p $3.95 Dodd

647 Home economics. Motion study 54-10563

Suggestions on making the best use of money, time, and energy in the home. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:146 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:31 N '54 20w

Cleveland Open Shelf p32 S '54

"Should a maid be dropped from Mars . . . this would be the perfect book to hand her, but this reviewer can scarcely believe that any modern woman, or even one brought up in the most modest and primitive of homes, would need quite such minute descriptions and detailed instructions on how to manage a home. It is however essential for students of domestic science and home economics courses and as such is recommended." M. H. Zipprich

Library J 79:1508 S 1 '54 100w

GILDERSLEEVE, VIRGINIA CROCHERON. Many a good crusade; memoirs. 434p il $5 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Educators—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-12954

"The memoirs of Virginia Crocheron Gildersleeve, distinguished dean of Barnard College for thirty-six crucial years, are full of facts and memories of events and people and movements and concerns. The accounts she gives, in 'Many a Good Crusade,' of the development of her beloved college, of Columbia University, of the International Federation of University Women, of education in the Middle East and in Japan, of the momentous meetings in San Francisco when the United Nations was established—these are of historic importance." (Sat R) Index.

Booklist 51:174 D 15 '54

+ Kirkus 22:566 Ag 15 '54 230w

"All libraries will want to purchase this view of our own time since it appeals to scholar, educator, and the general reader. Incidentally, an informal history of education runs through this excellent memoir." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1822 O 1 '54 150w

"The book's style is that of intimate confidential conversation, admirable in structure, to be sure, and expertly written, but with uninhibited candor and familiarity about every conceivable kind of personal and public recollection. In view of Miss Gildersleeve's varied career, both at Barnard College and also in important international services, the result is both immediately interesting and permanently valuable." H. E. Fosdick

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 7 '54 750w

"An extraordinarily interesting book. . . Like so many of her generation, she journeyed out of a Victorian childhood to a most responsible position in the great world, and this in itself is always a fascinating story. It is a measure of the value of Virginia Gildersleeve's book that its interest grows as the journey goes on. . . For all its frankness of observation and reporting, however, this is not an intimate book. It is the record of a full and active public life rather than of a growing and changing personality. This is not criticism but merely description." Elizabeth Janeway

+ N Y Times p26 O 24 '54 850w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 28 '54 150w

"Memoirs chronicle the chronicler as well as historic events. It is the reporter rather than the report which makes this book particularly interesting to people who have watched Miss Gildersleeve in action. Her memories of her childhood, her delight in her homes in England, in Arizona, in New York City, her enjoyment of the out-of-doors, her satisfaction in literary excursions, these things are revealing of private concerns which this avowedly shy and truly distinguished woman did not disclose to casual acquaintances." M. M. Horton

+ Sat R 37:21 O 30 '54 900w

GILES, MRS JANICE (HOLT). Plum thicket. 284p $3 Houghton

54-9122

"Katherine Rogers, now middle-aged, returns to Stanwick, the small Southern town near which her grandfather's farm was located. The Plum Thicket is her memory of herself—eight years old—spending a happy summer at the farm. Time—probably about the 1890's." Library J

Booklist 51:108 N 1 '54

"A leisurely, likable story which is fully fashioned for a woman's audience."

+ Kirkus 22:404 J1 1 '54 160w

"Story so smoothly and quietly told that the tragedy which concludes it provides the climax as planned. Will appeal to readers of the author's earlier books. Recommended for all fiction collections." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 79:1511 S 1 '54 110w

"In her picture of that lost summer, in an America which now seems, fifty years later, unbelievably naive, Mrs. Giles is not offering us an escape from the demands of the present. What she has to say is that each generation is faced with the same choices that wrung its predecessors; that, like Katie, we are often unaware of how fast time is running out until it is too late." Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 S 19 '54 500w

"As skillfully woven as the intertwined branches of the wild plum thicket is this tenderly told and expertly contrived remembrance of a child's idyllic summer, which ended in the shadow of an old, old guilt, borne too long and too quietly to sustain." Charlotte Capers

+ N Y Times p24 S 19 '54 360w

"Skillfully written, this novel will win new readers for Mrs. Giles, whose earlier books promise just such a treat as this. Not for children or the squeamish."

+ — Wis Lib Bul 50:210 O '54

GILLAM, ALBERT EDWARD, and STERN, EDWARD SEVERIN. Introduction to electronic absorption spectroscopy in organic chemistry; with a foreword by E. R. H. Jones. 283p il $8 St Martins

545.4 Absorption spectra [54-14399]

"Essentially, this book is an introduction to the theory and techniques of absorption spectrophotometry in the visible and ultraviolet regions between 2,000 and 10,000 Å., as applied to the quantitative analysis of organic compounds. Basic aspects, including basic instrumental techniques, are covered in the early chapters. The middle chapters are devoted chiefly to absorption data for specific classes of compounds. Finally, the use of spectrophotometric techniques in identification, quantitative analysis and elucidation of molecular structure are discussed." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 32:1267 Mr 29 '54 10w

"This text is primarily designed for the worker in the field of absorption spectroscopy. However, it will also be very valuable to the analyst and to the organic chemist in teaching him the value of ancillary information he may wish to use." F. C. Nachod

+ Chem Eng 61:358 N '54 220w

"Although an introduction rather than a comprehensive treatise, it contains considerably more information and reference data than might be expected in an introductory book. It will be of interest to students pursuing graduate courses in organic chemistry and to chemistry graduates who are concerned with organic analyses and research."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 39:35 My '54

GILLESPIE, JANE, pseud. See Shaw, J.

GILLIGAN, EDMUND. Sea dog; il. by Clifford Schule. 177p $2.50 Knopf

54-8010

Story of fishing in the Grand Banks region. The hero is Peter, who longed to go to sea as his father had done. In a terrifying storm Peter and his dog were tossed upon Sable Island, captured a wild horse, and arrived home determined to go to sea again. For ages ten to fourteen.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:96 D '54 30w

"A gripping tale of courage."

+ Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 20w

"Simple as the story is, the overtones of sea and the men who take to it make it a special book."

+ Kirkus 22:536 Ag 15 '54 160w

"The style of the opening pages here, describing the Gloucester wharfs on a windy night, and the courage of a lost collie pup jumping onto the heaving deck of the schooner 'Mara,' is so good that it braces one like a sea wind. Its simple, short sentences are dramatic and adult, full of feeling and humor." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p8 N 14 '54 290w

"Skillful telling keeps these all-too-familiar ingredients from being run-of-the-mill. The shifts in viewpoint from dog to man are handled expertly, and the whole is told with Irish lilt and gentle humor." Iris Vinton

+ N Y Times p36 O 31 '54 160w

GILLIN, JOHN PHILIP, ed. For a science of social man; convergences in anthropology, psychology, and sociology, by Howard Becker [and others]. 296p $4 Macmillan (N Y)

301 Sociology 54-8773

"The selection of the authors who contributed to this symposium would of itself have assured a high level performance. The editor has taken two men from each of three disciplines and assigned to each the task of appraising the impact of one of the other two fields upon his own. . . Each tackles the problem in his own characteristic way which the reader will be quick to identify. As sociologists, Talcott Parsons was assigned social psychology and Howard Becker anthropology; as psychologists, Theodore Newcomb assayed sociology and Brewster Smith anthropology; and as anthropologists, Peter Murdock deals with sociology and Irving Hallowell with social psychology." Am Soc R

"This is a small volume of less than three hundred pages packed with historical perspectives and current conceptual evaluation. John Gillin has provided the framework and ed" torial direction for a book of such immediate relevance that its value to students of all levels in the social sciences is obvious." W. J. Warner

+ Am Soc 19:626 O '54 950w

"No brief review can do justice to the richness of the papers. Unlike many compilations that result from solicited contributions, this volume has coherence and consistently high quality. . . As might be anticipated, the authors are on the whole singularly without crochets. They build constructive bridges between disciplines and deal rigorously with meaningful problems. This book is not easy reading, but it is a must for anyone concerned with the theoretical frontiers of that science of man whose development in the last decade has been so rapid and fruitful." Cora Du Bois

+ Ann Am Acad 294:197 Jl '54 500w

GILLMOR, DANIEL S. Fear, the accuser. 308p $3 Abelard-Schuman

328.34 U.S. Congress—Committees. Communism—U.S. 54-10227

"A report on Congressional investigations of subversion in the U.S., from John Brown to recent charges against Ralph Zwicker, concentrating largely on those of the last five years." (Library J) Index.

"Rather sketchy on the earlier period, but quite adequate on the un-American techniques of Messrs. Velde, Jenner and McCarthy and on several of their chief victims, notably Bishop Oxnham and the late Harry Dexter White." Louis Barron

Library J 79:1828 O 1 '54 200w

"Dan Gillmor has done a prodigious job of research and analysis. . . The book is chock-full-o'-nuts. I refer not only to the succulent bits of information but also to the individual fear-mongers." A. G. Hays

+ Nation 179:335 O 16 '54 650w

"To make his point that today fear is the accuser, the author relies heavily on extracts from some of the more flamboyant of recent inquiries, stressing particularly those of Messrs. Velde, Jenner and McCarthy. These selections—and also some fascinating vignettes from American history of an earlier day—make interesting if uncomfortable reading." John Oakes

N Y Times p28 N 28 '54 700w

New Yorker 30:193 N 6 '54 70w

GILMAN, LASELLE. Dragon's mouth. 310p $3.50 Sloane

54-7085

An American doctor held captive by the Communists in China is the hero. He is made the personal physician of Colonel Li, falls in love with a Chinese professor's daughter, and becomes involved with the underground. When he is captured and put in prison he is rescued by Colonel Li, and escapes to Hongkong and his love.

Booklist 50:450 Jl 15 '54

Reviewed by A. L. Bader

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 18 '54 260w

Kirkus 22:242 Ap 1 '54 210w

"All the pieces fall together a bit too patly, but even so, this is exciting and worthwhile. Recommended for medium and large public library collections." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:982 My 15 '54 90w

"The background of this well-written and exceedingly topical novel is Red China today. It is effective on several levels: an exciting adventure tale, a fascinating character study of people we need badly to understand in these troubled times, plus a tender and moving love story of two people in the constant shadow of death." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 4 '54 450w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 15 '54 330w

GILMORE, EDDY. Me and my Russian wife. 313p $3.75 Doubleday

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Russia—Social life and customs 54-7312

The former assistant director of the Associated Press bureau in Moscow describes his years, 1941 to 1953, in the Soviet Union. During that time he met and married the Russian ballerina, Tamara. In part his reminiscences cover his attempts to get his wife and two daughters out of Russia.

Booklist 50:389; 418; Je 15 '54; J1 1 '54

Bookmark 13:234 J1 '54 40w

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 25 '54 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 Ag '54

"An animated account, perhaps of more personal intelligence than global significance, low in protocol and high in spirits."

+ Kirkus 22:303 My 1 '54 150w

"A fairly short book, it offers some footnotes to history, some insights into the Russian mind and glimpses of American personalities engaged in the delicate task of establishing Russo-American relations. Recommended." R. B. Robertson

+ Library J 79:1307 J1 '54 90w

"Somehow it is hard to imagine a book about Russia, during and after the war, which is gay, chatty and full of humor. Eddy Gilmore has managed it, despite the fact that he writes against a backdrop of grave personal anxiety as to whether he could ever get his Russian wife and their daughters out to freedom from the land of Stalin. But the author, who was Associated Press correspondent in Moscow, is a congenitally cheerful soul." Marcus Duffield

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 J1 4 '54 460w

"Mr. Gilmore is a good reporter and a shrewd and folksy individual. He is at times quite frank about his personal life, and occasionally about that of others. Sometimes the main theme seems to be bottle and bed. Most of the time, 'Me and My Russian Wife' is discreet and cautious. Those who are looking for either interpretation or surprising revelation will be disappointed." F. C. Barghoorn

+ N Y Times p3 J1 4 '54 700w

"The emphasis in this book is on the lighter side of life in Moscow during and after the war; the overemphasis is on the author's romance with his Russian wife, and that gets pretty embarrassing at times."

New Yorker 30:74 J1 10 '54 160w

"To put it positively, the book is just what Gilmore says it is—reportage. It is filled with delightful, entertaining and illuminating sidelights on the life and love of an American reporter in the capital of the Soviet Union." Jack Howard

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 27 '54 550w

Reviewed by T. E. Cooney

Sat R 37:36 Ag 28 '54 250w

GILMORE, HARLAN WELCH. Transportation and the growth of cities. 170p il $3 Free press 385 Transportation. Cities and towns 54-7386

"In this sociological study the author relates social systems to the economic functions of the community concerned, and the type of economy to the transportation facilities. As a basis for this theory of community growth he outlines the three stages of transportation through which the civilized world has passed, and shows how the rate and type of urban development can be traced to improvements in means of transportation, especially since the use of steam power." Booklist

"Despite the failure of the book to serve the need of professional sociologists, it should appeal to undergraduate students and possibly to adult laymen. Its interesting factual content is simply and lucidly presented. And it at least calls attention to a hypothesis that has wide ramifications." A. H. Hawley

+ Am Soc R 19:622 O '54 320w

"As so much time is covered in so little space, it is probable that the main lines of thought are familiar to students of this field. Still, the presentation is clear and, perhaps, all the more forceful because of the lack of detail. . . The volume should be particularly useful as collateral reading for young students of city government who are sometimes slow to grasp the basic relationships which are treated here." L. S. Greene

+ Ann Am Acad 295:170 S '54 140w

Booklist 50:232 F 15 '54

"The book is written in a readable, colloquial style. There are no statistical or other empirical materials, since it was not the author's intention to test hypotheses. It is difficult, however, for the reviewer to find here many specific hypotheses that could be tested in their present form. Perhaps the historical approach is responsible. This same approach, however, is the source of the book's merit. We are given factual descriptions of past transportation developments in their broad historical context. And it is the lack of such full historical and cultural perspective that is the most frequent criticism made of the work of human ecologists and urban sociologists." L. F. Schnore

+ Social Forces 33:94 O '54 380w

GIONO, JEAN. Horseman on the roof; tr. from the French by Jonathan Griffin [Eng title: Hussar on the roof]. 426p $4 Knopf

52-12177

"Along the roads and through the towns of Provence moves Angelo Pardi, fugitive Colonel of Hussars from Italy, against the background of a devastating cholera epidemic in 1838. Death and ugliness lie in wait everywhere, but he and his attractive female companion, Pauline, outwit disease and human vice on their journey through darkness. The novel contains between the lines much comment on the moral and physical demands a man must face in times of disaster." Library J

Booklist 50:239 F 15 '54

"Of course a plague, realistically treated, does not make for pleasant or escapist reading—and a romantic treatment of the subject would really be beyond contempt—but this novel succeeds remarkably in being, as the jacket has it, 'often horrifying but never horrible.' And the author shows the intuition and ingenuity of the genuine artist in inventing situations which vary from one another." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 179:72 Ap '54 280w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 10 '54 260w

Kirkus 21:716 N 1 '53 210w

"It is not light entertainment but a thoughtful, often tense novel. Recommended for large public and college libraries." J. R. Willingham

+ Library J 79:59 Ja 1 '54 90w

"The translation by Jonathan Griffin, simple yet turgid, conveys well the quality of this plague-saga and the violent landscape-painting." H. I. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 25 '53 140w

"Giono's narrative form is impure and frequently clumsy; he makes parenthetical comments on his hero and in first presenting the epidemic he uses a tedious person-to-person montage in the manner of Sartre; but the content and the spirit of the thing are very lively. The translation by Jonathan Griffin has the essential virtue for this case, of being rapid and clear, of not reading like a translation. There are some inaccuracies and an outright boner or so, but these are nothing compared to his success in letting the really splendid adventure-story come through." Donald Sutherland

+ New Repub 130:18 F 1 '54 500w

Reviewed by Giles Romilly

New Statesman Nation 46:396 O 3 '53 300w

Reviewed by Gouverneur Paulding
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 10
'54 700w

"Certainly one of this writer's greatest books, both from the force of its moral and emotional impact and the power of its portrayal of the implacable forces of nature. 'The Horseman' recalls the best in 'Harvest' and 'The Song of the World.' But it is also the book of a man with a message, and here the reader remains a little confused as to Giono's prescription." Frances Keene

+ — N Y Times p4 Ja 10 '54 600w

"Jean Giono's historical novel, 'The Horseman on the Roof' is a remarkably beautiful piece of writing about a remarkably ugly subject." Anthony West

New Yorker 29:93 Ja 16 '54 1000w

"'The Horseman on the Roof' has been compared not unjustly to Stendahl. What no comparison can adequately convey, what only reading it will reveal, is the sensuous, moving quality of Giono's beautiful prose." Lewis Vogler

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 F 14 '54 600w

"The plasticity of Giono, who once did the 'Odyssey' over again and now gives a sequel to Stendhal's novels, is amazing and not a little disturbing. But the scruples of the surly reader are soon silenced by the zest in life, the joyful élan, the foolhardiness pleasantly tinged with irony of one of the most cheerful novels written by a Frenchman in the last ten or fifteen years." Henri Peyre

+ Sat R 37:17 Ja 23 '54 900w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 50w

Time 63:78 F 1 '54 800w

"Mr. Jonathan Griffin has made a dexterous translation—no easy task, for M. Giono's writing has a highly individual flavour—but it would have been perhaps wise, and certainly kind, to warn the reader by way of introduction that the adventures of Angelo are more appreciable and approachable if they are considered as taking place in the world of M. Giono's imagination rather than in the plague-stricken Provence of 1838 which purports to be their setting."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p641 O 9 '53 200w

GIPSON, LAWRENCE HENRY. British empire before the American revolution; v. 8, Great war for the Empire; the culmination, 1760-1763. 313p maps $7.50 Knopf 942.07 Great Britain—History—18th century.

Great Britain—Colonies, dominions, etc.
U.S.—History—Colonial period. France—Colonies (36-20870)

"Professor Gipson, research professor of history at Lehigh University, has now published eight volumes of his study of the British Empire before the American Revolution. This is the third to deal with the French and Indian War. Subtitled 'The Culmination,' it examines the period between the accession of George III, in 1760, and the Treaty of Paris, in 1763." (New Yorker) Index. For volume seven see Book Review Digest 1949.

Reviewed by Walter Wallbank
Ann Am Acad 296:203 N '54 400w

Reviewed by E. S. Morgan
New Eng Q 27:280 Je '54 650w

"Mr. Gipson continues to challenge conventional verdicts and to reassess policies and personalities. . . Furthermore, a number of characters consistently belittled by 'Whig' historians are partly rehabilitated. . . Mr. Gipson also reappraises some fundamental issues of grand strategy. . . [This is a] profound and richly documented analysis." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 17 '54 850w

"Mr. Gipson is too sound and cautious a historian to indulge in retrospective prophecies. He sticks to his last. This volume has the virtues we have come to associate with his work—careful, unhurried piling up of detail sifted through careful research, thorough exploration of byways neglected by more general historians, the whole put together in a narrative rather deliberately undramatic, but—for the real lover of history—never dull." Crane Brinton

+ N Y Times p6 Je 20 '54 850w

"A professional and painstaking, but by no means tortuous, work."

+ New Yorker 30:136 Ap 17 '54 120w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:162 Je '54 250w

GIPSON, LAWRENCE HENRY. Coming of the Revolution, 1763-1775. (New American nation ser) 287p il maps $5 Harper

973.311 U.S.—History—Revolution—Causes 54-8952

"The period between 1763 and the beginning of the Revolutionary War was a time of 'political maneuver.' In this volume of Harper's 'New American Nation Series,' Professor Lawrence Gipson traces the moves and countermoves of British and Americans. The break between the British Government and the American patriots, according to the author, did not result from the actions of wicked men on either side. Rather, the rupture in the Empire came about because Americans had developed a mature community of their own which came into conflict with the outmoded system of imperial relationships." (Library J) Dr Gipson is the author of a multi-volumed study: The British Empire Before the American Revolution.

"Prof. Gipson's work is much more than a mere recital of the familiar story of the important events prior to the Revolution; he thoroughly reexamines the intricate British-colonial relationships. There are few materials that the author, who has spent a lifetime combing British and American archives, has not consulted. Altho he is particularly good in analyzing the effect of the politics and policies of the mother country upon the colonies, his story of the colonial opposition is fair and convincing. The result is a judicious, balanced account of those momentous events which finally led to the Declaration of Independence." Clarence Ver Steeg

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 29 '54 170w

Current Hist 27:387 D '54 160w

"The student of American history will find this volume useful for its analysis and new sources, but the general reader may find the thoughtful, objective approach somewhat formidable. Recommended for special collections, university and large public libraries." James Heslin

+ Library J 79:1396 Ag '54 200w

"A Confederate veteran once said that there was need of a history of the War between the States, absolutely fair and impartial, but written from the Southern point of view. What Professor Gipson has given us is largely a fair and impartial history of the events preceding the Revolution written from the imperial point of view. But since there has been so much written from the American point of view this adds to rather than detracts from the value of this scholarly, well-written, and interesting book."

T. J. Wertenbaker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 28 '54 900w

"The volume is provocative throughout." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ N Y Times p42 N 14 '54 750w

GIRAUDOUX, JEAN. Ondine; adapted by Maurice Valency. 184p il $2.75 Random house

842 54-8609

This adaptation of a French play opened in New York city on February 18, 1954. It is based on the medieval legend of the mortal knight who fell in love with a water sprite.

Booklist 50:376 Je 1 '54

"Highly recommended for drama and modern literature collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1322 Jl '54 40w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 23 '54 60w

GITTINGS, ROBERT. John Keats; the living year, 21 September 1818 to 21 September 1819. 247p il $3.50 Harvard univ. press

821 Keats, John A54-8851

"Nearly all the greatest poetry of Keats was written in the 365 days of a single year. In this book, a prologue and an epilogue tell what happened before and after; the main chapters re-tell the story of that year. Each chapter has to do with the writing of 100 or more lines of Keats's poetry. For the general reader, exact references to these lines are given at the end of each chapter. Those who have already made Keats their study may turn, for confirmation of various points in the story, to the notes and appendices numbered in the text and printed at the end of the book." Foreword

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 25 '54
400w

Reviewed by P. J. Henniker-Heaton
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 22
'54 320w

Reviewed by David Daiches
Manchester Guardian p4 F 23 '54 240w

"Mr. Gittings's work, though a little too anxiously dogmatic about speculative minor points, has the good qualities of the modern biography, searching and exact, happily free both from primness and from emotional parti-pris. His brilliant detective work on the making of the poems—the Eve of St. Agnes for instance—is a sample of the book at its best." Naomi Lewis

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:260 F 27
'54 1450w

"This is a book for Keats lovers and for all readers interested in the process of poetic creation. It is written with the intimate understanding of one poet for another, and it is comparable in terms of its success to the late Professor Lowes' masterly study of Coleridge. Finally it identifies and makes vivid certain persons and places connected with Keats that up to this time have remained shadowy." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune ■■ R p4 Mr 7
'54 700w

"Hardly any book about the little giant, five feet tall, with the athlete's shoulders, the prophetic head, and the wonderful double gift of seeing and saying, could fail to be of absorbing interest. It isn't enough to say of this study of John Keats by another British poet, Robert Gittings, that it is no exception to the rule. For it makes a genuine contribution to our understanding of the inevitable alliance between direct tangible experience and all good art." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 18 '54 500w

"The story, told with charm and clarity, follows Keats' letters, his reading, his visits in and out of London, and his light and serious poetry with scrupulous care."

+ New Yorker 30:92 Je 26 '54 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 27 '54
180w

"Into its small compass Robert Gittings has packed much old material plus much that is fresh and stimulating—far more than, offhand, one would have thought possible. Himself a poet, and hence exceptionally well equipped to write about the work of another poet, he is also a first-rate scholar. At times, indeed, his style has some of the defects—like dullness—popularly supposed always to accompany scholarship; and such expressions as 'at about the time,' 'he stayed the night in Town,' 'the next day was Keats's longest lie in bed' ring leadenly on the ear." H. E. Rollins

+ — Sat R 37:23 Mr 20 '54 650w

"Mr. Gittings [does not make] extravagant claims to 'understanding' the poetic process; he knows, indeed he asserts, that it cannot be wholly 'explained'—after all, he is himself a poet: but he allows us to glimpse, without any highfalutin tarradiddle, the sort of tendril which the poet sends out into the inapprehensible. And he shows us the whole Keats—the man who could write parodies, who could like and be bored by Haydon, who could dream and awake. His is an admirable book, unobtrusively but vividly and cleanly written, with an admirable apparatus of references: it is to be put on the shelf beside Mr. H. W. Garrod's edition, the Letters, and the studies by Miss Dorothy Hewlett and Mr. Middleton Murry." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Spec p131 Ja 29 '54 900w

Time 63:102 Mr 8 '54 400w

"Even were his book less of a success—in the French sense of une réussite—Mr. Gittings's undertaking would need neither apology nor justification. . . . The need for Mr. Gittings's book exists, and has existed ever since inaccuracies about Keats's life and poetry were first propagated by his well-intentioned earliest editor, Richard Monckton Milnes, in 1848."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p232 Ap 9 '54
2300w

GLADWIN, PETER. Desert in the heart. 249p
$3 Rinehart

54-5648

A first novel, the scene of which is a dreary coal-mining town in Australia. There is a strike in the mines, and among the chief characters is Morgan, leader of the strikers. Mr Lambert, a newspaperman who is almost always drunk is another character; and Mrs Warrenner who comes from Sydney and opens a hat shop, and stays to fall in love with Lambert is another.

Kirkus 22:14 Ja 1 '54 120w

"This is the author's first novel and it is an excellent one. While he makes no bones about where his sympathies lie, he makes even his villains understandable, and he shows a fine wit in depicting the attitudes and actions of his characters."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 13
'54 230w

"The book is well written and extremely readable, the transitions from character to character and development to development are as free from jogs as the style. If there is one thing to be mentioned here, however, it is that the novel moves perhaps too much like a short story written according to the strictest dictum of Edgar Allan Poe. The result is that it seems occasionally to verge on melodrama." F. J. Feied

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 4 '54
450w

"In this first novel, an Australian newspaperman living and working in London hammers home an old truth: people can't help being what they are and suffering the consequences. What keeps Author Peter Gladwin from seeming merely to ring changes on an old cliché is a combination of life and modesty in his writing. The Desert in the Heart does not try for much; it achieves sympathy for its people through the simple device of dealing with them sympathetically."

Time 63:108 Mr 15 '54 320w

GLASGOW, ELLEN ANDERSON GHOLSON. Woman within. 307p il $5 Harcourt

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-11329

"Nine years after Ellen Glasgow's death, the curtain of reserve behind which one of the most distinguished American writers of our time concealed her private tragedy has at last been lifted to reveal, with the publication of her autobiography, the price life exacted of her as a person and an artist and the fortitude with which she paid it." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"In spite of its self-pity and accumulation of anguish, The Woman Within manages to be an engrossing and a moving book." C. J. Rolo
+ — Atlantic 195:82 Ja '55 850w

Booklist 51:74; 106 O 15 '54; N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:57 D '54 40w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 14 '54
350w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer
Christian Science Monitor p11 D 16 '54
850w

"The unzipping of a personality has always been the dearest delight of any novelist, and Ellen Glasgow writes of her inner self, and describes her psychological strip-tease, with a true novelist's cunning appreciation. She is as unobjective as possible, gloating lovingly over every whim, every tantrum, every moan and whimper of the egocentric character she delineates. . . But she creates herself with flawless touch." Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 61:194 N 19 '54 1500w

Kirkus 22:618 S 1 '54 150w

"Woman Within is a contribution to the literary history of the U.S. and may be generally purchased for the specialist and the general reader." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1886 O 15 '54 170w

"In her present autobiography, written in her sixties and published ten years after her death, Ellen Glasgow continues to be as mature and as vital as ever. Both the facts of her life and of what might be considered her private history are presented here with a remarkable candor." Maxwell Geismar

+ Nation 179:425 N 13 '54 1150w

"Miss Glasgow is at her splendid best when she is looking quietly into the mirror of herself, as she was, and as she became. Then the book is alive with the human anguish and pity of love that was hers. She allowed herself to feel and through feeling came to understand; she has given us a document to be read and cherished." Leon Edel

+ New Repub 131:20 N 15 '54 1500w

"The publication of 'The Woman Within' brings another autobiographical classic to the bookshelves of all Americans who value their heritage." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 O 31 '54 1100w

"The appearance of Ellen Glasgow's autobiography nine years after her death in 1945 is a literary event of signal importance. For from the mid-Twenties to the end of her days Miss Glasgow enjoyed the distinction of being—along with Edith Wharton and Willa Cather—one of America's three foremost women novelists of her time. 'The Woman Within' proves to be more engrossing, more rich, more deeply moving than her most successful novels." Hudson Strode

+ N Y Times p1 O 31 '54 1800w

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin

New Yorker 30:130 O 30 '54 1700w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 23 '54 500w

GLASGOW, UNIVERSITY. Scottish economy. See Cairncross, A. K., ed.

GLASS, DAVID VICTOR, ed. Introduction to Malthus. 205p $2.75 Wiley

301.32 [312.1] Malthusianism. Malthus, Thomas Robert. Population 53-12676

This book contains three essays originally prepared for the B.B.C. Third program, and two reprints from Malthus. The essays are: The historical context of the Essay on population, by H. L. Beales; Malthus and the limitation of population growth, by D. V. Glass; Malthus in the twentieth century, by A. T. Peacock. The reprints are: A summary view of the principle of population; A letter to Samuel Whitbread, Esq. M.P., on his proposed Bill for the amendment of the Poor Laws. There is also a Bibliography of materials on the population question published in Britain, 1793 to 1880.

"This slim volume is probably as good an introduction to Malthus as one can hope to find if reading time is limited." Harvey Liebenstein

+ Am Econ R 44:714 S '54 750w

Reviewed by W. S. Thompson

Am Soc R 19:623 O '54 800w

Reviewed by C. V. Kiser

Ann Am Acad 294:202 J1 '54 400w

Manchester Guardian p4 My 12 '53 60w

Reviewed by Charles Madge

New Statesman & Nation 45:710 Je 13 '53 420w

"This volume is a good one for the student as well as the general reader."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p330 My 22 '53 200w

GLEMSEY, BERNARD. Blow at the heart. 279p $3 Appleton

53-10671

The trials of John Gilhooley, a successful New York commercial artist, who moved to a Long Island community so that his daughter could have the advantages of suburban surroundings.

Booklist 50:185 Ja 1 '54

"This is thoughtful but not too demanding commuter fare."

Kirkus 21:680 O 1 '53 160w

"While it is not a confused picture, it is not too beautiful! BG writes well enough and sustains his story but it is hectic to the end and will do nothing to calm the spirit of a reader." K. T. Willis

Library J 78:1935 N 1 '53 100w

"The excellence of this book arises from Glemsey's gift for creating character, his skilful observation of the suburban scene, and his delightful wit." Paul Pickrel

+ Yale R n = 43:xiv winter '54 180w

GLEMSEY, BERNARD. Hero's walk, by Robert Crane [pseud]. 196p $2.50; pa 35c Ballantine

54-7559

Science fiction.

Kirkus 22:249 Ap 1 '54 60w

"Chalk this up as not too satisfactory in itself (unless, perhaps, you're a reader completely new to the field), but as the debut of a promising writer whose second imaginative novel should be worth watching for." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ap 18 '54 90w

"The world of 2020, governed by a revamped and strengthened United Nations dubbed InterCos, somehow fails in this novel to generate any sustained reader interest. While handled ably enough, the ingredients of the story are all too familiar." J. F. McComas

N Y Times p21 My 9 '54 90w

GLICK, DAVID, ed. See Methods of biochemical analysis

GODDEN, JON. The city and the wave. 245p $3 Rinehart

54-5395

"Sensitive, introverted, Anglo-Indian Len Chase, living alone in a crowded city near the Bay of Bengal, befriends a homeless girl, finds love and achieves paternity." Bookmark

Booklist 50:249; 278 Mr 1 '54; Mr 15 '54

"Simply written, meaningful portrayal of present-day India."

+ Bookmark 13:132 Mr '54 40w

Reviewed by Claire McLaughlin

Canadian Forum 34:144 S '54 300w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 28 '54 400w

"A strange, rather dejected little story, brightened only by the luxuriance of its prose."

Kirkus 22:14 Ja 1 '54 160w

"This is a well-written character study with strong sociological implications. Recommended for moderate purchase by public libraries." E. T. Smith

+ Library J 79:450 Mr 1 '54 170w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 23 '54 120w

GODDEN, JON—Continued

"Though Miss Godden is a far less accomplished writer than Mr. Greene, her book illustrates most remarkably the discrepancy between the novelist's true sense of the tears of things and the smart theological attitudes that have bedevilled so much contemporary fiction. This novel pierces home with a vivid exactness. It fails in its climax, yet it remains a most moving and distinguished short work of fiction." John Raymond

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:380 Mr 20 '54 420w

"Not often does the reader come across a novel as quick to stir the sympathies as Miss Godden's. Her brief tale of a handful of simple people in the swarming tenements of Calcutta carries some of the oldest wisdom in the world, the most heartening and heartbreaking." Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 28 '54 360w

"Jon Godden has caught to perfection the authentic speech of Anglo-Indians. A good and striking book, written out of deep meditation." Robert Payne

+ N Y Times p4 My 9 '54 450w

New Yorker 30:131 Ap 3 '54 90w

"You will find, I think, that Jon Godden has in exceptional degree the ability to transport the reader to the fictional scene she chooses; the very sounds and smells of her crowded Indian city are here, and her characters and their troubles are universal. Perhaps she is inclined to treat them a touch too emotionally, but after all their central problem is also the author's and that of the world at large. For 'wave' read 'hydrogen bomb' or 'totalitarianism' if you like. You'll see then what Miss Godden is driving at." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 15 '54 600w

"Why is it, that the book is so flat? Most probably it is because of the way Len is handled. What is particularly lacking is that love of character which one sees so abundantly in Graham Greene, for example. Len is treated throughout the book like a laboratory animal. His feelings are described, but they are never shared. . . . What it all adds up to is that Miss Godden wants to wring tears from her audience while remaining dry-eyed herself. Unfortunately, a reading of 'The City and the Wave' offers substantial proof that it cannot be done." J. F. Muehl

— + Sat R 37:33 Ap 17 '54 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p197 Mr 26 '54 110w

GODDEN, RUMER. Impunity Jane; the story of a pocket doll; il. by Adrienne Adams. 47p $2.50 Viking

54-3211

Impunity Jane was a sturdy little doll bought in an English toy shop many years ago. Most of the time Jane sat on a bead cushion in a doll's house, but she wished to ride in someone's pocket and be happy and carefree. After many years and a succession of little girl owners Impunity Jane got her wish. Ages 6 to 10.

Booklist 51:47 S 15 '54

"A doll-story with a difference."

+ Bookmark 14:12 O '54 20w

"Charmingly illustrated, it is a distinguished and lovely book for girls—and boys—who believe dolls, too, have feelings." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 S 26 '54 220w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p7 S 2 '54 60w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

"A small literary masterpiece."

+ Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 30w

"A thoroughly delightful book." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:330 O '54 120w

Kirkus 22:383 J1 1 '54 120w

"The concentration of action, the brevity of text, are accomplished with the usual art of this skilled poet and novelist. We read it quickly, but we have covered years, and shared colorful little adventures all over London. Many a six or seven-year-old boy has felt a secret, shamed affinity for a doll; here it is released and justified in a very clever way. But, of course, little girls will love it too. And both will learn that odd, hard word 'impunity,' for the tiny doll did 'escape without hurt,' forever and ever." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 S 5 '54 270w

"Reality and fancy are compounded here into a story at once gay and moving, wholly convincing to any child who believes that dolls have their own emotions and needs." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 29 '54 220w

"Rumer Godden brings to her writing not only careful craftsmanship but that quality so essential to good children's books, yet so rare, the sharp memory of childhood and the things of childhood. The illustrations are in such harmony they seem to have grown with the story." R. H. V.

+ Sat R 37:34 Ag 21 '54 180w

Time 64:88 Ag 9 '54 40w

GODTSENHOVEN, OSCAR VAN (JAN VAN DORP, pseud). Sable lion; tr. by Clarissa B. Cooper. 314p $3.50 Putnam

54-8704

The background of this novel is seventeenth-century Flemish seafaring life. The Flemish corsairs who preyed on the English Channel shipping in the days when Spain controlled their country are the chief characters. Four generations of the De Boer family engaged in the dangerous life are the characters in this novel by a young Belgian writer.

Booklist 50:401 Je 15 '54

"It's something of a relief to report that 'The Sable Lion,' essentially swashbuckling in nature, is written none the less in the more restrained tradition of historical fiction." Henry Cavendish

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 23 '54 350w

"The ingredients for a lusty tale of derring do are inherent in this novel by a young Belgian, whose work has already proved very successful in his own country. . . . There's romance as well as adventure here, but the characters are stock figures, and the writing fails to rescue the story for this reader at least."

Kirkus 22:208 Mr 15 '54 240w

"Characterization good and story better than average. Recommended." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 79:773 Ap 15 '54 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 13 '54 200w

"Mr. Van Dorp wastes no words in getting his effects. His descriptions are sharp and vivid, his characters real, his sea episodes have the right nautical flavor." W. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p25 My 2 '54 400w

"Ought to please Americans who enjoy a well-told adventure tale with a correct historical background." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C My 2 '54 200w

GOGARTY, OLIVER ST JOHN. Collected poems. 212p $5 Devin-Adair

821

54-9300

This edition of Gogarty's collected poems contains everything the writer wishes to preserve from his previously published verse. List of poems. Index of first lines.

"In a day when poets are so serious that they hesitate at revealing their meaning, Dr. Gogarty's light touch is a pleasant contrast. What if the contrast palls after awhile—he will be remembered by half a dozen lyrics long after the obscurantists have been pulped down. To be remembered for six poems—that is achievement for any poet." Francis Russell

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 N 4 '54 500w

"I said in these columns recently that I believe Dr. Gogarty to be one of the greatest of living poets; it is now my pleasant task to give chapter and verse for that belief... T. S. Eliot and others have written much on the tradition of wit that was abandoned by English poets about the middle of the eighteenth century, but they show greater skill in writing about it than in it. For Gogarty that tradition never died... Gogarty feels at home in the old pagan world, as the puritan Eliot never could, but it is probably fair to say that he has accepted the tradition of wit pretty much 'as is,' without making a serious attempt, as Eliot has, to adapt it to the twentieth century." Vivian Mercier

+ Commonweal 60:466 Ag 13 '54 1300w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
Library J 79:1593 S 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by Iain Hamilton
Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 21 '52 550w

Reviewed by G. S. Fraser
New Statesman & Nation 43:440 Ap 12 '52 240w

"We are led on from page to page, awaiting the next golden surprise or outrageous jolt. And beneath the gusto and felicitous turns, we are constantly aware of a serene happiness in the earthy miracle as it is, the 'delicious air' of our 'suburban spring.'" Robert Hillyer

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 1 '54 900w

"Dr. Gogarty has seen fit to emphasize his more official poems by putting them in the front of the book, but his lyrics and satires follow, as delightful and as memorable as ever—the happy results of a thorough classical education imposed upon a high-spirited Anglo-Irish temperament."

+ New Yorker 30:187 O 9 '54 90w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R 37:39 O 23 '54 100w

"There are many poems in this book which must have owed their effect to their being in tune with the atmosphere of the Ireland in which they were produced, or to their celebration of persons and subjects close to the Irish heart. It seems likely, however, that Dr. Gogarty will be remembered as a poet not so much for these as for those lines and verses in which he has managed to catch, with 'some aristocracy of vision,' the visual beauty he has enjoyed." A. K. Feiling

+ Spec 189:786 D 5 '52 450w

"Altogether, Dr. Gogarty has given us a wealth of civilized entertainment, of which a high proportion is also poetry."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p190 Mr 14 '52 1200w

GOGARTY, OLIVER ST JOHN. It isn't this time of year at all! an unpremeditated autobiography. 256p $3.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-5360

Further chapters in the autobiography of the Irish doctor whose earlier reminiscences were As I Was Going Down Sackville Street, and Mourning Became Mrs Spendlove (Book Review Digest 1937, 1948). "Although his memory is ever keen, he has chosen to select only certain high spots in his life—from the time he was a very young child in Dublin; touching briefly on some and lengthily on others: his boarding school days, college years, medical school training and his work as a nose, ear and throat specialist." (Library J)

Booklist 50:253 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:128 Mr '54 20w

Reviewed by Edward Duncan
Canadian Forum 34:46 My '54 260w

"Many of the anecdotes about his literary friends are something short of edifying since Gogarty admits that it is with 'the unruly, the formless, the growing and the illogical' he loves to deal. Though he eschews philosophy as 'an air raid shelter for old men,' he nevertheless contemplates eternity—without enthusiasm, be it said."

Cath World 179:78 Ap '54 160w

Reviewed by La Tourette Stockwell
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 7 '54 380w

"The whole is not so good a book as 'Tumbling in the Hay,' or 'As I Was Going Down Sackville Street,' the first two books of reminiscences in which Gogarty skimmed the cream of the best of his life. But this new book is far from blue milk, though it does labor under the disadvantage of repeating much that Gogarty has written before. If a story is a good one, Gogarty doesn't care how many times he tells it. Like folklore, his texts are replete with fascinating variants. Notwithstanding this repetition, the book is a fine piece of literary entertainment." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 F 11 '54 650w

"For me, the bubbling gaiety of three-fourths of this book was spoiled by the unnecessary bitterness of the remainder. Autobiography, no matter how fictional in intent, always betrays its author into sincerity at the wrong moment. It is sad that Gogarty should have to appear once again in this bear-garden where he himself is both the aging bear and the snarling dogs. I say in all sincerity that I believe him to be one of the greatest of living poets—as Yeats did, too—though his Horatian style is now temporarily out of fashion. The pathos of Gogarty is that he cannot earn a living by his poetry and conversation, and therefore must stoop to prose." Vivian Mercier

+ Commonweal 59:479 F 12 '54 400w

"A unique and fitting title for this fascinating autobiography from the pen of the witty doctor... Highly recommended." Mary Zipprich

+ Library J 79:201 F 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Gerard Fay
Manchester Guardian p9 N 26 '54 90w
Nation 178:224 Mr 13 '54 70w

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson
New Statesman & Nation 48:366 S 25 '54 160w

Reviewed by W. Y. Tindall
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 7 '54 700w

"All of the literary vanguard will have to read this charming book... The book rises to a dramatic climax in Gogarty's account of an attempt to kidnap and murder him, his feelings and remarks, his ingenious escape from four men guarding him with guns in a dark cellar. Then it subsides into a dreamily philosophic conclusion. They may be unpremeditated, these memoirs, but they are mighty well arranged." Max Eastman

+ N Y Times p4 F 7 '54 600w

Reviewed by Brendan Gill
New Yorker 30:126 Mr 27 '54 440w
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 21 '54 280w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith
Sat R 37:17 Mr 13 '54 650w

Reviewed by Richard Murphy
Spec p346 S 17 '54 900w
Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 14 '54 260w

Time 63:100 F 15 '54 650w

"Dr. Gogarty recalls once more his experiences as a medical student and describes humorously his brief renown as a champion racing cyclist and proud possessor of cups. Those who expect a certain amount of Rabelaisian gusto in this book will not be disappointed, but it must be confessed that the hand which writes seems to move too hastily and at times with an increasing resentment."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p684 O 29 '54 650w

GOGGAN, JOHN PATRICK. See Patrick, J.

GOGUEL, MAURICE. Birth of Christianity; tr. from the French by H. C. Snape. 558p $7.50 Macmillan (N Y)

270.1 Church history—Primitive and early church 54-7175

"A three-volume series under the general title, 'Jesus and the Origins of Christianity,' is the magnum opus which crowns the work of M. Goguel, whose scholarly researches in the New Testament and early Christianity have been finding publication steadily for more than 50 years. The first volume of the trilogy was The Life of Jesus, (Macmillan's American edition 1944). The second, now before us, appeared in French in 1946. . . The volume extends from the very beginnings of faith in a risen Christ and the first preaching of the gospel until the end of the apostolic age, but including also the evidence for somewhat later developments insofar as this is found in writings which, though popularly accepted as works of apostles (especially Paul and Peter), were actually products of the next generation." (Christian Century) Bibliography.

Reviewed by Erich Dinkler
Ann Am Acad 296:197 N '54 500w

"Goguel's method appears to be as rigorously critical as any historian could desire. His acquaintance with the source materials, both direct and collateral, is extensive. His documentation is thorough and precise." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:465 Ap 14 '54 1150w

"The book invites criticism on many points of detail, but there can be no doubt that its place is in the highest class of work of its kind." W. H. Cadman

+ Hibbert J 52:410 Jl '54 950w

"It is a work of profound Biblical scholarship, which appears nevertheless to cut the ground from under its own feet. . . Dr. Goguel proves, for instance, to his own satisfaction that St. Paul could not have gone to Rome, that indeed he probably died at Antioch, while in discussing the supernatural events chronicled in the Acts, he is prone to rely rather heavily on the phenomena of the spiritualists. The whole work in fact, is tinged with a literalness that seems incapable of explaining the tremendous events it records." J. M. C.

Spec p218 F 19 '54 250w

GOLD, H. L., ed. Second Galaxy reader of science fiction. See Galaxy science fiction magazine

GOLD, HERBERT. Prospect before us. 266p $3.50 World pub.

54-5336

"Harry Bowers is a self-made man, uneducated in the ordinary sense, but highly educated as a businessman and astute in his understanding of people. . . Harry is noted for his fine treatment of people and it is no wonder that he goes along when Claire Farren, a Negro who is trying to put teeth into an anti-discrimination ordinance, asks for a room at his Green Glade Hotel. The rest of the story is one of hatred." Library J

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 21 '54 300w

"A distasteful novel. . . Public Libraries should be particularly careful."

— Kirkus 21:797 D 15 '53 240w

"Recommended adult reading." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 79:205 F 1 '54 140w

"Mr. Gold's new novel is not as soundly constructed as his first. Scenes are strung together necklace-style and motivation is not always clear or credible. Characters have labels and are stuck to them. It's a cerebral performance with a tangle of long, long thoughts, most of them entertainingly presented in colorful, runaway language. A high fidelity ear and eye are at work here. The candid conviction and jocular low humor of small encounters drawn from the author's own diary as a hotel night manager provide the right enveloping action." James Kelly

+ — N Y Times p5 F 14 '54 600w

New Yorker 30:116 Mr 6 '54 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 21 '54 360w

"Despite its shaky, melodramatic plot line, The Prospect Before Us is alive with the nervous tempo of big-city sights, sounds and smells. Too often, however, Author Gold uses the camera eye and forgets the developing tank, leaving the meanings of characters and whole chapters to be puzzled over and dimly glimpsed, like murky film negatives."

— + Time 63:108 F 22 '54 500w

GOLDBERG, ISRAEL (RUFUS LEARSI, pseud). Jews in America: a history. 382p il maps $6 World pub.

296 Jews in the U.S.—History 54-5347

"Mr. Lears presents the story in the conventional form of history books, with details, names and dates in chronological sequence. He begins with 'the first European' who trod the soil of the New World—a converted Jew, Luis de Torres, who served Columbus. . . He tells of the early Jewish settlements in the West Indies and South America, and then of the handful of the refugees who fled from Brazil in 1654 and landed at the mouth of the Hudson. He then traces the trickle of Jews—from various European lands but predominantly Spanish-Portuguese in origin—who helped swell the stream of American Colonial history and who helped win the privileges and responsibilities of American democracy." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:145 D 1 '54

"Nonpartisan, absorbing narrative."

+ Bookmark 14:5 O '54 20w

"It was Macaulay's fondest wish that his works should replace the latest novel on the drawing room table. Here is a history that may well accomplish such a goal. This latest book of Rufus Lears combines exquisite prose with sound scholarship, a broad concept of the criteria of historiography with brisk and dramatic narrative. It is the work of a mature mind—disciplined, mellow, restrained, and compassionate." A. L. Lebeson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 O 17 '54 380w

"A good solid history and reference, with more emotion and color in the sections relating to the modern problems of American Jews."

+ Kirkus 22:628 S 1 '54 210w

"Although the most replete to date, Mr. Lears's volume cannot constitute the full story of American Jewry, for too many of the facts remain to be uncovered. Until American Jews provide the means for a comprehensive research into their own past, historians must be content with meagerly repeating one another." Marvin Lowenthal

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p8 O 3 '54 350w

Reviewed by S. W. Baron

N Y Times p6 S 12 '54 550w

Reviewed by R. S. Israel

San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 14 '54 80w

"An authentic, thoughtful, learned account of outer happening and inner development. Mr. Lears stands sturdily upon the ground of reality." Ludwig Lewisohn

+ Sat R 37:20 S 18 '54 370w

GOLDBERG, MARTHA. Twirly skirt; pictures by Helen Stone. 45p $1.75 Holiday

54-10557

Two little girls decide to have a party together on their eighth birthday, with two cakes and twin party dresses. For ages six to eight.

Booklist 50:424 Jl 1 '54

"A little book made attractive with Helen Stone's appealing line drawings of children filled with gaiety and excitement." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:247 Ag '54 80w

Kirkus 22:287 My 1 '54 50w

"This is slightly above average. Recommended." N. S. Zipf

+ Library J 79:1323 J1 '54 90w

"To an adult this is very slight, one of the everyday stories that has not that extra magic touch of style. But little girls who love clothes will like the matter of the 'twin' dress that almost didn't come on time." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 27 '54 80w

GOLDHAMER, HERBERT, and MARSHALL, ANDREW W. Psychosis and civilization; two studies in the frequency of mental disease. 126p $4 Free press

614.1 Mental diseases

53-7395

"The two statistical analyses in this slim book are much more limited in scope and method than the title indicates. The first, and major study, assesses mental hospital admission rates in Massachusetts during the past century to ascertain whether or not there has been any significant increase in the incidence of hospitalized psychoses during this period. . . The second study discusses an easily computed 'conditional expectancy' measure which indicates the chances of hospitalization for mental illness between any two age levels, assuming survival. Conditional expectancy rates for the state of New York as of 1940 are presented as an illustration." (U S Quarterly Bk R) First published in 1949 under title: The Frequency of Mental Disease (cf Library of Congress card)

"This study is a significant contribution to what has long been a very controversial issue. If their findings stand the test of time and are eventually supported by other similar studies, these investigators will have indeed helped 'to sharpen the formulation of alternatives, narrow the range of possible solutions to the theoretical problems at issue and indicate promising directions for further research' (p. 97). If certain negative evidence is brought to light, however, they may have succeeded only in prolonging the argument. However, their research has been carefully done; and its thorough statement of assumption, procedures, sources, and reasoning is a model which other social scientists might well emulate." H. W. Dunham

+ — Am J Soc 60:95 J1 '54 1100w

"Anyone who has ever had occasion to examine the statistical reports of mental hospitals must admire the industry, perseverance and ingenuity displayed by the authors in assembling the data necessary for the computation of first admission rates for the period 1840 to 1885. Unfortunately one cannot say as much for the analysis and presentation of the data. The entire discussion has a tone of special pleading and one gets the impression, perhaps unjustly, that only those data have been presented which fit into the authors' desired conclusions. . . The price of the book is exorbitant; the title pretentious. Did civilization in Massachusetts really begin in 1885?" H. F. Dorn

+ — Am Soc R 19:104 F '54 800w

"The findings of the two studies should be of especial use to administrators faced with the problem of determining need for hospital facilities. A summary of the concrete findings, eliminating much of the technical methodology, would be helpful for practical purposes. For the technically trained reader, the methodology merits careful study." Ellen Winston

+ Ann Am Acad 290:161 N '53 480w

"Designed for the statistically sophisticated, these studies manifest care and competence, although the first study is marred somewhat by a tone which suggests that the authors have a thesis to prove. A fuller presentation of the data on which they have relied would permit the reader to explore alternative assumptions and perhaps emerge with a greater conviction as to the soundness of the conclusions."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 9:482 D '53 200w

GOLDING, LOUIS. Bare-knuckle breed. 231p il $3.75 Barnes, A.S.

796.83 Boxing

54-5415

Stories of seventeen famous fights, most of them from the bare-knuckle English era. Partial contents: Dan Mendoza v. Dick Humphreys and others; Isaac Perrins, John Gully v. Hen Pearce; Tom Molyneux v. Tom Cribb and others; Deaf Burke v. Samuel O'Rourke; Bendigo; Peter Jackson v. John L. Sullivan and others; Siki v. Carpentier and others; Jack Dempsey v. Firpo and others.

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 9 '54 30w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:862 My 1 '54 40w

"Mr. Golding, while not denying that his interpretations are lush and free, contends that 'the facts are not yet invented.' Yet it's possible to count at least fifteen manglings or inventions of fact in the chapter on Battling Siki, the Singular Senegalese, alone." John Lardner

N Y Times p19 Ap 18 '54 650w

"Some of Mr. Golding's interpretations . . . are more than a little imaginative, but it cannot be denied that they make, if not authoritative, at least very entertaining reading, and his account of the rise and fall of Dan Mendoza, the dapper Aldgate tea clerk, is especially fine."

+ — New Yorker 30:128 Mr 20 '54 120w

GOLDMAN, FREDERICK HERBERT, and JACOBS, MORRIS BORIS. Chemical methods in industrial hygiene. 284p il $3.75 Interscience

331.822 Chemistry, Medical and pharmaceutical—Laboratory manuals. Hygiene, Industrial 53-12541

"Emphasis on analytical methods which are generally possible to perform in the chemical laboratory for the examination of materials, substances, and samples. Methods involving use of field instruments or special laboratory apparatus have been omitted." Chem & Eng N

"This book will appear on the desk of most industrial hygiene chemists. It will also go into the field with many an engineer who needs a simple, readable manual that will easily fit in his coat pocket." C. M. Berry

+ Am J Pub Health 44:400 Mr '54 280w

Chem & Eng N 31:5115 D 7 '53 20w

"It is felt that the subject matter under discussion includes too broad a field to cover properly in a manual. Space is necessarily too limited to permit adequate discussion of theory, reasons for taking the steps described, interfering substances and alternate methods. However, as a manual, this book should prove to be a useful addition to the library of analytical laboratories." J. J. Ferry

+ — Chem Eng 61:371 O '54 270w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:9 Ja '54

GOLDSCHMIDT, WALTER ROCHS, ed. Ways of mankind; thirteen dramas of peoples of the world and how they live, by Lister Sinclair [and others] with commentary; il. by Arminta Neal. 212p $3.75 Beacon press

572 Anthropology. Radio plays 54-8422

Thirteen radio plays designed to present the major issues of human behavior. The project originated with the National Association of Educational Broadcasters, which in turn had been stimulated to work in this field by the anthropologist, Robert Redfield. Index.

Booklist 51:126 N 15 '54

"The topics selected are, of course, only samples, but they well illustrate some of the varied mores of many peoples in relation to such interests as language, education, social values, ethics, status, art and religion." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:1433 N 24 '54 110w

GOLLWITZER, HELMUT. Unwilling journey; a diary from Russia [tr. by E. M. Delacour with help from Robert Fenn]. 316p $3.50 Muhlenberg press

940.547 Communism—Russia. World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, Russian 54-8180

Experiences, both physical and spiritual, of a German Lutheran minister who spent four years in post-war Russia, as a prisoner of war and in an indoctrination center.

Booklist 50:377 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Max Beloff

Manchester Guardian p4 S 18 '53 320w

"A remarkable and moving book. . . It is perhaps as a spiritual chronicle that this book is most stirring. Pastor Gollwitzer's deep and pure Christian faith had apparently led him to see the nature of Hitler's crimes long before the defeat and he meditates in this book on the justness of Germany's post-war punishment as well as the need for Germans to recognize their guilt." Harry Schwartz

+ N Y Times p10 F 28 '54 450w

Time 63:110 Mr 15 '54 800w

"No speculation about Russian intentions will help to solve the conflict and all our attempts at analysing the other side's self-deception or ill will (which ever it may be) are fruitless. If, however, a book like Professor Gollwitzer's can help at least to reduce the boggy to life size, it will have contributed to the cause of humanity in the best possible way: that is, not directly by means of intellectual analysis, but by its truthfulness, which springs from a sincere striving to understand in the face of great difficulties and suffering."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p284 Ap 30 '54 1300w

GOLOB, EUGENE OWEN. The "isms", a history and evaluation. 681p $6 Harper

330.15 Economics—History. Economic policy. Socialism 54-6705

"Recognizing the fact that nations are now formulating decisions and policies on an ideological basis, a history professor offers this exposition of the important current ideologies. He believes that no 'ism' can be properly understood without a knowledge of the forces that developed it, and he therefore traces the history of capitalism, socialism, and their mutations, evaluating each one. In conclusion he examines theories of corporatism, and inquires whether it would not be possible to work out a middle way." Booklist

"This is a book with many weaknesses. At the same time, it is a very useful book with which to stimulate class discussion or student research on the graduate level." Carl Landauer

+ Am Econ R 44:960 D '54 850w

"The book will perhaps be most valuable for the layman who might be frightened off by the apparatus of scholarship. It makes no pretensions to originality and indeed derives its source quotations almost entirely from a few secondary accounts, often citing them without identification or date. But it is readable, intelligent, and often lively. The cool analysis of the two main interpretations of the Nazi-Soviet pact and subsequent Soviet foreign policy will dispel a good deal of the confusion, intentional and unintentional that surrounds the discussion of these controversial subjects." E. A. Clark

+ Am Hist R 60:65 O '54 800w

"The book is well-documented, largely from secondary sources. Disadvantages in textbook use may be the ornate literary style and the great length of the chapters, insufficiently subdivided for easy student assignment. But, within its limitations, it is very well worthwhile, and it should be read by a wider circle than those who teach and study 'isms' courses." Edmund Whittaker

+ Ann Am Acad 295:184 S '54 450w

Booklist 50:350 My 15 '54

Foreign Affairs 33:157 O '54 40w

"A well written account of why people and nations act as they do. An excellent addition to the shelf of social science."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:172 Jl '54

GOOCH, GEORGE PEABODY. Catherine the Great, and other studies. 292p il $5 Longmans B or 92 Catherine II, empress of Russia. Eighteenth century 54-10190

"Mr. Gooch has not attempted a complete or chronological history of Catherine's reign; instead, by a series of snapshots—Catherine and her lovers—Catherine and Voltaire—he builds up a true and sharply vivid portrait. To his second essay—a study of four French salons—his informal and episodic approach is still more suited. Here is Parisian society at its most brilliant, the last proud flourish of the Ancien Régime. In the temples of the great salonnieres there was little room for husbands and even love took second place to wit and wisdom. . . Very properly Mr. Gooch concludes his studies of the Age of Enlightenment with an essay on Voltaire himself." Spec

"A few of these pages may occasionally cloy. After all, the story of Catherine's twenty-one 'favorites' has worn a trifle thin. But in the end Professor Gooch is hard to resist. He writes in the great tradition of Hazlitt and Douglas with an urbanity, wit, and felicity of phrase which, happily, will only further confound those who identify scholarship with pedantry." D. K. Reading

+ Am Hist R 60:141 O '54 320w

"All the pieces are agreeable to read, though they leave little impression on the reader." A. J. P. T.

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 30 '54 180w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 47:568 My 1 '54 750w

"The twenty or more volumes written by this now aged and venerable British historian are all scholarly in inspiration, realistic in tone and animated in style. The essays collected here, though not perhaps all as perspicacious and pertinent as his best work, make very good reading for any informed person with an interest in eighteenth-century Europe." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 18 '54 700w

"The development of the Voltairean method and its impact on eighteenth-century France is immeasurably important for any proper understanding of what was to follow; to this understanding Mr. Gooch provides a most noteworthy and readable contribution." Philip Sandeman

+ Spec p597 My 14 '54 1100w

"Dr. Gooch's book is as entertaining as it is authoritative. . . The book ends with a short essay on Bismarck's legacy, which has no connexion whatever with anything that has gone before. This misfit contains an entirely misleading statement about the league of three Emperors which it implies originated in 1881. In fact the three Emperors arrived at an understanding in September, 1872. However, this is only a slight blemish in an interesting and important book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p183 Mr 19 '54 1000w

GOODENOUGH, ERWIN RAMSDELL. Jewish symbols in the Greco-Roman period. (Bollingen ser) 6v v 1-3 $25 Pantheon bks.

296 Jews—Antiquities

"The three handsome, large and extraordinarily well-printed volumes, two of text and one of illustrations, which are to be followed by three others, contribute much to the fuller understanding of some of the facts of the development of Judaism and the phenomena of Jewish life in the Hellenistic-Roman period. They deal with the general use of many pagan art forms on synagogues and Jewish graves in this period throughout Palestine and the lands of the Fertile Crescent." N Y Times

"It is not without a feeling of awe that one approaches this set of sumptuous tall volumes, and the awe deepens as one discovers the evidence of such exhaustive research in an obscure field and such meticulous scholarship in the treatment of its findings. To the majority of those who note first the title and then the magnitude and magnificence of the work to which it is attached, it will immediately seem that the theme is too minute and remote to merit elaboration on this scale. This impression is quickly dispelled. An important historical problem is here being attacked with great patience and industry and by an original method." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:113 Ja 27 '54 700w

"Recommended for university libraries and pertinent special collections." R. P. Breaden
+ Library J 79:1059 Je 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by Robert Richman

New Repub 120:21 D 21 '53 20w

"The serious reader will follow him with intense absorption, turning from text to picture and back again, as remote avenues of history and speculation are explored. The author writes simply and clearly, no matter how abstruse his subject, and employs a pleasant argumentative warmth which gives life to whatever he says." Marvin Lowenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 17 '54 650w

"One of the author's highest contributions is that he has brought the problem of the relationship of pagan symbols to Jewish art and religious expression into focus and suggested stimulating, if debatable, explanations. To have assembled such a wealth of invaluable material and made it available through cross-references and indices for general study is an accomplishment that in itself merits high praise." Nelson Glueck

+ N Y Times p28 Ap 11 '54 750w

"Such a study of ancient symbolism not only throws light on Judaism and the origin of Christianity, but helps to explain the meaning of ancient symbols for modern man."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:200 Je '54 240w

GOODFRIEND, ARTHUR. What is America; 123p il $3.50; pa $1.50 Simon & Schuster

973 [917.3] U.S.—Civilization. National characteristics, American 54-9795

"A picture book which touches on virtually every important phase or facet of life in America. Through its pages of text and photographs you will find Hopalong Cassidy, Carnegie, Caruso, Babe Ruth and William James. You will find also slums, skyscrapers, farmers, breadlines, schools, grocery stores and town meetings." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"This volume is a happy union of words and pictures achieved without sacrificing the importance of either. Penetrating phrases—both the author's and others—support challenging art. The result at least for this reviewer, is a stimulation of thought carrying the provocative answers into areas where the individual can do some analyzing on his own account." Stafford Derby

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 24 '54 400w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 28 '54 50w

"This book is worth doing, worth having, worth preserving. We will still go on asking questions, however, and never getting final answers." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p7 O 31 '54 110w

GOODMAN, PAUL. Structure of literature. 281p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

801 Literature—History and criticism. Plots (drama, novel, etc.) 54-9577

"Adopting the point of view that a literary work is a unit which derives its significance from its parts and their relationships, Mr. Goodman presents in this book a theory of 'inductive formal analysis.' His method is to probe such works as 'Oedipus,' 'Richard II,' and 'The Castle' for the secrets of their structure, and to construct ingenious and valuable generalizations on this empiric basis. The procedure entails distinguishing such subtle elements as the hidden plot of a play, the degree of involvement of its characters, and dramatic reversals, and showing how they harmonize, mesh, or produce contrapuntal effects." Nation

"Literary criticism and philosophy do not often mix well. In Mr. Goodman's hands, however, they combine into a new and promising contribution, a kind of criticism whose findings are validated by accurate observation and reasoning."

+ Nation 178:469 My 29 '54 170w

"Brilliant and important, Goodman's book is yet not as useful as it might be, because it is not—and this is as valid a judgment of criticism as of art—beautiful. The unfeeling aridities of his style (he affects the style of an Aristotelian treatise) are only the first signs of the more serious flaw in organization."

Robert Langbaum

+ New Repub 130:25 Je 14 '54 2000w

"Whatever the undoubted virtues of his system, his style here has a certain aridity and addiction to jargon. This is dismaying, because Dr. Goodman's poems have fine felicities of style, and because the critique, a convincing defense of the formalistic method, would profit greatly from a modicum of rhetoric."

+ Poetry 84:365 S '54 180w

"One can imagine a state of intense irritation being fomented in the breast of many a staid and dependable literary pundit; yet for all its mannerisms there is a certain brilliance and style about it, and a logical persuasiveness that reveals not only the hopeful entertainer but a scholarly and painstaking critic. There is never a dull moment."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p674 O 22 '54 1300w

GOODSPEED, EDGAR JOHNSON. As I remember. 315p $3.50 Harper

B or 92

53-8370

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"One might suppose that an autobiography with no great internal tensions or personal spiritual crises to report, which makes no claim to its subject's influence upon world history, would prove highly uninteresting reading. It is a pleasure to state that this is definitely not true of the autobiography of the outstanding New Testament scholar, Professor Edgar J. Goodspeed of the University of Chicago. . . The whole story is told here and there with an old man's excessive memory for unimportant details, but with the touch of one who has experienced the great joy of accomplishment and who now remembers many famous men and thrilling moments." Paul Ramsey

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Mr 7 '54 400w

"Written in a fluid and lucid style, punctuated with irony which never becomes bitter, Dr. Goodspeed's autobiography is 'required reading' for anyone who wants to understand the ways in which humanistic studies are carried on in a great university. To be sure, the author is not apparently concerned with the theological meaning of the New Testament, but not every New Testament scholar is called to be a theologian in the technical sense, and often humanistic studies can bring forth ultimate theological fruits. Dr. Goodspeed's passion for clarity is itself a theological virtue, and it is admirably exemplified in As I Remember."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:5 Mr '54 240w
Wis Lib Bul 50:27 Ja '54

GOODWIN, HAROLD LELAND. Science book of space travel; il. by Jack Coggins. 213p $2.95 Watts, F.

629.14353 [629.1388] Interplanetary voyages 54-6543

"Making a clear distinction between factual and speculative material, a civil defense expert

GOODWIN, H. L.—Continued

long interested in rocketry and astronautics discusses in an informal, drily humorous, and realistic fashion the present bases for, probable obstruction to, and theoretical results of man's flight into space." (Booklist) Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:99 N 1 '54

"Nearly as good and possibly somewhat more comprehensive, including a balanced presentation of the pessimistic arguments against spaceflight soon and an excellent brief bibliography. Jack Coggins' illustrations, if lacking in black and white the excitement of his earlier color books on the same topic, succeed in making the text even clearer." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 28 '54 40w

"This book is a sort of refresher course in interplanetary travel and, as such, is a solid success." J. F. McC.

+ N Y Times p38 S 12 '54 150w

GOODY, RICHARD MEAD. Physics of the stratosphere. 187p il $5 Cambridge

551.5 Atmosphere, Upper [54-1205]

"A readable survey of the accumulated knowledge on the stratosphere. In the first two chapters, there is some background information on contemporary techniques of stratosphere research, including the use of balloons and rockets. The book is addressed primarily to physicists who are not specialists in atmospheric physics but who wish to keep informed about developments in the field. Technical terminology and mathematics are therefore used where necessary. Nevertheless, considerable parts of the book are not difficult to read; hence the educated layman in search of information on such matters as winds in the stratosphere will find it helpful. The text is keyed to a 6-page bibliography." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:778 Ap 15 '54 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:2 Ja '54

GORDON, LESLEY. Peepshow into paradise; with six plates in colour and many line il. by the author. 264p $6 De Graff

688.7 [649.55] Toys [54-9928]

A history of children's toys from the time of the ancients to the scientific toys of today. Copiously illustrated. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:351 My 15 '54

"A most readable volume." Russell MacFall
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 Ap 25 '54 30w

"A thoroughly enchanting book, replete with fact and anecdote, which will lure any reader along the road to remembrance." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 79:1403 Ag '54 50w

"Lesley Gordon does not lack enthusiasm. She has interested herself in the toys of most countries and appears to have gone far afield in pursuit of fine specimens of the toymaker's art. She has read widely, if not exhaustively, in the literature of the subject. . . But it is one thing to possess wide and affectionately acquired knowledge and quite another to give it effective expression. It does not appear to have occurred to Miss Gordon that writing is as much an art as toy making. For a book which has taken five years to write, Peepshow into Paradise is curiously rough and unshapely."

Times [London] Lit Sup p19 N 27 '53 400w

GORDON, RICHARD, pseud. See Ostlere, G.

GORE, LEROY. Joe must go. 192p $2.95 Messner

B or 92 McCarthy, Joseph Raymond. Wisconsin—Politics and government 54-12703

The author is the owner and editor of the Sauk Prairie Star, a small town Wisconsin weekly. On March 19, 1954 he published an editorial in his paper which started the recall proceedings against Senator McCarthy. This is his account of the battle and its results.

Booklist 51:104 N 1 '54

"Definitely newsworthy."

+ Kirkus 22:691 O 1 '54 240w

"The book is written in an unsophisticated style packed with agricultural similes and political invective. Recommended for balance in all McCarthy collections." C. R. Gough

+ Library J 79:1886 O 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by Dan Gillson

Nation 179:553 D 25 '54 150w

"The story that Leroy Gore writes is a heartening indication that a people with a democratic background can get places without using totalitarian methods." Marcus Duffield

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 17 '54 600w

"Lively and entertaining little book." J. B. Oakes

+ N Y Times p43 O 31 '54 800w

"Somehow, like the campaign itself, this book misses its mark. . . It is difficult to avoid the judgment that the whole affair—including this book—was a personal venture, ill-conceived and poorly executed. Were this a less serious matter, the disappointing results could be overlooked. But this is not a campaign to legalize sale of colored margarine, or a contest to elect a state fair queen. Gore was involved—in the only way possible, with the Wisconsin voters—in a deadly-serious tilt with a very tough opponent. He expended many troops and his dangerous failure inevitably causes concern for the recall petition campaign he has scheduled for this fall." J. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 31 '54 600w

GORMANSTON, EILEEN (BUTLER) PRESTON, viscountess. Little I kept [Eng title: Little kept]. 175p $2.50 Sheed

B or 92 [53-9803]

Informal reminiscences of a member of a famous Irish Catholic family. The writer's "father was Sir William Butler, that admirable soldier who, through no fault of his own, arrived just too late to save Gordon at Khar-toum; her mother was Alice Meynell's sister and immensely celebrated in her lifetime as a painter of battle pictures. . . A Little Kept is a medley of descriptions of people and places, of reflections and anecdotes whose only connecting link is that they have lingered in the mind of the writer." (Times [London] Lit Sup)

Manchester Guardian p4 My 12 '53 120w

"Eileen Gormanston writes pleasantly and discursively of her distinguished parents and aunt, of her own travels and two happy marriages, of the life of herself and her children in historic Gormanston Castle. . . Alfred Noyes gives high place to these memoirs."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 28 '54 160w

"A Little Kept is worth reading, not only for its pictures of an Irish Catholic family and a vanishing way of life but for the sincerity of the writer herself. If inclined to dwell too long on the trivial and not long enough on the genuinely interesting, if apt to slip from shrewd wit into mere larkiness, she is blessedly free from 'fear-of-giving-oneself-away disease.' No photograph gives us a clue to her personal appearance, which she never describes, yet it is obvious that Lady Gormanston belongs to the ancient race of charmers. Only a very attractive woman could be so endearingly unself-conscious."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Je 12 '53 600w

GOSSETT, MRS MARGARET. First book of boats; pictures by Jeanne Bendick. 44p $1.75 Watts, F.

387 Boats and boating—Juvenile literature 53-8605

Because Joe learned to row, he became interested in all kinds of boat operation. In this story for grades seven to nine he learns about rowboats, canoes, sailboats, ferry boats and even ocean liners.

Booklist 50:262 Mr 1 '54

Horn Bk 30:109 Ap '54 70w

Kirkus 21:584 S 1 '53 80w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 79:73 Ja 1 '54 20w

GOSSETT, MRS MARGARET, comp. Real book of jokes; il. by Leon Winik. de luxe ed 220p $1.50 Garden City bks.

808.87 Joke books—Juvenile literature 54-5472

Collection of jokes, puns, riddles, etc., with a few limericks. Ages ten to fourteen.

Booklist 50:405 Je 15 '54

Kirkus 22:203 Mr 15 '54 50w

"Recommended." Mary Strang

+ Library J 79:1064 Je 1 '54 30w

GOTTLIEB, WILLIAM P. Table tennis; written and il. with photographs by [the author] drawings by Michael Germakian. 42p $1.50 Knopf

796.34 [794.7] Ping pong 54-5307

Step by step instructions with diagrams and photographs explaining table tennis for grades five to eight.

Booklist 50:326 Ap 15 '54

Kirkus 22:199 Mr 15 '54 60w

"A very helpful book for the young beginner. Large clear type, sturdy binding. Recommended for ages 8-12." Robert Van Ben-thuysen

+ Library J 79:635 Ap 1 '54 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 6 '54 30w

Wis Lib Bul 50:183 Jl '54

GOUDEY, MRS ALICE E. Here come the bears! il. by Garry MacKenzie. 92p $2.25 Scribner

599.744 Bears 54-5924

Stories about the habits of different kinds of bears. For ages six to nine.

Booklist 50:346 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:163 Ap '54 10w

"To a story full of facts simply presented, with enough plot interest to hold a small child's attention, [the author] added many delightful illustrations by Garry MacKenzie." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 11 '54 120w

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13 '54 110w

"A realistic and simply written nature book for the youngest readers." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:182 Je '54 70w

Kirkus 22:197 Mr 15 '54 80w

"Recommended." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 79:785 Ap 15 '54 50w

"Well written nature book for young readers."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 My 16 '54 100w

"Fascinating nature tales." Jeanne Massey

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 21 '54 110w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 16 '54 70w

"The pictures of the four bear families and the simple text make this an interesting as well as instructive book." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:38 Je 19 '54 210w

Wis Lib Bul 50:182 Jl '54

GOUGH, MARY (MRS MICHAEL R. E. GOUGH). Travel into yesterday; an account of archaeological journeying through the plain and the rough places of the Roman province of Cilicia, in southern Turkey. 305p il $4.50 Doubleday

956.4 [915.64] Cilicia

54-7320

"Mary Gough is the wife of Michael Gough, a University of Edinburgh archeologist. Every year, since the spring of 1948, the two go to Cilicia, in the southern part of Turkey, to excavate, to explore and to record the wealth of archeological treasure found in this cultural pocket of antiquity. In 'Travel Into Yesterday,' Mary Gough writes of their experiences in the many cities and hamlets in which they literally, frequently, pitched their tent." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:37 S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:4 O '54 40w

"From this book modern Turkey and the modern Turks emerge in delightful, if sometimes trying entities. Strong, humorous, and friendly, these Turks have captivated the writer's interest and affection and one gathers that the Goughs are popular visitors in an area where few Europeans penetrate." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 23 '54 600w

Kirkus 22:356 Je 1 '54 170w

"A highly satisfying book." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 8 '54 600w

Reviewed by Raymond Holden

N Y Times p32 S 19 '54 220w

"An enjoyable book that in manner of approach lies about midway between Pamela Burr's 'My Turkish Adventure' and Willie Snow Ethridge's 'Let's Talk Turkey.'" Linda Braidwood

+ Sat R 37:13 S 4 '54 650w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 3 '54 240w

Wis Lib Bul 50:207 O '54

GOUGH, VERA. You're the speaker [Eng title: Speaking is your business]. 158p $2.50 White-side

808.5 Public speaking

54-5279

"A handbook on effective speaking for all business and social occasions." (Subtitle) No index.

Booklist 50:235 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:181 My '54 20w

"Here is a regular mine of practical ideas for the business man or woman who may be called upon to speak." R. D. Innis

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 31 '54 90w

"A succinct, useful book of advice and suggestion and instruction."

+ Kirkus 21:754 N 15 '54 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 24 '54 140w

"A clear, concise guide." J. F. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 24 '54 150w

Wis Lib Bul 50:68 Mr '54

GOULD, JACK. All about radio and television; il. by Bette J. Davis. 143p $1.95 Random house

621.384 Radio—Juvenile literature. Television—Juvenile literature 53-6279

Explains radio and television in terms simple enough for grades five to seven. Partial contents: Making a television wave; Sending the waves; Receiving the waves; How to build a 'foxhole radio'; Color television; Why we have television networks; Why radio can go around the world. The author is Radio and Television editor of the New York Times.

GOULD, JACK—Continued

Booklist 50:189 Ja 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p56 N 15 '53 50w

"Mr. Gould is on the staff of the New York Times as Radio and Television Editor, but he knows how to give clear explanations to youngsters about electronics."

+ Commonweal 59:181 N 20 '53 30w

Kirkus 21:700 O 15 '53 170w

"The chapters on how to build a foxhole radio, the vacuum tube, the television tube, and those dealing with the travel of waves of different frequencies are exceptionally clear. We recommend this book for youngsters between ten and thirteen years of age." V. S.

+ Sat R 36:78 N 14 '53 110w

Wis Lib Bul 50:80 Mr '54

GOULDNER, ALVIN WARD. Patterns of industrial bureaucracy. 282p $4.50 Free press 658.01 Bureaucracy. Industrial management 54-8152

"A partial report on a three-year study of industrial organization in an unidentified gypsum plant consisting of two productive units—a subsurface mine, and a surface factory. The study, which investigated organization, operation, management-labor relations, and community status of the plant, was undertaken to clarify the social processes leading to differing degrees of bureaucratization, to identify crucial variables accounting for its growth or contraction, to formulate tentative hypotheses concerning their interconnection, and to present possible alternatives in solving problems relating to administrative policies." Booklist

Reviewed by Goodwin Watson

Ann Am Acad 296:180 N '54 400w

Booklist 50:412 Jl 1 '54

"Professor Gouldner's book is one more example of the tendency of many sociologists to be busily engaged in rewriting one another's works. His book is unique in the sense that it presents a case study of an industrial community that has never been studied before. But beyond this there is little that is new or challenging."

Natior 179:97 Jl 31 '54 250w

GOULDNER, ALVIN WARD. Wildcat strike. 179p $3 Antioch press

331.892 Strikes and lockouts. Industrial relations 54-6176

"This companion piece to the author's Patterns of Industrial Bureaucracy continues his analysis of human relationships in the General Gypsum Company. The objectives here are to determine the basic causes of a wildcat strike in the plant and the extent and nature of efforts to prevent it, and to develop a sociological theory of group tensions which will be of practical use to industrial sociologists." Booklist

Booklist 50:444 Jl 15 '54

"'Wildcat Strike' is an absorbing study in a relatively unexplored field. It will be of as much value and interest to those occupied with practical labor relations as to those concerned more abstractly with social phenomena." Francis Russell

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 14 '54 550w

Current Hist 27:128 Ag '54 190w

"Recommended for purchase in college or public libraries where this type of material is in demand." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 79:1404 Ag '54 140w

GOUZENKO, IGOR. Fall of a titan; tr. from the Russian by Mervyn Black. 629p $4.50 Norton

54-10351

"Author, former Russian cipher clerk won fame by deserting in 1945 to West and helping uncover Soviet spy ring. Titan is Maxim Gorky, idol of revolutionary Russia, whose gradual downfall and death is supposedly result of sinister plot by Politburo. But Gouzenko gives more, tries on broader canvas to depict working of Russian government in Rostov, presumably at the beginning of the thirties. Some slight changes in names (Gorin instead of Gorky, Veria instead of Beria, Roman Rouen instead of Romain Rolland,) emphasize fictional treatment which gives writer liberty to deviate from historical facts." Library J

"Igor Gouzenko, who has been living in Canada under an assumed name since his sensational defection from the Soviets in 1945, has written what seems to me the most impressive large-scale work of fiction about Soviet Russia published to date." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:83 Ag '54 500w

Booklist 50:450 Jl 15 '54

Bookmark 14:8 O '54 20w

"It is to be hoped that many broad-minded intellectuals will read this novel and that they will, at last, have eyes to see." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 179:472 S '54 360w

"Here is a valid work of fiction, and not merely an accurate document on Russian life today." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 18 '54 400w

"'The Fall of a Titan' is based upon Mr. Gouzenko's knowledge of and participation in the Soviet Union's subterranean police and espionage system. It is in many ways a remarkable novel, for although portions of it are apocryphal, they are based on a thorough understanding of the Soviet Union, of its ruling political hierarchy, and of the manner in which the average citizen reacts to the towering superstructure which, at all times, leans its weight upon him." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 22 '54 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p32 S '54

"It is difficult to evaluate the background of the novel; difficult, that is, for one who has never lived in the USSR. It frequently seems stogy and bitter, but two scenes, a winter night in Moscow and the wedding of Gorin's daughter, seem to me extraordinary accomplishments, the latter as low, rich and true as Brueghel. Here, as in the novel as a whole, the current of ordinariness is broken by events of remarkable beauty and power." William Pfaff

+ Commonweal 60:491 Ag 20 '54 1000w

Kirkus 22:343 Je 1 '54 300w

"Public libraries should have copy available for likely demand from readers." H. H. Bernt

Library J 79:1225 Je 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p6 Jl 6 '54 220w

Nation 179:96 Jl 31 '54 430w

"Mr. Gouzenko was, of course, the famous cipher clerk in the Ottawa Embassy and his novel may be considered a documentary. But even as a documentary it fails, largely because the writer so completely overstates his case. The bosses are vicious, the Party a ramp, justice is rigged, the masses are blindly led by the nose." John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 48:22 Jl 3 '54 480w

"It has all the external accoutrements of the novel, the swarming characters, boiling emotions, tense dialogues and multiplicity of scenes that constitute the panoply of fiction. But beneath it, instead of the suspense, the inadvergency, the mystery of life itself inherent in truly seminal writing, there lies the substance not of a novel, but of a tract. . . . Although written after the manner of the great Russians who threaded their tales of passion and violence with philosophic speculation, 'The Fall of a Titan' cannot be classed with the achievements of Gouzenko's predecessors. It is neither an exploration nor a discovery, but rather a dramatized indictment, an impassioned curse upon the limbs of Communism. As such, it has unquestionable power." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pl J1 18 '54 800w

"Igor Gouzenko, hitherto known simply as the man responsible for a crucial exposure of Soviet espionage, has written a novel of substantial merit. . . It is Mr. Gouzenko's ability to create atmosphere—the anguish of the masses, the ruthlessness of the privileged few, the universal terror—that gives his book its overwhelming plausibility. But it owes its excitement to his skill in the handling of a complicated narrative." Granville Hicks

+ N Y Times pl J1 18 '54 1350w

"Although he has been able to judge rather acutely that there ought to be so much raw sex, so much refined love, so much action, and so much this and that in the mixture, his cake doesn't rise, and the final product is as heavy as lead."

— + New Yorker 30:82 Ag 14 '54 270w

Reviewed by G. A. Barker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 25 '54 700w

"'The Fall of a Titan' has a double claim upon our interest. It is an excellent novel in its own right, and its author is famous. . . It has, too, the virtue of being an authoritative revelation of the human elements that animate the totalitarian power which has declared war on the non-Communist world." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 37:10 J1 17 '54 1300w

"Nobody interested in modern Russia can afford to miss this book." Kingsley Amis

+ Spec p42 J1 2 '54 650w

Springf'd Republican p4D Ja 3 '54 220w
Time 64:80 J1 19 '54 700w

"There are few graces in the manner of the writing, although the translation is smoothly and competently done. The sheer vigour and power of the narration certainly compel respect: Mr. Gouzenko handles a constantly shifting counterpoint of plot and a heavy cast of extremely diverse characters with considerable skill. Yet, for all its separate touches of convincing detail, the novel still falls short in some way as a picture of life. Villainy is portrayed so constantly with such unflinching elaborations of cruelty, virtue is allowed so small and almost token a share, that one is too often aware of the crude black-and-white world of a Soviet propaganda novel which has been simply turned inside out."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p485 J1 30 '54 550w

GOWERS, SIR ERNEST ARTHUR. Plain words: their ABC [Eng title: Complete plain words]. 298p $2.50 Knopf

808 English language—Style. Vocabulary 54-8764

"This book is in the main a reconstruction of two previous books, Plain Words and ABC of Plain Words. Both these were written at the invitation of the [British] Treasury as a contribution to what they were doing to improve official English. The first was by way of an introduction to the subject; the second was designed as a work of reference." Pref

"The publisher says the book might be called 'a condensed up-to-date Fowler,' and this is not unduly laudatory. Plain Words is urbanely written and loaded with useful information—good reading in its own right." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:101 O '54 50w

Booklist 51:58 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:31 N '54 10w

"The kinship here is with Fowler, rather than Flesch, but the demonstration is a delightful one."

+ Kirkus 22:428 J1 1 '54 160w

"Sir Ernest's approach is fresh, novel, and often pleasantly humorous. His quotations from the canon of English literature, old and new, are apt and cogent. This is a book which can be read and acted on by anybody in government or out who has occasion to write workaday English. All libraries will want to have this work available, and large libraries will need it in quantity, to satisfy the inexhaustible demand for readable, entertaining books on words." S. S. Smith

+ Library J 79:1497 S 1 '54 350w

"No pedant but obviously a man of culture and taste, Sir Ernest can be gracefully witty, and his examples are often hilarious. More important is the fact that he is clear, precise, and extremely helpful."

+ Nation 179:312 O 9 '54 280w

New Repub 131:20 N 1 '54 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 17 '54 550w

"It is true that in this book, 'Plain Words: Their ABC,' written to 'help officials in their use of written English as a tool of their trade,' Sir Ernest wastes some of his ammunition on what is not worth shooting at; but he remains an eminently safe and sane guide in the writing of clear English, and his book may be recommended with no serious qualifications." Thomas Pyles

+ Sat R 37:30 O 23 '54 550w

GRABAR, ANDRE. Byzantine painting; historical and critical study [tr. by Stuart Gilbert]. (Great centuries of painting) 200p pl $20 Skira

755.3 Painting, Byzantine. Mosaics, Christian art and symbolism. Mural painting and decoration 53-11064

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"One of the very great expressions of the human spirit is now accessible to those who cannot manage a trip to Ravenna, or Constantinople, or Cefalù, or Daphni, or Nerezi. As this art is profoundly modern, at least in its approach to space through line and flat color, the influence of this first book of adequate reproductions will be interesting to watch. It deserves an enormous success. The text, by one of the foremost scholars of Byzantine art, is admirable in its balance of interest."

+ Nation 178:137 F 13 '54 240w

"This handsome book with Grabar's excellent analysis of Byzantine painting and aesthetics marks another important milestone in the history of criticism, which only in our generation has come to realize that Byzantine civilization, though different from that of ancient Greece, is no less worthy of study and respect." M. V. Anastos

+ New Repub 130:19 F 15 '54 550w

"Professor Grabar does not deal only with problems of dating or matters affecting mainly the art historian. He aims at a wider public and he succeeds in giving the newcomer a clear conception of the origin and trends of Byzantine painting."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p36 Ja 15 '54 750w

GRAHAM, MRS ALBERTA (POWELL). La Salle, river explorer; il. by Avery Johnson. 127p $1.50 Abingdon

B or 92 La Salle, Robert Cavellier, sieur de —Juvenile literature 54-3005

An account of the life of the French explorer La Salle from boyhood to his death in New France. For grades four to six.

Booklist 51:47 S 15 '54

"Avery Johnson's interesting illustrations add vitality to this clear account of an action packed, history making life." A. R. S.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 14 '54 120w

Reviewed by M. J. Taylor

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '54 90w

GRAHAM, A. P.—Continued

"Familiar as the events are, there is a clarity and freshness to them here as an experienced writer takes them in hand. . . Recommended as introductory material."

+ Kirkus 22:363 Je 15 '54 110w

"Accurate, readable biography. . . Action filled, this book is written in excellent, forthright style." N. S. Zipf

+ Library J 79:1663 S 15 '54 100w

GRAHAM, MRS ALBERTA (POWELL).

Washington; the story of our capital. 160p il $2.75 Nelson

975.3 [917.53] Washington, D.C.—Description 53-9349

A guidebook and history of Washington, D.C. It begins with a short history of the planning of the city, and continues with a description of important buildings and monuments. Index.

Booklist 50:82 O 15 '53

Kirkus 21:437 Jl 15 '53 100w

"Recommended for junior and senior high schools." M. L. Turk

+ Library J 79:77 Ja 1 '54 80w

"It would be excellent for teen-agers or families to read before making their first visit. Only a map is lacking, but that you can find at your hotel desk." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p24 N 15 '53 30w

Wis Lib Bul 50:81 Mr '54

GRAHAM, MRS ALICE WALWORTH. See Walworth, A.GRAHAM, BENJAMIN. Intelligent investor; a book of practical counsel. [new rev ed] 272p $3.50 Harper

332.67 Investments. Securities 54-6446

A revised edition of a work first published in 1949 (Book Review Digest 1949). "The purpose of this book is to supply, in a form suitable for laymen, guidance in the adoption of an investment policy. Some of the material is derived from a larger work—Security Analysis by Benjamin Graham and David L. Dodd (McGraw Hill, rev. ed., 1951)—intended mainly for working analysts and advanced students. Comparatively little will be said here about the technique of analyzing securities; attention will be paid chiefly to investment principles and investors' attitudes." (Introd)

"This book is important to the newcomer to the market places. It is vital to those who have held securities for a long time because it is adapted to the enormous economic changes of the past few years which have a direct bearing on the value of various types of securities." H. C. Kenney

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 29 '54 650w

Springf'd Republican p9C Jl 11 '54 120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:202 O '54

GRAHAM, ELEANOR. Story of Charles Dickens; il, with plates from the original editions of his works and with additional drawings by Norman Meredith. 219p $2.50 Abelard-Schuman

B or 92 Dickens, Charles—Juvenile literature 54-10217

"This biography of Charles Dickens, from childhood to his death, emphasizes those things in the great novelist's life which shaped his literary career and which are reflected in his writings. . . Eleanor Graham is Editor of the Puffin Story Books, and also children's book editor for an English publishing house. She has been working for over twenty years with children's books as author, bookseller, and reviewer." Publisher's note

"It is difficult to see how anybody could produce a better life of Dickens for young readers than Eleanor Graham has written. . . Her book is saner and better balanced than many studies of Dickens intended for adult readers, and she is free of condescension toward subject and audience alike." E. W.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p44 N 14 '54 80w

"Fine yet unpretentious biography."

+ Kirkus 22:681 O 1 '54 220w

"To a generation that may not know his works, this is a fascinating 'success' story. . . Miss Graham's admirably told story is illustrated by some of the original Phiz and Cruikshank drawings." Margaret Read

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:694 D 6 '52 170w

"The type of biography for school children that is seen all too seldom these days." R. M. F.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 30w

GRAHAM, FLOYD FREEMAN. Public relations in music education; a study. 241p $4 Exposition

780.72 Music—Instruction and study. Public relations 54-7039

"A general survey and text book aimed at 'establishing better understanding between (1) music teachers and pupils, and (2) musicians in general and the public at large.' According to the preface, the author (Assistant Professor of Music at North Texas State College at Denton) 'observed that the overshadowing advantage lies in the capacity to build good public relations rather than in the possession of superior skills.'" Library J

"The only volume in this truly limited field, it operates comfortably within the conventions of general public relations." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:557 Mr 15 '54 90w

"On the whole, he has done a good job, and music teachers will do well to consider his suggestions carefully. . . Aside from its turgid diction, which occasionally descends to almost unbelievable ineptitudes, the work suffers from trying to do too much." A. P. Britton

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:475 Je '54 250w

GRAHAM, FRANK. Baseball extra. 250p il $3 Barnes, A.S.

796.357 Baseball—Biography 54-5408

Contents: Tinker, Evers and Chance; Charley Gehringer; Johnny Mize; Billy Martin; Ty Cobb; Pepper Martin; Joe DiMaggio; Enos Slaughter; Ted Williams; Dizzy Dean; Bob Feller; Bill Dickey; Augie Donatelli; John McGraw and Wilbert Robinson; Rogers Hornsby; Charles Stoneham; Ford Frick.

Booklist 50:455 Jl 15 '54

"Interesting." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1521 S 1 '54 30w

"If you like your stories restrained and non-theatrical, this is your meat." I. T. Marsh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 11 '54 120w

GRAHAM, JANETTE SARGEANT. Challenge of the Coulee; decorations by Sidney Quinn. 197p $2.75 Longmans

54-7682

Story of farming in the Columbia River basin, and of a seventeen-year-old boy who wanted to be an engineer, but helped out in a family crisis until things took a turn for the better. For ages twelve to sixteen.

Bookmark 14:14 O '54 20w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p7 S 2 '54 110w

Kirkus 22:393 Jl 1 '54 130w

GRAHAM, WINSTON. Venture once more; a novel of Cornwall, 1790-1791. 283p $3.75 Doubleday

54-6780

"Third in the series which began with The Renegade and Demelza this continues but does not necessarily conclude the history of the Poldarks, and particularly Ross and Demelza. The year is 1790, and much of the insurgent restlessness of the times is manifest in Ross. He now faces trial at the assizes for the rioting and assault with which the last book ended; his small daughter has died, and he is close to bankruptcy. Demelza with her charm is able to exert a little influence before the trial in which Ross undertakes his own defense, and is found not guilty. But he is still bitter and Demelza who is carrying another child, has reason to believe it is unwanted. But his personal relationships are more reconciled, his future more assured, by the close." Kirkus

Booklist 50:401 Je 15 '54

"A traditional novel which is generous in character and incident and which holds an established interest for readers of the previous books."

Kirkus 22:164 Mr 1 '54 180w

"It is a leisurely novel which transports the reader to its milieu and makes its characters one's friends." Whitney Betts

N Y Times p26 My 9 '54 240w

GRANGE, WALLACE BYRON. Those of the forest; il. by Olaus J. Murie. 314p $4.75 Flambeau pub. co, Babcock, Wis.

574 Natural history 53-12819

"This is a story of wildlife in Wisconsin, by a man who was a supervisor of game there before he founded Sandhill Game Farm for restocking Wisconsin forests... A rabbit family bears the burden of the narrative. Man is refreshingly absent." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 50:336 My 1 '54

"This compelling book is so full of the outdoors and so thought provoking that it should be in the hands of every sportsman, high school student, and nature lover for required reading." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 21 '54 180w

"Nature lore at its best." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:337 Mr 17 '54 70w

"'Those of the Forest' is far more than a story of rabbits. It is a Declaration of Interdependence of the wild. Its probity of observation and description saturates it with poetry. The style is close-growing like spruces on a rich soil. Nothing sentimental can breathe in the candor of portrayal. Ethical and spiritual overtones float in the form of questions. If the answers do not show above the horizon, they send their glow high enough to forecast the pure day to come. This book is so worthy of its great subject, so like the woods themselves, that it can be revisited again and again with manifold pleasure." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 4 '54 220w

Wis Lib Bul 50:65 Mr '54

GRANICK, DAVID. Management of the industrial firm in the USSR; a study in Soviet economic planning. 346p $5 Columbia univ. press

658 Industrial management. Russia—Economic conditions 53-11451

"This substantial monograph, in the series sponsored by the Russian Institute of Columbia University, is focused on the plant directors who manage the firms in Soviet heavy industry: how they administer production and personnel and how they are geared to the larger complexes of the planned economy, the government and the Communist Party." Foreign Affairs

"Professor Granick has made a pioneering study of industrial administration in a totalitarian society, carefully based on inductive evidence from primary sources. His analysis will permit all those who are interested in planning, socialism, decision-making, public administration, or institutional economics, to add the flesh of experimental evidence to the bony abstractions of previous speculation. And they will probably be forced to revise at least some of their views." Holland Hunter

Ann Am Acad 296:207 N '54 550w

Booklist 50:413 Jl 1 '54

Foreign Affairs 33:164 O '54 30w

GRANT, EDWIN STANLEY. Lifetime investing after fifty; a key to income after retirement. (Banner bk) 233p $3.50 Exposition

332.67 Investments 54-9535

An investment guide for the average investor. "Discusses the place of insurance, social security, common stocks, United States Savings Bonds, and mutual funds in an investment program designed to afford an after-retirement income in keeping with the standard of living to which the worker was accustomed. Should prove helpful to small investors." Library J

"A sensible and clearly written investment guide." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:2216 N 15 '54 30w

"While people planning retirement programs probably should not accept as final any one opinion in making plans, and ought to get as much information as possible from as many reliable sources as possible, this book should be of value in making such arrangements. Mr. Grant has had experience both as a businessman and an investor." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 100w

GRAUBARD, MARK AARON. Astrology and alchemy: two fossil sciences. 382p $5 Philosophical lib.

133.5 Astrology. Alchemy 53-7914

"It is first a history of the beliefs in astrology and alchemy from the earliest times up to their decline at the beginning of the modern era. Secondly, it is a plea for the recognition of these subjects as 'fossil sciences,' that is, as theories which in their day were essentially scientific but have now become untenable through the growth of knowledge." (Manchester Guardian) Glossary. Index.

"Astrology and Alchemy is what one might in social science call a functional study of the role of the cultural matrix in scientific endeavor. The anthropologist interested in the history of science, the role of supernaturalism, and the influence of cultural compulsives, will find it a scholarly analysis—and a brave one, for it is not always possible to examine discarded theories without being accused of contamination with their tenets." W. A. Lessa

+ Am Anthropol 56:1161 D '54 350w

Reviewed by W. J. Wilson

Am Hist R 59:668 Ap '54 240w

Chem & Eng N 31:4468 O 26 '53 10w

"What distinguishes this well-written and lively retelling of the stories of astrology and alchemy from the parent volumes, from which it is so largely and in many cases obviously derived, is the notion that these are fossil sciences, theories that 'failed to survive when times, ideas, values, approaches, tools, interpretations and assumptions changed.' This perspective enables the author to raise some general questions in the history of science, to rectify some abuses that he feels are not uncommon in historical treatments of science, and to cast some asides of his own along the way." Russell Kahl

+ J Philos 51:252 Ap 15 '54 1000w

"As a history, in spite of its dependence in the main on secondary sources and of those not the most recent, and in spite also of numerous errors of description, spelling, typography, and the other common effects of general carelessness in preparation, it is an interesting and valuable work for those who have not the time or opportunity to make a fundamental study of the subjects." Herbert Dingle

GRAUBARD, M. A.—Continued

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 12 '54 350w
N Y New Tech Bks 38:94 N '53

"The value of the book lies not in its rehearsal of fairly well-known facts which, as the author notes, have been collated from authoritative researches, but in the consistent effort to take the two so-called pseudo sciences seriously as phases in human cultural development."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:256 Je '54 260w

GRAVES, RICHARD MASSIE. Singing for amateurs. 140p $2 Oxford

784.9 Singing and voice culture

"Mr. Graves would seem to be by profession a member of the British diplomatic corps, who has seized the opportunity to study with voice teachers in several European capitals. He seems also to have conducted choral societies in a number of cities, both European and Asiatic, where he has been stationed. From these experiences, and as the son of musical parents, he discusses the problems and possibilities of those who would like to sing, think they can sing, or ought to sing but don't; not as professionals, but as the best kind of amateur singers." Music Lib Assn Notes

"In a field riven with dissension and showing no signs of intelligent approaches to a common basis of understanding—the field of vocal training—I would call Graves's technical basis excellent and his standards supreme. His book should be read by every professional singer today, most of whom have forgotten what he says if indeed they ever knew it, as well as by any amateurs who understand the real implications of their standing." Paul Hume

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:564 S '54 240w

"Modest and well-informed book." M. C.

+ Spec p43 Jl 2 '54 50w

"His book is compounded of exhortation, advice, reminiscence and opinion. . . The teaching of singing is everywhere in a sorry state to-day. . . Mr. Graves, by limiting his address and his subject-matter to amateurs is able in the course of his discursive narrative to keep himself out of danger and to avoid leading his readers into it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p395 Je 18 '54 450w

GRAVES, ROBERT, and PODRO, JOSHUA.

Nazarene Gospel restored. 982p $10 Doubleday
225.7 Bible. N. T.—Gospels 54-7314

"Two scholars, believing that the Gospels as we now know them are inaccurate and give quite a different picture of Christ from the real facts, and that the original Nazarene Gospel was short, terse and much different in spirit, have attempted through scholarly research to reconstruct this original document. This is done by lengthy discussions of every phase of Christ's life as reported in the Gospels." Library J

"This fantastic book is the product of an enormous amount of misdirected ingenuity unchecked by the faintest trace of common sense. . . Why should a book like this be reviewed at all? The chief reason, I think, is that it would not have been printed had it not answered real needs. Some of these needs can never be satisfied within Christianity. . . But one need deserves to be satisfied by modern biblical scholars. In rejecting the 'liberal' lives of Jesus, they have often assumed that no life of Jesus could be written. . . It is high time, as some few scholars have been urging, for competent New Testament critics to address themselves to the problem of the life of Jesus." R. M. Grant

— Christian Century 71:555 My 5 '54 900w

"Considerable erudition, in particular a wide knowledge of the Rabbinical literature, has gone into the making of this book, but the misapplication of learning in defence of an extremely improbable thesis is unfortunately a commonplace of this particular field of studies and Messrs Graves and Podro are not above criticism on this score. A great deal of their exegesis is forced, and no amount of learning or shrewd guesswork can compensate for a careful weighing of evidence and the confession that, where evidence is lacking or inadequate, the only honest conclusion is to say, 'We do not know!' . . . Mr Stuart Piggot has said of the Druid legend that it is 'a mixture of real fact, misunderstood fact, pure supposition, and a reckless jumping to exciting conclusions.' This would appear to be not far wrong as a description of the book under review." H. J. McLachlan

Hibbert J 52:315 Ap '54 2100w

"The authors throw out of the window all of the work of Catholic and Protestant New Testament scholars. It is a controversial book which however is not apt to be taken seriously by Catholics or Protestants and will serve chiefly to provide faulty ammunition for attacks on the Christian faith."

— Kirkus 22:308 My 1 '54 150w

"Undoubtedly a brilliant work of scholarship, but the Gospel according to the poetical imagination of Graves and Podro will to most readers, I'm sure, seem hardly authentic enough to adopt. University and larger public libraries will no doubt want to purchase." G. W. Wakefield

Library J 79:1049 Je 1 '54 130w

"The book cannot be called an historical study; it is rather a novel rewriting of New Testament tradition, based largely on rabbinic sources. These rabbinic sources are not critically evaluated in the manner of historians like Joseph Klausner or Talmudists like Saul Lieberman (to mention only living authorities), but are treated as quarries from which to collect speculative building blocks. . . Scarcely any sober Christian or Jewish scholar of the last half century is mentioned. Even the great Adolf von Harnack is confused with his little known father, Theodosius Harnack." W. F. Albright

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 18 '54 1000w

"Though there is much learning in this book, its strength, like its weakness, is in its imaginative aspects, and its approach (though not its close and systematic treatment) is analogous to that of Graves' 'Claudius' novels. There, too, evidence which professional scholars had rejected was made to support an ingenious reconstruction. But where traditionalists might smile at Graves' temerity in rehabilitating a pagan emperor whom the ancients had denigrated, they will be outraged by this revolutionary reconstruction of sacred history and apprehensive of the harm it might cause. Apprehensions on this score are surely baseless." Moses Hadas

N Y Times p7 Jl 18 '54 1000w

Springf'd Republican p8C Jl 25 '54 140w

GRAY, ALLEN GIBBS, ed. Modern electroplating. (Electrochemical soc. Publications) [rev ed] 563p il $8.50 Wiley

671.73 Electroplating

53-10876

"The Electrochemical Society's Modern Electroplating, 1942, has been a standard book in technical libraries since its publication. This book is the successor to it. Although some of the authors are the same, there are many new names, and all of the chapters are either new or have been extensively rewritten. The book is still addressed essentially to the same audience; that is, to industrial chemists, platers, and others who are concerned on the research and executive levels with electroplating. Theory and practice are both presented in the 19 chapters, and much information is included on the actual techniques of electroplating, testing of solutions, deposits, etc. Each of the chapters contains a bibliography of papers and patents." Library J

"Notwithstanding the omissions mentioned in these comments, 'Modern Electroplating' does contain a great quantity of information and is of value to those interested in actual plating operations." A. H. Pope

+ Chem Eng 61:397 Mr '54 400w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:386 F 15 '54 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:7 Ja '54

"This work is not intended to be an introductory text. It is rather a reference source for those familiar with the field. Its value would be even greater if it contained a comparative survey of electroplated coatings with respect to their physical properties, corrosion resistance, ease of application, and area of usefulness."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:271 Je '54 200w

GRAY, JAMES. Business without boundary; the story of General Mills. 343p il $4.75 Univ. of Minn. press

664.7 General Mills, incorporated 54-10286

A history of the General Mills company. Two chapters deal with the development of Wheaties, and the introduction of Betty Crocker, a famous General Mills symbol. Index.

"An outstanding story about an outstanding company seems the most appropriate appraisal of this latest volume in the ever growing library of corporate histories." Anthony Wirry

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 28 '54 240w

J Home Econ 46:750 D '54 40w

GREACEN, ROBERT. Art of Noël Coward. 86p il $2.50 British bk. centre

B or 92 Coward, Noel Pierce

A brief critical and biographical study of Noel Coward. No index.

"Recommended for drama, literature and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1894 O 15 '54 20w

"It is not easy to see the point of Mr. Greacen's well-meaning and almost reverent book. A facsimile of part of the manuscript of Quadriple does not get us anywhere, and of the 87 pages, much space is taken up with potted sections of Present Indicative and with potted plots of Mr. Coward's plays. What remains? Precious little." Arthur Marshall

— New Statesman & Nation 46:644 N 21 '53 220w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Sat R 37:17 Jl 17 '54 270w

GREEN, GERALD. Sword and the sun; the story of the Spanish civil wars in Peru. 363p $3.75 Scribner

53-12314

Historical novel about the conquistadores in ancient Peru. The central character is Diego de Almagro, son of a Spanish father and a gentle Indian mother. After the death of his father Diego was made leader of a faction, became ruler of Peru for a short time, but his own indecisiveness brought about his downfall.

Booklist 50:185 Ja 1 '54

"Mr. Green has taken history's bare bones and fleshed them well." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 178:313 Ja '54 160w

Kirkus 21:342 Je 1 '53 150w

"A magnificent performance, with superb descriptions and meticulous delineation of Inca customs and rites (particularly sun) which do not impede heroic narrative. No archaisms. Should please all who liked Klingman and Green's His Majesty O'Keefe and make a host of new friends who enjoy trustworthy historical fiction." Karl Brown

+ Library J 78:1531 S 15 '53 90w

"A story that is convincing and readable."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 F 21 '54 140w

"An impressive novel which achieves the excitement and action of the time with a minimum of fustian and historical distortion."

Harry Sylvester

+ N Y Times p28 O 11 '53 500w

GREEN, PAUL. Dramatic heritage. 177p $2.50 French

792 Theater

"Most of the twenty-odd short essays in this volume by the professor of dramatics at the University of North Carolina are concerned in one way or another with making a case for the 'regional' theater." Nation

"Highly recommended for theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:148 Ja 15 '54 20w

"Probably no one has more first-hand knowledge of the subject than the author, and he is often very persuasive. Many will probably agree that the enormous increase in local theatrical activities during the past quarter of a century is the most encouraging aspect of the generally dark picture of dramatic activity in the United States. Almost as many, however, may suspect that Professor Green somewhat over-estimates the actual achievement as opposed to the promise of the little theaters, community festivals, and so on."

+ — Nation 178:154 F 20 '54 200w

"Mr. Green's collection should be read by everyone concerned with regional theatrical activities." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Times p12 F 7 '54 450w

"Of all the accounts of Shaw that I have read, this of Green's, in its luminous, imaginative method, is the best portrait I know." Stark Young

+ Theatre Arts 38:12 Je '54 400w

GREEN, ROGER LANCELYN, ed. Diaries of Lewis Carroll. See Carroll, L., pseud.

GREEN, ROGER LANCELYN. Tellers of tales. new enl ed 288p $2.50 British bk. centre

928 Authors. Children's literature [54-8455]

"First published in England in 1946, this is a new and enlarged edition of a book the author calls 'an account of children's favourite authors from 1839 to the present day, their books and how they came to write them. . . . Beginning with Catherine Sinclair and The Holiday, it continues with such English writers as Lear, Carroll, MacDonald, Mrs. Ewing, Mrs. Molesworth, E. Nesbit, and others. Among the more modern ones are Beatrix Potter and Hugh Lofting; and the book closes with a chapter on 'New Tellers of Tales'—Milne, Ransome, C. S. Lewis and their contemporaries. . . . Bibliographies and an index." Horn Bk

Horn Bk 30:187 Je '54 150w

"Children themselves should enjoy it too." Edward Greenfield

+ Manchester Guardian p5 O 9 '53 70w

"It is just the book to give any child beginning to enjoy the miracle of reading. At the same time grown-up people are going to be grateful to Mr. Green for renewing their youth by reminding them of the books they read when they were young. They will find a new parlour game in looking back on their childhood's reading and comparing their lists with his." Arthur Ransome

+ Spec p668 D 4 '53 750w

GREEN, WILLIAM, and POLLINGER, GERALD. Aircraft of the world. (Hanover house) 160p il $5.95 Garden City bks.

629.133 Airplanes

[54-9927]

"An aid to identification, this valuable quarto includes photographs, specifications and three-view silhouettes of most of the planes known to be in use today, arranged by structural groups. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:336 My 1 '54

+ Bookmark 13:217 Je '54 30w

GREENAWAY, W. G. Way to better angling; with an introd. by Raymond R. Camp. 214p $3.95 McBride co.

799.12 Fishing

53-12729

The author is technical adviser to a fishing-tackle manufacturer and a broadcaster on angling. In his preface he says: "The expert and the lucky angler who can fish well-preserved and well-stocked waters will, I hope, bear with me in my attempt to help the average angler fishing average water. I have purposely avoided padding, or any consideration of multiple ways to fish. The methods and theories described herein are not the only means by which one can catch fish. My purpose is to convey to the angler, as simply as possible, the Where, When, How and, above all, the Why of fishing."

Bookmark 13:182 My '54 20w

"Anglers for pike and crappie are apt to disagree with him on some points, but for the salmon, trout, and striped bass fisherman 'The Way to Better Angling' undoubtedly is just that." George Strickler

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ap 18 '54 60w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:459 Mr 1 '54 50w

GREENBERG, DAVID BENJAMIN and GREENBERG, MRS MARIAN (GERBER). Shopping guide to Europe; il. by Paul Callé. 300p $3.50 Harper

910.2 Buying. Europe—Description and travel 54-6014

Information for American tourists telling them what to buy in the free countries of Europe. Gives advice on saving money on purchase of foreign currencies, steamship and plane passages, and railway tickets. The countries included are: Austria, Belgium, England, Scotland, France, Germany, Holland, Ireland, Italy, Portugal, Denmark, Finland, Norway, Sweden, Spain, Switzerland. No index.

Booklist 50:416 J1 1 '54

Bookmark 13:156 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by Helen Stevens

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 J1 18 '54 70w

Reviewed by Kathleen Cannell

Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 16 '54 350w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 11 '54 90w

"Even the window-shopper will get a pleasant sense of orientation." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p32 My 9 '54 50w

"It is businesslike and precise, leaving galleries, museums, history and general culture to those who, they feel, have a better right to discuss such things." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 24 '54 400w

"Far and away the best book of its kind ever seen by this department. It combines an absolute welter of fact which, spot-checked against the personal experience of this corner, is accurate, exact, and objective." H. S.

+ Sat R 37:47 Ap 3 '54 230w

Wis Lib Bul 50:131 My '54

GREENBERG, DAVID MORRIS, ed. Chemical pathways of metabolism. 2v 460;383p il v1 $11; v2 $9.50 Academic press

612.015 Metabolism. Physiological chemistry (54-7613)

"Surveys the existing knowledge of the chemical steps in the metabolism of the major constituents of living organisms. Each chapter has been written by an individual who has actively worked in that particular field and knows the subject matter from personal day-to-day contact with it in the laboratory." Chem & Eng N

Chem & Eng N 32:2915 J1 19 '54 40w (Review of v 1)

Chem & Eng N 32:3900 S 27 '54 30w (Review of v2)

N Y New Tech Bks 39:66 S '54 (Review of v 1)

GREENBERG, LEON ARNOLD, and LESTER DAVID. Handbook of cosmetic materials; their properties, uses, and toxic and dermatologic actions; with a bibliography of over 2,500 titles; with a chapter on the skin by Howard W. Haggard. 455p $12.50 Interscience

668.5 Cosmetics 54-7989

"In the main part of this book, condensed technical information is supplied on approximately 1000 synthetic chemicals and natural materials which are currently used in cosmetics. The arrangement is alphabetical with substances listed under their commonly accepted names. Included in the same alphabet are numerous cross references chiefly from synonyms." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 32:2422 Je 14 '54 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:53 J1 '54

GREENE, GRAHAM. Little horse bus; il. by Dorothy Craigie. 35p $2 Lothrop

Picture story about a kindly grocer who was nearly put out of business by a big new store across the street. Then his old delivery bus, drawn by a brave little horse, took part in catching some thieves and Mr Potter was back in business. Ages 4 to 7.

Bookmark 13:162 Ap '54 10w

"The exciting adventure is so vividly pointed up by Miss Craigie's gay illustrations that this will be a favorite with American children. They will have no difficulty in reading the detailed pictures even if a few of the English terms in the text are unfamiliar." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:170 Je '54 140w

Kirkus 22:152 Mr 1 '54 80w

"Recommended. Would need to be pre-bound for libraries." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 79:780 Ap 15 '54 70w

"Those who liked the collaboration of this clever artist and the famous novelist in 'The Little Red Fire Engine' will find their new book equally admirable in art work and color-printing, but only a little better for children in text."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 My 16 '54 120w

"I suspect that American children would have preferred Brandy as the hero, but in any case they will applaud the team's wild pursuit of burglars and rejoice in Mr. Potter's ultimate triumph. If some of Miss Craigie's pictures are a bit confusing the rest are elegant, amusing and as much a part of the story as the prose." E. L. B.

N Y Times p22 Mr 7 '54 200w

Reviewed by Augusta Baker

Sat R 37:67 N 13 '54 60w

Time 64:88 Ag 9 '54 70w

GREENE, GRAHAM. Living room; a play in two acts. 126p $2.50 Viking

822

54-5757

Graham Greene's first play. It is the story of a young girl in love with a much-older married man. She and her family are Catholics, and one member of the family is a priest, a hopeless cripple. The priest understands the girl's trouble but is powerless to help. In time she finds her own way out of her difficulty.

Booklist 50:396 Je 15 '54

"Highly recommended for drama collection." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1407 Ag '54 20w

"There are 'queer' characters in this play, and sensitive characters, and characters taut with emotion. The tone of the play is intense and serious. It well merits production."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 13 '54 170w

GREENFIELD, KENT ROBERTS. The historian and the army. 93p $2.50 Rutgers univ. press

940.54 U.S. Army. World war, 1939-1945—
Historiography 54-6840

"This volume contains the substance of three lectures given at the College of Puget Sound, in Tacoma, Washington, on April 27-30, 1953. . . My object in preparing these lectures was to invite public attention to certain aspects and results of the most ambitious enterprise in the writing of contemporary history that has been undertaken in our time. This is the history of the United States Army and its Air Forces in World War II, an undertaking which the War Department sponsored in 1945 and which is being completed under the auspices of the Department of the Army and the Department of the Air Force." (Pref) No index.

Reviewed by C. P. Stacey

Am Hist R 60:204 O '54 320w

"The Chief Historian of the Department of the Army has here done a masterful, concise, two-faceted job. . . Much of what he has to say about the contrast between the Army of the 1930's and the Army today should disturb thoughtful citizens. Both military experts and laymen should discover valuable insight and knowledge in this literate, brief work."

+ Current Hist 27:63 JI '54 90w

Foreign Affairs 32:671 JI '54 30w

"This work, based on Mr. Greenfield's lectures at the College of Puget Sound, will be valued by historians and students of the military sciences. 'The Historian and the Army' is a splendid key to the planning and execution of what is probably, as Mr. Greenfield says, the most ambitious enterprise in the writing of contemporary history to be undertaken in our time." R. D. Gardner

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 18 '54 550w

GREENMAN, FRANCES (CRANMER). Higher than the sky; il. by the author. 305p $4 Harper

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-8953

Autobiography of an American portrait painter, written at a headlong pace. She describes her various careers, always coming back to her real love, portrait painting. Her childhood in South Dakota, and her education, marriage, and motherhood, are all narrated. The book is illustrated with drawings in black and white and one portrait in color.

Booklist 50:389; 51:39 Je 15 '54; S 15 '54

"Vitality is more evident than organization in this life story which will draw a market from those acquainted with society sets, or interested in them, and who will enjoy the added element of art."

Kirkus 22:468 JI 15 '54 170w

"The book is too off-heat to be important (though the portraits and drawings may add some weight) but it's fun for its bounce and its picture of a young no-holds-barred America. Large popular collections." R. B. Robertson

Library J 79:1584 S 15 '54 150w

"Throughout, Mrs. Greenman writes with an aggressive cheerfulness and optimism, a tendency to list-making, and, often, a breathless incoherence and inconsequence. Nevertheless, her zest for living comes through. No one can doubt her sincerity when she writes, 'I love work. I love people.'" L. B. Johnson

+ N Y Times p18 S 26 '54 320w

GREER, HELEN JOHNSON, ed. Here's how; practical solutions to everyday household problems; il. by Jerry Turney. 183p $2.50 Tupper

640.2 Home economics 53-12722

786 suggestions for simplifying the everyday tasks of the housewife. Contents: Care of clothing; Child care; Cooking; Crochet, knitting, and embroidery; Gardening; Housecleaning; Household repair; Laundry; Miscellaneous; Sewing. Index.

Booklist 50:114 N 15 '53

"The clever titles employed by Mrs. Greer are outstanding and add greatly to reader interest." Beulah Rogers

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 22 '53 100w

"The book is made more useful by good chapter divisions, such as care of clothing, cooking, household repair, and others. Although the hint headings are catchy and somewhat facetious, an excellent index will serve the reader in locating information." K. M. Hergenrather

+ J Home Econ 46:278 Ap '54 130w

GREGG, JOSIAH. Commerce of the prairies; ed. by Max L. Moorhead. (American exploration and travel) 469p il maps $7.50 Univ. of Okla. press

978 West—Description and travel 54-10055

"Since 1844, when this book made its first appearance, scholars of several disciplines have recognized it with increasing respect as the most authentic contemporary portrait of the American Southwest in the years just before the annexation of Texas, in 1845. . . In this handsome new edition, Professor Moorhead has faithfully reproduced, along with the unadulterated text, the full panoply of illustrations, maps, notes, and glossary of Hispano-Mexican words that were part of the original. He has also added, from his own intensive research, a competent biography of Gregg and a list of all the major sources that Gregg seems to have consulted." New Yorker

"The year 1954 will see no new book fresher in content or more vivid on the life and land of the Southwest than this first adequate reprint of Gregg's 'Commerce of the Prairies.'" J. F. Dobie

+ N Y Times p14 S 12 '54 600w

"A work whose value and charm can hardly be exaggerated."

+ New Yorker 30:224 N 20 '54 240w

"At the risk of exaggeration, this reviewer makes bold to state that if no other words had been written about the Santa Fe Trade, Gregg would enable that Trade to be reconstructed for all practical historical purposes. Professor Moorhead has contributed a concise, but adequate, biographical sketch of Gregg in his Introduction. He explores, also, the bibliographical question of 'ghost writing' that has caused the actual literary production to be attributed to John Bigelow." W. H. Hutchinson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 7 '54 320w

GRENFELL, RUSSELL. Unconditional hatred [German war guilt and the future of Europe]. 273p $3.75 Devin-Adair

327.42 Great Britain—Foreign relations. World politics. World war, 1939-1945 53-12064

"An original discussion of the trend of European statesmanship in the twentieth century. The author, who has served for over 30 years in the British navy, maintains that history disproves Germany's sole responsibility for the two World Wars, and that propaganda campaigns created myths of virtuous, peace-loving peoples versus cruel, war-loving nations, to the detriment of amicable international relations." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 50:195 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by H. E. Barnes
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 15 '53 700w

"This should ruffle a lot of feelings both sides of the Atlantic."

Kirkus 21:608 S 1 '53 150w

GRIFFITH, ERNEST STACEY. American system of government. 202p $2.50; pa $1.25 Praeger

320.973 [342.733] U.S.—Politics and government 54-11545

"Written by an American for a British audience, this book provides us with needed perspective at home. Mr. Griffith, as Director of the Legislative Reference Service at the Library of Congress, is eminently qualified. Examining each aspect of our government separately, he answers the question of how it works, referring to its evolution from the past only to explain the present. He compares our system with the British parliamentary one, to clarify it further. In a final chapter the author evaluates the 'system' as a whole." Current Hist

Booklist 51:145 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:58 D '54 30w

"Admirable little book."

+ Current Hist 27:263 O '54 110w

"Anyone who wants a compact and clear (although slightly dry) account of how America is managed will find it in Dr Ernest Griffith's The American System of Government. He has summarised the system with the skill one would expect from the head of the research staff of the Library of Congress. The student who wishes to understand the mechanics of American government—not forgetting parites, pressure groups, and local opinion—can hardly do better than read this book." A. H.

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 29 '54 150w

"The subject of this book certainly fits it for inclusion in the 'Home Study' series, for it is important, timely and little understood. . . Dr. Griffith, has provided a book whose subject is important and he has provided a book of great excellence. It is a model of compression, scholarship and judgment."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p147 Mr 5 '54 650w

GRIFFITH, LEON ODELL. Long time since morning. 242p $3 Random house

54-7589

"This commentary on small-town Southern life is built on a theme: that part of that life is good, 'part of it is bad as the world is good and bad; and you cannot separate the good from the bad' without destroying the whole. The story rises with the morning sun over a typical North Florida community, somewhere between Pensacola and Jacksonville. It reaches an embattled climax amid the frumpiness of a luncheon club gathering. It fades away with the reconciliation of man (good and bad) and his fate (bad and good) in the descending shadows of dusk." N Y Times

"A slow, sullen landscape of ■ small, tight world where raw emotions conflict with the heritage—or is it the hangover?—of tradition, this, while never pleasant reading, has its moments of honest inquiry and examination. (Public Libraries should extend their own inquiry.)"

Kirkus 22:347 Je 1 '54 250w

"Mr. Griffith's novel is interesting as ■ study of narrative technique. The theme and characterizations are persuasive. The story is built like one of the large wheels of early American wagons. The plotting runs out from the central situation, moves for a while along the course of action, and returns to the center by the next spoke." H. C.

N Y Times p11 S ■ '54 350w

"An uneven but readable report of a Florida Gulf community with standard Deep Souf' characters and smoldering conflicts. . . Most readers will find his novel interesting; some will find it absorbing. One looks forward to the next performance, perhaps on a different stage." James Kelly

+ Sat ■ 37:14 Ag 14 '54 700w

GRIMM, JAKOB LUDWIG KARL, and GRIMM, WILHELM KARL. Tales; il. by Helen Sewell and Madeleine Gekiere. 142p $3.50 Oxford

398.2 Fairy tales

Sixteen of the Grimm favorites with new illustrations.

"Children will love the dramatic contrast of the two techniques. This is an arresting and refreshing venture."

+ Commonweal 61:203 N 19 '54 20w

"It is unusual to have collaborating artists use entirely different techniques in the same book, often in the same picture, as Miss Sewell and Mrs. Gekiere have done for the sixteen familiar stories included here. I find the result extremely interesting. However, all the pictures may not have appeal for children and only time will tell whether this is their book or a collector's item. It certainly belongs in large library collections as an original approach to a new edition of a classic; and adults who are interested in bookmaking will not want to miss it." J. D. L.

+ — Horn Bk 30:444 D '54 90w

"Miss Gekiere contributes the more fantastic and humorous pictures, done in a delicate pen line. To the traditional fairy-tale concepts, she adds fresh modern patterns, and memorable, sometimes frightening, faces, that set her people apart in an original world of fantasy. With much more power and originality, Miss Sewell blocks out, as though carving on a peasant house, and as though thinking in that long ago when the tales began, her superbly simplified, decorative figures." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 21 '54 240w

GRISWOLD, ALFRED WHITNEY. Essays on education. 164p $2.75 Yale univ. press

378 Education, Higher

54-5548

"Occasional addresses by the President of Yale University. In them he presents ■ logical and vigorous defense of higher education, and especially the liberal arts, against technological specialization, inadequate budgets, and the threat of totalitarian regimentation." (Library J) No index.

"The author's ideal is the whole man, who knows how to enjoy the leisure which machines have given him, 'who prefers the better because he understands the worse,' who knows that privilege means responsibility. This idealism he has transmitted to the reader in essays that are genial, practical in their recommendations, and admirable in purpose." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 193:72 My '54 190w

"Mr. Griswold writes from both the heart and the head and is obviously an educator of wit and discernment. His eminently quotable book deserves a wide reading public." E. T. Smith

+ Library J 79:554 Mr 15 '54 130w

"One feels occasionally that Mr. Griswold underestimates the number and the determination of those who believe, with him, in liberal learning. At times, I suspect, he thinks himself too much the island dweller at Yale, with nothing but a sea of 'a little learning' (the title of another essay) around him and the university. There are other islands, perhaps more of them than it sometimes seems. This should not imply that there is defeatism in the essays." F. M. Hechinger

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p4 F 21 '54 700w

"It is heartening to find such a man speaking out so firmly and so well on one of the greatest problems that faces America today—the lessening number of people who are willing and able to think for themselves." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 2 '54 850w

"Mr. Griswold's style is scholarly and graceful, and he draws easily upon a broad range of historical fact to illustrate his arguments. He can be witty and is urbane. His point of view is that of a liberal scholar, [who] ably defends the western tradition. He is to be congratulated that the distinguished administration he is giving to his university and the quality of his public statements should demonstrate so well this point of view in action." Harold Taylor

+ Sat R 37:19 My 29 '54 650w

Reviewed by H. M. Wriston

Yale R n s 44:119 autumn '54 650w

GRISWOLD, GEORGE, pseud. See Dean, R. G.

GROLIER encyclopedia [managing ed: Kenneth D. Sultzer] 1952 ed 10v il col il maps $89.50-$119.50 Grolier soc.

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"The Grolier Encyclopedia is 'designed' primarily to meet the growing need for a comprehensive but convenient everyday encyclopedia. It enables the reader quickly to secure supplementary information on a wide selection of thousands of subjects.' To judge from the encyclopedia, 'reader' refers to the 'general' reader who seeks information of an unspecialized, a non-technical nature. It is the eighth issue of a work under continuous revision. The Grolier Encyclopedia was first published under this title in 1944 and reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin in July, 1946." Subscription Bks Bul

"Because the Grolier Encyclopedia offers a wide range of subject coverage with topics well within the interest span of the average reader; because it offers authentic, readable, and readily located information; and because its price places the work within the purchasing range of families and libraries of limited income, the Grolier Encyclopedia is recommended for home use where it is not possible to acquire the more expensive works and for libraries which need an additional source of concise, factual information in readily usable form."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 24:66 O '53 1500w

GRONDAHL, KATHRYN. Mango season. 247p $3.50 Morrow

54-7098

An account of life among the members of the American diplomatic corps in Bangkok. The central figure is Leonora Shepperd, whose second marriage is almost at the breaking point, because her husband is becoming an alcoholic.

Booklist 50:380 Je 1 '54

"Centering in lovely Nora Shepperd, this sensitive, kaleidoscopic first novel gives a memorable picture of the diplomatic set in exotic Siam."

+ Bookmark 13:237 Jl '54 20w

Reviewed by Percy Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My 30 '54 450w

+ Kirkus 22:205 Mr 15 '54 120w

"Although the ending is contrived and somewhat unsatisfactory, the total is excellent. Recommended." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 79:771 Ap 15 '54 60w

Nation 179:157 Ag 21 '54 330w

"Born in Iowa, reared in Minnesota, Kathryn Grondahl has spent a number of post-war years in the Far East, and its evident fascination for her has resulted in this sensitive and intensely feminine first novel." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 30 '54 550w

"An interesting first novel. The author writes perceptively of the diplomatic set, as well as those Siamese who mix with them on a social or business level." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p22 My 23 '54 320w

"Smooth, shallow, extremely readable."

+ New Yorker 30:133 My 22 '54 30w

"Well done as it is, this has some of the familiar faults of the first novel. Mrs. Grondahl is capable of beautiful writing, yet sometimes slips into unfortunate awkwardnesses. She knows the second duty of the novelist (the first is to tell a story), which is to develop credible, rounded characters. But she fails with some of these—chiefly, I believe, for lack of experience. Yet here is a new writer who is not just another facile verbalizer with a slim knack for stringing together a few plot-gimmicks. Mrs. Grondahl realizes the obligations of the novelist and lives up to them. This is to say she is well on her way." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 11 '54 600w

"It is obvious from the first page that Mrs. Grondahl writes out of knowledge and that she writes well. She creates an atmosphere vaguely reminiscent of 'Peking Picnic,' without the external excitement that physical danger contributed to Ann Bridge's novel. It is not needed, however. 'The Mango Season' has the intensely individual excitement that arises out of the strange made real." Margaret London

+ Sat R 37:11 My 29 '54 500w

Wis Lib Bul 50:180 Jl '54

GRONOWICZ, ANTONI. Béla Schick and the world of children. 216p il $3.75 Abelard-Schuman

B or 92 Schick, Béla. Children—Diseases. Diphtheria 53-10941

A biography of Dr Béla Schick, whose "Schick Test" for diphtheria has saved the lives of countless children. Dr Schick, born in Hungary, is now a naturalized American citizen. Bibliography. Index.

"Highly recommended." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 79:1584 S 15 '54 220w

Reviewed by Bennett Epstein

Nation 179:311 O '54 40w

GROSS, BEN. I looked and I listened; informal recollections of radio and TV. 344p $3.95 Random house

B or 92 Radio broadcasting. Television broadcasting. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-7806

"Back in 1925 a likable young reporter named Ben Gross stood helplessly before a large instrument with a multiplicity of knobs and a gooseneck speaker on top. It was a radio, and Gross had just been bellowed out of the city room to become radio editor of the New York Daily News. . . In [this book] he sets out to tell how both he and the medium have grown." (Sat R) Index.

Reviewed by Larry Wolters

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 7 '54 280w

Kirkus 22:560 Ag 15 '54 140w

"This is highly recommended to radio, television, cinema and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:2461 D 15 '54 40w

"There's much radio history in these breezily told recollections. . . Book publishers, says Mr. Gross, needn't worry overlong about TV's competition. Sooner or later it will either raise the public's taste or depress it so that it will drive people to books. Well, here's a good lively one to begin with." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p7 O 10 '54 800w

"If Gross was likable as a young reporter, he is more so now—a much respected man whose gentle criticism can on occasion stab like a needle. He is especially noted for self-effacing modesty, which is precisely the trouble with 'I Looked and I Listened.' Modest men just shouldn't write books about themselves." Allen Churchill

Sat 37:34 N 6 '54 280w

GROSSETT, HARRY. Down to the ships in the sea. 256p il $3.75 Lippincott

B or 92 Diving, Submarine 54-9423

The seventy-year old Scottish author sets down some of his experiences during fifty years of salvage and rescue work as a deep-sea diver.

GROSSETT, HARRY—Continued

Booklist 51:98 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:4 O '54 30w

Reviewed by Richard Philbrick

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 14 '54
40w

"This is a little classic on the nature of diving and an honest craftsman's report on the techniques and strategies of underwater man."

Alfred Stanford

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p2 N 28 '54
550w

GROSSARD, SERGE. Woman with no past; tr. from the French by Daphne Woodward. 283p $3 Dutton

54-10917

The captain of a barge, plying the rivers and canals of northern France, picks up a woman fleeing from a murder which she committed in self defense. During the five days required to take her to Paris the captain falls in love with her, but he is a just man, and he influences her to give herself up.

Booklist 51:133 N 15 '54

"The scene is laid among the barge canals of Northern France with a nice sense of description and a pleasant attention to technical detail. . . The book is extremely readable; the sense of pursuit, above all in the early chapters, is tense and exciting; the characters, particularly the restless, ambitious, unpleasant yet human mate, are lifelike, and one feels mildly in sympathy with them. This is rare, in the French novel of today where every author seems to labour to make his characters as repellent, selfish and degraded as possible."

Betty Askwith

+ New Statesman ■ Nation 47:201 F 13
'54 190w

Reviewed by Anne Brooks

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 14 '54
550w

"Serge Groussard, who won the Prix Femina for this novel, has done a nice job of eking out his plot, while sustaining the suspense. His talent for romance is not so sharp." Patricia Blake

+ — N Y Times p42 O 17 '54 350w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 7 '54
80w

"Unfortunately for American readers, the dialogue has been translated by Daphne Woodward into an idiom so exclusively British that its incongruity with the extreme Frenchness of the characters and setting is disturbing. But it is a well-planned narrative with a scenario-like quality, and with a number of small, earthy touches that remind one of those moving, elemental films that Marcel Pagnol directs with such seemingly artless perception." J. S.

+ Sat R 37:41 O 30 '54 250w

"It is a sombre story. . . From the beginning it is clear that the dice are loaded against [the woman], and the narrative follows the note of her despair and desperation. As a character she suffers, and the book suffers with her. . . Much more alive is Malard, the skipper, and the most satisfying parts of M. Groussard's novel are in fact those in which he describes the life of men such as Malard who work on the canals of northern France, and the strong code of honour which in spite of their rivalry binds them together."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p101 F 12 '54
200w

GRUBB, DAVIS. Night of the hunter. 273p $3
Harper

53-11836

When Ben Harper knew he would have to hang for his crime, he imparted his secret to his young son John and made him swear to guard little Pearl and never tell where the stolen money was hidden. Then it is John's story as many people try to find out the truth, especially that strange creature, The Preacher, who can win his way with most but fails with John.

Booklist 50:278 Mr 15 '54

"It is a book, above all, of human values, of decency, of compassion and of love, trusting and unashamed." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 180:71 O '54 340w

"There's magic in this beautifully crafted novel by a West Virginia writer of short stories. It's the magic of the changing seasons in the Ohio valley, burgeoning lush and green in the spring time, hard with frost in the fall. It's the magic of the hills sloping from ridge rimmed horizons to the reedy banks of the river. Perhaps the greatest magic, however, lies in the deft manner in which the author has succeeded in projecting a dramatic tale of life thru the elemental simplicity of childhood." Henry Cavendish

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 21 '54
450w

Reviewed by Jean Holzhauer

Commonweal 60:123 My 7 '54 600w

"It's an effective and often touching drama. A book to watch."

Kirkus 21:799 D 15 '53 220w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 48:51 J1 10
'54 320w

"This is a remarkable first novel, conveying the strength of a rich talent. It is not without flaw; the author's intelligence sometimes obtrudes upon and complicates his materials; but it is nevertheless an unusually readable and exciting book." Gene Baro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 21 '54
850w

"A brilliant novel. . . One comes to the satisfying end of the story with a profound sense of relief, for the author's skill in handling his theme is such that the fate of John, and of Pearl, becomes something of momentous import." H. F. West

+ N Y Times p4 F 21 '54 700w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Yorker 30:121 Mr 20 '54 440w

"First of all, Mr. Grubb makes this a fast-paced, technically admirable tale. Second, he has done this without sacrificing quality. He is a good writer—a very good one indeed—and that fact sticks out all over his book." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 23 '54
800w

"At first glance, Davis Grubb's short and highly coherent novel, 'The Night of the Hunter,' seems only one more portrayal of an old and universally known situation: cruel and greedy stepfather, foolish but good young mother, and past these a heartless, disbelieving world through which a hunted young one flees in terror. However, the skill of the author, both to create and to choose what must be created, makes for a fresh and tensely moving tale." Harriette Arnow

+ Sat R 37:19 F 20 '54 650w

"The terror of a child made to bear more than a child's load can seldom have been more painful than it is here. Mr. Grubb has written a brilliant but appalling story." L. A. G. Strong

Spec p70 J1 9 '54 280w

Time 63:92 Mr 1 '54 450w

"The book moves fast, with mounting excitement to its climax."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p309 My 14
'54 170w

GRUBER, FRANK. Bitter sage. 217p $2.50
Rinehart

54-5394

Western story.

Booklist 50:322 Ap 15 '54

Kirkus 22:17 Ja 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by Hoffman Birney

N Y Times p33 Ap 11 '54 40w

"In Tancred's story Mr. Gruber has a novel twist which he has worked out with skill."

S. M. Agnew

+ Sat M 37:15 Mr 27 '54 80w

GRUBER, FRANK. Limping goose. 251p $2.75
Rinehart

Mystery story.

54-9855

Kirkus 22:552 Ag 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 31 '54
120w

"Minor as a mystery (the essential clue is clever but withheld), but a fine addition to the saga of the financial jiggery-pokery of book-salesman Johnny Fletcher and strong man Sam Cragg. Frankly I don't care whether there's a murder or not so long as I can watch Johnny in triumphant conflict with creditors, hotel managers and skip-trace bill collectors." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p40 N 7 '54 40w

"Solution's rather far-fetched, but do you care?" L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 N 28 '54
70w

GRUBER, FRANK. Lonesome badger. 250p
$2.50 Rinehart

Detective story.

53-10922

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ap 11
'54 110w

Kirkus 21:723 N 1 '53 60w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ap 25
'54 50w

"It's rough and clever, incredibly fast and a lot of fun, with a definitely surprising solution (always a rare commodity)." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p26 Ja 17 '54 30w

"Gruber's peculiar slapdash style makes it all reasonably funny. B minus." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 21 '54
40w

"Lively comic strip." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 10w

GRUENBERG, MRS SIDONIE (MATSNER),
ed. Encyclopedia of child care and guidance.
1016p il $7.50 Doubleday

649.1 Children—Care and hygiene. Children—Management. Infants—Care and hygiene 54-9608

"Part I of this comprehensive, modern, reference volume is alphabetically arranged by topic; Part II has articles by specialists on basic aspects of child development. Charts, tables, drawings. List of agencies and organizations, further reading." Bookmark

Booklist 51:146 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:4 O '54 20w

Reviewed by Marcia Winn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 14 '54
450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

"Throughout the attitudes reflected are sound, experienced and flexible, and represent the best that has been learned in this field. A solid and sizable item for steady sales, and a lasting market. A wonderful value too."
+ Kirkus 22:519 Ag 1 '54 210w

"Recommended as thoughtful, comprehensive, fairly adequately detailed; a good buy at the price, probably better qualified than anything now available to meet the general reader's needs not met by special studies." Anne Wood

+ Library J 79:2214 N 15 '54 210w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 24 '54
30w

"The encyclopedia has much to offer parents, particularly in the first section. The second half of the book which has been primarily contributed by those engaged in research is probably more useful to teachers, physicians and other professions." S. R. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 24 '54
250w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 14 '54
120w

GRUENING, ERNEST HENRY. State of Alaska. 606p maps $7.50 Random house

979.8 Alaska—History

54-7799

"Ernest Gruening was governor of Alaska from 1939 to 1953. From the experiences and observations of this long term of office, he has been very successful in presenting a history of the long term of office, he has been very successful in presenting a history of the territory from the time of its discovery in 1741 to the present, in which economic factors and their interaction with political forces are emphasized." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Kathryn Winslow

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 12 '54
350w

"This brings the territory into clear focus as an overlooked yet potentially resourceful land and a curious political child our government hasn't properly reared. For many years governor of Alaska, Mr. Gruening has come to know the history and economy of the territory well enough to write of it definitively, and in his excellent and well researched chronology, traces Alaskan history from Bering's discovery to the present struggle for statehood."

+ Kirkus 22:696 O 1 '54 260w

"The struggles of Alaska to gain statehood are particularly interesting. Recommended for university and large public libraries." James Heslin

+ Library J 79:2322 D 1 '54 150w

"This book has the thoroughness of a first-class chronicle and the excitement of a fast-moving historical novel." W. O. Douglas

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 N 28 '54
900w

Reviewed by J. P. Nichols

N Y Times p6 N 28 '54 1150w

GUARDINI, ROMANO. The Lord [tr. by Elinor Castendyk Briefs]. 535p $6.50 Regnery

232.9 Jesus Christ

54-11830

"Monsignor Guardini, who teaches at the University of Munich, has written more than just a life of Jesus. He places that life in the context of history and shows how the teachings of Jesus are related to the whole body of church doctrine and practice." N Y Times

"The Lord is full of epigrammatical brilliance and deep wisdom. Every page contains some notable thought or reflection, and the reader ends with the feeling that he has been in contact with one of the great minds of our day." J. A. O'Brien

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 26 '54
320w

"This book is a masterpiece. It embodies the wealth of modern exegetical criticism opened by Protestant theologians like Karl Barth, the great traditions of 'devotio moderna,' French seventeenth century thought, the great insights of the Catholic mystics, and the matured speculation of scholasticism. But above all it is an approach to Christ through the Gospels." H. A. Reinhold

+ Commonweal 61:192 N 19 '54 700w

"A book that will richly repay the attention of the careful reader." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p22 D 5 '54 60w

GUARESCHI, GIOVANNI. Don Camillo's dilemma; tr. from the Italian by Frances Frenaye. 255p il $3 Farrar, Straus

54-9353

Another series of stories about the Italian priest, Don Camillo, and his battles with Pep-

GUARESCHI, GIOVANNI—Continued
pone and the other Reds in his parish. Don Camillo still converses familiarly with the figure of Christ in his little church, and still engages in warfare with gusto.

Booklist 50:451 J1 15 '54

"A thoroughly lively, deft and witty affair. . . The anecdotes that make up this amusing and delightful book are neither better nor worse than those in the two preceding volumes; they are just the same: perfect."
Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 179:472 S '54 250w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 J1 4 '54 350w

Horn Bk 30:359 O '54 80w

Kirkus 22:317 My 15 '54 120w

"Recommended for general reading." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1051 Je 1 '54 140w

"Is it crabbled to suggest that it is all wearing a little thin? The joke about the priest and the Communist mayor in a Po valley village, their squabbles and interdependence and uneasy alliance, was a good enough joke to start with; but this new volume is all repetition; the same old tales." Isabel Quigley

Manchester Guardian p4 S 21 '54 280w

"For the third time Don Camillo, the Italian priest plagued with a partially Communist parish, is back—his practical dilemmas with his godless flock adding a delightful touch of good humor and modern fantasy to the bitter world battle of ideologies." Joanna Spencer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 27 '54 650w

"Once more Guareschi has succeeded in making his priest lovable and human; once again the Mayor is an excellent foil. 'Don Camillo's Dilemma' shows us why Italy can have the largest organized Communist party outside of Russia, and still remain an imperturbably Catholic country." Frances Keene

+ N Y Times p4 Je 27 '54 450w

"The tricks with which these two confound one another, their truces, their tempers, and the pervading atmosphere of sickly, sticky love in which they exist are all represented exactly as before, indicating once again that Signor Guareschi apparently believes one good repetition deserves another."

— New Yorker 30:63 J1 3 '54 90w

"Sometimes Mr. Guareschi himself appears surprised at the way his characters, in their irrepressible high spirits, get out of hand. But in the end, he rounds them up firmly. Don Camillo who has been sent by the Bishop to an isolated village for a period of 'political convalescence' is brought back to the rectory by Peppone to the strains of the Internationale. The score stands even—Steven. We wait for the next round!" Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 25 '54 800w

"Don Camillo, the unpredictable and appealing village priest of 'The Little World of Don Camillo' and 'Don Camillo and His Flock,' is back again. As far as I'm concerned, he can go on reappearing indefinitely to my increasing pleasure, entertainment, and instruction. And there is indeed no reason why he shouldn't do so since he belongs to that wonderful company of column-creations which includes Finley Peter Dunne's Mr. Dooley and Langston Hughes's Simple. There are also moments when he recalls G. K. Chesterton's Father Brown. A rich mixture for these thin years." Al Hine

+ Sat R 37:20 Je 26 '54 550w

"Some of the 25 sketches in this volume show the marks of haste; all were written originally for a right-wing humorous weekly that Writer-Cartoonist Guareschi ordinarily edits and supplies with half its material. Some are forced. But no more amusing satire has come out of the essentially humorless battleground of the cold war."

+ Time 64:82 J1 5 '54 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p717 N 12 '54 80w

GUERARD, ALBERT LEON. Bottle in the sea. 159p $3.50 Harvard univ. press

194 Philosophy 54-5019

"If in the sea of time some day men should find this bottle, they will find in it the faith of a man genially but stubbornly humanist in this era when human beings were given to wild flights or rigid orthodoxies. Mr. Guérard, French by education, American by fifty years of domicile, here tells us with simplicity and candor what he believes and what is more, what belief means in terms of the three parts of his book entitled, Thought, Dream and Faith." N Y Times

Booklist 50:310 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by Michael Creal

Canadian Forum 34:119 Ag '54 200w

"The range of philosophical interpretation, the analyses of the essences of the Western religions, the ease and scholarship of the writing will appeal to the thoughtful, educated person."

+ Kirkus 22:94 F 1 '54 190w

"In his persuasive, delightful and often ironic book, Mr. Guerard presents a wonderfully sanguine philosophy and an unusual capacity for self-perception." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:773 Ap 15 '54 90w

"Here in 160 pellucid pages Mr. Guerard gives both the portrait and the history of his mind. And though there are a few of his conclusions with which I do not happen to agree, there is no point at which I do not admire the way in which he arrives at them." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 178:337 Ap 17 '54 650w

"Through all the pages of Albert Guérard's 'Bottle in the Sea' there is the sense of an unremitting integrity. This personal testament is lucid and unpretentious; implicit in its tone and spirit are the very qualities which its author professes as his creed: self-respect, good will, the critical spirit, and that 'faith [which is] the hope that charity is not vain.'" Hiram Haydn

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 30 '54 440w

"A persuasive avowal of an honest and sensitive modern mind." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 4 '54 950w

"A serene testament for our time, its skeptical humanism bearing comparison with no less a person than his beloved Montaigne."

+ New Yorker 30:145 My 8 '54 130w

"As with so many books of this sort, the only way to get the good out of it wholly is to follow the step-by-step argument. A practiced teacher, Dr. Guerard here provides you with just such a logical procession of steps to his thinking." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 11 '54 600w

"There are fears in the book, as well as moments of sturdy courage. The slightly overwrought epigrammatic style is perhaps a symptom of uneasiness. His energetic, doubting mind has carried him far, but not to the point of ultimate poise. . . True, the book is 'a testimony, not a treatise.' But its analysis stops too short, which is dangerous in a book which makes so great a point of clear and critical thinking. But, if we feel a little put upon at times, it is by a daring and well-informed mind; and the experience is worth it." R. B. Sewall

+ Yale R n s 44:152 autumn '54 400w

GUGELER, RUSSELL A. Combat actions in Korea; infantry, artillery, armor [foreword] by Orlando Ward]. 260p maps $5 Combat

951.9 Korean war, 1950- 54-7137

"Descriptions of various Korean battles and their results, followed by brief discussions of strategy, cost in men and equipment, and causes and remedies for errors made. Of general as well as military interest in its readable report of exactly what happened and how the U.S. Army performed." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 51:59 O 1 '54

"As wars become more intricate, the job of recording their details becomes more exacting. Capt. Russell A. Gugeler, in this account of the Korean War, has been most painstaking—and his book achieves the subtle, cumulative impact of a powerful documentary. The reader finds himself participating in all the frontline episodes that Captain Gugeler presents." George Barrett

+ N Y Times p3 J1 4 '54 600w

GUIDEPOSTS (periodical). What prayer can do, by the editors of Guideposts; introd. by Norman Vincent Peale [with photographic commentary by Lucien Aigner]. 95p $2.50 Doubleday

264.1 Prayer 53-7976

"This attractive square book with many full-page illustrations shows how prayer can be used effectively by people of all creeds." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:104 F '54 20w

"The experiences of scores of persons are related, mostly in the third person, in non-technical language and from a nonsectarian viewpoint." L. T. H.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 7 '54 70w

"A helpful book for those who are struggling through the beginnings of a Christian experience."

+ Kirkus 21:624 S 1 '53 110w

GUILLEMIN, ERNST ADOLPH. Introductory circuit theory. 550p $8.50 Wiley

537.5 Electric circuits 53-11754

"A college textbook that will undoubtedly find wide use in its field. Although introductory as the title indicates, it is thorough and its purpose is to prepare students to do practical work in network analysis and synthesis. The author is Professor of Electrical Communication at Massachusetts Institute of Technology." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:778 Ap 15 '54 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:21 Mr '54

GUINN, JACK. Caperberry bush. 273p $3.95 Little

54-6877

A bored rewrite man on a big city newspaper is the narrator. He describes what happens when the boss of the paper, Mrs Duncan, decides to run for governor. A little man, ■ scientist, turns up with a so-called "truth drug," and throws the whole situation into a greater turmoil.

Kirkus 22:210 Mr 15 '54 150w

"The author has a brash, wry style, and has used his serio-ludicrous plot as a frame upon which to hang some pertinent comments on politics, journalism, and morality. Recommended for medium and large public libraries." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:859 My 1 '54 120w

"The author, in his disclaimer, says 'the story is nonsense.' Had he thought more highly of it, written it more carefully, and allowed himself to be moved by some of the undercurrents, 'The Caperberry Bush' might have been a very passable satire."

Nation 179:313 O 9 '54 300w

"Mr. Guinn tells his story with a fastness of pace and a brittleness of language that carries it through to its beautifully ironic close on a highly sustained note of satire. Besides weaving a delightfully fantastic tale, he paints the portrait of a newspaper man who is as real and pungent as the smell of newsprint on a paper just off the press." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 30 '54 500w

"Mr. Guinn's plot is, of course, a caricature and all his characters are hypocrites; only Mr. Ely, the cynic who lives alone and is beholden to no one, comes through unafraid of the truth. But such a vehicle is ideal for the author's real talent for sardonic, barbed and earthy humor." N. B. Brown

+ N Y Times p13 My 30 '54 460w

Springf'd Republican p8C J1 25 '54 100w

GUINZBURG, HAROLD KLEINERT. Books and the mass market. See Books and the mass market

GURIAN, WALDEMAR, and FITZSIMONS, MATTHEW ANTHONY, eds. Catholic church in world affairs. 420p $4.25 Univ. of Notre Dame press

282.09 Catholic church—History 53-7351

A symposium which attempts to present the role of the Catholic church in the contemporary world. Partial contents: On the structure of the church-state problem, by J. C. Murray; Papal diplomacy: its organization and way of acting, by E. L. Heston; Democracy and the Catholic church, by Oskar Bauhofer; The church and human rights, by Heinrich Rommen; The present state and the problems of the missions of the Catholic church, by G. Naidenoff; Catholicism and the German public, by O. B. Roegele; Contemporary French Catholicism, by Adrien Dansette; The Catholic church in England, by M. A. Fitzsimons; The Catholic church in the United States, by T. T. McAvoy; The church in Latin America, by P. M. Dunne. Index.

"More like a series of small books written by carefully selected authors about subjects with which they are familiar, this is not an exhaustive volume, not a reference book; but it gives a good, general idea of the Catholic Church to those readers—and they are many—who are more familiar with almost every subject than with the Church's own idea of herself and her mission."

+ Cath World 179:321 J1 54 200w

"The Catholic Church in World Affairs would be worth the purchase price for Father Murray's essay 'On the Structure of the Church-State Problem' alone. Up to the present, the contributions of this pioneering Jesuit in the field of Church-State relations have not appeared in a single volume, but must be sought in scholarly journals of limited circulation." J. N. Moody

+ Commonweal 60:418 J1 30 '54 1250w

Foreign Affairs 33:157 O '54 40w

"Stately and on the whole impressive symposium . . . [which] has a greater measure of unity than the reader might anticipate, even though the several essays which report on conditions in various parts of the world suffer from discursiveness and the perhaps insurmountable difficulty of compressing judgments on all aspects of a many-sided situation into a few pages. Some of the contributors ride hobbies, too, or go off on tangents which American readers will find it difficult to evaluate. On the whole, however, the reporting is good—even, on occasion, excellent." G. N. Shuster

+ Yale R n s 43:609 summer '54 900w

GURIAN, WALDEMAR, and others, eds. Soviet imperialism: its origins and tactics; a symposium. 166p $3.75 Univ. of Notre Dame press

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations 53-7350

"A symposium of articles relating to a problem of greatest import. This problem is the relation and proportion of Communist aggressiveness to Russian expansion. It is part and parcel of ■ larger question: whether Russian power or international Communism be the main source of our dangers." Commonweal

"This is ■ provocative volume. One is tempted to ask whether the real difference between traditional Russian expansionism and Soviet imperialism may not lie in the fact that the latter has been more effective, more ruthless and at the same time more deceptive than was the former although at times just as heavy-handed. However, it is essentially the same old game, but it is being played for the very highest stakes." J. S. Reshetar

GURIAN, WALDEMAR—Continued

Am Hist R 59:377 Ja '54 450w

"This symposium has more unity than most. The contributors have conscientiously adhered to the question posed. . . . The attempt to isolate factors of Russian expansionism from Soviet expansionism may be useful in academic analysis; the usefulness for policy formation is not persuasively demonstrated in this otherwise excellent and informative volume." C. D. Fuller

+ — Ann Am Acad 290:186 N '53 400w

"Professor Gurian should be praised for his serious effort to organize this discussion and publish the proceedings. The alarmingly sharp dissension among 'experts' merely indicates the magnitude of the problem whose importance has hitherto not been adequately explored by American diplomacy and in whose day-to-day handling the Department of State often reveals erratic methods and a tepid temper." J. A. Lukacs

+ Commonweal 58:426 Jl 31 '53 950w

Foreign Affairs 32:340 Ja '54 20w

U S Quarterly Bk ■ 9:401 D '53 240w

GUSTAVSON, LEALAND R. Enjoy your golf. 157p il $2.95 Harcourt

796.352 Golf

54-6385

"Not for the expert but for the duffer, this golf guide makes a score of 100 on an 18-hole golf course a glory instead of a disgrace. Furthermore, with careful study, that 100 can be cut down, and enjoyment should accompany it. Rules—strict and gentlemanly—are included. The illustrations are highly practical." (Wis Lib Bul) Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 51:78 O 15 '54

"The book's principal value lies in its simplicity of language and excellence of the drawings." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 21 '54 100w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1521 S 1 '54 20w

Wis Lib Bul 50:176 Jl '54

GUYON, YVES. Prestressed concrete; ed. by W. M. Johns from the trs. of A. J. Harris [and others]. 543p il $12 Wiley

620.137 Concrete

53-12589

"Prestressed concrete has gained wide use as a structural building material in Europe and it is coming into use in our own country. This book is a translation of the author's Béton Précontraint, published in Paris in 1951. It is divided into three parts, the first of which describes European practices in prestressing. The second part is devoted to the design of statically determinate beams, and the third part describes tests and experimental studies of prestressed concrete. It is of interest to bridge designers and other graduate structural engineers." Library J

Eng N 152:99 Mr 18 '54 450w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 78:2036 N 15 '53 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:86 N '53

GWALTNEY, FRANCIS IRBY. Yeller-headed summer. 207p $3 Rinehart

54-10961

Novel about an Arkansas constable, a near-moron, who held his job because he kept the poorer elements of the little town in line. When he made the mistake of discovering a transgression of a member of a Good Family his job was ended.

Kirkus 22:457 Jl 15 '54 240w

"Despicable though most of the characters are, this first novel is a piece of regional literature well worth getting acquainted with." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1832 O 1 '54 70w

"Sad and angry about those aspects of life in his home state which compel men and women into sub-human behavior, he may have intended a satire or a sociological study. But his treatment of character and situation is entirely superficial, and there is very little humor or vitality and no real anger or pity in 'The Yeller-Headed Summer.' . . . It should be added that the writing is spare and efficient, the pace brisk, and the atmosphere occasionally vivid enough to make us fear that there really may be towns like Walnut Creek." Dan Wickenden

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 19 '54 500w

"There is at least one thing seriously wrong with Mr. Gwaltney's novel: we are never sure how he feels about his characters. Although he is constantly prompting from the wings, he never gives us a clue to his own attitude. He has written a novel about comic people without writing a comedy; and he has evolved a tragic situation without the compassion that makes a tragedy." David Dempsey

— + N Y Times p43 O 17 '54 210w

"The Creoles, the mountaineers, and the Pikes will be remembered chiefly because of the novels of George Cable, Mary Noailles Murtree, and Bret Harte. The Bedders of Arkansas have found their chronicler—and a thoroughly competent one—in Francis Gwaltney." H. J. Mason

+ Sat R 37:17 O 9 '54 230w

"When Jack sets out to help track down murderers, the yarn gets both confusing and gamy. What saves it is that Author Gwaltney has a foxy ear for cracker talk, a gift for deft characterization, and enough sense to let his characters do what comes naturally."

Time 64:112 O ■ '54 150w

HHAAN, ENNO R. How to remodel your home. 176p il $2.95 Pop. mechanics

643.7 Architecture, Domestic—Designs and plans 53-11873

"Want to give your house a face lifting? In 17 chapters you are taken thru step by step instructions so that the home mechanic with a little know-how can successfully tackle jobs usually done by craftsmen." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 50:413 Jl 1 '54

Reviewed by William Yates

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 11 '54 20w

HABER, WILLIAM, and others, eds. Manpower in the United States; problems and policies. (Industrial relations research association. Publication) 225p $3 Harper

331.112 Labor supply—U.S. 54-8962

"A collection of articles on such manpower problems as the effects of social security on the size and dimensions of the U.S. labor force, the mobility of our working population, and the weaknesses of the government's military manpower policy. Since the editors feel that the articles present an integrated picture of manpower problems and research, no editorial comment is presented aside from the introduction." Library J

Booklist 51:55 O 1 '54

"Most of the articles are thoughtful, provocative, and well written; a few are primarily statistical essays which would probably interest specialists only. Although numerous footnote citations are given in the articles, no bibliographies are provided, either for separate articles or the work as a whole. Book is suitable as supplementary reading for a college course in manpower problems. Purchase limited to university and specialized libraries." Seymour Amlen

+ Library J 79:1319 J1 '54 130w
Springf'd Republican p9C S 26 '54 130w

HACKETT, MARIE. Cliff's edge. 245p $3.50 McGraw

B or 92 Insane—Care and treatment 54-6733

In The Cardboard Giants (Book Review Digest 1953) the author's husband explained how he fought his way back to sanity, after his war service. In this book Mrs Hackett describes her side of the ordeal, and her own fight for her husband's sanity.

"This is a true account of the effect of mental illness in the breadwinner of a fairly typical American family. It is told simply and convincingly by the wife of the patient and, because it reveals our professional shortcomings, as well as being a very human story, it is suggested reading for both social and health workers." Dorothy Deming

+ Am J Pub Health 44:1371 O '54 190w
Booklist 50:352 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Russell MacFall
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 12 '54 50w

"A story which has no literary virtues beyond its ingenuous but genuine sincerity—this is holding reading and should take many of our uneasy aversions to mental health out of the attic and into the public domain."

+ Kirkus 22:175 Mr 1 '54 180w

"Recommended for public library purchase." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:768 Ap 15 '54 120w
Springf'd Republican p7C Je 6 '54 220w

HACKETT, WALTER ANTHONY. Queen who longed for snow; il. by Beryl Bailey Jones. 20p $2.25 Houghton

398.2 Folklore—Portugal 53-6214

A retelling of an old legend about the princess from a northern land who became queen of Portugal. When the king learned that his queen longed for the snows of her northern home he had thousands of almond trees planted, so that for several months each year the queen could see the snow-white flowers. For ages 8 to 11.

Booklist 50:326 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel
Christian Science Monitor p9 My 13 '54 70w

"There is not enough action in the story to hold a very lively story-hour audience, but little girls will enjoy reading it themselves; and the beautiful bookmaking and illustrations make it a perfect Easter or spring birthday gift." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:95 Ap '54 80w

Kirkus 22:60 F 1 '54 70w

"Recommended for ages 8-11." H. M. Brogan
+ Library J 79:785 Ap 15 '54 80w

HACKETT, WALTER ANTHONY. Swans of Ballycastle; il. by Bettina. (Ariel bks) 63p $2.75 Farrar, Straus

398.2 Folklore—Ireland

A retelling of the old Celtic tale of the Children of Lir, the three Irish children who were turned into swans. Illustrated in color. For ages five to nine.

Booklist 51:179 D 15 '54

"It would be hard to find a more charming book than this in all the season's output. There is haunting familiarity in the fairy-tale ingredients of the story—a story that has been told the world over in many languages, and is still a favorite with children—retold here with a nostalgic sweetness exquisitely complemented by the pictures of an Irish seacoast village." O. D. Hormel

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '54 120w

"A fine choice for reading aloud and storytelling." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:434 D '54 120w

"A quietly retold Irish legend."

+ Kirkus 22:479 Ag 1 '54 140w

"Recommended for grades 2-5." E. J. Bowland

+ Library J 79:2491 D 15 '54 70w

"Diluted as it is, this version of 'The Children of Lir,' an Irish legend, still has magic and charm. Ballycastle, not especially Irish in atmosphere, can be identified by any child who has vacationed at the shore. . . There is food for the young imagination here, and the pictures are gentle as Irish mist." Mary Welsh

+ N Y Times p30 O 3 '54 150w

HADDEN, ARTHUR ARCHIBALD, and GINGER, VICTOR K. Handbook of standard time data for machine shops. 473p il $10 Ronald

621.9 Machine shop practice 54-521

"This volume makes available detailed standard time data for establishing machine shop time values. The data and techniques have been developed from thousands of time studies made in professional practice over a period of more than twenty-five years. The specific conditions have been standardized, and the standards have been verified by conventional time studies and by applications to prove their validity. The data have been found to be accurate within practical requirements and are used today by many well-known companies." Pref

Chem & Eng N 32:870 Mr 1 '54 30w

"The book is a reference manual potentially useful to all who are concerned with 'standard times' from specialists in time study to labor union leaders. The authors are respectively, President and Vice President of McClure, Hadden and Ortmann, Inc, a firm specializing in management engineering." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:559 Mr 15 '54 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:31 Mr '54

HADER, MRS BERTA (HOERNER), and HADER, ELMER. Wish on the moon [il. by the authors]. 38p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

54-12595

Picture-story book relating how Mrs McGinty wished for a spring garden and how all the little folks living on the Hill, recipients of Mrs McGinty's bounty, helped to make her wish come true.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:94 D '54 120w

Booklist 51:90 O 15 '54

"The illustrations are natural and lifelike. This is a quiet story that should appeal to the young school child—and to those who love small animals." E. S. D.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 14 '54 40w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '54 60w

Kirkus 22:580 S 1 '54 60w

"Recommended where other titles of this kind are in demand." M. J. Meade
Library J 79:2496 D 15 '54 70w

"This gentle tale gives a new excuse for a beautiful animal picture book to read to small children, with eighteen lovely color pages, and it gives once more a charming reflection of the Haders in their own home on the wooded hillside above the Hudson." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 7 '54 160w

HADER, B. H.—Continued

"This is a very charming story with equally delightful illustrations by the authors."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 14 '54
50w

"'Wish on the Moon' will be enjoyed by both adult and child who share it, by the seven-to-nine-year-olds who read it for themselves, and by anyone who happens to pick it up, for the little woods animals as depicted by the Haders are irresistible." Margaret Mahon

+ Sat R 37:72 N 13 '54 180w

HAGEDORN, HERMANN. Roosevelt family of Sagamore Hill. 435p il $5 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Roosevelt, Theodore. Roosevelt family 54-11834

"A long-time admirer of Theodore Roosevelt has assembled an account of the home life of the Theodore Roosevelt family from the time of Roosevelt's second marriage to his death. The home at Oyster Bay is the focal point but the scene shifts to the White House for the years of Roosevelt's Presidency. The account is alive with anecdotes about the six children and fulfills its purpose of giving an affectionate picture of an outstandingly active and happy family." Booklist

"The bright sayings of other people's children are boring to most men; I am no exception, and I must confess that for the first fifty pages the Roosevelt prattle did not interest me. But with the Rough Rider's return the noise from the nursery is subdued... In family crises, it was Edith, reserved and resourceful, who calmed things down... Her portrait is one of the finest things in this ample and affectionate book. This was a time and a place for happy parenthood, and what fun they had with their picnics, their family tennis, and their Fourth of July celebrations. This was life with Father—and Father was the most provocative man in the United States." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 194:78 S '54 600w

Booklist 50:309; 51:13 Ap 15 '54; S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:4 O '54 30w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 180:75 O '54 500w

Reviewed by J. T. McCutcheon

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 15 '54
650w

"On the whole the author has done a skillful job of editing and arranging so that the Sagamore Hill background adds form and color to the astounding career of the first citizen of Oyster Bay." Stafford Derby

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 19 '54
750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p32 S '54

Current Hist 27:389 D '54 140w

Kirkus 22:224 Mr 15 '54 200w

"Mr. Hagedorn, a confirmed admirer, has written an attractive book about a family which, while never stuffy, could set an example to other American families in the early 1900's, and also manage to stay out of the divorce courts." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:978 My 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by C. A. Madison

Nation 179:194 S 4 '54 270w

Reviewed by G. W. Johnson

New Repub 131:18 Ag 16 '54 320w

"It is a very good and heart-warming story indeed. The captious might claim that Hermann Hagedorn is not completely objective. Who in his right mind could imagine that he would be? He has spent a major part of his life enhancing the reputation of his hero. Among his many contributions have been the restoration and opening of the delightful, rambling home at Oyster Bay, on Long Island, which is the setting for 'The Roosevelt Family of Sagamore Hill.'" H. F. Pringle

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ag 15 '54
1100w

"In this narrative the author has brought together from memoirs, newspapers, letters and personal recollections, the stories—gay, touching, comic, or simply astonishing—which he tells or retells with grace, and not unfittingly, with touches of sentiment and affection. And what wonderful stories, old or new, they are."

E. E. Morison

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 15 '54 1400w

New Yorker 30:86 Ag 21 '54 160w

"Hermann Hagedorn, an able poet, a distinguished author and a long-time friend and devoted admirer and student of Theodore Roosevelt, has written, with consummate skill, frank hero-worship appropriately mingled with amused understanding, and with the highest artistry, the story of the delightful home and family life that Theodore Roosevelt would have been the first to claim as his greatest achievement." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 15 '54
1000w

"Doubtless the author will again command a considerable audience. He will also entertain them, for he has done for the Roosevelt family what Consuelo Vanderbilt did for herself. To some he may convey the message of strenuousness and uplift he reads in Roosevelt. But, just as Roosevelt had much more than that to say, there needs now to be heard rather less of moralizing and more of talking sound sense."

J. M. Blum

+ Sat R 37:19 Ag 28 '54 750w

"An authority on this branch of the Roosevelts, Mr. Hagedorn has done himself proud in this intimate and refreshing narrative."

D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6C S 12 '54 900w
Time 64:96 Ag 16 '54 1050w

HAIG-BROWN, RODERICK LANGMERE
HAIG. Fisherman's winter; il. by Louis Darling. 288p $3.50 Morrow

799.1 Fishing—Argentina. Fishing—Chile
54-10088

"The noted sportsman intersperses his interesting account of trout fishing in Chile and Argentina with delightful observations on people, places and wildlife." Bookmark

Booklist 51:169 D 15 '54

Bookmark 14:31 N '54 20w

Kirkus 22:568 Ag 15 '54 220w

Reviewed by Red Smith

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 21 '54
500w

"Roderick Haig-Brown's book is the account of a winter's fishing in Chile and Argentina and so far as I know there is no book like it. I recommend 'Fisherman's Winter' without reservation to fishermen and to all readers who are interested in our neighbor countries to the south. The author does much more than describe fishing spots, equipment, hotels and travel conditions. He discusses the people, living conditions and the countryside. He evaluates social, cultural and economic conditions honestly and kindly." H. S. Pearson

+ N Y Times p10 O 24 '54 430w

New Yorker 30:153 D 18 '54 140w

"It is always a pleasure to read a Haig-Brown book. For there is an ebullience coupled with insight and thorough analysis in whatever he writes." Stanleigh Arnold

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 7 '54
450w

HAIG-BROWN, RODERICK LANGMERE
HAIG. Mounted police patrol. 248p $2.75 Morrow

54-5758

Adventure story for older boys. Dave Sloane, aged fifteen, leaves his home in the Toronto slums after his father's death, and goes to Alberta to live with an uncle and aunt. To his dismay Dave's uncle is an officer in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and Dave was brought up to distrust "cops." The development of Dave's character under the kindly influence of his first normal home makes the story.

Booklist 50:422 Jl 1 '54

"Dave's reactions to situations and the changes brought about in his basic character are not always convincing, but the story as a whole is acceptable." L. R. Markey

+ — Library J 79:565 Mr 15 '54 60w

"Young readers will find this absorbing straight adventure, a fast, authoritative account of the day-to-day activities of one of the world's most colorful and legendary forces." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 25 '54 160w

Wis Lib Bul 50:184 Jl '54

HAIGHT, GORDON SHERMAN, ed. The George Eliot letters. See Eliot, G.

HAINES, CHARLES GROVE, ed. Threat of Soviet imperialism [based on the proceedings of a conference sponsored by the School of advanced international studies, held in Washington in 1953]. 402p $5 Johns Hopkins press 327.47 Russia—Foreign relations 54-6799

"Twenty experts here examine the Soviet world—its military, scientific and economic strength and weakness; its ideological pretensions, its diplomatic techniques; its impact on the people of Asia, Africa, South America and Europe—throwing emphasis on the challenge it offers to the United States as leader of the Free World. The authors feel that much of the initiative lies with us, that there are practical steps we can take in the fields of armament, economics, and the war of ideas which will prevent the further encroachment of Kremlin communism." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Am Hist R 59:1015 Jl '54 250w

"Career diplomats, high army and naval officers, academic specialists, journalists and others from the United States, Great Britain and France offer their analyses and conclusions in readable style. Adequate historical background affords the reader a recapitulation of Soviet emergence upon the world stage, along with an understanding of the motivation of Soviet policy and its tactical and strategic concepts." D. W. Knepper

+ Christian Century 71:554 My 5 '54 320w

"An excellent collection of papers."

+ Current Hist 26:377 Je '54 100w

Foreign Affairs 33:156 O '54 100w

"A fat and thought-provoking collection of papers... The roster of writers is about as distinguished as it can be in this country—at least four past or present top officials of the State Department's Policy Planning Staff, fourteen former or present State Department officials and some of the most active writers in this field."

+ Nation 178:312 Ap 10 '54 320w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ja 31 '54 50w

Reviewed by Max Beloff

Pacific Affairs 27:173 Je '54 500w

"Without breaking virgin soil, the present volume represents a fair and encouraging distillation of current thinking here and—as exemplified by Angelo Rossi and Mr. Carew Hunt—in Western Europe. And such closely reasoned and eminently balanced summations as Mr. Kennan's are particularly welcome in an age in which public addresses of this sort take the place of the vanishing genre of the political essay." Alexander Dallin

+ Pol Sci Q 69:280 Je '54 800w

"The contributions inevitably vary in quality, but the best are very good indeed. The final paper, on 'The United States in the Face of the Communist Challenge' by the former Director of the State Department's policy planning staff, has a breadth, vigour and sanity which should be a useful antidote to that anti-American querulousness, which one hopes is now becoming less fashionable in certain English quarters." David Footman

+ Spec p178 Ag 6 '54 150w

HALES, EDWARD ELTON YOUNG. Pio Nono; a study in European politics and religion in the nineteenth century. 352p il $4 Kenedy

B or 92 Pius IX (Giovanni Maria Mastai Ferretti) pope. Europe—Politics 54-10066

This study of Pope Pius IX, generally known as Pio Nono, is concerned with European politics and religion in the nineteenth century during the thirty-two years of his stay in the Vatican. Bibliography. Index.

"The career of the creator of the modern Papacy was full of color and dramatic episode. Mr. Hales has presented it sympathetically but conscientiously in a work of painstaking scholarship." J. B. Sheerin

+ Cath World 180:153 N '54 320w

"Mr. Hales' book [is] a work for whose scholarship, objectivity, and brilliance we can all be grateful." W. P. Clancy

+ Commonweal 60:633 O 1 '54 1400w

"This is an interesting book with which one might find a few faults in detail... An effort is made to remember the better sides of Mazzini and Garibaldi, and even, obviously more against the grain, of Cavour. But the Liberal Italy which threw up men like the poet Foscolo, the scientific philanthropist Cattaneo, and the great literary critic De Sanctis makes no appeal whatever to the author; his sympathies are fully engaged on the hierarchical side, and so his book is, as he seems frankly to have intended it to be, just an eloquent and in its way welcome statement of the case for Pio Nono and against those who were his adversaries." Cecil Sprigge

+ — Manchester Guardian p6 Mr 12 '54 600w

Reviewed by John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 47:606 My 8 '54 650w

"It is the great merit of this book to explain Pio Nono, the creator of the modern Papacy. It is the first biography of Pius IX in English in this century, and the first which is written in a spirit of deep sympathy with the Pope and with the Papacy." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p28 S 12 '54 800w

"The very vastness of this subject has imposed strict limitations on Mr. Hales; nor can anything definitive be written about Pius IX until the Vatican archives are accessible. Nevertheless it would have been better to have attempted more than a justification; it does not really matter whether one approves of the Roman Republic or approves of the Pope's actions. What matters is that one should try to understand and explain the events of 1848, and this Mr. Hales does not do. He does increase our understanding of Pius himself." D. J.

+ — Spec p372 Mr 26 '54 200w

"We now have a most readable and enjoyable book on Pius in which is painted an attractive picture of the Pope's character, and much of which will be new to English readers. No doubt it will invite some criticism, both as to accuracy of fact and justness of interpretation; but in redressing the balance against the 'liberal bias' in nineteenth-century history, many shrewd hits are scored against what has passed for historical orthodoxy, and they are made with a disarming gentleness which provides both instruction and entertainment."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p278 Ap 30 '54 1550w

HALL, ARNOLD HAMER. Fundamentals of world peace. 112p $3 Philosophical lib.

341.1 [172.4] Peace. International relations 53-13527

"Brief, cogent presentation of the author's belief that only those national policies based on moral codes and individual freedom will build the machinery for peace." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:104 F '54 20w

HALL, A. H.—Continued

"One may feel deep sympathy with Mr. Hall's basic thesis, but the book leaves unresolved some of the most crucial questions in the field of international morality." Robert Peel

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 29 '54 240w

Reviewed by J. A. Torres
Ethics 65:75 O '54 230w

HALL, COURTNEY ROBERT. History of American industrial science. 453p $4.95 Lib. pubs.

338 U.S.—Industries and resources. Technology—History 54-9440

"Written to give the layman as well as students a broad picture of American industrial development, interpreted in terms of our national defense and future social and political implications. . . . Special sections are devoted to transportation, chemicals, communications, mining and metallurgy, non-metallic minerals, rubber and rubber products, pulp, paper, and print, food, clothing, soap and cleaners, and precision machines." Library J

Reviewed by E. C. Kirkland
Am Hist R 60:199 O '54 320w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 1 '54 70w

"It is lively yet factual and accurate. . . . An excellent bibliography is included which could serve as a course in business and industrial history." R. L. Vormelker
+ Library J 79:1518 S 1 '54 70w

HALL, FERNAU. World dance; with 85 illustrations, including many from the Mander-Mitchenson theatre collection, and with numerous drawings [Eng title: Anatomy of ballet]. 470p $8 Wyn

792.8 Ballet 54-6944

"This comprehensive volume, based on intensive study and practical experience, deals with ballet history, with choreographers and their achievements, with ballet companies and their policies. Photographs, line drawings. Indexes." Bookmark

Booklist 50:293 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:128 Mr '54 30w

"An important book for any one interested in the development of dance the world and the centuries over." Margaret Lloyd
+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 8 '54 500w

"A treasure trove for theatre students and writers. Essential for dance, ballet and theatre collections regardless of size." George Freedley
+ Library J 79:561 Mr 15 '54 50w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ag 8 '54 60w

"Whatever his deficiencies as a literary stylist, Mr. Hall is a man of taste. In this book he has undertaken a tremendous job, and has completed it with integrity and distinction. . . . This reviewer will go out on a limb by saying that, even with its faults, this is the most provocative, adult, objective book of its kind that has appeared in America." Rosalyn Krokover

+ Sat R 37:19 My 15 '54 400w

"Mr. Hall dissipates by his criticism of the present the confidence which he had built up by his history of the past. All the same his book is valuable even on present-day ballet, because he has assembled the facts about all the companies from Bombay to New York which have an international reputation and following."

Times [London] Lit Sup p116 F 19 '54 330w

HALL, GEOFFREY HOLIDAY. Watcher at the door. 214p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

54-5007

Mystery story.

Kirkus 22:85 F 1 '54 90w

"Mr. Hall works in a Vienna familiar to us already from Carol Reed's 'The Third Man' (Graham Greene assisting) and with much the same grubby-desperate sort of cast. He manages some similar surprises along with some fresh ones and has stuffed his sleeves with aces to surprise us. The consequence is still pretty entertaining if a mite too clever." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 My 2 '54 90w

"There's little novelty of plot in Geoffrey Holiday Hall's The Watcher at the Door; old hands should, indeed, have the Least Suspected Person pegged after a few thousand words. But the novel is a thoroughly enjoyable one—a sort of Grade B-plus Hitchcock thriller." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p21 My 9 '54 80w

"Background real, villain's identity surprising, excitement skillfully underplayed. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 30 '54 60w

"Lacks action in spots, but pleasant travelogue. Worthwhile." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 37:40 My 22 '54 20w

HALL, JAMES B. Not by the door. 249p $3 Random house

54-5954

Story of a young Episcopalian minister during his first year in his first church in a small Ohio town.

Kirkus 22:161 Mr 1 '54 240w

"An excellent first novel. . . . There is much excellent writing, though there is over-writing, too, mostly in short spurts. 'Not by the Door' is a fascinating though not wholly admirable job. Not wholly admirable, I think, because, though Mr. Hall deals fairly and persuasively with his rough-and-ready young minister and his wife, he seems not to understand at all well the institution—the Church—in which his hero operates." F. H. Bullock

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 11 '54 650w

"The primary virtue of this book is that it presents its subject clear and plain, and leaves him to us, as readers, to judge him without authorial labeling or interpretation. Implications of course abound, and they are often critical; and Howard suffers under them. Yet even under their weight he remains a real and understandable human being." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 11 '54 500w

"In this first novel, Mr. Hall displays a talent that is bright, alive, and working, although its expression is still clumsy and often outrageously careless."

+ — New Yorker 30:135 Ap 17 '54 170w

HALL, MARJORY. Star Island. 279p il $2.75 Funk

53-10790

Novel for older girls. It is the story of eighteen-year-old Carolyn, the middle sister in a large family, who found herself the summer she worked as counselor in a girls' camp.

Booklist 50:187 Ja 1 '54

+ Kirkus 21:586 S 1 '53 140w

"Notable for excellent characterization throughout. . . . Well written, with a touch of romance, it will be popular with teen-age girls." Anne Singleton

+ Library J 78:2110 D 1 '53 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 16 '54 30w

"Miss Hall writes with that sense of sharing that brings Carolyn's problems close to the reader." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 15 '53 50w

HALL, OAKLEY MAXWELL (JASON MANOR, pseud). Red jaguar. 184p $2.50 Viking 54-5225

Detective story.

Kirkus 21:723 N 1 '53 60w

"Mr. Manor is concerned mostly with action and he handles this briskly in a relatively unfamiliar setting which helps make things seem fresh. His dialogue is all of it pretty studiously rehearsed and when it gets to the delicate matter of conscience it goes all to pieces. Still, in spite of these pretensions, innocent and hopeful, its accent is on business and this department is efficiently managed." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 F 21 '54 170w

"It's straightforward and hard and free from banal excess and marred only by a shocking error in criminalistics which just about invalidates the solution." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p26 Ja 17 '54 90w

"This is fresh and credible stuff, sufficiently hard-boiled for tough-style fans, solid and decent enough for the others." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 7 '54 70w

"Large plus mark." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:34 Mr 27 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p5D F 21 '54 120w

HALL, ROSALYS HASKELL. Baker's man; pictures by Kurt Werth. [28p] $2.50 Lippincott

54-7297

A baker's apprentice who wanted a job, and a roly-poly baker who wanted to be a circus performer, make a wise exchange and everybody is happy in this book for ages six and seven.

Booklist 51:155 D 1 '54

Horn Bk 30:429 D '54 100w

Kirkus 22:432 J1 15 '54 90w

"Recommended." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 79:1665 S 15 '54 40w

"Though told and illustrated in bright, simple tones that will please children, the story's contrast of one unhappy zany in an earnest rational world more likely will puzzle than delight the unsophisticated 6 and 7 year olds." Miriam James

+ N Y Times pt2 p42 N 14 '54 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 28 '54 60w

"That the end is foreseen before the tale is well started will not affect the enjoyment of young readers, for this is a merry tale and a beautiful book." Leone Garvey

+ Sat R 37:70 N 13 '54 140w

HALLERAN, EUGENE EDWARD. Winter ambush. 217p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.

54-6240

Western story.

Booklist 50:401 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by Al Chase

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 25 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:46 Ja 15 '54 60w

HALLGARTEN, GEORGE WOLFGANG FELIX. Why dictators? the causes and forms of tyrannical rule since 600 B.C. 379p $5.50 Macmillan (N Y)

321.6 Dictators

54-9224

An analysis of the political techniques of the various types of dictatorships. The author describes four basic types of dictatorships: the classical (Caesar, Napoleon); ultrarevolutionary or communist (Stalin); counter-revolutionary (Franco); and pseudo-revolutionary (Hitler, Mussolini). Each type also has its subtypes. Bibliography. Index.

"Historians who distrust the 'comparative method,' let alone sociological forays into the past, will hardly accept Mr. Hallgarten's book. He ranges in time and space over several dozen conventional academic historical fields. It is a simple fact of life that he must make more mistakes both of fact and of judgment, in each field than would a well-trained specialist in that field. On a less rigorous standard of criticism, it may be said that Mr. Hallgarten's standards of scholarship are fully up to the level of good contemporary writing on history as a guide to life." Crane Brinton

Am Hist R 60:56 O '54 650w

"Mr. Hallgarten's typology serves him reasonably well as a device for organizing the detailed and diversified descriptive historical materials he presents, which cover the full span of years since ancient times and include dozens of concrete examples. Its adequacy as analytical framework, however, must be seriously questioned." Alex Inkeles

+ Am Soc R 19:812 D '54 650w

Reviewed by P. H. Odegard

Ann Am Acad 296:201 N '54 500w

"Lucid and provocative."

+ Booklist 50:335 My 1 '54

Christian Century 71:764 Je 23 '54 200w

"Challenging the thinking of readers from every walk of life when questions and fears confound in both domestic and international affairs, this volume is more than a historical treatise. . . As Machiavelli sought to guide his 'Prince' to an understanding of statecraft, this book should serve to help mankind understand the weaknesses in times of stress which allow the ever present 'saviors of society' to secure power." D. W. Knepper

+ Christian Century 71:1205 O 6 '54 1200w

"There is a wealth of factual material from a wide range of history. It is, however, necessarily sketchy, and the style is somewhat chopped and jerky."

+ Current Hist 26:378 Je '54 100w

Foreign Affairs 33:156 O '54 50w

"Here is an imposing study, patterned on the scientific concepts of the sociologist Max Weber. It is a student's book, bound to delight as well as provoke arguments and to stand on its own two feet as one of the most cogent definitions of dictators and dictatorships in their various tempers through the ages. . . The author's careful fitting of each dictator into a particular classification, his attempt at making a pure science out of sociology, is where most will find fault with the book, but for the rest it is a thorough-going and valuable thesis."

+ Kirkus 21:809 D 15 '53 250w

"A very competent treatment of an important subject in terms that will be understandable to casual readers as well as to students. Recommended for public and university library purchase." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:448 Mr 1 '54 160w

"The enterprise, albeit somewhat diffuse, is brilliantly executed. This volume is a valuable contribution to the politics of our time, viewed in historical perspective. Yet the result is not wholly successful. Despite much sociological erudition Dr. Hallgarten nowhere quotes or mentions Plato's famous explanation of the origins of tyranny in class conflict—which, conceivably, is more 'contemporary' than the approach à la Max Weber, which Dr. Hallgarten employs."

+ Nation 178:549 Je 26 '54 270w

"An extremely readable historical and sociological survey." Hans Kohn

+ Pol Sci Q 69:618 D '54 750w

Reviewed by D. A. Pitt

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 1 '54 700w

HALLIDAY, BRETT, pseud. See Dresser, D.

HALLIDAY, FRANK ERNEST. Poetry of Shakespeare's plays. 196p $3.50 Bentley
822.33 Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation [54-3361]

"In a long introduction and five chapters corresponding to Shakespeare's five main working periods Mr. Halliday considers the development of the three main contrapuntal elements in the poetry: the words themselves, the rhythmical relationship of the words, and that use of metaphor and imagery which is the most subtle intimation of Shakespeare's individuality and genius." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by Thom Gunn
Spec p32 J1 2 '54 400w

"Mr. Halliday is writing for the general reader rather than the scholar, and to the scholar most of the points he makes about the development of Shakespeare's verbal art, metrical craftsmanship, and taste in words and images will be familiar. Even the scholar may find, however, that the freshness and enthusiasm of Mr. Halliday's mood renews his feeling for Shakespeare's language. . . And to the general reader, at whom it is aimed, Mr. Halliday's book can hardly be too highly recommended."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p424 J1 2 '54 2800w

HALLOWELL, JOHN HAMILTON. Moral foundation of democracy. 134p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

321.82 Democracy 54-11938

"In the conservative tradition, these Walgreen Foundation lectures champion philosophy against science as the source of morality and arbiter of human goals, and draw on Plato, with some support from other Greek thinkers and the early Church Fathers, for the argument that democratic politics ought to be a matter of ethical means directed toward rational ends." (Booklist) Index.

"While the physicist unloosed the atomic age, it was the task of the social scientist to control it, and it is no exaggeration to say that he was almost totally unprepared. Professor Hallowell's excellent book is symptomatic of the new trend. His main thesis is that the democratic way requires the Hebraic-Greek-Christian faith to undergird it." E. S. Griffith
+ Ann Am Acad 296:200 N '54 450w

Booklist 51:33 S 15 '54
Canadian Forum 34:164 O '54 230w

"Dr. Hallowell is a professor of political science in Duke University. The present volume may well send many readers back to a restudy, or a first reading, of his more comprehensive work, Main Currents in Modern Political Thought (1950). Both the content and the style of the Moral Foundations will whet the reader's appetite for more." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 71:949 Ag 11 '54 1050w

"An intelligent statement and an affirmation of needed beliefs."
+ Kirkus 22:324 My 15 '54 160w

HALSEY, ELIZABETH T. Ladies home journal book of interior decoration. See Ladies home journal

HALSEY, MAXWELL NICOLL. Let's drive right; a textbook for courses in driver education; study aids and reading lists by Leslie R. Silvernale. 496p il $3.48 Scott
629.28 Automobiles—Driving

"A textbook for high school driver-education courses, with discussion questions, suggested projects, and bibliographies. The author, a traffic safety expert, covers personal factors and attitudes in driving, the mechanics and step-by-step operation of a car, different driving situations, the future progress of automobile transportation, road construction and safety promotion, and the Uniform Traffic Law. Numerous photographs, cartoons, and diagrams." Booklist

Booklist 51:87 O 15 '54

"Maxwell Halsey has done a thorough job of covering safety, courtesy and such less essential topics as how to buy and maintain a car. The result is a readable, but rather bulky, book which ought further to improve the findings which indicate that courses in driver education have reduced teen-age accidents." G. E. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 3 '54 50w

HALSMAN, PHILIPPE. Piccoli; a fairy tale; il. by Paul Julian. 90p $3 Simon & Schuster 53-9698

A modern fairy tale with a well-underlined moral. Terry was a small boy who was good and kind but didn't always use his head. An old man gave him a present—a very tiny little girl called Piccoli and it was thru Piccoli's help that Terry found himself.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ja 24 '54 170w

"These are stories Mr. Halsman made up for his children. And even on the printed page they convey not literary quality but the engaging quality of a tale to be told and listened to. Perhaps it remains too close to that telling aloud which has not yet ripened for the printed page; perhaps both dream child and boy have not room in so short a book to engage our affection. The pictures are stunning." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ja 3 '54 300w

"Philippe Halsman, well-known photographer, created Piccoli for his daughters and has retold her exploits in a casual prose, somewhat less winged than is his inventiveness. Paul Julian, artist for the UPA animated cartoons, has illustrated them with style and imagination. When last seen, Piccoli was headed toward Hollywood. Doubtless we'll see her again." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 17 '54 190w

"This is a gay, delicate, touching fantasy by someone known up to this time as one of the most successful cover photographers for Life and the author of the hilarious book 'The Frenchman.' . . Paul Julian has contributed arresting and expressive colored pictures. 'Piccoli' is here to stay." C. H. B.
+ Sat R 37:42 F 6 '54 230w

HAMILTON, GEORGE HEARD. Manet and his critics. 295p pl $5 Yale univ. press

759.4 Manet, Edouard 54-5083

A study of the way the public, the professional critics, and the journalists reacted to Manet's works in his own time. The book contains thirty-nine plates of Manet's paintings and drawings. Index.

Booklist 50:414 J1 1 '54

"Bibliographical notes, index of paintings by Manet, and a very full general index plus clear illustrations make this a valuable book for anyone assaying the sources of contemporary painting. Recommended." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:1516 S 1 '54 160w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 J1 18 '54 40w

"The book is informative. It is an invaluable compilation, fulfilling its author's intention and admirably justifying its inclusion in 'Yale Historical Publications.' But let the general reader be warned: the author's synthesis is so overwhelmed by the aggregation of lengthy and repetitious quotations that it makes for tedious going." Aline Saarinen

+ N Y Times p10 My 30 '54 650w

HAMILTON, HORACE ERNST. Dry scratch of laurel. 85p $2.50 Twayne
811 53-12677

A second collection of poems by an American writer who is now an associate professor of literature at Rutgers University.

"The title of the volume is expressive of its contents. Some of the poems are brittle; they scratch the mind; a few of them go deeper and leave a more lasting impression. Some of the scene pictures are clear and concise as a black and white drawing; but with an added touch of asperity; occasionally an almost Thoreau touch. But one misses at times a sense of fulfillment that the poet himself must have missed; and therein lies his salvation. This is Mr. Hamilton's second book. We look forward to more with interest." A. S. Bourinot

+ — Canadian Forum 33:261 F '54 400w

"Four poems particularly challenge the reader in this book. One, Aubade, offers to its poignant theme on lost hours and years the most finely wrought and hence the most arresting structure in the entire collection. The others, Professor Emeritus, Succession, and The Brotherhood, challenge not only because they are good poems but because they, like so much of the poetry of Frost, Dylan Thomas, and the younger English poets, once more document the enduring hold on the best poetic imaginations of those themes that moved the early poets of the romantic movement."

+ Nation 178:286 Ap 3 '54 260w

"Though his poems have range, taste and vitality, none of them really comes off. The sharp phrase, the unexpected image, the purity and inevitability of outline that mark the natural poet from the intelligent versifier, cannot, it seems, be taught."

Times [London] Lit Sup p91 F 5 '54 30w

HAMMER, ELLEN J. Struggle for Indochina; with a pref. by Rupert Emerson; published under the auspices of the Institute of Pacific Relations. 342p maps $5 Standard univ. press 959 Indo-China 54-6815

"As the Geneva conference opens, it is sobering to read this account by Dr. Ellen J. Hammer of the troubled state of French colonial power in Indo-China. The three-sided struggle for old interests and new powers now being carried on by France, the governments of the Associated States, and the revolutionary Vietminh is portrayed in all its frustrating complexity." Nation

"Dr. Hammer's detailed account of the struggle between France and the Communist-led Viet Minh for domination over Indochina will be of value as the only full study of the conflict in English. The sordid story, distinguished by blundering and bad faith on both sides, moves like a Greek tragedy towards its denouement. Dr. Hammer brings her study to a close just before the Geneva Conference was to show the extent of the division and indecisiveness of the western nations regarding Indochina." W. B. Dunn

Ann Am Acad 296:220 N '54 380w

"A comprehensive, well-written research job which could not be timelier. As political appraisal, however, it is weakened by the fact that the author—while alert to the menace of Communism—betrays the unbendingly anti-French, anti-colonialism bias of the old-fashioned doctrinaire liberal." C. J. Rolo

+ — Atlantic 194:85 J1 '54 60w

Booklist 50:377 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 14:6 O '54 20w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 179:475 S '54 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 Ag '54

"A detailed, scholarly account."

+ Current Hist 26:377 Je '54 100w

Foreign Affairs 33:168 O '54 70w

Reviewed by William Henderson

Library J 79:1226 Je 15 '54 130w

"Dr. Hammer has performed, with high competency, a most timely service." O. E. Clubb

+ Nation 178:406 My 8 '54 2000w

"In her well-documented book, Dr. Hammer recited the whole dismal record of events leading up to the present situation in Indo-China. She has written a dispassionate work of immense usefulness to anybody wishing to know the dreary but meaningful background of today's developments in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. The perspective is clear, the research obviously thorough." A. T. Steele

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 1 '54 850w

"At this point in world affairs any book about Indo-China is timely. We need all the information that we can get. Ellen J. Hammer, an assiduous research student, has compiled and compressed a large quantity of that information in her latest book. Particularly valuable is the detail that is given on Indo-Chinese personalities and political groups. Quite a bit of it is new and illuminating. It should be pointed out, however, that Miss Hammer writes with a vigorous slant and that the information should be evaluated accordingly. . . Miss Hammer is strongly anti-French and anti-colonial." R. A. Smith

+ — N Y Times p10 My 16 '54 550w

Reviewed by Jim Walls

San Francisco Chronicle p15 My 11 '54 800w

"To any American wanting to form a judgment on Indo-China, and wanting to formulate a policy for the future, Dr. Hammer's book is an indispensable source. It lacks only an index." F. N. Trager

+ Sat R 37:35 Je 5 '54 250w

Springf'd Republican p8C J1 25 '54 60w

HAMMOND, C. S. and COMPANY, INCORPORATED. Ambassador World atlas. 416p il $12.50 Hammond

912 Atlases

Map54-984

"This atlas contains maps of physical and human geography plus individual city maps, maps showing airline, railroad, bus and highway routes, and photographic illustrations. There is also a detailed index which incorporates descriptions of the larger, or more important cities listed." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:100 O '54 280w

Kirkus 22:628 S 1 '54 240w

"An excellent, up-to-date work. . . Recommended for all libraries." M. N. Barton

+ Library J 79:2214 N 15 '54 490w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 24 '54 40w

"There is a profound dearth of historical materials, which seems to have become the chronic failing of home-grown atlases. . . And there is no indication of ocean currents. . . This atlas carries forward a recent besetting tendency to use native terms instead of English. . . These are probably a lot of complaints for an atlas as good as this one. The essential thing is that the maps are large, clear and plentiful, and in no other American atlas of comparable price can so many geographical items (over 100,000) be located so easily." Jim Walls

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 S 12 '54 950w

HAMMOND, GEORGE PETER, and REY, AGAPITO, eds. & trs. Don Juan de Oñate, colonizer of New Mexico, 1595-1628. 2v $20 Univ. of N.Mex. press

978.9 Oñate, Juan de. New Mexico—History —Sources 53-12919

"These two volumes of basic documents trace the rise and fall of a Spanish conquistador and cover the contract to colonize New Mexico. Like many another ambitious and power-seeking explorer and conqueror, Juan de Oñate wanted wealth, lands, titles, and independence from the Viceroy in Mexico. The documents afford an illuminating story of his fight for power, waged through legal actions, from New Mexico, down to Mexico City in New Spain, and across the ocean to Madrid and the Council of the Indies." U S Quarterly Bk R

HAMMOND, G. P.—Continued

"The volumes represent mature scholarship throughout and will stand henceforth as memorable accomplishments of the Coronado Cuarto Centennial Commission. The introduction, a digest of the history of New Mexico over the period covered in the documents, is both highly readable and well integrated, while the format is in the excellent tradition of the Coronado series." H. B. Carroll

+ Am Hist R 59:966 Jl '54 370w

"With these two volumes, George P. Hammond and Agapito Rey have done for New Mexico what Bolton did for California. They too, have passed this way and they have carved their names beside that of Juan de Onate. An honorable time shall elapse before wind, weather and years can diminish any depth of their carvings." W. H. Hutchinson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 7 '54 950w

"Since the exploits of Oñate have already attracted several authors, some of the historical documents pertaining to the conquest of New Mexico have previously been translated and published. This collection, however, together with its introductory essay, maintains with only a few gaps a fine continuity, and includes a full range of hitherto unused source material found by the editors in Spain."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:169 Je '54 230w

HAMMOND, JOHN LAWRENCE LE BRETON, and FOOT, MICHAEL RICHARD DAMELL. Gladstone and liberalism. (Teach yourself history library) 219p $2 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Gladstone, William Ewart. Liberal party (Great Britain) [A53-354]

"The study of English constitutional and political history in the Victorian age is to a considerable degree the study of the career of William Ewart Gladstone. Consequently, he has been the object of research in monographs and biographies, and the chief figure in many other publications. Gladstone and Liberalism is a brief study which combines political history and biography in order to interpret his contribution to liberalism in the last century." Ann Am Acad

"Much information and many stimulating suggestions can be found in this little book. . . Gladstone and Liberalism is a valuable addition to a series of useful books. It will help to correct biased judgments concerning ■ great Liberal." Paul Knaplund

+ Am Hist R 59:190 O '53 320w

"This book, which Mr. Foot completed after the death of Dr. Hammond in 1949, is an able, friendly study whose only weakness is its brevity." A. H. Proctor

+ Ann Am Acad 290:178 N '53 550w

"Hammond did not live to complete his work, but Mrs. Hammond did well to entrust the completion to Mr. M. R. Foot. It is a judicious and finely written book, with no traces of divided authorship." Gilbert Murray

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 22 '52 550w

Reviewed by Asa Briggs

New Statesman & Nation 44:191 Ag 16 '52 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p515 Ag 8 '52 800w

HAMMOND-INNES, RALPH. Naked land, by Hammond Innes [pseud]. 304p $3.50 Knopf 54-5269

"The rugged territory between the Sahara Desert and the High Atlas Mountains makes a scintillating backdrop for Hammond Innes's latest tale of cosmopolitan cross-purposes. The action is played out in a primitive country that is volatile in two distinct ways: landslides and Berber nationalism both combine to keep visitors stepping lively." Sat R

Booklist 50:278 Mr 15 '54

"'The Naked Land' is ■ exciting and handsomely written a novel as Innes has yet given us. His characters are, as always, richly ambiguous—this is surely one of the tricks he has adapted from Conrad—and his natural descriptions strong and evocative. This is an admirable work by a gifted craftsman." Milton Crane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 21 '54 370w

Kirkus 22:14 Ja 1 '54 190w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 28 '54 90w

"Everything but the kitchen sink in 'The Naked Land'? Perhaps, perhaps. Mr. Innes is all for it, and if he is for it the reader might as well be for it too. If his ladies stand a little still, like manikins in Macy's window, so what? He is writing a Novel of Adventure and he brings to it an enthusiasm that is catching and ■ style that is quick." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 7 '54 700w

"The author's style is agreeable, if ■ little luxuriant; his story moves along at a commendable pace; and altogether the chances are that you'll enjoy yourself in a leisurely way."

+ New Yorker 30:139 Ap 17 '54 130w

"The pace of the novel is torpid, making almost tedious what should be suspenseful. Mr. Innes does a fine job of creating a realistic Moorish setting, but what happens there lacks the compelling excitement of his previous novels. 'The Naked Land' does have ■ couple of bright spots." Martin Levin

+ Sat R 37:28 Mr 27 '54 270w

Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54 20w

Wis Lib Bul 50:137 My '54

HAMPEL, CLIFFORD ALLEN, ed. Rare metals handbook. 657p il $12 Reinhold

669.7 Metals 54-7344

"A reference book on such metals as beryllium, bismuth, cadmium, indium, rhenium, selenium, zirconium—about 35 in all. Generally speaking, each is the subject of an individual, signed monograph in which there are both discussion and tabulated data on such aspects as occurrence, production, ore processing, physical and chemical properties, toxicity, fabrication and uses. The properties of alloys if there are any useful ones are also described. Literature references are furnished." (Library J) Index.

Chem & Eng N 32:3076 Ag 2 '54 10w

"Potentially a very useful book in technical libraries." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1594 S 15 '54 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:74 S '54

HANCOCK, RALPH, and others. Baja California; hunting, fishing and travel in Lower California, Mexico. 179p il $5 Acad. Pub. 5299 Fountain av, Los Angeles 29

972.2 [917.22] California, Lower 53-13391

"The author and three sportsmen have incorporated years of experience in writing what amounts to ■ hunting, fishing and travel guide to Lower California. This is one of the few remaining great primitive areas available to the American sportsman. Woven into the descriptions of fishing and hunting preserves are bits of history, tales of the people, and characteristics of the landscape." Library J

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:632 Ap 1 '54 40w

"A travel guide to a region which has been little explored. Included are a chatty text and candid photographs." Siegfried Mandel

+ Sat R 37:54 Ja ■ '54 30w

HANDLIN, OSCAR. Adventure in freedom; three hundred years of Jewish life in America.. 282p il $3.75 McGraw

296 Jews in the U.S. 54-10634

"Beginning with the arrival of the first Jewish immigrants in 1654, Mr. Handlin outlines the scope of Jewish contribution to every important phase of American life. He discusses Jewish participation in the Revolutionary and Civil Wars, their part in the westward migration and in the building of the Republic. He brings his story up to the present time with chapters on the problems met by the late 19th-century immigrants, the rise and fall of anti-Semitism, the development of Jewish defense and philanthropical organization, the role American Jews have played in the Zionist movement." Springfield Republican

Booklist 51:97 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:5 O '54 30w

Reviewed by A. L. Lebeson
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 10 '54 800w

"This is an impressive documentary, and the backing of Jewish organizations will help widen its interest."

+ Kirkus 22:462 J1 15 '54 280w

"A distinctly worthwhile contribution to the history of the Jews in America. . . Recommended for all collections as a good basic book." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 79:1498 S 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by Henry Popkin
Nation 179:235 S 18 '54 550w

"Readers may disagree with many turns in the unfoldment of Prof. Handlin's argument; they may feel especially that he underplays the achievements of European Jewries in the realm of freedom and democracy; they may question his premises by which gains and losses in Jewish life are reckoned; but they will be indebted to him for a stimulating discussion." Marvin Lowenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 3 '54 200w

"Mr. Handlin's book is an interpretive essay which may be read with twofold profit by readers who had familiarized themselves with the factual developments through the perusal of the Lears narrative. . . [It] is entirely written from the vantage point of a well-versed American historian, who views the historic evolution of the Jewish community in America as but a part of the general epic of immigration and adjustment of the various European ethnic and religious groups in this country. Much attention is also paid here to changing economic trends and to some manifestations of ill-feeling toward the Jews. The chapter on 'Anti-Semitism, 1890-1941' is probably the best in the whole work." S. W. Baron

+ N Y Times p6 S 12 '54 550w

Reviewed by R. S. Israel
San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 14 '54 1050w

"Jews, the People of the Book, the people with the longest history of literacy in the world, are to be observed in their true character not in Jewish Center or at study or at prayer but in the 'comic strips.' Where could Mr. Handlin have lived? With what Jews? Why, since everything authentically Jewish is alien to him, should he have written this book? . . . Does Mr. Handlin not know—whether he likes it or not—that the Jewish religion consists in the conviction of divine election and the consequent duty to sanctify all the acts of life? He does not like it. Very well. But to slant history according to a dislike is hardly sound or scholarly practice." Ludwig Lewisohn

— Sat R 37:21 S 18 '54 750w
Springf'd Republican p6C S 12 '54 250w

HANDLIN, OSCAR. The American people in the twentieth century. (Library of Congress series in American civilization) 244p $3.75 Harvard univ. press

301.45 U.S.—Foreign population. U.S.—Race question 54-8626

Study of population movements in the United States since 1900, with due attention to earlier backgrounds of various ethnic groups. Discusses the many waves of immigration and migrations within the country, with special attention paid to the Negro. Professor Handlin is also the author of the prize winning The Uprooted (Book Review Digest 1951, 1952). Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 194:93 N '54 420w
Booklist 51:11 S 1 '54

Reviewed by A. C. Ames
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 15 '54 350w

Reviewed by Francis Russell
Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 19 '54 700w

"An exceedingly difficult and broad topic is handled with ease and lucidity by Professor Handlin. His task is made lighter by the author's own delineation of the job—in the main, he deals not with the American people as a whole, but with clearly definable groups."

+ Current Hist 27:191 S '54 150w

Kirkus 22:374 Je 15 '54 200w

"Valuable contribution to American social history." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1396 Ag '54 160w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 179:266 S 25 '54 80w

"The American People is a useful and comprehensive volume, but to read it provides by no means the exercise for one's historical imagination that The Uprooted did. One who wants to find a new flavor in American history should turn back to that book." Priscilla Robertson

+ — New Repub 131:19 Ag 9 '54 1100w

"One may wish that there had been as full and interesting comments on the cultural as on the institutional and political contributions of our diverse multitudes; one might wish too that so well informed an observer as Mr. Handlin had said more than he did about the continuing symptom of our immaturity—the isolationist sentiment that persists in some regions. But in the grace with which he presents his evidence, the reasonableness of his argument, and the measured optimism of his conclusion he has produced a fine and illuminating piece of American history." Elting Morison

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ag 8 '54 600w

"This is a wise and, one may say, patriotic book. It deserves a wide reading." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 8 '54 850w

New Yorker 30:153 S 11 '54 130w

"All of this, in Mr. Handlin's skilled hands, makes fascinating reading. He not only writes with a deft sureness of knowledge. This historian has an instinct for the man with a bother, for all the shadowy, half-articulated feelings which other able Americans could study for a lifetime and never really understand." E. F. Goldman

+ Sat R 37:9 Ag 7 '54 1100w

HANDLIN, OSCAR, and others, eds. Harvard guide to American history. (Belknap press bk) 689p $10 Harvard univ. press

016.973 U.S.—History—Bibliography. U.S.—History—Study and teaching 53-5066

Manual for the general reader on the source materials in American history, published thru 1950. The first half deals with the methods and resources, the second gives detailed lists of readings, arranged by historical periods. Index.

"It is unnecessary to stress the relatively insignificant slips of various sorts. The big thing in a book of this sort is the index, which fills 143 pages and yet is not too long. In general, it is admirable, though the student will sometimes have to search diligently for what he is seeking. . . The listing of authors and titles of books in the index could have been greatly improved, at little expense and without materially increasing its length, by giving citations to each reference, instead of only the first. . . The suggestions made above are intended mainly, for the help of students who probably will never read this review, and in the hope that they will make an excellent book still more useful. Finally, it is a great comfort to those of us who never can get anything in print exactly correct, to find that six prominent scholars, after seventeen years of overtime work, could not entirely escape the same fate. This fact in itself should be a stimulus to research." F. A. Shannon

HANDLIN, OSCAR—Continued

+ — Am Hist R 60:115 O '54 750w

"As is inevitable in a work of this magnitude, there are some typographical slips and other errors. . . . On the whole, however, this is a sound and painstaking job, a tribute to the enormous industry and erudition of the men who compiled it and an example of the high standards of the university which published it." S. I. Pomerantz

+ Ann Am Acad 296:169 N '54 470w

"Compiled by top ranking Harvard scholars, this guide is a well-organized reference tool for the student or scholar concerned with current methods and resources in American history. It supersedes Channing, Hart, and Turner's Guide to the Study and Reading of American History."

+ Booklist 50:334 My 1 '54

Canadian Forum 34:168 O '54 170w

"This is an invaluable book, an admirable reference tool, for students, scholars, and 'intelligent' and interested readers. Public, college, and university libraries will wish to have it." J. A. Borome

+ Library J 79:1514 S 1 '54 190w

"A few important books were bound to be left out in a work of this magnitude, and when due allowance has been made for the reviewer's inclination to think that every book on the history of science and technology is indispensable, the list of omissions here cited must certainly be regarded as extremely small. Professor Handlin as the principal editor deserves the thanks of the historical profession for a difficult and, from his point of view, unrewarding task well performed. The work of every seminar in American history will be much lightened by this book. As for seminars in the literature of American history, many of these might just as well be abandoned; and that would be no loss. The great object is to get down to research as fast as possible. For the coming generation the Harvard Guide will contribute more to this end than any other single book." Donald Fleming

+ New Eng Q 27:404 S '54 1950w

"The 'Harvard Guide' is sure to become an indispensable part of all serious American history libraries."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p35 My 16 '54 130w

"By its decision to make the long-anticipated 'Harvard Guide to American History' the first imprint of the Belknap Press, the Harvard University Press made a wise choice and has set a very high standard for future publications. The 'Guide' must at once take its place as a major contribution to bibliography. It is moreover a reference work of such scope that it should be owned by all of our public men, historical novelists, newspaper and broadcasting personnel, graduate students and professors of history and made available in all libraries—public, institutional and private—for citizens interested in exploring our past." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ N Y Times p33 My 9 '54 600w

"Every serious student who can possibly afford it must have a copy of this new indispensable 'Guide.' Maybe it will pay back the high cost of purchase because it suggests where to look for financial grants and aids, that academic manna which falls so fruitfully from the heavenly foundations on the blessed and unblest." S. F. Bemis

+ Sat R 37:21 S 4 '54 600w

Special Libraries 45:217 My '54 10w

"We are continually being told how much our knowledge of American history has improved and it is true that much more is being done to study and teach the subject in Britain than would have been conceivable even twenty years ago. But the publication of this Guide provides what a distinguished writer on American history called 'an acid test.' For it is indispensable to every respectable public, college or university library that makes any profession to serve the needs of students of this most important subject."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p777 D 3 '54 1050w

HANEY, GERMAINE. Showers for all occasions. 255p il $2.75 Denison

793 Entertaining

53-12370

"A handbook of complete information for all types of showers with detailed suggestions for invitations, menus, entertainment, decorations, refreshments, etc." Subtitle

Booklist 50:375 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Mary Skaggs

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Jl 4 '54 20w

"This book is all the title claims. While emphasis is on bridal and baby showers, other kinds, such as bon voyage, house-warming, and others are described. Originality and imagination are evident in the suggestions." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 79:1240 Je 15 '54 60w

HANLEY, GERALD. Year of the lion. 256p $3 Macmillan (N Y)

54-1687

"Jervis the young Englishman comes out to the farm of crochety, strange old Major Fawn-Cochley to learn the business and the magic of life outdoors in East Africa. He falls into the pit of the drunken-settler set for a while, and in and out of love with a woman who was not meant for him." Library J

"This is the finest novel by a young author that has come my way this year." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:80 Je '54 160w

Booklist 50:381 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Roi Hanley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Jl 4 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:38 Ja 15 '54 190w

"There is a hunting scene when a group of farmers meet to drive the zebra from the pastures that is just about the best hunting writing in modern fiction. The plots against the marauding lion, his death and the deaths of those that he and his lioness take with them is splendidly written and masterfully handled. This is a very good novel indeed, far above the average, suitable for all sorts of libraries." W. B. Ready

+ Library J 79:451 Mr 1 '54 140w

"Gerald Hanley writes well; his lean prose maintains tension through economy, at no time showing the purple patches so often evoked by Africa."

+ Nation 178:468 My 29 '54 210w

"The Year of the Lion is, in a sense, a novel about a spell, the spell of Africa; all the characters—excellently and generously rendered in bold outline—are caught in its grip, and all are nostalgic for a simpler past. . . . Mr. Hanley writes of violent action of the battle between the lion and the men closing in on him, superbly." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:496 O 24 '53 240w

"In a novel that is highly interesting simply as a story, Gerald Hanley has given us a most convincing picture of East Africa and the rapid changes that are making that continent, with Asia, one of the most interesting subjects possible, in a world that is preoccupied with change and the adjustments which change demands." E. L. Acken

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 23 '54 400w

"Africa, in a very special sense, is both the hero and the villain of this brilliant, disturbing novel. . . . His natives are wonderfully presented too—up to a point. The author never really attempts to explore his Africans in depth. It is almost as though he were admitting in advance that there is a gulf here no interloper can cross. The white members of the cast, though they are perfect illustrations of the over-all moral, are less sharply drawn." William Du Bois

+ — N Y Times p5 My 16 '54 700w

New Yorker 30:102 My 29 '54 40w

"Mr. Hanley is well qualified to write about this subject since he went to Africa as a farming pupil on one of the wild ranches during the early Thirties." W. J. Eisenlord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 14 '54 550w

"It is perhaps Mr. Hanley's knowledge of and feeling for Africa that blow life into the story's clay. He knows and loves the country with a rare compassion and simplicity; he is able to communicate its size and the size of its problems without writing a tract or a travelogue. His people and his beasts, white and black, drunk and sober, lion and tick, are moved deftly over the carefully blocked-in landscape. Yes, without achieving the sustained tension of the earlier book The Year of the Lion fulfils the promise that Mr. Hanley showed then; and for the last hundred pages or so it is more solidly realised than anything he has previously done." John Metcalf

+ Spec p464 O 23 '53 280w

"For all the strenuous activity in which Mr. Hanley involves his characters, the real subject of his book is East Africa itself. It is a subject that he knows well and has obviously studied carefully, and he admirably conveys the quality of its fascination as well as his personal feeling for it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p673 O 23 '53 350w

HANRAHAN, GENE Z. Communist struggle in Malaya; with an introd. by Victor Purcell. 146p pa $2 Inst. of Pacific relations. Int. secretariat

335.4 Communism—Malaya 54-4251

"A scholarly account of the development of the Communist movement in Malaya and of British counter-measures, with appended documents revealing Communist strategy." Nation

"Clearly and boldly written and well documented."

+ Cath World 180:vi D '54 30w

"This careful record increases in value with the changes brought into the balance of power in Southeast Asia by the Indo-China truce." O. E. Clubb

+ Nation 179:427 N 13 '54 40w

HANSEN, ALVIN HARVEY. Guide to Keynes. 237p il $3.75 McGraw

330.1 Keynes, John Maynard 52-13006

"Intended to be used as a tutorial guide to Keynes' General Theory, not as substitute, this book, by the leading American Keynesian, will help to its understanding, while criticizing it at certain points. The author claims, indeed, that Keynes would have made changes had he lived to observe more recent developments." Library J

"On the whole, this will prove to be an excellent guide; the student who is willing to work should find it very helpful. And Hansen's colleagues will be indebted to him not only for the aid his volume will provide in teaching, but also for the light he throws upon matters of recent controversy such as the multiplier, and interest theory. On these matters in particular, it seems to me, he helps to clarify what Keynes really said." Lorie Tarshis

+ Am Econ R 44:146 Mr '54 700w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 78:1238 Jl '53 50w

HANSEN, MORRIS HOWARD, and others. Sample survey methods and theory. 2v 638;332p v 1 $8; v2 $7 Wiley

311.2 Sampling (statistics) 53-8112

"Closely knit together by numerous cross-references, the pair of volumes form a unique general-purpose work on the theory of sample survey design and its application. The areas of application are taken to be demography, economic and industrial statistics, and, more generally, those domains of social science, such as public opinion analysis, which are amenable to quantitative methods. Volume I is interpretative and non-mathematical in character, while Volume II is a mathematical monograph on large-scale survey design for finite populations based on probability sampling methods." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"In the field of public health, sampling methods have become increasingly important, especially in connection with surveys of chronic disease and similar studies. The present work should be on the shelves of any organization engaged in, or planning to engage in, such surveys and it should receive careful study and frequent reference." Hugo Muench

+ Am J Pub Health 44:687 My '54 650w

"Workers in survey research, who have been looking forward for several years to the publication of this book, will find that the final result amply justifies the waiting." E. S. Marks

+ Am J Soc 59:585 My '54 600w

Library J 79:919 My 15 '54 30w

"A work of major importance to anyone interested in contemporary methods of obtaining desired information by the sampling of populations. All of the authors have been associated with the Bureau of the Census of the United States Government and two of them are still responsible for the development of sampling methods in that Bureau."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 38:95 N '53

Reviewed by E. E. Houseman

Social Forces 32:390 My '54 500w

"The first volume is well designed to serve as a reference work or manual for investigators concerned with the interpretation of sample survey results and the administrative planning of surveys. Volume II is intended for the research worker or student who requires formal command of sampling theory and survey design methodology. Both volumes exhibit unusual expository skill and Volume I, in particular, presents excellent case-study material for illustrative purposes."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:126 Mr '54 210w

HANSEN, ROBERT P. Trouble comes double. 216p $2.75 Mill

54-6403

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:137 F 15 '54 50w

"This begins freshly, with vigor, and then slides into clichés." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 My 9 '54 100w

"Commendably fast-moving but lacking real bite in prose or character." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p14 My 23 '54 30w

"Though you're unsurprised you probably won't be bored. B minus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 13 '54 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:31 Jl 10 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54 30w

HANSON, ARTHUR WARREN, and COHEN, JEROME BERNARD. Personal finance; principles and case problems. 682p il $8; text ed $6 Irwin

339.4 Finance, Personal

"Intended for a personal finance course college text, but written so as to have use for a much broader market. Covers one's whole career, from a financial viewpoint, from the time a choice of vocation is made to the time wills, trusts, and estates are planned. Illustrated with charts, pictorial check lists, sample pages of services, statistics, and forms." Library J

HANSON, A. W.—Continued

"A distinct advantage of this book is that it brings together under one cover information covering all the component parts of personal financial management. The material is presented clearly and in a usable form. It is practical, for it is based on fact and existing conditions." Sanna Black

+ J Home Econ 46:748 D '54 200w

Reviewed by R. L. Vormelker
Library J 79:1834 O 1 '54 30w

HANSON, LAWRENCE, and HANSON, ELISABETH M. Chinese Gordon; the story of a hero [Eng title: Gordon]. 256p $4 Funk

B or 92 Gordon, Charles George 54-6420

A biography of Charles George Gordon, better known as Chinese Gordon who lived during Queen Victoria's time, and was one of the strangest pillars of her Empire. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:379 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:234 J1 '54 20w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 30 '54 350w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison
Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 24 '54 600w

Kirkus 22:223 Mr 15 '54 200w

"The Hansons have produced an extremely fluent and vivacious account of the remarkable career of General Gordon, expounding in the most affable prose his feats of arms and personal intrepidity, his eccentric character and manic-depressive temperament. . . The authors have left nothing out of their brilliant portrait except sympathy for the unhappy man. But this heartless omission is perhaps obligatory within the slick omniscient limits of modern biography. . . The documentation of the book is sadly defective." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 45:650 My 30 '53 650w

Reviewed by Rodney Gilbert
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p 1 Je 6 '54 1050w

"Lawrence and Elisabeth Hanson have written a candid and colorful biography of this unsuspecting empire-builder. Exploiting all the available sources, they have etched a full-length portrait of a man who defies the ironic approach. They have come as close as anyone—including Lytton Strachey—to solving the fascinating riddle of the 'proud and angry dust' of Chinese Gordon." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p12 My 16 '54 420w

New Yorker 30:67 J1 31 '54 140w

"Lawrence and Elisabeth Hanson's 'Chinese Gordon' is a crudely written, poorly organized book, rough-hewn from the extensive quarry of Gordon material already in print. . . If the Hansons have nonetheless written an interesting book—and they have—the credit must go mainly to their subject." Dwight MacDonald

+ — New Yorker 30:134 S 18 '54 1800w

"The relation between a business-like Empire and such a man as Charles George Gordon, properly studied, would make an unusually depressing theme; and it is not surprising, I suppose, that the authors of 'Chinese Gordon' have declined to meddle with it. Their narrative, which grows more and more staccato until at last the text seems buried in a forest of exclamation-marks, is rather clever, quite shallow, and extremely exciting." George Dangerfield

Sat R 37:15 My 15 '54 850w

"No life of Gordon could be dull, and this is a very readable narrative, though sometimes marred by an attempted irony which is too often mere smartness. The authors would have made more of his personal nature if they had realized—as Mr. Pritchett has pointed out—that the inner life of the true Puritan is one of intense excitement." P. C.

+ — Spec p584 My 8 '53 220w

Reviewed by R. S. Brooks
Springf'd Republican p7C Je 6 '54 380w
Time 63:74 My 31 '54 1200w

"The joint authors of the present book indicate more frankly certain emotional conflicts and tensions which worried Gordon, and in this respect allow the reader to form a clearer idea of his character. Yet their book is disappointing. It does not clarify the motives behind Gordon's final despatch to Khartoum, and only a footnote in the prologue indicates that the account given of his last days and death is mainly conjectural."

Times [London] Lit Sup p448 J1 10 '53 500w

HARDY, EDWARD ROCHIE, and RICHARDSON, CYRIL C., eds. Christology of the later Fathers. (Library of Christian classics) 400p $5 Westminster press

232 Jesus Christ. Christian literature, Early. Fathers of the church 54-9949

"This third volume in The Library of Christian Classics introduces us to Christian thought of the fourth century Church Fathers, especially Athanasius, Gregory of Nazianus and Gregory of Nyssa. Their writings were colored by the Arian controversy which came to a head at the Council of Nicaea (325 A.D.) and reflect the attempt of the theologians of that era to formulate a doctrine about the person of Christ which would clearly indicate that Christ was both God and Man." (Kirkus) Index.

+ Christian Century 71:791 Je 30 '54 550w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon
Christian Science Monitor p5 J1 8 '54 200w

Kirkus 22:196 Mr 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by O. G. Lawson
Library J 79:1403 Ag '54 90w

HARDY, EVELYN. Thomas Hardy. 342p il $5 St Martins

B or 92 Hardy, Thomas 54-12021

A critical biography of Thomas Hardy. The author has drawn on some unpublished material and on Hardy's Life, written by his second wife. Index.

Booklist 51:106 N 1 '54

"Miss Evelyn Hardy seems to me to be one whose sound and searching study of Thomas Hardy's writings has led her deeper and deeper into a study of the man himself, so that what was initially perhaps a single literary aim has become humanist too. Her research is honest and thorough, and (what is rarer) has united penetration with range. Perhaps the book's finest quality is the careful orientation of the biographical material towards the literary end." S. M. G.

+ Canadian Forum 34:92 J1 '54 390w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p11 F 18 '54 160w

Reviewed by J. F. Sullivan
Commonweal 60:541 S 3 '54 800w

"A most sympathetic study, careful and unforced, written with great understanding of the man and of his social context." Paul Bloomfield

+ Manchester Guardian p6 F 5 '54 240w

"Miss Hardy's critical biography has much to recommend it. It is an uneven book, sometimes pedestrian to the point of insipidity, sometimes bewildering in its transitions between narrative, speculation, comment, and criticism. It is overloaded with not very apposite comparisons. . . Nevertheless, it is a fascinating and rewarding book. Miss Hardy was right to stress the importance of early environment in determining Hardy's temperament; his first marriage did not make Hardy a pessimist or a melancholic; he was, it seems, born so. Yet there is comparatively little hard fact to go upon during the early years, and Miss Hardy ekes it out with a good deal of leisurely speculation." James Reeves

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:200 F 13 '54 900w

"Miss Hardy's volume, for its assessment of the old and its integration of the new, is an impressive one that belongs in the first rank of books on Hardy." H. T. Moore

+ N Y Times p7 S 5 '54 480w

"Hardy merits a better work than Evelyn Hardy's rather poorly written, ill-constructed, and critically shallow book. . . Her choices of language give us small confidence in the author's praise of Hardy's style. Although on the whole she follows normal chronology, Miss Hardy makes allusive leaps to later events and developments, often so digressive, so irrelevant, or so faultily sign-posted that a reader grows both impatient and hard put to know just where he is in Hardy's life. . . Despite these defects the reflective reader can mine useful information out of Miss Hardy's book." Edgar Johnson

+ Sat R 37:31 O 23 '54 650w

"Miss Hardy's study is thoughtful, sympathetic and just. It is occasionally marred by stylistic carelessness, such as the split infinitive. This is a valuable book which would have been of even greater value if Miss Hardy had compared Hardy's work more closely with that of his contemporaries. Nevertheless, her industrious research has produced a book that is both delightful and wise." Elizabeth Jennings

+ -- Spec p130 Ja 29 '54 900w

"The publisher's note on the dust-wrapper of this book says that 'it may prove to be the definitive critical biography' of Hardy; but though Miss Hardy has written a useful work, 'definitive critical biography' is what it will quite clearly not prove. The author is, to begin with, not an ideal critic, either for sympathetic breadth or for perceptive edge. . . Another difficulty about Miss Hardy's criticism is that it is sometimes a little uninformative. . . In smaller things, Miss Hardy's book often has its value."

Times [London] Lit Sup p67 Ja 29 '54 850w

HARDY, LINDSAY. Nightshade ring. 264p $3
Appleton

54-6256

Mystery story.

Kirkus 22:250 Ap 1 '54 60w

"A pure blood-and-thunder opus and an exciting one." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p14 My 23 '54 90w

"There's satisfaction in this classic pattern drawn with Hardy's firm touch. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 20 '54 50w

HARDY, LINDSAY. Requiem for ■ redhead. 276p $3 Appleton

53-11810

Detective story.

Kirkus 21:682 O 1 '53 100w

"A reader might say that the book is a Grand Guignol with clues; there's no denying it's got action and suspense." Rex Lardner

N Y Times p24 Ja 3 '54 350w

"This is reminiscent of the Cheney 'Dark' novels, which means it's good. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 10 '54 90w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 36:40 D 26 '53 20w

HARDY, RENE. Sword of God; tr. from the French by Humphrey Hare. 319p $3.95 Doubleday

54-8915

"The action, taking place in the jungle round Hanoi, involves the efforts of Kernez, a worldly, ex-Spanish Republican fighter, to find his brother, Dom Angelico, a Benedictine abbot. A number of marginal figures—French Legionaries, Soviet agents, former S.S. men, a marquis, and a sophisticated gun-runner with a wife who had once loved Kernez—all become embroiled in the complexities of M. Hardy's plot. The main theme, however, as well as dealing with the ironies of Kernez's search for redemption in the figure of his brother, under torture by the Viet-minh, discusses the general duplicities of war." Times [London] Lit Sup

"It is one of the merits of this understanding and eloquent novel about Indo-China that it shows men, understandable and real, espousing an evil cause out of hopelessness, or self-interest, or cynicism. The author makes a telling comment on one of the most important phenomena of our time in his Communist-trained Vietnam leader Táh." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 180:151 N '54 330w

"There's an ironic, incisive character to much of this which heightens the dramatic realism here."

+ Kirkus 22:449 Jl 15 '54 240w

"It is good, straight, horrifying reporting; but it is not a very good novel." Isabel Quigly

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 13 '54 120w

Reviewed by Stanley Cooperman

Nation 179:194 S 4 '54 100w

"M. Hardy is deeply engaged about the war in Indo-China. He wields a fast, fluent, rather breathless pen and he knows how to tell an exciting story in an impressively exciting way. 'Impressively' is the trouble. For M. Hardy is out to impress at all costs. . . All existentialists are inclined to cry 'Hey presto!' at the moment of historic truth, but M. Hardy, who is only half an existentialist and has therefore less excuse, exclaims more than most. He does so in a series of shrill overtones and nagging gesticulations, and the reader eventually becomes bored with his histrionics." John Raymond

+ -- New Statesman & Nation 47:510 Ap 17 '54 300w

"A good book that just misses being a gem by failing to blend its elements quite smoothly." E. L. Acken

+ -- N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 10 '54 300w

"The Sword of God' has previously appeared in France and in England. Its publication in this country coincides with a belated popular realization of the significance of the long war and makes it and its participants come alive as news dispatches through the years have seldom been able to do. It is both a novel of recent wars and, perhaps, of wars to come." M. J. Tweedy

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 29 '54 550w

"If the characters are not fully revealed to us in all their probable complexities, they are sketched in with sufficient originality and boldness for their actions to seem credible; the narrative passages are often graphic; and now and then the book's observations on such subjects as political morality—very much the balliwick of today's newspapers—and the relation of means to ends are sufficiently thoughtful to raise it considerably above the level of 'just' another adventure novel." J. S.

+ -- Sat R 37:32 Ag 28 '54 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p245 Ap 16 '54 150w

HARE, CYRIL, pseud. See Clark, A. A. G.

HARICH-SCHNEIDER, ETA. The harpsichord; an introduction to technique, style, and the historical sources. 70p il $2.50 Concordia

786.2 Harpsichord

54-14631

"Describes the fundamental aspects of good performance in its seven chapters on Touch, Fingering, Phrasing, Ornamentation, Tempo and Rhythm, Registration, and Figured Bass Playing. The text is rich in quotations and translations from theorists and masters of the Baroque period and in practical references to specific passages in the music itself. There is an appendix containing some 20 examples of music, ornaments, etc., laid in at the back, and there are 8 fine photographs of the author's hands at the keyboard." Music Lib Assn Notes

HARICH-SCHNEIDER, ETA—Continued

"As the harpsichord is to the piano, so is this sparkling little book to more ponderous treatises on keyboard technique. The crystal clarity of its style is free from wordy, subjective, or psychological explanations. . . Her thoroughly practical as well as artistic approach to music for the harpsichord shows through in this book, and her enthusiasm is so infectious as to set this reviewer to practising on her instrument again." Harriet Nicewonger

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:571 S '54 260w

"So far little has been written on the technique of playing the harpsichord. Madame Harich-Schneider in an admirably compact book has made a gallant attempt to produce original sources for the technique of harpsichord-playing and to tabulate the ornaments and styles of a number of different schools of playing. Like all the other books on such subjects it has its strengths and weaknesses: no other book, however, in English (a rather odd English sometimes) has gathered so much original material on technique, nor has any other book in our language attempted to connect the Spanish-Portuguese school of playing with the main European current."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p468 J1 23 '54 850w

HARKINS, PHILIP. Road race. 276p $2.50
Crowell

53-8412

"When Dave Neil is arrested for speeding and reckless driving he nearly loses his small savings and driver's license. Luck is with him. Webb Walden, super-mechanic and maker and racer of sports cars, persuades the judge to let Dave work in his garage. . . Within a year he again enters a race—this time a legal, timed hill climb—and not a part of the initiation ceremony of the Milltown Hot Rod Club." N Y Times

"In the last several years Philip Harkins has been steadily piling up a list of outstanding books for boys. 'Road Race' can be rated with his best." P. A. Whitney

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p52 N 15 '53 130w

"Philip Harkins writes well, as his record of sports stories proves, but his facile solutions lack the emotional probing speed needs."

Kirkus 21:586 S 1 '53 120w

"Welcome addition to books on this subject for which there is frequent demand but little material. Recommended for boys in grades 8-10." F. K. Jones

+ Library J 78:2110 D 1 '53 70w

"This is more obvious as to morals and characters, less emotional and less adult than the Felsen. Mr. Harkins is a popular sports writer, who achieved the special knowledge shown here with the help of some impressive racing experts. Boys who are building their own racing models will be absorbed." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 24 '54 180w

"The book is occasionally contrived and preachy; none the less, it is a welcome addition to a new area of reading interest. Similar in theme to Henry Gregor Felsen's 'Street Rod,' this should have more appeal to the boy interested in repair and construction rather than in the problem of juvenile delinquency and teen-age gangs." L. T. Bulman

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 17 '54 170w

HARKNESS, GEORGIA ELMA. Be still and know. 96p $1.25 Abingdon-Cokesbury

242.2 Devotional exercises 53-8133

A collection of eighty-six poems, with a verse from the Bible, and a prayer accompanying each, the whole providing a book of daily devotions.

"For the busy person who is looking for brief daily devotions, this little book is the answer." F. D. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 29 '53 30w

"Georgia Harkness has caught the exalted spirit and some of the style of the ancient Hebrew writers in her poems just published in this slight volume." Pearl Mahaffey

+ Christian Century 70:1133 O 7 '53 350w

"This little devotional book should have a large sale. . . The likelihood is that many of Miss Harkness' poems will be often quoted in sermons and addresses."

+ Kirkus 21:671 O 1 '53 90w

HARKNESS, GEORGIA ELMA. Sources of western morality, from primitive society through the beginnings of Christianity. 257p $3.50 Scribner

170 Ethics

54-10370

"The genesis of our morality shown first emerging in the sanctions of the early civilizations of Egypt and the Mesopotamian Valley, then growing clearer in Hebrew morality and the system-makers of Greece and Rome, and finally reaching maturity as we know it, in the imperatives of Jesus and the New Testament. The author is a professor at the Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley, Calif." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:122 N 15 '54

"A most significant book in its field."

+ Kirkus 22:661 S 15 '54 270w

"Designed for the student, it will interest the layman because of its simple, non-technical presentation, but is not necessary if the subject is adequately covered." A. D. Osborn

+ Library J 79:2323 D 1 '54 140w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 14 '54 50w

"As always Miss Harkness writes with clarity, precision and authority. Her book will have interest for many readers." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p33 O 17 '54 160w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 31 '54 360w

HARKNESS, GEORGIA ELMA. Toward understanding the Bible. 138p $2.50 Scribner

220 Bible. Whole—Introductions 54-6327

"The purpose of this book is to try to help the ordinary person get a better understanding of the Bible. . . This little book is not designed to answer all the complex questions of biblical interpretation. It is simply a preparatory statement by which to go to the Bible and see what it says, and its usefulness will largely be determined by the extent to which the reader goes beyond it to the Bible itself. There is little here that is not the common possession of present-day biblical scholarship, but I have tried to condense, simplify and arrange in easily usable form what the big books tell at greater length." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:349 My 15 '54

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 My 16 '54 40w

"A valuable service has been rendered by Georgia Harkness in distilling the results of Biblical scholarship within such a brief compass and making them available in such a readable form."

+ Kirkus 22:194 Mr 15 '54 110w

HARLEY, JOHN HENRY, and WIBERLEY, STEPHEN E. Instrumental analysis. 440p il $6.50 Wiley

543 Chemistry, Analytic 54-7398

"Covers operation of the major analytical instruments. Includes advanced coverages of absorption and emission spectroscopy. Includes a treatment of echelle spectroscopy and entire chapters devoted to flame photometry and to high frequency titration methods." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

Chem & Eng N 32:1385 Ap 5 '54 30w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:990 My 15 '54 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:36 My '54

HARMS, ERNEST. Essentials of abnormal child psychology; a survey representing twenty-five years' work in the field of child psychology. 265p il $5 Julian press
618.9 Child study 54-196

"Presenting an unorthodox approach to the origins and treatment of psycho-pathology in children, Dr. Harms touches upon the theories of Freud, Jung, Adler, and others only to develop his own theories and methods. Part I, Genetic Psychology of Major Mental Abnormalities of Childhood, has chapters on childhood schizophrenia and childhood hysteria, depressive and manic disease, postencephalitis and mental retardation. . . Part II is titled Diagnostic and Therapeutic Procedures and, like the preceding one, contains seven chapters. Schizoid and hysteroid types are, Dr. Harms states, founded on specific physical traits." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Here is a book bound to cause some controversy among those who give help to the troubled child. . . Missing in the book is the assumption that emotionally disturbed children need a sense of love, trust and understanding which they did not get from their parents. . . He presents some ideas which many will cheer." Lucy Freeman

+ — N Y Times p29 F 14 '54 450w

"Much ground is covered, and the reader may not always agree with Dr. Harms' theories and conclusions in this individual approach to the problems and treatment of childhood abnormality. The book should be of interest, however, to practitioners who have the experience to evaluate the material critically."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:226 Je '54 280w

HARNETT, CYNTHIA. Drawbridge gate; il. by [the author] [Eng title: Ring out, Bow bells!] 250p $3 Putnam 54-5743

A historical adventure story for grades seven to nine. The scene is fifteenth century London, and the hero is Dickon, a merchant apprentice. Dick Whittington, who was three times Mayor of London, is one of the characters.

Booklist 50:302 Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 11 '54 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

"Miss Harnett is unusually good at bringing medieval England to life. . . There is a good plot with excitement and suspense; and many pictures make the period clearer to young readers. One of the best of our historical stories." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:185 Je '54 120w

Kirkus 22:4 Ja 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by G. P. Slocum
Library J 79:789 Ap 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 16 '54 300w

"A robust adventure tale, in which fifteenth-century London, with its intrigue, its street brawls, its bustling everyday life, is brilliantly re-created." Isabelle Lawrence

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 7 '54 130w

New Yorker 30:213 N 27 '54 60w

"This is the sort of story we have been looking for—a vigorous adventure story told against an unfamiliar but thoroughly convincing background, swift in action, and peopled with varied and interesting characters." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 37:53 Mr 20 '54 400w

"The book has a greater intellectual content than the last one: the author is most knowledgeable about old London and exceptionally skilful in imparting her knowledge. Her sketch-maps and illustrations are an outstanding feature of a book that is alive from first page to last with ripe wisdom, authority and humour." Garry Hogg

+ Spec p673 D 4 '53 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p9C Jl 11 '54 80w

"This is a vivid and exciting story, graced on almost every page by the author's illuminating drawings."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p12 N 27 '53 400w

Wis Lib Bul 50:144 My '54

HARPER, JAMES INGRAM, ed. Chemical engineering in practice; a collection of papers originally presented in Philadelphia, Pa, May 12, 1953, under the auspices of the Philadelphia-Wilmington section of the American institute of chemical engineering and the Department of chemical engineering, University of Pennsylvania. 140p il $3 Reinhold

660.28 Chemical engineering 54-10403

"Authoritative descriptions of the work of chemical engineers in various areas of activity in contemporary chemical manufacturing in the U.S.A. are presented in the chapters of this book. Chemical engineering students about to graduate and young engineers recently graduated should find it helpful in planning careers." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 32:2319 Je 7 '54 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:67 S '54

HARRER, HEINRICH. Seven years in Tibet; tr. by Richard Graves [with an introd. by Peter Fleming]. 314p il maps $5 Dutton

951.5 [915.15] Tibet—Description and travel 53-10851

The author, an Austrian mountaineer, was interned in India in 1939. After several failures he finally escaped and journeyed into Tibet where he lived, officially illegally, but actually on good terms with many Tibetans, for the next seven years, until the coming of the Chinese Communists forced his departure.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 193:82 Mr '54 350w

Booklist 50:318 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:129 Mr '54 30w

Reviewed by Agnes MacPhee

Canadian Forum 33:236 Ja '54 550w

"This exotic tale is told in good, quick, unvarnished style. Its author seems (to hear him tell it) innocent of introspective instincts. But as we gradually grew to know Crusoe, through his accounts of tools made and dangers outfaced, we learn to appreciate Harrer. He seems to be guiltless of the slightest 'the natives appeared unfriendly' condescension." Clorinda Clarke

+ Cath World 179:235 Je '54 240w

Reviewed by Lowell Thomas

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 28 '54 500w

Foreign Affairs 32:682 Jl '54 40w

Horn Bk 30:113 Ap '54 80w

"Tibet is a strange and wonderful land and Heinrich Harrer's record of his seven years spent there make a strange and wonderful story, a blend of personal adventure and interpretation of the mysticism and beauty."

+ Kirkus 21:728 N 1 '53 180w

"Very readable." M. D. Read

+ Library J 79:390 F 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by Guy Wint

Manchester Guardian p4 O 16 '53

Nation 178:338 Ap 17 '54 150w

"How Harrer met the fourteenth Dalai Lama and became his tutor, friend and adviser, is the highlight of the book. He watched the God-king in theological dispute with the most learned abbot—a Christ among the doctors; helped him work his cine-projector, and did his best to deal with questions about jet planes, radio and atom bombs." J. A. Smith

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:426 O 10 '53 850w

HARRER, HEINRICH—Continued

"Mr. Harrer presents an intimate picture of Tibet, unlike that given by any other European, for no one ever had his opportunity to participate in the life of that strange city in the clouds." R. C. Andrews

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 F 28 '54 1250w

"Tibet is conventionally the land of romance, of mystery, of fantasy. Almost anything written about it is bound to have a special magic. Certainly Heinrich Harrer's 'Seven Years in Tibet' is no exception—in fact, it tells one of the grandest and most incredible adventure stories I have ever read, compounded of the infallibly exciting elements of mountain climbing, dangerous escapes, life in secret, forbidden Tibet and encounters with extraordinary people." Santha Rama Rau

+ N Y Times p3 F 28 '54 1400w

"Most unusual and most agreeable book."

+ New Yorker 30:132 Mr 13 '54 180w

Reviewed by G. A. Barker

San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 28 '54 800w

"'Seven Years in Tibet' is a rounded account of Tibetan life, from the flashing eyes of the beautiful Tibetan women to the violent seances of the Oracle, whom Government functionaries consult on every important matter. One finds in this book what a travel book cannot give, what can only be had from years of eating and sleeping and living with people in their homes. In addition, there are beautiful photographs of Tibetan life." W. O. Douglas

+ Sat R 37:19 Mr 6 '54 800w

Reviewed by Christopher Sykes

Spec p404 O 9 '53 800w

Springf'd Republican p7C Mr 28 '54 900w

"The author begins by saying that as he does not know how to write a book he will content himself with the facts, unadorned save for some remarkable photographs. Few adventurers in this country have had the combined luck and hardihood to return with such news as his. Fewer still have rendered it so powerfully unadorned."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p632 O 2 '53 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 50:132 My '54

HARRINGTON, RICHARD, II. Northern exposures; Canada's backwoods and barrens pictured in monochrome and color [text by] Clifford Wilson. 119p $5 Abelard-Schuman

971 [917.1] Canada—Description and travel. Canada—Views. Arctic regions—Views 53-10846

"A volume of pictures made from photographs taken by Richard Harrington, one of Canada's outstanding camera men. The text, in five separate chapters, is by Clifford Wilson, historian of the Hudson's Bay company. Some in color, but most of them in monotone, the pictures tell the story of life in the Canadian wilderness, from sea to sea." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by J. A. Menaugh

Chicago Sunday Tribune p30 D ■ '53 60w

"It is as useless to describe [the] superlative excellence [of the photographs] as to apply adjectives to the painting in Canada's National Gallery. One must see to cherish, and one can know the quality of this art by its inexhaustibility. I am speaking particularly of the faces in his pictures. Mr. Harrington is the first photographer fully to reveal the spiritual depths of the Eskimo." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 F 4 '54 460w

"The text by Clifford Wilson is unspectacular but moderately interesting. The captions, however, seemed overlong and uninspired." William Murray

Sat R 36:68 D ■ '53 40w

HARRIS, GEORGE WASHINGTON. Sut Lovingood; ed. with an introd. by Brom Weber. 262p $4 Grove

54-10739

Twenty-one short stories of Sut Lovingood, a Southern mountaineer who likes his liquor, speaks frankly, and causes trouble wherever he appears. The editor says this is the "first full-length collection of [Harris'] work to appear in almost a century."

"Sut's monologues, because of the dialect in which they are written, are not always easy to read. . . . The book has an excellent introductory essay on the life and work of George Washington Harris. For the library wishing to add to its collection of folklore-humor, this book is recommended." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:1588 S 15 '54 110w

"The stories, full of 'vigorous and virile hell-raising,' are in the best frontier tradition in general extravagance and broad humor. If you can stand the dialect you're sure to enjoy their rip-roarin' Tennessee fun." L. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 28 '54 100w

"To anyone interested in Americana the rollicking exploits of Sut Lovingood, Southern mountaineer Tyl Eulenspiegel, is 'must' reading. As for the general reader, not bent on trying to discover American literature in colloquial idiom for itself alone the appeal will be commensurably limited and he may be hard put to agree with enthusiastic critics." Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 50w

HARRIS, JAY CHARLES. Detergency evaluation and testing. 210p il $3.75 Interscience

668.1 Cleaning compounds 53-10758

"This small book is both a critical survey of the present state of detergency evaluation and a manual of techniques which are currently enjoying some use. In the introductory chapter the author has described very briefly the various attempts which have been made to establish methods and standards acceptable to the entire industry. All of the other chapters are devoted to specific evaluatory procedures and tests." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 32:432 F 1 '54 10w

"A useful volume which will be of considerable application value to those engaged in testing, particularly of a textile or detergency nature, and which might serve as a reference for those generally interested in the subject." C. L. Mantell

+ Chem Eng 61:334 Ag '54 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:21 Mr '54

HARRIS, JOHN BEYNON (JOHN WYNDHAM, pseud). Out of the deeps [Eng title: Kraken wakes]. 182p $2; pa 35c Ballantine

53-12491

Science fiction.

Booklist 50:322 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 30:464 D '54 80w

Kirkus 21:721 N 1 '53 80w

"The journalistic aspect of it all is a little overdone, as is the brisk and breezy tone of the narrative. But it is an ingenious, horrifying, and well-told tale." H. I. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 J1 31 '53 60w

"Here, as in his last book, The Day of the Triffids, Mr. Wyndham is too lavish with ideas; the idea of the seas rising by a hundred feet and more would have made a book in itself, and perhaps given The Kraken Wakes a continuity and coherence which it sadly lacks. As it is we have a good deal too much fiction—very feeble fiction it is too, about a radio journalist and his wife—and not half enough science." J. D. Scott

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:139 Ag 1 '53 120w

"If the ending leaves unresolved some of the basic problems posed, the book as a whole is unusually compelling in its insistent immediacy—and should prove especially so to readers who have shied away from the casual hyperspatial doubletalk of so much science fiction." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 27 '53 220w

"'Out of the Deep's' on its chosen level of straight adventure entertainment, is as good as we are likely to see this year." Basil Davenport

+ N Y Times p21 F 7 '54 90w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 13 '54 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p517 Ag 14 '53 120w

HARRIS, KENNETH. How to make a living as a painter; decorations by Doug Anderson; ed. by Arthur L. Guptill. 114p $2.95 Watson-Guptill

750.69 Art as a profession 54-12955

"One of those rare painters who succeeds in making a living selling his paintings lets us in on some of his secrets, and offers some very helpful advice to the professional painter." School Arts

Booklist 51:169 D 15 '54

"This is as practical a book for an artist as has yet been seen. It is of value not only to the painter; much of its advice could be made successfully utilitarian by anyone who wishes to gain the attention of a public for his own productions. . . Recommended for the larger libraries and for career guidance collections." Paul von Khrum

+ Library J 79:2213 N 15 '54 100w

"Although the ideas are not orthodox they are convincing and apparently successful. The book is enjoyable reading and it should be stimulating to the professional artist and helpful to the high school student interested in art as a career."

+ School Arts 54:47 D '54 160w

HARRIS, LAURA, ed. Aesop's fables. See Aesop

HARRIS, LOUIS. Is there a Republican majority? political trends, 1952-1956; foreword by Paul Lazarsfeld and Samuel Stouffer. 231p $3.50 Harper

973.92 Republican party. Presidents (U.S.)
—Election. U.S.—Politics and government—1953— 54-6452

"An extensive review of U.S. political history over the last 20-25 years based largely on the Elmo Roper polls. The author examines the 1952 presidential election in great detail, clarifying the role played in that campaign by a variety of issues (Korea, parity, corruption, etc.) and the impact of the two candidates' personalities. He analyzes the vote of social, ethnic and religious subgroups; points out the increasing importance of women's votes; and makes clear that a shift in the general living conditions and attitudes of the white collar population had the greatest effect on the outcome of the election." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 50:448 Jl 15 '54

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 29 '54 140w

Reviewed by Donovan Richardson

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 28 '54 600w

Foreign Affairs 33:161 O '54 50w

Kirkus 22:264 Ap 1 '54 180w

Reviewed by Louis Barron

Library J 79:1049 Je 1 '54 210w

"The relationship between the statistical charts scattered through the book and the analyses of election returns and voting trends in various districts is often obscure. Still and all this is an exceedingly useful and stimulating book. . . It will surely provide a basis for much political talk and debate in the next two years. Best of all, it is an optimistic book, for it discourages neither Republicans nor Democrats." R. K. Carr

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 30 '54 550w

"Despite some doubtful judgments, Mr. Harris' book remains on the whole a readable, perceptive analysis of the crack-up of the Roosevelt coalition and of the conflicting political alignments left in its wake." Samuel Lubell

+ — N Y Times p1 My 30 '54 450w

"There may be those who will disagree with some of his conclusions. But in the opinion of this reviewer, at least, Mr. Harris has done handsomely by his readers in providing them with a set of clear variables they can combine at their pleasures to reach conclusions of their own. The variables may seem dry at first glance; but political activists will at once recognize that Mr. Harris's variables are as dry as gunpowder in their explosive potential." Sidney Hyman

+ Sat R 37:19 Je 19 '54 550w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 13 '54 420w

HARRIS, MARGARET (PLUMLEE), and HARRIS, JOHN. Arrow in the moon. 312p $3.50 Morrow

54-7102

Western story.

Booklist 51:44 S 15 '54

"A solid novel of the old West, this keeps to the Haycox tradition."

+ Kirkus 22:273 Ap 15 '54 170w

"While the story of Macklin is rather pedestrian, the Harrises have vividly evoked the tragedy and the heroism of Dull Knife and his tribe." Seth Agnew

Sat R 37:13 Ag 14 '54 160w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p5C Jl 4 '54 80w

HARRIS, WHITNEY R. Tyranny on trial; the evidence at Nuremberg; introd. by Robert H. Jackson; foreword by Robert G. Storey. 608p il $6 S.M.U. press

341.41 War crimes—Trials. World war, 1939-1945—Atrocities. World war, 1939-1945—Germany. International law 54-11298

"Tells the story, as revealed by the evidence at Nuremberg, of Hitler's rise to power, Nazi planning and execution of aggressive war, war crimes, and crimes against humanity, and the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny. It concludes with an interesting discussion of the law of the case." Sat R

Booklist 51:75 O 15 '54

"Whitney R. Harris, author of 'Tyranny on Trial,' who attended the Nuremberg proceedings as United States trial counsel, gives a most cogent reason why such a book as his is needed. 'Tyranny is not a product of nations or races,' he writes, 'but of men.' Hitler's passing 'has not brought an end to tyrants or despotism.' He therefore has every right to call the record of Hitler's Germany which he has compiled for the general reader with impeccable scholarship 'a lesson for all humanity.'" E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p7 S 28 '54 750w

"Controversial at times, but worth reading."

+ — Kirkus 22:378 Je 15 '54 240w

Reviewed by Louis Barron

Library J 79:2210 N 15 '54 170w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Nation 179:233 S 18 '54 180w

Reviewed by Manfred Wolfson

New Repub 131:22 D 20 '54 350w

HARRIS, W. R.—Continued

"The author, a distinguished California attorney and executive director of the American Bar Association, served on the staffs of both Justice Robert H. Jackson at Nuremberg and Gen. Lucius D. Clay at Berlin. His knowledge of the subject is ripe and ample. His book, however, is not based upon one individual's opinions or recollections. Solidly documented, it is probably the first complete historical and legal analysis of the Nuremberg trial and, in view of the nature of the subject, should be considered a book of enduring importance."

S. K. Padover

+ N Y Times p16 S 12 '54 700w

"Mr. Harris has recently been named the new executive director of the American Bar Association. If he fulfills his job there in the same spirit shown in this book the American bar will have taken a great step forward."

R. S. Israel

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 3 '54 550w

"The great significance of Mr. Harris's book is the corroboration given to historians and other reporters of events that this tragic story is borne out by facts proven in a case in court by directives signed and confirmed by the testimony of the key personalities who wrote the directives. What had shocked the conscience of the world was now condemned by law in the solemn pronouncements of an international tribunal. The story, as told by Mr. Harris, each step of which is supported by incontrovertible evidence, is much too detailed even to sketch in a review." L. D. Egbert

+ Sat R 37:15 S 18 '54 800w

Reviewed by Telford Taylor

Yale R n s 44:286 winter '55 420w

HARRISON, BRIAN. South-east Asia. 268p
11 maps $3.50 St Martins

959 Asia, Southeastern 54-11587

"This history of South-East Asia begins with the earliest traces of man in Java and, moving through successive waves of conquerors and traders, closes with a report on recent differences between United States, French, British and Dutch government in the colonies. The author is Professor of History at Hong Kong University. He says that his book deals with a region which is not a natural unit geographically speaking and that 'the scattered position of the countries concerned is one reason why so little unified material on the past history and present politics of South-East Asia can be found.'"

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:10 S 1 '54

"No solution to present problems is offered by Dr. Harrison, a professor at the University of Malaya, but he does provide appreciation and understanding of the region in a broad historical setting."

+ Current Hist 27:324 N '54 200w

Kirkus 22:355 Je 1 '54 240w

"This estimable volume fills a long felt need for a reliable introductory history of South-east Asia. . . . The book suffers somewhat [from a] rather pedestrian style and a determination to cram too many facts into each page, but it is nevertheless a valuable contribution. Recommended." William Harrison

+ Library J 79:1508 S 1 '54 140w

"The book is especially useful for the way in which it brings together the gist of the intensive research in recent years on the significant (but often nebulous) civilisations of Funan, Champa, and Srivijaya by Coedès, Quaritch Wales, Braddell, and so on. The summary of the modern colonial period, however, follows well-worn channels, and some of the judgments will not find acceptance with the newly independent countries of South-East Asia." Victor Purcell

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:806 Je 19 '54 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 22 '54 110w

HARRISON, GEORGE BAGSHAW, ed. Major British writers. 2v 767/706p $12.50; text ed ea $1.75 Harcourt

820.8 English literature—Collections 54-1421

"Anthology for college students, offering long selections (averaging about 75,000 words) of what the editor regards as the best writing of 17 'great authors'. This confers greatness on T. S. Eliot and Shaw's Man and Superman (complete). Completeness is one of the selling points of this set, which also gives all of Hamlet, Lamia, and The Canterbury Tales. Explanatory footnotes appear on nearly every page. Introductory essays, which would themselves make a book of value, are written by authorities in their respective fields, as Lionel Trilling for Matthew Arnold, and C. S. Lewis (he of Perelandra and The Screwtape Letters) for Edmund Spenser." Library J

Kirkus 22:305 My 1 '54 150w

"Chiefly for college and university libraries."

E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1054 Je 1 '54 160w

"The title of this striking anthology of English writing suggests one of the chief ways in which it differs from other collections. Avoiding the usual practice of attempting to cover the literature of several centuries in breadth, Dr. Harrison, a well-known Shakespearean scholar, decided on this selective method of covering it in depth. Thus only 17 major writers are included, but the reader is given a generous selection of the work of each—an average of some 75,000 words per author." L. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 O 24 '54 360w

HARRISON, GORDON ANDREWS. Road to the right; the tradition and hope of American conservatism. 342p $4.50 Morrow

973 Conservatism, U.S.—Politics and government 54-10304

An analysis of the tradition and potentialities of conservatism in the United States. Mr. Harrison is also author of Cross-Channel Attack, one of the volumes in the official history of World war II. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:149 D 1 '54

Kirkus 22:613 S 1 '54 340w

"The treatment is calm and reasonable. Recommended." William Henderson

+ Library J 79:2444 D 15 '54 140w

"Mr. Harrison exhibits a remarkable complacency about the soundness of the modern conservative position. The present, he writes, 'finds conservatism constitutionally secure, politically able, economically homogeneous, and fully instructed in the facts of democratic life in this century.' If only McCarthy, Jenner, Dirksen and all the other modern-day 'liberals' would see the light the millennium would indeed be here." J. A. Garraty

Sat R 37:13 D 11 '54 900w

HARRISON, MARTIN. Credo; a practical guide to the Catholic faith [Eng title: Everyday Catholic]. 369p $4.50 Regnery

248 Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works. Christian life 53-13012

"A useful volume giving the Christian, and more specifically the Roman Catholic view on some seventy-five subjects—envy, pride, work, temperance, justice, suffering, prayer, the Mass and so on." (N Y Times) No index.

"Without claiming scholarly merits the book serves its useful purpose very well." Lajos Borsody

+ Library J 79:453 Mr 1 '54 90w

"The preface describes the book as 'a miniature and simple "Summa" for the work-a-day Catholic,' but non-Catholics, too, will find much of value in it." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p26 F 28 '54 50w

HARRISON, MICHAEL. Beer cookery; 101 traditional recipes; introduced by Ambrose Heath. 143p $2 British bk. centre
641.5 Cookery (beer) 54-26106

"Beer is used in cooking in England much more than it is here. . . . Used as directed [the recipes do] a lot for roasts, fish, sauces, cakes and sweets, as well as various drinks. The recipes are not by any means all British." San Francisco Chronicle

"Ambrose Heath has written such a charming introduction to this unusual book, that one will read of the history of ales and beers in English cookery even if one refuses to eat the result!" K. T. Willis

+ — Library J 79:1230 Je 15 '54 60w

"The recipes are inclined to be of the squeeze-of-this and a pinch-of-that variety. They sacrifice accuracy to breeziness. And I believe that most people who buy cookbooks are looking for improved techniques rather than warmed-over witticisms." Mary Poore
N Y Times p32 My 16 '54 40w

"A cookbook that is both practical and well-written is not too easy to come on as a rule. However, 'Beer Cookery' fills the bill more than adequately in both respects." Jane Friendly

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 4 '54 60w

HARROD, ROY FORBES. The dollar. 156p $3.50
Harcourt

332.49 Dollar. Money 54-6383

"Here a British economist and disciple of John Maynard Keynes writes of the dollar 'as an institution,' beginning with the evolution of the dollar, going on to consider the Federal Reserve System and finally the dollar gap which plays such a prominent role in international affairs. His express purpose is 'to interpret the present behaviour of the dollar at least in part in terms of the characteristics with which its history has endowed it.'" N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by F. W. Fetter
Am Econ R 44:967 D '54 600w

"A dyed-in-the-wool Keynesian, following the party line and ignoring all arguments and facts unfriendly to the thesis, will agree with Harrod. Others will grant him a friendly smile, for after all he does write in a friendly style. Nevertheless, the substance of the whole work comes on page 143: 'Clearly an imbalance can only be rectified by an increase of world exports to the United States or a diminution of world exports from it.' It did not require even a small book to lead up to this sensible conclusion, which is not at all essentially Keynesian." F. A. Shannon

Ann Am Acad 295:168 S '54 400w

Booklist 50:392 Je 15 '54

"Very entertaining little book. . . . The New Deal's monetary policies, cheap money in particular—the authorship imputed to the great Keynes—are praised lavishly. As to the future, the dollar should be devalued to one-half. That would provide fresh billions of it for redistribution. The juggling art in economics has never been carried to greater virtuosity: to offer globaloney ideas dressed up as conservative propositions. You must read it yourself to believe it." Melchior Palyi

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ap 25 '54 160w

Foreign Affairs 33:158 O '54 30w

"Mr. Harrod concentrates on heroes. But hero-worship does not constitute history, and in the end one is left bewildered, contemplating the Federal Reserve and the dollar (a personal creation of eminent personages rather than a belated response to a change in economic climate) in a sociological vacuum." T. Balogh

New Statesman & Nation 47:137 Ja 30 '54 600w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Mr 7 '54 50w

"The history of dollar currency is a complex one, but Mr. Harrod provides an intelligible, brief outline of its origin, chronological high-spots, and contemporary meaning, without compromising subtleties." S. M.

+ Sat R 37:32 S 4 '54 190w

Times [London] Lit Sup p243 Ap 16 '54 800w

HART, BASIL HENRY LIDDELL. See Liddell Hart, B. H.

HART, ROBERT G. How to sell your handicrafts. 210p $2.75 McKay

658.8 Handicraft 53-7560

Practical advice, not on what to make, but on how to sell one's handicrafts, thru other retail agencies, thru one's own shop, etc., how to adapt one's works to the market, and how to adapt one's life to selling. Index.

Booklist 50:274 Mr 15 '54

"A thoroughly practical guide. . . . Author is internationally known as handicraft consultant identified with New York State Dept. of Interior, the Indian Arts and Crafts Board, and the Southern Highland Handicraft Guild." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:630 Ap 1 '54 130w

HART, SCOTT. Stony Lonesome. 216p $3
Coward-McCann

54-10147

"The enmity of two young East Virginia women (cousins) reaches a disastrous climax in their rivalry for the attentions of a Northern officer seven months after the Civil War has closed." Library J

Booklist 51:62 O 1 '54

"There's a haunting quality of folklore to this and a thunderhead of torment and anger adds to its foreboding. Effective."

Kirkus 22:456 Jl 15 '54 190w

"Hart again proves himself an excellent craftsman, but he should try another formula, next time. . . . He is, of course, a master of atmosphere in both time and place. The title (where the two girls live) is precious. Read before multiple purchase." Karl Brown

Library J 79:1588 S 15 '54 130w

"All the talk and all the action—particularly the climactic night scene in the swamp—comes through a sense of mood in the writing. Mr. Hart writes extremely well, very vividly of physical things, but the writing at times causes the main characters to seem isolated from a world of reality. . . . It is the swamp girl and the tall captain, in their matrix of fated love and foredoomed violence, who arouse no response to recognizable and passionate life. Instead of seeming tragic, their story, muffled in the atmosphere, is like a folk tale without a hero." Clifford Dowdey

+ — Sat R 37:30 O 2 '54 600w

HARTLEY, LESLIE POLES. Go-between. 311p $3.50 Knopf

54-7196

"In July 1900 Leo Colston, thirteen years old, was visiting his schoolboy friend Marcus Maudsley in his lovely Norfolk home. He was made a go-between in the clandestine love-affair of Marcus' sister Marian and Ted Burgess, local tenant farmer. The tragic outcome of this love and Leo's realization of his part in it blighted the rest of his life, leaving him with sharp memories of even the smallest detail of that fortnight." Library J

"While it is a somewhat old-fashioned novel, I suspect that a good many exacting readers would find it highly seductive. . . . Mr. Hartley's artistry minimizes the hamminess of [the book's] overture, and what follows is a beautifully written and absorbing story." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:85 Ag '54 370w

Booklist 51:15 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:8 O '54 20w

HARTLEY, L. P.—Continued

"A novel of distinguished quality. It is thoroly satisfying, and may be hoped to be widely satisfying. It is that rare thing: an imaginative narrative that deserves both critical and popular success by virtue of its own internal excellence, its literary artistry." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 25 '54 400w

Kirkus 22:230 My 15 '54 180w

"Fine novel that will repay careful reading and rereading. Heartily recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 79:1225 Je 15 '54 90w

"An unfortunate number of novels encompass much and accomplish little. L. P. Hartley's novel, however, while encompassing very little indeed, succeeds in establishing something rare—depth of characterization in a quiet, structured narrative."

+ Nation 179:238 S 18 '54 290w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones

New Repub 131:19 S 6 '54 1150w

"L. P. Hartley has written a novel which is second of all a good story and first of all an allegory. His cast seem not quite so alive or poignant as the ideas they represent. Nevertheless 'The Go-Between' is managed with that peculiarly British smoothness, so deceptively casual and so superior to mere slickness; and the reader gives it just what it never appears to demand—unwavering attention." W. T. Scott

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Jl 25 '54 550w

"Various excellences combine to give L. P. Hartley's work its delicate, tenacious strength. Exactitude is one of them: with the details of his vision there can be no argument. As he tells us his story, so it happened, in the realms both of action and emotion. Seldom has a book reproduced more immediately both physical sensation and its internal emotional counterpart. To read of the heat of the long-gone summer in which Mr. Hartley has placed his story is to feel one's own skin flush with the very fever of elation it induces in his young hero. One can taste the boy's uneasiness on one's tongue as he seeks to place himself in the world of human relations." Elizabeth Janeway

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 25 '54 1500w

"'The Go-Between' is an almost perfect novel of its neatly ordered and not very passionate sort. Its author isn't Faulkner by a long chalk and never will be, but he has those formidable virtues of intelligence, skill, and taste that make writers of the second rank appear, as one is reading them, better than they appear in retrospect." Brendan Gill

+ New Yorker 30:79 Ag 28 '54 300w

"This is a literary novel; i.e., it is written beautifully to say something the author feels intensely. . . . The reader will find this to be true throughout this curiously haunting book, most of all in the moments when the novel is making him most aware of its author's intent. That is why Mr. Hartley is so amazingly good, and why no reader of serious fiction should miss this book." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 20 '54 600w

"'The Go-Between' is a beautifully written novel of a child's discovery of the troubled world of his elders. Another charm of this bittersweet novel is its warmly pictured English country life. . . . Mr. Hartley's novel is emotion recollected not in tranquillity but in compassion and regret." Walter Havighurst

+ Sat R 37:10 Jl 24 '54 500w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 15 '54 500w

"'The Go-Between, a moviemaker's dream, has also been hailed by British critics as one of the best novels to come out of postwar England. Certainly it is one of the most significant, and worth study by anyone who wants to know where English fiction is heading nowadays."

+ Time 64:88 Ag 9 '54 800w

"The Go-Between is a very literary novel, and its literariness is of a high quality; it is a very mannered novel, and its manners are excellent. It recalls What Maisie Knew not only in its subject but also in its elegant symmetry, the obvious care that has gone into its planning and writing. Yet for all its beautiful craftsmanship, the book somehow does not have much of the illusion of life." Paul Pickrel

+ Yale R n s 44:xviii autumn '54 450w

HARTOG, JAN DE. Little ark; il. by Joseph Low. 213p $2.75 Harper

53-11959

The background is the great hurricane of 1953 when the dikes of Holland were swept away drowning hundreds and leaving other hundreds homeless. The central characters are two children who were saved because they were in the belfrey of the church when the flood came.

Booklist 50:89; 204 N 1 '53; Ja 15 '54

Bookmark 13:108 F '54 20w

"The Little Ark is a curious, and completely satisfying, mixture of sentiment and realism, something like a painting of the Dutch school—warm, bustling, commonplace, and yet drawn in heroic lines." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 178:472 Mr '54 250w

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 10 '54 350w

"Not since I read High Wind in Jamaica by Richard Hughes have I found a writer who seemed able to draw children in terms of their odd detachment from adult conception of disaster and tragedy, their incredible streaks of cruelty, their perverted sense of humor. But where I cordially disliked Richard Hughes' children, I loved Jan de Hartog's orphans."

+ Kirkus 21:744 N 15 '53 200w

"Technically, Hartog executes a tour de force in maintaining children's viewpoint, thus allowing many delightful touches of characterization of their elders and of the narrative, even the grim aspects. Highly recommended." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:145 Ja 15 '54 130w

"Realistic, vivid, harrowing, and much more than reporting, for it is a dual-purpose structure standing for art and for universal fellowship." Paul Bloomfield

+ Manchester Guardian p2 D 31 '53 220w

"There is humor in some of the situations in which Mr. De Hartog places the children and their animals, and certainly there is humor in the realistic lustiness of his dialogue, especially when the Urk fishermen sound off against the snobs of the sea. But, too heavily stressed, the humor and the whimsy and the farce strike a false note when played against the grim orchestration of flood and its consequences. Moreover, one questions the integrity of portraiture of two children who make a holiday of death." Carol Field

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 10 '54 800w

"This special device of inverting the telescope so that the world of childhood—in which a pet is larger than a parent—comes through intact, stems directly from Richard Hughes' 'High Wind in Jamaica.' There are other similarities. . . . If there is less enchantment, if the humor is broader and the irony poured from heavier ore, the answer is that 'High Wind in Jamaica' is an incomparable book whereas 'The Little Ark' is simply a very good one." Burke Wilkinson

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 10 '54 400w

"Mr. de Hartog has an apparently irresistible impulse to fancify, which fritters away much of the humanity of what he has to say, but his intention is good, if a bit pat, and his people are pleasant enough."

New Yorker 29:101 Ja 23 '54 50w

"A story that has charm, suspense, tenderness, and skill. Perhaps too much skill, for his series of novel effects adorn the elemental disaster of his story like elements on a lightning-shredded tree trunk." Meyer Levin

+ Sat R 37:41 F 13 '54 550w

"The children—boastful, callous and loving—are most convincing; and humour as well as goodness shine unobtrusively through the horrors, particularly in the fishermen and in the touching figure of the village pastor, Mr. Grijpma. It is surprising that such a rounded and complete work of art, not mere reportage, should be produced so soon after the tragic event."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p813 D 18 '53 350w

Wis Lib Bul 50:72 Mr '54

HARTOUGH, HOWARD DALE, and MEISEL, SEYMOUR LIONEL. Compounds with condensed thiophene rings. (Chemistry of heterocyclic compounds) 515p $16.50; subs $15 Interscience

547.2 [547.6] Heterocyclic compounds 53-7159

"A complementary volume to H. D. Hartough's, Thiophene and Its Derivatives (1952). The style of the series is followed, and a wide range of information of the chemistry of the groups of compounds named in the chapter titles is presented, much of it in tabular form. Both expository text and tables are keyed to the bibliography which contains approximately 790 citations of papers and 715 citations of patents. In addition to the volume bibliography the chapter on thioindigo and related dyes contains an extensive bibliography of patents relating to thioindigos." N Y New Tech Bks

"This monograph and its companion volume are essential to anyone who wants either a general orientation or specific information about thiophene and the more complex ring systems containing a thiophene ring. Only the chemist who wants a complete listing of the thioindigo dyes will have to go elsewhere. The monograph will serve not only as a source of information, but also as a stimulus to further work; and the authors have indicated many areas in which additional work is desirable." A. H. Blatt

+ Chem Eng 61:345 D '54 320w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:36 My '54

HARTWELL, NANCY, pseud. See Callahan, C. W.

HARVEY, JACK. Salt in our wounds. 190p $3 Dutton

54-5044

A third-rate British oil tanker, manned by a crowd of misfits, is torpedoed by a Japanese submarine in the Indian Ocean. The thirty or more survivors drift for more than a month in one life boat, and the novel describes their adventures.

Booklist 50:381 Je 1 '54

Kirkus 22:165 Mr 1 '54 120w

"Despite its careful precision, 'Salt in Our Wounds' falls short of leaving the reader with the feeling that he has participated in a terrible experience. Perhaps because the narrator is a rather priggish young man, perhaps because the author has not yet learned the difference between detachment and aloofness, one comes away from the novel too conscious that he has been reading a well-written book and not conscious enough of the terrors of life-in-death."

+ — Nation 179:238 S 18 '54 240w

"A first novel that is grimly unsentimental. His short book is repetitious, untidy in form, shallow in characterization. But its abundance of telling detail and its dramatic solidity give it a crude and triumphing power." Charles Lee

+ — N Y Times p26 My 9 '54 440w

"This is a low-keyed but powerful story of men under stress, a study of the elemental struggle of human endurance against the awesome sea and its deadly allies—the tropic sun, thirst and starvation. It is also a picture of men who, like Griff, can do a much better job of facing death than they can of facing life."

R. H. Dillon

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 20 '54 550w

Springf'd Republican p5C Jl 4 '54 100w

HARVEY, PAUL, pseud. See Aurandt, P. H.

HARWOOD, ALICE. The strangeling; a Victorian novel. 2v $6 Bobbs

53-10554

"A narrative of the life and times of one Michal Charteris, written, the author asserts, in response to a demand for the lengthy Victorian type of novel. Michal, born about 1825, is a missionary's daughter, and as impractical a reformer as ever took her small, muslin-clad self into a slum to preach to the lower orders. This episode of ill-considered idealism from Michal's childhood sets the tone of her further philanthropies throughout adolescence and young womanhood, involving her in more than one compromising situation from which she emerges unsullied but often sufficiently misunderstood so that further obstacles are continually being placed in the way of her union with the worthy young man of her choice." Booklist

Booklist 50:341 My 1 '54

"The danger of appraisal in all this lies in a tendency to draw too close a parallel for comparative purposes between this production and the works of the great Victorians which have stood the test of time. Whether 'The Strangeling' will entitle her to rating as even a minor prophet among the major Victorians—with whom she has by her own act and avowal placed herself in competition—is hardly a matter for settling at the moment. Let it suffice that she has made a superb try." Henry Cavendish

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 25 '54 360w

"Whether or not this is Victorianism (whatever that is), lock, stock and barrel, is in one sense irrelevant. What is important is that Miss Harwood has gone back to other ways of thinking and feeling with such sensitiveness and sympathy that we see them with a validity of their own, as something as natural and vital as the life about us. . . Best of all, it is an unusually enjoyable story." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 My 16 '54 800w

"Author Harwood pours a small army of characters and events into her book, but most of them congeal on the printed page like spilled wax. . . By age 27, and novel's end, Michal Charteris has lived an exhaustive, if not a complete life, and Author Harwood's Victorian restoration has generated not a little fun, some of it unintentional."

Time 63:117 Ap 12 '54 500w

HASHIMOTO, MOCHITSURA. Sunk [the story of the Japanese submarine fleet, 1941-1945] tr. by E. H. M. Colegrave; with an introd. by Edward L. Beach. 276p il $3.95 Holt

940.5451 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations—Submarine 54-10522

"In the long introduction to the translation of this book which was originally in Japanese, Commander Beach gives reasons for the ineffectiveness of Japanese submarine warfare: inflexible obedience to improper guidance from above, deficiency in industrial and scientific resources, and underestimation of American submarines. Hashimoto, who ended World War II as Commander in the Imperial Japanese Navy, points to these failings in his description of the duties and activities of the submarine fleet." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 51:128 N 15 '54

Kirkus 22:513 Ag 1 '54 210w

HASHIMOTO, MOCHITSURA—Continued

"The story is occasionally absorbing, but numerous passages belong to official naval history, a purpose which this undocumented work cannot serve." H. P. Linton

Library J 79:1828 O 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by G. A. Craig

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 O 10 '54 1000w

New Yorker 30:190 N 6 '54 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p268 Ap 23 '54 180w

HASLEY, MRS LUCILE CHARLOTTE (HARD-MAN). Mouse hunter. 242p $2.75 Sheed

818 Catholic church—Converts 53-9799

"A zealous and devout convert to Catholicism writes of her daily experiences as a wife and the mother of three lively children, of her community interests, her trials as a lecturer, and of her conversion itself, in a gay and humorous fashion." Library J

"In this age when many people in all parts of the globe are watching the skies for a bomb to fall, it is a relief to read a book from the pen of this lighthearted author." A. M. Sholl

+ Cath World 178:477 Mr '54 300w

"Collection of essays and short stories that Catholics and non-Catholics alike will find entertaining and heart-warming. Readers who enjoyed her Reproachfully Yours (1949) will welcome this new collection. Recommended for general purchase." B. B. Libaire

+ Library J 78:1688 O 1 '53 90w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 15 '53 40w

HASLIP, JOAN. Lucrezia Borgia. 279p il $3.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Borgia, Lucrezia 54-6503

A biography of Lucrezia Borgia which traces her life from birth to her third marriage, to Alfonso d'Este, and to the deaths of her father and brother Cesare. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:340 My 1 '54

"Notwithstanding some slipshod writing, this account of the notorious Lucrezia, her father Pope Alexander VI, and her brother Cesare, provides absorbing reading. Miss Haslip gives a stirring picture of an incredibly lusty and turbulent era, even though she shows unfashionable restraint in her use of the titillating material that the chronicles of the time supply in abundance. Its value as history is harder to assess."

+ Nation 178:550 Je 26 '54 210w

"It is inevitable that this latest biography, though competent and interesting, will suffer by comparison with the English translation of Maria Bellonci's masterly appraisal which appeared a few months ago. Miss Haslip is less familiar with her subject, with the unpublished sources, with the Italian character and countryside. Her pen portrait is not full length nor her analysis very profound. She has done little to resolve the enigmas of Lucrezia's life. Nevertheless, there is much useful and interesting information here on Renaissance Italy."

Geoffrey Brunn

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Ap 25 '54 550w

Reviewed by Carlo Beuf

N Y Times p10 Ag 29 '54 850w

"The Borgias are still the symbols of all that was evil in the fabulously immoral age of the Renaissance—poisoners, torturers, extortionists, debauchees, monsters of depravity, masters of every vice, natural and unnatural. Yet nobody, not even one of the Borgias, could possibly have been that inhuman, and it is the outstanding merit of 'Lucrezia Borgia,' Joan Haslip's fascinating and documented reconstruction of their story, that in showing them human she sacrifices nothing of the passion, the frenzy, or the pageantry of the lives which were so inextricably woven into the fabric of Italian history during the last decade of the fifteenth century." Leo Gershoy

+ Sat R 37:23 Ag 28 '54 600w

"This study is well-knit, readable and convincing. The signs of hard work have been smoothed out and no guess is ever recorded as a fact." M. C.

+ Spec p42 Jl 3 '53 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p35 Ja 15 '54 360w

HASS, HANS. Men and sharks; tr. from the German by Barrows Mussey; with sixty-four photographs. 318p $3.95 Doubleday

591.92 Marine fauna. Diving, Submarine 53-7975

In this new book by the author of Diving to Adventure, and Manta (Book Review Digest 1951, 1953) Dr Hass tells of new adventures in the coastal waters of Greece.

Booklist 50:313 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:156 Ap '54 10w

Reviewed by Al Chase

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 28 '54 320w

Kirkus 22:49 Ja 15 '54 190w

"Much curious data on marine biology palatably presented, and comment on things in general. Decidedly popular in style, with scientific aspects sprinkled very thinly. For general reading." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:448 Mr 1 '54 150w

"Mr. Hass' book is an account of an expedition to Greece for the purpose of making underwater motion pictures of sharks and similar deep-sea creatures and to gather material for lectures, articles and books. The cloak of scientific study is thrown thinly over the whole endeavor as it is in so many similar expeditions. . . . Devotees of deep-sea diving yarns will find Mr. Hass' stories of submarine movie making most intriguing, though they will have to wade through a good many pages of diversion, anecdote and semi-philosophical musings to get to the part about sharks. And the conservation-minded will hardly approve of Mr. Hass' indiscriminate use of dynamite as a means of killing other fish for shark bait." Gilbert Klingel

N Y Times p6 Mr 28 '54 130w

New Yorker 30:138 Ap 17 '54 80w

"Hass is at his best when describing the silent splendor of a cathedral-like submarine grotto or the configuration of some lovely coral flower. On men and sharks, however, he is less successful. . . . The translation from the German by Barrows Mussey is several cuts above the average for works of this modest calibre." J. M. Flagler

+ — Sat R 37:56 Ap 10 '54 270w

HASSLER, ALFRED. Diary of a self-made convict; foreword by Harry Elmer Barnes. 182p $3 Regnery

365.9748 Conscientious objectors. Lewisburg, Pennsylvania. Federal penitentiary 54-5643

Diary of an educated, sensitive American who, as a conscientious objector, served a sentence in the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pennsylvania.

Booklist 50:215 F 1 '54

Reviewed by J. R. Perkins

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 7 '54 500w

"Though Mr. Hassler does not exploit his own innocence, a good part of the poignancy of his book derives from the paradox of the situation when an obviously high-minded and idealistic citizen is incarcerated and is subjected to the same type of discipline as robbers and murderers." W. E. G.

Christian Century 71:764 Je 23 '54 200w

Reviewed by Stafford Derby

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 20 '54 230w

"His account of the miseries and degradations of prison life and his descriptions of the demoralizing effects of prisons generally, make up one of the most impressive books of its type ever issued. The terrible effects of imprisonment are clearly shown by him to affect not only the prisoners but the captors as well. Mr. Hassler's impassioned but extremely reasonable and highly effective indictment of the prison system is earnestly recommended for purchase by all libraries." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:140 Ja 15 '54 140w

"The life-stories here do not differ greatly from those in recent prison narratives. But because a skillful journalist is writing, and one whose warmth of understanding could bridge gaps in education, experience, and moral code, and pierce to the essential human being beneath incrustations of defiance and hate, they come to life with a special vividness." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p31 My 16 '54 600w

"Mr. Hassler vividly presents the fear, misery, frustration and injustice of prison life. He tells the story of his eight months in prison in simple terms. It is one of the finest books on the subject that it has been this reviewer's privilege to read." G. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 11 '54 150w

Springf'd Republican p10C Mr 7 '54 140w

HASSMANN, HEINRICH. Oil in the Soviet Union: history, geography, problems; tr. from the German with the addition of much new information by Alfred M. Leeston; foreword by E. De Golyer. 173p il maps $3.75 Princeton univ. press

338.27 Petroleum industry and trade

53-6386

"The Russian oil industry is an area in which data are highly inadequate even after publication of reports delivered at the Moscow Congress of the Communist Party in October, 1952, containing oil production figures previously unavailable. Also, recent events in the Middle East point up this 1951 work in German by Dr. H. Hassmann, now translated into English, brought up to date, and enhanced in its usefulness by the addition of maps and numerous footnotes, by A. Leeston of Dallas." Ann Am Acad

"The book's factual, nontechnical presentation provides much pertinent information not readily available elsewhere." V. J. Tereshtenko

+ Ann Am Acad 292:204 Mr '54 400w

Foreign Affairs 32:678 Jl '54 40w

"The book is admirably translated into clear, readable English. Inclusion of maps from Pratt and Good, World Geography of Petroleum, and from Shabad, Geography of the USSR, enhances the value of the English edition. The detailed figures of production year by year, region by region, obviously include data from scattered and sometimes inconsistent sources. As nearly as can be judged, however, they are of a high order of accuracy. I should agree with the foreword by E. DeGolyer that the book formed 'the best general survey of the Russian oil economy presently available.'" C. D. Harris

+ J Pol Econ 62:368 Ag '54 440w

"Is an inadequate oil supply the Achilles heel of the Soviet Union? Dr. Hassmann, a noted German oil economist, carefully sets forth the pros and cons of this question and tentatively concludes that Soviet oil resources, supplemented by those of its satellites, are insufficient to allow for an increase in political and economic strength. Consequently, he believes that the Russians may well seek a share of the bountiful petroleum reserves of the Middle East. Unfortunately, his discussion of this possibility which ignores technical and strategic difficulties, is far too cursory to be of value. More useful, if rather pedantic, are his sketch of the history of the Russian oil industry and his description of its present state, region by region."

+ Nation 178:285 Ap 11 '54 280w

"To those whose business it is to keep track of the economics and war potentials of foreign lands, 'Oil in the Soviet Union' is indispensable. I know of no book quite like it." D. A. Greig

+ Sat R 37:54 Mr 13 '54 650w

HASTINGS, MACDONALD. Cork in Bottle. 278p $2.75 Knopf

54-5264

Detective story.

Booklist 50:360 My 15 '54

Kirkus 22:167 Mr 1 '54 70w

"Mr. Hastings, working unabashed with the most preposterous medley of old shockers, keeps on saying Boo in cultured if somewhat stagey tones and the consequence is sort of fun." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ap 25 '54 80w

"There is a tongue-in-cheek Gothic plot involving an isolated and absolute squirearchy in East Anglia, complete with illegitimate heirs, inbred family madness and even secret passages, modernized by a deft light touch and adorned with an intensive study of ballistics." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p14 My 23 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 13 '54 70w

"Good, but first was better." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:31 Jl 10 '54 20w

Reviewed by Raymond Postgate

Spec p768 D 25 '53 70w

"Snow, marsh, rustic obduracy and the disadvantages of country life are depicted firmly enough to make the violent doings that spring from the family secrets at the manor less incredible than they would otherwise be."

Times [London] Lit Sup p733 D 4 '53 150w

HASTINGS, SIR PATRICK. Autobiography. 302p il $4.50 Roy pubs.

B or 92 Lawyers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-10474

Reminiscences of a British advocate, well-known in the days of World war I. After a rather varied youth, part of it spent in Corsica, Sir Patrick became His Majesty's Attorney-General and leader of the British bar. Index.

"Pleasant if not particularly profound reminiscences. . . Public, university and law libraries." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1891 O 15 '54 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 N 7 '54 20w

"With a dead-pan approach reminiscent of Evelyn Waugh, he puts it all down in this book, emphasizing the fact that law was his métier but by no means his life. He enjoyed a happy marriage, made several gay, abortive raids into the drama and endured a grueling session in politics. Few men have written a more candid or appealing autobiography." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p14 O 17 '54 320w

HASTINGS, PHYLLIS. Rapture in my rags. 222p $3 Dutton

54-8119

The scene is a lonely farm on the coast of England. Agnes, the supposedly dull-minded daughter of a brutal father, fashions a handsome scarecrow, and falls in love with it. When the scarecrow seems to come to life Agnes is more in love than ever, and it is the scarecrow which eventually brings a bit of lightness into Agnes' dark life.

Booklist 51:15 S 1 '54

Kirkus 22:294 My 1 '54 100w

"Recommended for general purchase." M. G. Wynne

+ Library J 79:1309 Jl '54 120w

HASTINGS, PHYLLIS—Continued

"Mrs. Hastings tells a touching story of a girl's search for affection, her achieving a kind of protective maturity, and her revolt to preserve her newfound identity." Rex Lardner
+ N Y Times p14 J1 18 '54 320w

"To bring off this kind of thing triumphantly, as the author has done, requires an unusual writing gift. Phyllis Hastings has it. 'Rapture in My Rags' is like nothing else you'll ever have read, but it is tremendously worthwhile experience." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 17 '54 550w

"The weakness of the book lies in that of its principal figure, for it is hard to reconcile so much 'simpleness' with so much perception and even shrewdness; once this premise is granted, the conception has some originality, illuminated by a strong feeling for the beauty of the countryside."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p213 Ap 2 '54 150w

HATCH, ALDEN. Red carpet for Mamie; il. by Allene Gaty. 277p $3.50 Holt

B or 92 Eisenhower, Mamie (Doud) 54-9277

"This story of the life of the First Lady gives more of the family background than Dorothy Brandon's sketch of a few weeks ago. The red carpet on the front steps of the Denver house made the porch a gathering place for the young people of the neighborhood and is symbolic of the hospitality for which Mrs. Eisenhower is famous." Library J

Booklist 51:13 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:4 O '54 20w

Reviewed by Josephine Ripley

Christian Science Monitor p15 N 18 '54 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p32 S '54

Kirkus 22:364 Je 15 '54 120w

"With this story of the Doud family the picture, for the moment, is quite complete and libraries may add this as a 'period piece,' if not a great work of art." K. T. Willis
Library J 79:1396 Ag '54 90w

"Mamie, as both her biographers have made clear, is 'folksy,' and therein lies the secret of her appeal. Both in text and illustrations, Mr. Hatch's book captures this quality." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune E R p6 Ag 15 '54 400w

"The early chapters set the tone for the whole book: Mamie's growing up, her school days, the family excursions in the Doud's shiny new Rambler, the parties in the basement rumpus room (and such a room with a big pool table in it caused a lot of talk in those days) all have a story-book quality that continues to the end. But still, becoming the First Lady, does have a make-believe touch about it—only in Mamie's case the fairy tale really came true." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 1 '54 360w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 29 '54 750w

Reviewed by J. H. Pollock

Sat R 37:18 Ag 7 '54 330w

HAVIGHURST, WALTER. Annie Oakley of the Wild West. 246p il $4.50 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Oakley, Annie 54-12424

Biography of Annie Oakley (1860 to 1926) famous American markswoman, who traveled with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show in both this country and abroad. In telling her story the author includes a lively picture of the Old West. Index.

Booklist 51:81 O 15 '54

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 3 '54 280w

Reviewed by E. W. Foell

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 18 '54 600w

Kirkus 22:429 J1 1 '54 180w

"Delightfully written and well illustrated. Highly recommended for American history, circus and theatre collections as well as for general circulation." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1589 S 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 179:266 S 25 '54 50w

"Though it seems strange that so good a writer as Mr. Havighurst should have felt the need to interpolate imaginary conversations, which add nothing to the book, he has otherwise written a most engaging biography. His pages describing Annie's superb showmanship, and the Wild West outfit in general, catch all of the excitement of tanbark, lights, gunfire, and brass bands." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 19 '54 500w

"The book is based on careful study which does not slow the pace of a warmly sympathetic narrative. A caviler might ask where the author has seen gooseberry vines, how he got the idea that the Statue of Liberty is made of stone, and how the King of Senegal managed to find man-eating tigers in Africa. But these are trifles. Annie Oakley is a pleasure to know in his pages, as she was once a pleasure to watch in the arena." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Times p6 S 19 '54 700w

New Yorker 30:225 N 20 '54 130w

"Mr. Havighurst, a serious scholar, has documented his book admirably; you will be reading facts, and no imaginative 'reconstruction.' But he does even better than that. As I've already said, he takes pains to give his readers the color of the period." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 5 '54 500w

"In his fine and interesting book, 'Annie Oakley of the Wild West,' Walter Havighurst has done full justice to her story. For good measure he has included an account of Buffalo Bill's famous Wild West Show in which 'Missie,' as Cody called her, was a star for seventeen years. . . Mr. Havighurst has done a remarkably fine job. I don't see how this book could have been improved upon." Herbert Asbury

+ Sat R 37:18 D 11 '54 900w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 450w

HAWES, ELIZABETH. It's still spinach. 233p il $3.95 Little

646.01 Fashion. Clothing and dress 54-8287

Since the days when she wrote Fashion is Spinach (Book Review Digest 1938) the author has not changed her mind about unesthetic, non-functional clothing. In this book she advocates more satisfying ways of living and dressing, for both men and women. No index.

Booklist 51:1; 77 S 1 '54; O 15 '54

Kirkus 22:518 Ag 1 '54 170w

Reviewed by M. F. Antolini

N Y Times p34 N 21 '54 400w

"Miss Hawes makes all this amusing, works hard to make it titillating, and manages to talk some sound common sense. She may well make some converts, too, especially among men. She ought to, I think you'll agree." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 11 '54 650w

HAWKES, JOHN. Goose on the grave [and The owl] two short novels. 207p $3 New 54-10040

"John Hawkes is perhaps the only militant surrealist writer in America, which limits his audience to those who don't mind tasting a strange literary brew. His newest book is composed of two novellas. One is about a village hangman who governs the heartbeats of his townsmen with the cruel casualness of a pagan priest. The other concerns the adventures of a small boy in the far from mutually-exclusive worlds of the military, the monastic, and the secular. Both stories are set in Hawkes's unreal but authentic version of Italy." Sat R

Reviewed by Vivian Mercier

— Commonweal 60:323 J1 2 '54 900w

"The work of John Hawkes shows some of the advantages and, unfortunately, a great many of the disadvantages to be found in determinedly baroque fiction. His most recent book—two novellas entitled 'The Owl' and 'The Goose on the Grave'—is filled with fascinating stage effects and little else."

— + Nation 179:17 J1 3 '54 360w

"Hardly a scene will be comprehensible to the reasonable-minded reader, yet the whole thing reverberates with overtones and after-images, inexplicable, unresolved, but oddly affecting, even to those who will accuse him of pointless obscurity... While this book doesn't seem to me as potent as his first novel, 'The Cannibal,' and while posterity will not, perhaps, name Hawkes one of the major experimenters, from whose efforts arose a pervading extension of literary communication, those of us who believe that his experiment is sincerely motivated will wish him well and support his resolute refusal to compromise with the demand for effortless intelligibility." Jerome Stone

+ — Sat R 37:35 J1 24 '54 290w

HAWKINS, QUAIL. Best birthday; il. by Antonio Sotomayor. 63p $2 Doubleday

54-9839

Story of a small boy who could not understand how his father and mother could leave him alone on Christmas morning, so he started out to visit his grandmother. Grandma lived across the San Francisco Bay and the ferry got stuck in a bad storm. But when his father met him on the return ferry with the story of a new baby sister all was forgiven. For ages six to nine.

Booklist 51:116 N 1 '54

"Children will enjoy the excitement on board the ferry and the wonderful illustrations by Antonio Sotomayor, who takes you right into the heart of San Francisco and into the heart of a young boy. And if your 'only child' resents the coming of an addition to the family, this story might help make everything right." E. S. D.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 14 '54 150w

"Miss Hawkins handles this familiar psychological conflict with real skill through a truly delightful story which will go to the heart of many a five to eight, and we hope, to their parents' too."

+ Commonweal 61:204 N 19 '54 40w

"An easy-to-read, childlike little story with special meaning for any time when a new baby in the family makes an older child question the love of his parents." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:442 D '54 140w

Kirkus 22:677 O 1 '54 110w

"Recommended for ages 6-9 in school or public libraries." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 79:2496 D 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune BK R p7 D 19 '54 100w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p54 D 5 '54 80w

"Antonio Sotomayor's drawings of San Francisco scenes will make adults want their own copy of this beautifully told story." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 14 '54 120w

HAWKINS, REGINALD ROBERT. Kitchen book: planning and remodeling. 345p il $4 Van Nostrand

643.3 Kitchens

53-10095

"A book of kitchen planning lore premised on the belief that all kitchens can be made convenient and attractive without undue cost. The chief of New York Public Library's Science and Technology Department reduces odds and ends of information to an orderly discussion of the important principles involved in planning and remodeling, and of the special aspects of kitchen construction, such as storage, built-ins, appliances, windows and doors, ceilings and walls, floors, electrical circuits and outlets, cabinets, shelves, and bars. The author seems to favor multiple-purpose kitchens that serve as household headquarters, and offers several suggestions for such combination kitchens that will interest many homeowners and housewives." Booklist

Booklist 50:179 Ja 1 '54

Bookmark 13:129 Mr '54 20w

"For remodeling an old kitchen or planning a new one, this book will be a big help." Anne Douglas

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ja 3 '54 90w

"It would be difficult to think of any detail of kitchen planning which this easy-to-read book does not cover... The author is chief of the science and technology department at the New York Public Library. Although the book is not documented and is written for the homemaker—and her husband—its comprehensive scope and sound, practical information make it a desirable reference book for the teacher and extension worker in housing and home management." H. E. McCullough

+ J Home Econ 46:125 F '54 300w

"It should be a good book for those who are building their own homes; or for the householder who wants to think through, scientifically, the problems that his architect and builder will have."

+ Kirkus 21:606 S 1 '53 120w

"The book is well written and can be read with pleasure and profit by anyone interested in the question of planning and remodeling kitchens." Lucille Williamson

+ Library J 78:2031 N 15 '53 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:89 N '53

Reviewed by Richard Johnston

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 21 '54 30w

HAWKINS, REGINALD ROBERT, ed. Scientific, medical, and technical books published in the United States of America; second supplement [1949-1952]. 599p $10 Bowker

016.5 Science—Bibliography. Medicine—Bibliography. Technology—Bibliography (46-2936)

"This second supplement to a bibliography [originally published 1946, Book Review Digest 1946] describes titles published in original or substantially revised editions from 1949 through 1952. Several new headings have been added, covering subjects on which little or no book literature was available when the earlier compilations were made; handicrafts have also been included because other countries are displaying interest in American books for the amateur craftsman." Booklist

Booklist 50:310 Ap 15 '54

Library J 79:913 My 15 '54 10w

U ■ Quarterly Bk R 10:275 Je '54 160w

HAYAKAWA, SAMUEL ICHIYE, ed. Language, meaning and maturity. See ETC: a review of general semantics

HAYCOX, ERNEST. Prairie guns. 186p $2.50 Little 54-9409

Nine stories of the old West.

Booklist 51:64 O 1 '54

"Top notch collection." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 8 '54 20w

+ Kirkus 22:275 Ap 15 '54 80w

HAYCOX, ERNEST—Continued

"They are grim tales, all of them, of the day when the ploughs first tore the prairie sod, but all of them are good, so good that this reviewer would not attempt to pick a best." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p10 S 5 '54 140w

"The collection makes a vivid panorama of frontier life." Seth Agnew

+ Sat R 37:12 Ag 14 '54 110w

HAYDN, RICHARD. Journal of Edwin Carp. 242p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

54-9794

"The journal of Edwin Carp, the gift of his intended, a widowed Mrs. Maude Phelps, records the modest events and occasional domestic disasters of his 42d year which is to witness some suspicious changes in his life. Edwin, a gentle gaffer who approaches life with a gingerly restraint, lives with his mother whose failing health, and mind, does not diminish his devotion to her which has, for nine years, retarded his marriage to Maude. The annals here transcribe his difficulties as a landlord, with a leaking pipe, with a somnabulistic paying guest, and with a Mrs. Luby whose profession is doubtful, to all save Edwin." Kirkus

Booklist 51:84 O 15 '54

"A decorous diversion which through the absurdities of a Victorian gentility and a homiletic flow of phrase manages quite some humor, of a special nature."

+ Kirkus 22:348 Je 1 '54 210w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 79:1512 S 1 '54 90w

"This touching, funny man with his nineteenth-century sensibilities is due a happy ending; he would obviously not be suited to tragedy. Mr. Haydn, in his first novel, has attempted a tour de force, and pulled it off delightfully." Barbara Klaw

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Ag 22 '54 700w

"A wonderfully amusing book." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 22 '54 800w

"Of course it is a difficult thing to sustain a mood like this. By and large Mr. Haydn does it beautifully. The fact that you really come to like that precious idiot, Edwin, is evidence that the author knows what he's doing. Yet it must be said that there is just plain too much of it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 9 '54 750w

"Mr. Carp, of course, didn't really write his journal. It was set down by Richard Haydn, who is, of all things, a movie actor. Mr. Haydn has a big job ahead of him. He must abandon acting for good and devote himself in the future to a continuation of The Journal. There is not an unfunny page." H. A. Smith

+ Sat R 37:16 Ag 28 '54 550w

HAYEK, FRIEDRICH AUGUST VON, ed. Capitalism and the historians; essays by T. S. Ashton [and others]. 187p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

330.15 Capitalism. Historiography 54-64

"A lengthy discourse by the editor, on the relation of history to politics, introduces five additional essays, all designed to furnish evidence that the laboring classes were benefited, not harmed by the development of the factory system. Abuses and shortcomings, they say, were exaggerated by well-meaning reformers, and the distortions are still tenaciously held and disseminated by historians who thereby do a disservice to the cause of free enterprise. The papers are written by T. S. Ashton, Louis M. Hacker, Bertrand de Jouvenel, and W. H. Hutt." (Booklist) No index.

"A collection of writings which is likely to be viewed with mixed feelings by economists and historians, whatever their political beliefs may be. Quite the most effective and scholarly of these essays is Ashton's 'The Treatment of Capitalism by Historians.' . . Expansion of this essay, along with Hayek's introduction, would have provided a considerably more coherent and telling statement of the editor's point of view than that presented by the book as published, for the remaining contributions add little to support his position and contain much to confuse the reader." W. T. Easterbrook

Am Econ R 44:658 S '54 1000w

Reviewed by E. E. Lampard

Am Hist R 60:64 O '54 800w

"There is plenty of room for a book in this area. Professional historians have certainly failed too often to allow for the conditions of industrial productivity; this has much too often been taken as a 'given' in the historical balance sheet, as if it were an irresistible natural force. But this book adds nothing to such a discussion, except a summons to a witch-hunt. Americans, one would think, have enough trouble with home-grown McCarthys without importing Viennese professors to add academic luster to the process." Arthur Schlesinger, jr

— Ann Am Acad 293:177 My '54 900w

Booklist 50:253 Mr 1 '54

"The little book is full of challenge in varying ways, a stimulating 'stage analysis,' to borrow Dean Hacker's phrase, in the continuing process of historical interpretation." R. Flenley

+ Canadian Hist R 35:254 S '54 750w

"In 'Capitalism and the Historians' it is refreshing to have established experts provide a thoughtful, scholarly debunking of the long popular myth." H. C. Kenney

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 10 '54 650w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Ashe

Commonweal 59:482 F 12 '54 550w

Foreign Affairs 33:158 O '54 60w

Reviewed by F. E. Hirsch

Library J 79:624 Ap 1 '54 160w

"Capitalism and the Historians, though a hundred years late, is still very badly needed and deserves a wide audience, especially among those who are instrumental in helping others understand our present system and the roots from which it sprang. Seldom has distinguished scholarship been put to better use than in this book." Leo Teplow

+ Management R 43:553 Ag '54 700w

Manchester Guardian p6 Jl 2 '54 700w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 178:508 Je 12 '54 650w

Reviewed by Asa Briggs

New Statesman & Nation 48:163 Ag 7 '54 700w

Reviewed by J. E. Powell

Spec p120 Jl 23 '54 850w

HAYES, JOSEPH ARNOLD. Desperate hours. 302p $3.50 Random house

54-5645

A novel of suspense. A trio of escaping convicts select a house in the suburbs of Indianapolis and move in on the occupants. The convicts hold the family of four in their power until they think the time is right for another break. The horror of the members of the family is depicted in detail.

Booklist 50:278 Mr 15 '54

"A breath-taking thriller."

+ Bookmark 13:159 Ap '54 30w

"The Desperate Hours is an 'entertainment' that can be generally recommended." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 179:313 Jl '54 200w

"'The Desperate Hours' is a novel I couldn't stop reading. I don't think it is a great, triumphant work of literature. But it is a mighty well done piece of intense story telling, in which the characters—tho never probed deeply—are all very surely and accurately rendered so that they validate a situation which, treated with less insight, might have turned into the mere ordinary stuff of an ordinary thriller." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 28 '54 370w

"Not only a first-rate thriller but also an unusual study of ordinary good people developing strength and understanding through danger." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 30:260 Ag '54 80w

Kirkus 22:72 F 1 '54 240w

"The author does an excellent job of analyzing the situation and showing the reaction of his characters to the varied developments. Recommended for adult collections." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 79:451 Mr 1 '54 100w

"An excellent novel of suspense. . . As with most first novels, his book has certain faults. The family, the police, the good Americans, are over-sentimentalised, the convicts insufficiently explored. Yet this remains the most successful horror story that I have read for a long time." John Raymond

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:416 O 2 '54 130w

"Mr. Hayes has possibly overextended his story a bit, and its suspense wears a little thin in patches. But it is a well-contrived yarn, and has the vividness of timeliness."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 28 '54 360w

"As a Hitchcock-type nightmare, 'The Desperate Hours' is a strictly Grade-A job." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p5 F 28 '54 500w

New Yorker 30:130 Mr 13 '54 40w

"Suspense factor away up; folks all real; superbly handled. Tops." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 21 '54 80w

— Times [London] Lit Sup p669 O 22 '54 130w

HAYES, WILLIAM CHRISTOPHER. Scepter of Egypt; pt. 1, From the earliest times to the end of the Middle Kingdom [pub] in co-operation with the Metropolitan museum of art. 399p il $12.50 Harper

932 [913.32] Egypt—Antiquities. Art. Egyptian (52-7286)

"This is the first of two volumes subtitled 'A Background for the study of the Egyptian Antiquities in the Metropolitan Museum of Art.' The period covered runs from the Stone Age to the end of the Middle Kingdom, or about 1600 B. C. The authoritative text, by the Metropolitan's curator of Egyptian art, is accompanied by more than 200 monochrome cuts." Nation

"The writing is purely descriptive and is scholarly only in the sense of its archaeological accuracy. The usefulness of this publication as a reference work can hardly be challenged, but its value as a 'background' is extremely questionable."

Nation 178:116 F 6 '54 210w

"The first volume of 'The Scepter of Egypt' is a major contribution to the layman's understanding of ancient Egyptian civilization down to the fall of the Middle Kingdom. It is suitable for adolescents and adults. It convincingly debunks any attempt to attribute hidden power or esoteric lore to the Egyptians by exponents of various modern cults. It contains no serious inaccuracies of omission or commission. This very much needed book offers something of real interest for almost every age group and for people of widely differing tastes. We can only hope that its companion volume will soon be available." J. H. Breasted

+ Sat R 36:27 O 10 '53 900w

HAYMAKER, RICHARD E. From pampas to hedgerows and downs; a study of W. H. Hudson. 398p $5 Bookman associates

B or 92 Hudson, William Henry 54-12660

"A literary study of a neglected writer that quotes liberally from his writings by way of presenting 'a unified picture of Hudson's total experience.'—Preface. A biographical sketch is followed by dissertations on the out-of-door essay, Hudson's development and achievements as a writer, his artistry, landscape and figures in his writings, and the projection of his personality and philosophy into his works." Booklist

Booklist 51:102 N 1 '54

"This book, like its title, could stand a little shortening. The author has placed Hudson in a good, bright light and examined him from all angles. . . This is all to the good, but the trouble is that the author lacks system."

+ New Yorker 30:220 N 13 '54 120w

"Mr. Haymaker's treatment of Hudson and his books has the effect of a day of sun and high wind." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 28 '54 60w

HAYNES, WILLIAMS. American chemical industry; 6v v 1, 1608-1910; v 5, Decade of new products. il ea $15 Van Nostrand

660 Chemical industries (46-359)

"Publication of these volumes completes this monumental history of which the various volumes were published as follows: Volume I, 1954; Volume II, 1945; Volume III, 1945; Volume IV, 1948; Volume V, 1954; and Volume VI, 1949. The panoramic style of the volumes previously published is to be found also in volumes I and V. In volume I, as in all of the other volumes, individual and company names are mentioned frequently and much economic data is included. Volume V is of special interest because it covers a period when American chemical manufacturing blossomed into an industry of major proportions. The company and personal name index in this volume alone contains approximately 9,000 entries." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 32:1816 My 3 '54 20w

"There is no other man that the reviewer knows who could have carried this project through as thoroughly, as usefully, or as representatively of the facts as has been true with Haynes." R. N. Shreve

+ Chem & Eng N 32:3786 S 20 '54 850w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:36 My '54

HAYS, WILLIAM HARRISON. Dragon watch. 821p $4.95 Doubleday

54-5719

The heroine is Maggie Tennessey, daughter of a coal miner. Because she was both beautiful and virtuous Maggie was misunderstood in Harrisville. The hero is Ted Scott, stepson of the mine owner, who fell in love with Maggie, and believed in her, even when violence entered the picture.

"That it is a good novel, I am convinced, but I am also convinced that it would be twice as good if it were half as long. The publisher's blurb writer, taking flight, suggests that the novel is long 'because life itself is long.' That is one way of looking at it but I believe another, and truer, explanation lies in the fact that Hays has an unhappy affinity for literary lard."

V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 25 '54

600w

Kirkus 22:42 Ja 15 '54 270w

"Only a few of the characters in this outsize novel come alive, but the narrative is so swiftly paced and the suspense so skilfully heightened that you read on and on, fascinated by Mr. Hays' caricatures. As a spicy blend of sex, scandal and sadism, this should prove to be one of the more popular books this spring." E. T. Smith

Library J 79:550 Mr 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 29 '54 320w

"The author performs commendably in a few isolated scenes. Judged in its almost endless entirety, however, this windy Hoosier variation on the still windier 'Sironia, Texas,' would seem a likely candidate for the most colossal cliché of the year." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p14 Ag '54 320w

HAYS, W. H.—Continued

"A maudlin concoction of lust, malicious gossip, brutal fist fights, soul yearnings, impious and lewd sex orgies in the guise of spiritual salvation, mine disaster and murder." L. S. Munn

— Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54
90w

HAYWOOD, CAROLYN. Betsy and the circus; il. by [the author]. 190p $2.95 Morrow

54-7623

The seventh Betsy book describes ten-year-old Betsy's everyday experiences in school and at home and at the circus.

Booklist 51:21 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:12 O '54 10w

"In Betsy's efforts to get the right Mother's day present and in her reconciliation with her best friend, whose feelings she has hurt, the author again demonstrates her rare gifts of humor and understanding." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 O 31 '54
180w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p7 S 2 '54
90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

Kirkus 22:388 J1 1 '54 90w

"Recommended." F. M. Hensey

+ Library J 79:1665 S 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 19 '54
90w

"Miss Haywood obviously knows the heart-aches that so often result from children's expanding friendships. When Betsy slights Ellen, her best friend, for one of the twins, the 'three-is-a-crowd' issue is solved by a clear-cut, satisfying analogy. Many a little girl will see her own problem reflected here and find comfort in the story." Rose Friedman

+ N Y Times p32 S 12 '54 160w

"This faculty of tingeing everyday experiences with the unexpected and the humorous lends originality and interest to what otherwise might be mere literalness. For the eight- to ten-year-olds 'Betsy and the Circus' will be a happy, wholesome reading experience." E. N.

+ Sat R 37:78 N 13 '54 110w

Wis Lib Bul 50:215 O '54

HAZARD, PAUL. European thought in the eighteenth century; from Montesquieu to Lessing [tr. by J. Lewis May]. 477p $6 Yale univ. press

901 Europe—Intellectual life. Eighteenth century A54-10078

"This intellectual history of the period 'from Montesquieu to Lessing' centers on the collapse of traditional values—the imitation of Christ giving way to the pursuit of happiness, and the Man of Reason succeeding the Man of Faith and in turn being succeeded by the Man of Feeling, who will take over in the next century." (New Yorker) Index.

"Hazard's method makes him push aside Thinkers who do not fit into his pattern and treat with exaggerated importance writers who happen to be going in the right direction. Moreover, he concentrates on French writers, despite occasional references to English and Italians. . . . Kingsley Martin and Carl Becker have handled the same theme better; and it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that this book is a brilliant failure, despite its scholarship and exuberance." A. J. P. Taylor

— + New Statesman & Nation 47:838 Je 26 '54 450w

"A heavyweight book that also manages to be engaging; it has been translated into lively colloquial English by J. Lewis May."

+ New Yorker 30:228 N 20 '54 140w

"Dr. Hazard . . . describes the national characteristics which the rise of romanticism was to encourage. Learned, witty, untiringly polite, this book has a studied charm. In its English guise, it now seems a little flimsy.

It is stimulating, within its rather artificial convention, but dated before the broader, more massive view of history which now holds the field. It remains an often illuminating interpretation of a vital period of European thought."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p397 Je 18 '54
1050w

HAZEL, ROBERT. Field full of people. 251p $3.75 World pub.

54-8176

"It is a story of the Middle West, with a farmer's son, Tom Flood, as the chief figure. Tom's spirit is marred by one particular flaw, which, through an accident, and aided by Tom's willfulness or weakness, widens into a crevasse that splits him and brings him to destruction." New Yorker

"A compelling sense of inevitability timed by nature's seasons and man's heart marks a book of beauty and effectiveness at times marred by overexplicitness."

+ Kirkus 22:545 Ag 15 '54 240w

"Some blunt physical details, also some superior writings, especially in the chapter on Willie's funeral. Author, himself born in Indiana, will probably do even better than this some day. Recommended, on the whole." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1503 S 1 '54 90w

"With clean, unswerving direction, Mr. Hazel carries his story to its tragic end. His talents both as poet and novelist are stirringly revealed in this chronicle of an ill-starred revel."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 2 '54
250w

"Though the wages of sin are exacted with biblical sternness, a tender grace is present in a hundred minute particulars. All in all, this is a book—and an author—satisfying to encounter." Frances Gaither

+ N Y Times p52 D 5 '54 360w

"There is no doubt that Mr. Hazel is a talented writer, although at the moment his prose is so polished and so bent with excessive care that the minds and hearts of his characters become obscured and the impact of their story is dulled, if not lost."

New Yorker 30:170 O 23 '54 80w

HEAD, MATTHEW, pseud. See Canaday, J. E.

HEADLEY, MRS ELIZABETH (CAVANNA). Love, Laurie; by Betty Cavanna. 190p $2.50 Westminster press

53-8354

Story of a young girl's growth when her mother's death and her father's enforced absence, make it necessary for her to supervise the building of a new home.

Booklist 50:171 D 15 '53

Chicago Sunday Tribune p58 N 15 '53
160w

Kirkus 21:635 S 15 '53 120w

"A truly wholesome and interesting story by a capable writer for teenagers." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 79:76 Ja 1 '54 70w

"Girls like this writer's way of describing first love, and they will like the two boys. To us, it seemed rather thin, and without much plot. Also, we can't bear it when people 'bridle.' How do you do that?" L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 10
'54 90w

"The plot is thin, yet Laurie is real and will be remembered for her strength and dignity." Nora Kramer

+ N Y Times pt2, p8 N 15 '53 130w

HEADLEY, MRS ELIZABETH (CAVANNA) 6 on Easy street, by Betty Cavanna. 192p $2.50 Westminster press

54-8396

Deborah Sanford did not want to help her family run a summer hotel in Nantucket because her boy friend was going to be in Pennsylvania. This story for teen agers tells how she finally decided to do her part.

Booklist 51:136 N 15 '54

"The chronicle of how a family of rugged individualists attacks and solves its problems and Deborah gradually becomes an integral part of the happy summer activities contains humor, drama, growth in character, and sustained reading interest." A. B. McG.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p36 N 14 '54 90w

"Betty Cavanna's best."

+ Kirkus 22:538 Ag 15 '54 120w

"No stock character, Deborah is a genuine human being who finally wins the reader's liking. . . . To this story Betty Cavanna has brought the deep understanding of her earlier books, the quality that captured for her a large and loyal teen-age following." Nora Kramer

+ N Y Times pt2 p8 N 14 '54 100w

HEADSTROM, BIRGER RICHARD. Garden friends and foes; a practical and informative book for the home gardener, dealing with the birds, animals, insects, weeds, and plant diseases that confront him; il. by the author. 219p $3.50 Washburn

632 Zoology, Economic. Plants—Diseases 54-11279

"Amateur gardeners who see only the damage wrought by certain bugs and birds will find in this book that many of them are his friends and should be attracted to the garden area. The author tells how to identify and lure these friends and discourage the enemies. Weeds and plant disease also are dealt with extensively." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 51:33 S 15 '54

"A fine guide for the gardener anxious to achieve worthwhile results." Art Kozelka

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 15 '54 50w

Kirkus 22:280 Ap 15 '54 160w

"This book will interest and inform the home gardener. Recommended." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:1227 Je 15 '54 140w

HEALY, RAYMOND J., ed. 9 tales of space and time. 307p $3.50 Holt

Short stories—Collections 54-7026

Nine science-fiction stories.

"These 'space stories' are not the juvenile Superman kind of stuff. They are at least on the intellectual level of the better mystery stories, and personally I like them much better. Some of these wild improbabilities may actually happen within the next few centuries. Even if they never do, the writing of fiction on the presupposition that space travel is possible is a legitimate exercise of the imagination. Every art rests on some presuppositions contrary to literal fact." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:901 Jl 28 '54 80w

Kirkus 22:215 Mr 15 '54 70w

"The Healy collection is at least not routine; it offers only the very good and the very, very bad. In the latter category, stories by screenwriter Frank Fenton and Dr. David Harold ('Release From Nervous Tension') Fink are as impressively incompetent, both as science and as fiction, as anything that has yet been anthologized. In the former, special notice must go to the triumphant return to creative writing of two long-silent editors: J. Francis McComas and (best news of the year) John W. Campbell jr., with a beautifully balanced analysis of interstellar cultural conflict." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 13 '54 140w

"Half the contributors to this volume are science fiction editors, who demonstrate that they can write as well as, if not better than, the authors whose stories they publish. One of the best entries is H. L. Gold's 'Man of Parts.'" Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times p19 Jl 11 '54 140w

"This is really a collection for veteran readers of the space-time fraternity, with those just taking up a fascinating subject advised to start with less exotic fare. It is by way of being an experiment, with the writers turned loose to please themselves. While dyed-in-the-wool addicts are sure to be pleased too, a few of the themes would be confusing to readers not acquainted with the extremely wide latitude of imagination allowed creators of science fiction." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C Jl 11 '54 140w

HEARD, JOSEPH NORMAN. Bookman's guide to Americana. 496p $8.50 Scarecrow

016.97 America—Bibliography. Books—Prices 53-11973

"The Bookman's Guide to Americana, compiled by the order librarian of the Texas Technological College Library, 'is intended to provide a selective, though reasonably comprehensive, reference tool for determining prevailing book prices of out-of-print titles relating to the American scene. It will serve the bookseller as a yardstick in pricing his wares and the book collector and librarian as a guide to economical purchasing.'—Preface. More than 6600 Americana titles are listed with price quotations transcribed from more than 200 catalogs circulated by 71 book dealers between September 1951 and May 1953." Subscription Bks Bul

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 S 6 '53 30w

"Bookman's Guide to Americana is a curious mixture of significant and insignificant, scarce and common books, and as such will hardly provide the librarian with more than a glimpse at the broad field of Americana."

Library J 78:2202 D 15 '53 300w

"At the end of the volume there is a list of dealers whose catalogs were used. It is surprising to note that several of the principal Americana dealers do not appear in the list, although they were issuing catalogs during the period surveyed. It is especially regrettable that no European dealers (with the exception of one Anglo-American firm) were included. What a pity that so much time and energy and careful work went into a volume of doubtful value!" Colton Storm

Library Q 24:272 Jl '54 440w

"This work is a time-saving compilation for a subject field of interest to most libraries, is unique in its presentation of actual market prices, and is a fuller listing of Americana titles than any previous list compiled locally or regionally to serve the same purpose. Bookman's Guide to Americana is recommended to Americana collectors and librarians as a guide for economical purchasing, and to librarians and individuals interested in determining the probable market value of books of Americana as items for sale."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:17 Ap '54 900w

HECHT, ANTHONY. Summoning of stones. 64p $2.50 Macmillan (N Y)

811 54-8533

A first book of poems by an American writer. Many of the poems have appeared in The Kenyon Review, Furiioso, The Hudson Review, and The New Yorker, during the last seven years.

"A truly fine mastery of technique is combined in the verse of Anthony Hecht with a great pomposity and ponderousness of thought."

+ Kirkus 22:28 Ja 1 '54 80w

"There is richness in the diction, music in its structure and wit and elegance in presentation." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 79:558 Mr 15 '54 90w

"Anthony Hecht has much of every virtue except passionate simplicity. His characteristic performance is an extended and ornate essay-poem, full of ingeniously linked materials from art, literature and travel; the form is commonly intricate; the execution is excellent." Richard Wilbur

HECHT, ANTHONY—Continued

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 4 '54 100w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

New Yorker 30:134 Je 5 '54 320w

HECHT, BEN. Child of the century. 654p il $5
Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences etc. 53-9699

"A great unburdening, this autobiography of one of the controversial figures of stage, screen and books breaks over into philosophy, analysis and crusading, and Hecht's twilight thinking at 55 is brightened by his realization that there must be a God. Born in New York, raised in Racine, the early chapters build up a full gallery of his Jewish family and the warm, loving, flashing background they made for him. Then the antic years in Chicago in which journalism, literature, whores, crime, friendships and his writing career tumbled over each other and the youthful renaissance there was a strident accompaniment for beginning authors. Two years in a Germany without a leader preceded his move to New York, then came the Florida boom and next Hollywood and the years of scripting pictures." Kirkus

"Good though he is as a portraitist, it is as a raconteur that Hecht's talents reach their finest flowering. His autobiography contains literally hundreds of superb anecdotes and stories—tales of crime, of hangings, of promotion stunts, of the methods and mores of Hollywood; tales farcical and fantastic, gruesome and grotesque; tales in which tragedy and comedy are brought into joint relief with the touch of a master." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:84 Ag '54 550w

Booklist 51:13 S 1 '54

Reviewed by Delos Avery

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 20 '54
400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 Ag '54

"This battle cry of me-dom is a very private life that does not tiptoe in sensitive areas and that does offer stimulating reading in its testimony of a half century of omnivorous living."

Kirkus 22:222 Mr 15 '54 240w

Reviewed by Ira Wolfert

Nation 179:155 Ag 21 '54 1050w

"Mr. Hecht, at his best, is a superb entertainer, as adroit with language as a magician with a deck of cards. What sets off 'A Child of the Century' from his earlier works is something akin to intimations of mortality. . . In these confessions he has written a bursting Roman candle of a book, full of gusto and swagger and Rabelaisian zest. It is packed with epigram and anecdote, peopled by characters all slightly larger than life, and overflowing with enough rollicking yarns, dramatic sketches and bitter-sweet tales to spawn a shelf-full of lesser books." Gerold Frank

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Je 13 '54 1250w

"Hecht is a rather difficult man to pin down. There are moments when he still seems the rakish and irreverent young newspaper man and others when he is bombastic and Hollywoodian, inflated and wearisome like one of his own less successful movies. . . His manners are not always nice, but then nice manners do not always make interesting autobiographies, and this autobiography has the merit of being intensely interesting. If he is occasionally slick, he is also independent, forthright and original. Among the pussy-cats who write of social issues today he roars like an old-fashioned lion." Saul Bellow

+ N Y Times p1 Je 13 '54 1150

"A frantic, fumbling, often foolish book, but also, somehow, an extraordinarily entertaining one."

+ — New Yorker 30:63 Jl 3 '54 160w

"Hecht will unquestionably irritate many readers; he's made rather a specialty of being firmly himself for most of his life, and there are always those who find nonconformists irritating. In general, however, the chief complainants will be those who insist that anything they read be a mirroring of their own views on everything." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 23 '54

650w

"Rarely has a book conveyed so well by what it says and implies the author's enjoyment of the human spectacle, and the fun he has had using his talents and energies. . . This is a book of the heart, and as such it records the loves and hates of Hecht, who, despite his generosity and good nature, is capable of powerful indignation." Harry Hansen

+ Sat R 37:18 Jl 17 '54 500w

Time 63:108 Je 21 '54 1250w

HECK, HAROLD JOSEPH. Foreign commerce. 512p $6.50 McGraw

382 Export trade

52-11511

"Describes patterns of world trade, the machinery for carrying it on, export and import organizational structure, services (governmental and private), financial practices, foreign investment, policies of restriction and of promotion, intergovernmental organizations and agreements in effect today." Library J

"On the whole this book employs a somewhat broader approach than most texts on the practical or business aspects of foreign trade, but the aim of integrating the practical and theoretical aspects of international economics is not achieved. The book should prove useful as a text for courses in foreign trade, and as a reference book for persons entering the profession of foreign commerce. The student of international economics would also benefit from reading certain chapters, especially in Parts I, II, and V." J. C. Ingram

+ Am Econ R 44:198 Mr '54 490w

Library J 79:906 My 15 '54 50w

HEDLEY, GEORGE PERCY. Christian worship; some meanings and means. 306p il $4.50 Macmillan (N Y)

264 Worship

53-13152

"Beginning with the history of each aspect of Protestant worship, Dr. Hedley explains both its philosophy and practice, suggesting ways to use the traditional materials reverently and creatively. He covers not only such topics as church architecture, music and preaching, but also such occasional services as baptism and marriage. There is a chapter on family worship and private devotion." Publisher's note

"If this reviewer—an Episcopalian—may venture one misgiving, it is the rather odd one that Dr. Hedley [himself a Methodist] seems almost too ready to accept Episcopal liturgical practices as the ideal. This is flattering, but within the Episcopal church there is also discontent, and individuals are at work on ways to improve public worship. However, as a whole the book is a magnificent achievement and should do much to stimulate intelligent experimentation in one of the most basic human activities." Chad Walsh

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 D 20 '53
340w

"Dr. Hedley has condensed a wealth of information about worship into interesting organization, fascinating to read; and he has done it without trespassing on the territory of any of the other recent and commendable publications in that field." G. E. Osborn

+ Christian Century 71:145 F 3 '54 1000w

"A good text book for seminarians, but it should find a place in the reference library of all Protestant clergymen."

+ Kirkus 21:675 O 1 '53 210w

"Of primary value to the clergy, but of some interest also to the churchgoing layman." G. W. Wakefield
+ Library J 79:60 Ja 1 '54 100w

"This is an important book and should be influential. Ministers who read it will want to own it." H. G. J.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 13 '53 700w

HEFFELFINGER, WILLIAM WALTER. This was football; as told to John D. McCallum. 192p il $3 Barnes, A.S.
796.33 Football 54-11793

Grantland Rice always referred to the author as "the greatest Roman of them all." Heffelfinger, who was one of football's all-time linemen, played the game for fifty years. This is his story of football, from the early days of the game to the present.

Booklist 51:147 D 1 '54

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 79:2457 D 15 '54 10w

"A pleasant, rambling and anecdotal volume. . . . Whenever so-called All-Time All-America teams are chosen, the first lineman named always is Pudge Heffelfinger. He was the first lineman ever to be glamorized. He tells an entertaining story." Arthur Daley
+ N Y Times p31 O 31 '54 450w

"This is less a story about Pudge Heffelfinger than it is a Heffelfinger who's who in football. He covers every section of the country, reports on all the important developments, and usually has a story to tell about all of the great players. In fact, the book is heavily flecked with anecdotes. Heff loved football. He once said, 'A game that can keep you young and vibrant and all steamed up is a precious thing.' Heffelfinger, who died this April at the age of eighty-six, has written a vibrant book." Al Silverman
+ Sat R 37:31 O 9 '54 180w

HEIM, KARL. Transformation of the scientific world view [tr. by W. A. Whitehouse]. 262p $3.50 Harper

215 Religion and science 53-10966

"The major themes of modern physics are here discussed in relation to the major religious theme of belief in God. Mr. Heim, who has been professor of theology at the University of Tubingen for twenty-four years, feels that absolute scientific values have collapsed and that science and religion may be fused into a new unitary scientific world view." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Reviewed by John Rowland
Hibbert J 51:410 Jl '53 380w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 28 '54 50w

"The present volume gives, what is to a layman at least, a lucid account of developments in modern science, particularly in physics." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 11 '54 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p272 Ap 24 '53 300w

HEINLEIN, ROBERT ANSON. Assignment in eternity. 255p $3 Fantasy press

53-12678

Four long science fiction stories. Contents: Gulf; Elsewhen; Lost legacy; Jerry was a man.

"Not a book to lend weight to this department's often-expressed opinion that Heinlein is the foremost living science fiction writer—but a reasonably amusing collection by less stringent standards." H. H. Holmes
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 N 29 '53 220w

"Since Mr. Heinlein is one of the ablest craftsmen writing science fiction, this book is a guarantee of several hours' interest and enjoyment." Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times p43 N 11 '53 120w

Reviewed by Don Fabun
San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 27 '53 250w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R 37:61 F 20 '54 20w

HEINLEIN, ROBERT ANSON. Revolt in 2100; the prophets and the triumph of reason over superstition; with an introd. by Henry Kuttner. (Future hist. ser) 317p $3.50 Shastar pubs.

53-12529

Science fiction.

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 15 '54 130w

"For the followers, able yarnning."
+ Kirkus 22:167 Mr 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by Don Fabun
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 11 '54 120w

HEINLEIN, ROBERT ANSON. Star beast. 282p $2.50 Scribner

54-9431

Science fiction.

Booklist 51:65 O 1 '54

"This science-fiction tale is one of Heinlein's best, in its smooth parallel plotting of adult and teen-age problems, and the nonchalant future-realism that has become a Heinlein trademark." Mark Reinsberg

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p45 N 14 '54 100w

"An adventure of some dimensions, this satirizes more than one social foible and provides its refreshing insights into a world where things can be quite, quite different."

+ Kirkus 22:638 S 15 '54 190w

"Regularly every year Robert A. Heinlein produces the best juvenile science fiction novel—and in so doing creates a work more maturely satisfying than 90 per cent of 'adult' science fiction. 'The Star Beast' equals any of his previous books in lively adventure, and perhaps surpasses them in charm and in fullness of characterization (human and alien)."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 28 '54 150w

"Mr. Heinlein's name on a book of science fiction is sure to make young space-eaters reach for it, and this one, written with his usual deftness and fine sense of humor, will not disappoint them." Iris Vinton

+ N Y Times pt2 p10 N 14 '54 180w

HELLER, WALTER WOLFGANG, and others, eds. Savings in the modern economy [a symposium] contributors: Harlan N. Smith [and others]. 370p $5 Univ. of Minn. press

339.43 Saving and thrift. Inflation (finance.)
Economic policy 53-8614

"At a conference on savings, inflation and economic progress 28 professors, bankers and industrialists, government and organizational officials presented the papers of this symposium. How will savings affect the future economy of the U.S. and other parts of the world? The material covers four broad topics: Savings and economic policy; savings concepts; savings problems in underdeveloped countries, and savings and inflation." San Francisco Chronicle

"The economist and his students, and even the nonspecialist . . . should find here a quite unique compendium on this most important subject. The brevity of the papers results in a conciseness and sharpness of statement which is likely to impress one more deeply with the varieties of viewpoint they embody than would much reading in the underlying sources. To such sources one will be stimulated to turn for elaboration and for qualifications." F. A. Knox

+ Am Econ R 44:648 S '54 1050w

HELLER, W. W.—Continued

"Some of the papers seem to have been written to persuade noneconomists; others were at the highest level of technical competence and made significant contributions. . . The whole volume will be of real interest to economists, and to other social scientists who are interested in one of the most important phenomena of the economy. None of the papers requires a specialist knowledge for its understanding." Lorie Tarshis

+ Ann Am Acad 292:168 Mr '54 400w
San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 29 '54
220w

HELM, MRS EDITH (BENHAM). The captains and the kings; with a foreword by Mrs Franklin D. Roosevelt. 307p $5 Putnam

B or 92 Presidents (U.S.). Washington, D.C.
—Social life and customs 54-8705

"As White House social secretary to three First Ladies, Mrs. Edith Benham Helm has seen a lot of recent history from inside the formidable barriers of protocol and precedence. When she left the White House in January, 1953, she closed the door on an office she had held for twenty-five years—six with the Wilsons, twelve with the Roosevelts and seven with the Trumans. . . 'The Captains and the Kings' is more a memoir than autobiography, for Mrs. Helm draws no full-length portraits either of herself or her First Lady bosses." N Y Times

Booklist 50:417 J1 1 '54

"Lively, anecdotal reminiscences illuminate the events of the Wilson, Roosevelt, and Truman administrations."

+ Bookmark 13:235 J1 '54 30w

"For Edith Helm her years in the White House were busy, exciting and happy, but not without their measure of sorrow. She has conveyed it all in bright and absorbing fashion." Joseph Ripley

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 27 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:227 Mr 15 '54 220w

"She frequently writes with sentiment and nostalgia and is often tiresome but her story of life in the White House remains a piece of Americana that will be read by many. For general purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:979 My 15 '54 130w

"For twenty-six years, under three Presidents, Mrs. Edith Helm served as White House social secretary, and she writes in 'The Captains and the Kings' a detailed and pleasant account of the functions she arranged and the people she met. . . Mrs. Helm is at her most interesting when she discusses the changes in social custom made by the three First Ladies she served." Joanna Spencer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 4 '54
700w

"She offers charming, anecdotal, footnotes to the history she has witnessed. Her fleeting comments on famous people are especially noteworthy. . . Mrs. Helm makes here a real contribution to the history of the White House." N. B. Brown

+ N Y Times p15 My 23 '54 300w

Reviewed by May Craig

Sat R 37:19 Je 19 '54 650w

Reviewed by R. S. Brooks

Spring'd Republican p7C Je 27 '54
250w

HENDERSON, JOHN GOULDING, and BATES, JACK M. Metallurgical dictionary. 396p $8.50 Reinhold

669.03 Metallurgy—Dictionaries 53-12371

"Definitions of terms considered essential to both the professional and the layman in understanding metallurgical literature." Chem & Eng N

Chem & Eng N 31:4820 N 16 '53 10w

"It will be essential in library technical collections." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:386 F 15 '54 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:90 N '53

HENDERSON, LE GRAND (LE GRAND, pseud). Tom Benn and Blackbeard, the pirate [pictures by the author]. 63p $2 Abingdon

54-3053

Tells how Tom Benn, aged eleven, of Ocracoke Inlet, North Carolina, helped capture the pirate Blackbeard.

Booklist 51:156 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:12 O '54 20w

"One of Le Grand's most exciting and amusing tall tales. Small boys will love it." P. G. + Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 14 '54
120w

Commonweal 61:206 N 19 '54 20w

"Likely to be immensely popular—perhaps, with younger boys, the most popular of this author's easily read tall tales because of a boy's big part in the pirate's capture." V. H. + Horn Bk 30:330 O '54 120w

"Fun for everyone."

+ Kirkus 22:361 Je 15 '54 90w

"The humorous style with a folktale quality is fine for telling, particularly to older boys. Also, useful for reluctant readers. . . Recommended for all libraries." M. J. Meade

+ Library J 79:1665 S 15 '54 80w

"This book is easy to read and attractive to look at, and the best yet of this series." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times pt2 p36 N 14 '54 160w

HENDERSON, MRS LOIS T. Opening doors; my child's first eight years without sight. 242p $3.50 Day

371.911 Blind

54-10313

The mother of a child who was born blind tells the story of his first eight years.

Booklist 51:55 O 1 '54

"A frank and feeling account of the physical and emotional adaptation to a special situation, this has its practical value for others who face this problem, as well as a sympathetic appeal."

+ Kirkus 22:422 J1 1 '54 240w

"Anyone will profit from reading this story of Davey, born blind, but reared amidst love and laughter, growing into boyhood and slowly, yet surely, adjusting to a sighted world. Recommended for general library collections."

E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:1396 Ag '54 140w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 10
'54 20w

HENDERSON, PHILIP. Samuel Butler, the incarnate bachelor. 241p il $3.75 Ind. univ. press

B or 92 Butler, Samuel

54-8185

"This biography of the author of Erewhon and The Way of All Flesh has been undertaken with the approval and co-operation of Butler's trustees and incorporates much hitherto unpublished material. . . Taking as his cue Butler's own dictum that 'the personality of the author is what interests me more than the work,' Philip Henderson deals principally with Butler as a man and with his few but all-important friendships rather than with his books." Publisher's note

Booklist 50:319 Ap 15 '54

Manchester Guardian p4 J1 24 '53 350w

"Thanks largely to Festing Jones, whom Mr. Henderson pleasantly describes as a 'pensioned Boswell,' there is no lack of documentation, and almost too many books have been written. Nevertheless, the present one is welcome for the very reason that it is short as well as shrewd and vivid. In fact, a more revealing or, what would be more remarkable, more convincing quick portrait is hard to imagine."

+ Nation 178:224 Mr 13 '54 250w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 46:134 Ag 1
'53 1100w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 10
'54 60w

"A useful introduction to Butler's life rather than to his ideas. . . Graduate students already had plenty to work on, for perhaps no literary personality since Dr. Johnson has been so intensively documented." Dwight Macdonald
+ New Yorker 30:138 S 18 '54 800w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 14 '54 1400w

"Philip Henderson has drawn from Jones's memoir and from previously unpublished materials to give an objective portrait of Butler which emphasizes the man more than the artist. It is to Mr. Henderson's credit that he eschews psychological interpretations." E. A. Bloom

Sat R 37:43 S 16 '54 270w

"In this well-written book Butler stands clearly revealed. He touched life at many points; he was one of the great eccentrics; he was consistently and extravagantly original." Philip Magnus

+ Spec p289 S 11 '53 800w

Time 63:116 Mr 22 '54 900w

"It is noted on the wrapper of this book that Mr. Henderson has taken 'as his cue Butler's dictum that "the personality of the author is what interests me more than the work"'. Readers who dislike the atmosphere of family quarrels, stale, bitter itching with the prickly heat of self-justification and righteous wrath ever renewed, will soon come to wish that Mr. Henderson had based the book instead on his own opinion—that 'what mattered to him [Butler] was the work done.' . . . How much more genially his memory would glow if the energy devoted here to displaying old wounds and deformities had been exerted in finding and reproducing his musical scores, or his few pictures."

Times [London] Lit Sup p478 Jl 24 '53 900w

HENEY, HELEN. Dark moon. 223p $3 Crowell
54-8717

Australia during the Victorian era is the scene of this novel of a female Enoch Arden. Evelyn Johnstone, about to marry the Reverend Edward Meredith, was shipwrecked and believed dead. Six years later news of her survival is brought to Edward. The search for Evelyn and her recovery and subsequent decision, makes the story.

Booklist 51:62 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:8 O '54 40w

"A strange story, which paraphrases the problem of the return from the dead in terms of an ordinary woman, now no longer ordinary and unable to resume a natural life, this has its moments of curiosity."

Kirkus 22:366 Je 15 '54 210w

"Superb poise and balance—and entertainment of the maturer sort. Two earlier novels seemingly have not appeared in the U. S.; this reviewer would be inclined to recommend the others sight-unseen." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1512 S 1 '54 140w

"Miss Heney's novel brings to America the evidence of a rich new talent. 'Dark Moon' has the charm of the period piece." Caroline Tunstall

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 5 '54 360w

HENKIN, LEO JUSTIN. Five steps to word mastery; with an introd. by Alexander M. Witherspoon. 366p $4.95 Holt

423 Vocabulary. English language—Words
53-8978

Partial contents: Sharpening your word sense; Double-duty words; Pictures in words; Good words for bad; Watch your idiom; Know your proverbs and when to use them; Famous quotations with many uses.

+ Bookmark 13:104 F '54 10w

Kirkus 21:750 N 15 '53 160w

Reviewed by Jim Walls

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 24 '54 250w

HENNACY, AMMON. Autobiography of a Catholic anarchist; introd. by Dorothy Day. 326p il $3; pa $2 Catholic Worker Press, 223 Chrystie St, N.Y. 2

B or 92

54-2738

"Ammon Hennacy, who has been called the American Gandhi and a one-man revolution, allows himself few illusions. Fastings on the anniversaries of Hiroshima, a day longer each year, and any other time the Gandhian weapon seems proper, refusing to pay taxes and picketing the tax-collector, working as a casual farm laborer so that none of his wages may be withheld to support war, distributing anarchist and pacifist literature, publicizing the cause of the Hopi, benevolently taunting the F. B. I. and the forces of law and order." (Nation) This is his autobiography.

"Eccentricities of the man are heightened by the eccentricities of his style. Purchase if your readers are interested in 'types' or in this social milieu." D. K. Oko

Library J 79:1062 Je 1 '54 140w

"Highly readable autobiography." Ward Moore

+ Nation 178:284 Ap 3 '54 480w

HENREY, MADELEINE (MRS ROBERT HENREY). Madeleine, young wife; the autobiography of a French girl. 380p $4 Dutton

B or 92

54-9306

"Of the thirty chapters in this volume, only eight contain any new material; the others are almost word for word reprints of A Farm in Normandy (1941) and The Return to the Farm (1947). This reprinting, with two connecting chapters and six concluding ones which bring the action up to 1953, is offered as the third volume in the autobiography of a French girl which began with The Little Madeleine (her childhood in Paris) and continued with Madeleine Grown Up (her marriage to an Englishman). It is the engrossing account, sometimes pastoral, sometimes violent, of the purchase of the sixteenth-century farm in Normandy, the birth of her son, their escape to England, their life in London during the war, and eventually their return to the farm." Library J

Booklist 51:173 D 15 '54

"Only excellent writing and skill at reporting could keep such a hefty autobiographical effort interesting and appealing. But Mrs. Henrey [Madeleine] has a way of telling so much, with so many side stories of the people who weave their way thru the pattern of her life, that her writing always has the quality of a novel." Maureen Daly

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 12 '54 400w

"French wit and English reserve are mingled into a way of life which is neither British nor Gallic, but universal. The minutiae of home and family and neighbors filling Mrs. Henrey's vivid pages in this latest book are the things with which readers everywhere can identify themselves and their own experience." N. E. Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 16 '54 400w

"Again all the tiny stitches of a life pattern, the full flow of motivation and emotionalization and the concentrated intensity of personal experience make this a fully explored world in microcosm. The market is ready-made."

+ Kirkus 22:428 Jl 1 '54 240w

"Recommended for collections that lack the two farm books." M. G. Wynne

+ Library J 79:1396 Ag '54 150w

Nation 179:311 O 9 '54 300w

"This third volume in the Madeleine series forms not only a personal chapter, it constitutes as well an intimate reflection of a segment of history, with its lively, authentic account of politics, economics, conscription, collaboration, and human responsibility as apprehended by the Norman village folk whom the author had come to know." Sylvia Berkman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 12 '54 950w

HENREY, MADELEINE—Continued

"There is an inescapable loss of freshness in this third volume of the Madeleine series. . . But Mrs. Henrey is still able to invest the commonplace with charm, and although there may be more guile in her modesty than before, we can be grateful for the fact that she is never vulgar and that Normandy is her chosen scene." Frances Frenaye

+ N Y Times p10 S 12 '54 420w
New Yorker 30:171 O 23 '54 150w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 24 '54 400w

"Mrs. Henrey ends with an invocation: 'Oh, these little farmhouses, hidden among the apple trees, are they not too lovely for words?' We must take her word for it that they are but we are most grateful for the words with which she shares her love for them, and especially for her own." Anne Fremantle

+ Sat R 37:18 S 18 '54 1050w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p9C D 12 '54 360w

HENRY, JOAN, pseud. Yield to the night. 190p $2.75 Doubleday

54-9831

A first-person narrative, largely in stream-of-consciousness style, relating the story of a murderess as she waits for the day of execution thru the three weeks after her appeal for reprieve has been denied.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 194:98 N '54 40w

"In England, Edith Sitwell and Bertrand Russell have given this quite a send-off, but it's still pretty cheerless and a rather suspect type of flagellation."

Kirkus 22:542 Ag 15 '54 150w

"Miss Henry seems not to have decided exactly on her method of presenting the story, but she gives an extraordinarily interesting and minutely observed picture of prison life at its narrowest, most harrowing, and, oddly, its most compassionate." Isabel Quigly

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Je 15 '54 240w

New Statesman & Nation 47:841 Je 26 '54 350w

"A reader will rarely come across anything quite so compassionate and tender as 'Yield to the Night.' Down to the last cracking syllable and uncompleted utterance it holds and grips as a fat baby's soft fingers hold and grip. This is a pitiful record, but a thing of beauty." Meyer Berger

+ N Y Times p32 S 26 '54 320w

"There's nothing B plus like about Miss Henry. This is nearly a very good book. . . And yet, in the end, the words just cannot get through; the subject gets too big for the language; and where we should feel pity and terror we feel revulsion. Moreover, Miss Henry has, one feels, a conscious propaganda aim. And this can only detract from the book's overall power to move. No, Yield to the Night is a gallant failure; but Miss Henry, on another theme, will clearly be capable of a brilliant success." John Metcalf

+ — Spec p792 Je 25 '54 180w

"Joan Henry, who admirably demonstrated her ability to accurately portray the lives of women in prison by a book of that title, scores again in an unusual and gripping psychological novel." J. J. N.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C S 19 '54 160w

"Yield to the Night, though falling short of the tragedy it might have been, is a powerful argument against capital punishment."

Time 64:122 S 20 '54 440w

"It is simply written, convincing and horrifying. Yet somehow it seems more to exploit the melodramatic possibilities of the situation than to illuminate the mind of a woman about to die."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p437 Jl 9 '54 40w

HENRY, JOHN M. Mounted drill team; ll. by Harry E. Walsh. 161p $3.75 Barnes, A.S.

798.2 Horsemanship 54-5412

Handbook on the organizing and drilling of mounted teams. Drills for children, teen-agers and adults are included, as well as 30 drills developed by various clubs. Index.

Booklist 51:57 O 1 '54

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 79:2106 N 1 '54 30w

HENRY, WILL. Fourth horseman; a novel of old Arizona. 242p $2.75 Random house

54-5386

Western story.

Booklist 50:401 Je 15 '54

"Offers some effective entertainment."

+ Kirkus 22:169 Mr 1 '54 80w

"Mr. Henry can occasionally overdo the notes of doom and destruction; but his characters and his creation of the Basin life are thoroughly convincing, and his range war is tough and fast-moving." Seth Agnew

+ — Sat R 37:12 Ag 14 '54 190w

HEPPENSTALL, RAYNER. Léon Bloy. (Studies in modern European literature and thought) 62p $2.50 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Bloy, Léon A54-3058

"Rayner Heppenstall, poet, novelist, and critic, chooses the autobiographical approach to take his readers into Bloy's mind and examine his Catholicism and advocacy of social reform. Léon Bloy (1846-1917) is often viewed with mixed feelings by those who know his writings, and even by those who knew him well. Mr. Heppenstall examines the causes of this ambivalence through the appropriate method of a spiritual autobiography." (Publisher's note) No index.

"It is obvious that re-reading Léon Bloy lessened, not increased, Mr Heppenstall's interest in him, and so it is a pity that more use was not made of the most attractive picture we have of him, that painted by Madame Maritain. Disliking as much as Mr Heppenstall Bloy's literary ferocity, extravagant even by French standards, irritated by his mendacity passing even the permitted levels of New Grub Street, I feel that possibly more can be said for him than Mr Heppenstall has found fit to say, but I confess that I don't know what it is." D. W. Brogan

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 5 '54 360w

"Mr. Rayner Heppenstall's study of this deeply contaminated but irreplaceable minor genius takes the form of a spiritual autobiography, the story of Bloy's influence upon himself. It is entertaining, serious and extremely well-written, a document in the intellectual life of the last twenty years worthy for Palinurus to read in his unquiet grave." G. D. Painter

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:324 Mr 13 '54 300w

"An amusing book, neither modest nor unpretentious. It, too, represents a mode of criticism commoner in England than in America, and very much commoner in France—criticism as autobiography, criticism as a story of the critic's spiritual struggles with his subject." A. J. Guerard

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 8 '54 190w

Times [London] Lit Sup p346 My 23 '54 330w

HERBER, WILLIAM. King-sized murder. 222p $2.50 Lippincott

54-5599

Detective story.

"Herber tells a good story—clean, fast, and packed with action, suspense, and breezy quips. What more could a whodunit fan ask than a king-sized murder?" Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 20 '54 160w

"Lurid, exaggerated."

Kirkus 22:275 Ap 15 '54 60w

"His first recorded case is an awfully tired one, from its 'feelthy peectures' to its open imitation of Hammett's sinister fat man. . . But there's good unmannered tough telling of the story, and some spectacularly intricate double-double-crossing; with a more original plot, Rehm and his creator should be worthy competitors." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p11 Jl 4 '54 80w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:41 Jl 24 '54 20w

HERBERT, FREDERICK HUGH. I'd rather be kissed. 241p $2.95 Random house

54-9033

The story of happy, fifteen-year-old Dolores as told in her own diary.

Booklist 51:15 S 1 '54

"Deft, debonair, and disarming."

Kirkus 22:320 My 15 '54 100w

"Dolores' story rings true—she experiences both the joys and pangs of growing up. Mr. Herbert keeps strictly the light touch with the freshness and sincere simplicity which highlight most of his writings. This is a story with great appeal for girls. Highly recommended for the teen-age shelf." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:1309 Jl '54 80w

"There is much that is amusing and engaging in the portrait of Dolores, but it isn't quite real. It is a man's conception of a girl's coming of age and too heavily accented with kisses and weeping." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 1 '54 430w

"Hugh Herbert's latest probe into the psyche of a young girl, 'I'd Rather Be Kissed,' is, for all its super-slickness, gay, interesting and even touching." Jane Cobb

+ — N Y Times p5 Jl 11 '54 450w

"The heroine of this book is not a bad sort of girl at all, for fifteen, but the mildewed artlessness of her author's style is apt to put a good many readers off her."

— New Yorker 30:73 Jl 10 '54 20w

Sat R 37:37 Ag 21 '54 240w

HERBST, JOSEPHINE (MRS JOHN HERRMANN). New green world. (American procession ser) 272p il $4 Hastings house

B or 92 Bartram, John. Bartram, William. Natural history—U.S. 54-7596

"This first volume in the 'American Procession Series' is a deeply sincere and very skillful realization of the man John Bartram (1699-1777), America's 'natural botanist' and wilderness explorer; of his friend, Peter Collinson, London merchant and naturalist who provided Bartram with wealthy patrons for the stream of seeds, flowers, shrubs, even turtles and stones that flowed for forty years from the New World to the Old. Beyond these two are Linnaeus and others of the small circle of men who established scientific botany. Finally, there is John's son, William Bartram." Library J

Booklist 50:340 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:182 My '54 20w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 9 '54 430w

"Miss Herbst enables us to step into this bright age of wonder when the morning dew is still on the 'new green world.' This volume, first of a projected 'American Procession Series,' affords a welcome introduction to a side of American social history too little known."

Millicent Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 6 '54 340w

"It will appeal to those particularly interested in the field, but the rather plodding telling may discourage the general reader."

Kirkus 22:223 Mr 15 '54 190w

"The narrative is, in no sense, fictionalized biography, but the subtle and complex organization of material and gradual building up of personality are unmistakably the work of an excellent novelist. . . Generally recommended to diverse subject collections, public, school and college libraries." M. L. Barrett

+ Library J 79:856 My 1 '54 300w

"Admirable study. Miss Herbst tells fully and interestingly the story of [John Bartram's] individual life. At the same time she sketches a rich background and places him in the content of an epoch in the history of the human spirit." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 2 '54 1050w

"Remarkably little has been written concerning the Bartrams—which makes 'New Green World' the more welcome. Miss Herbst has used an analytic, interpretive approach to her material. Bartram isn't allowed to tell his own story. However, her book will serve as an introduction to this worthy father and worthy son." W. M. Teller

+ N Y Times p18 My 2 '54 550w

"A glimmering book, full of wonder, beauty, and the triumph of intellect over darkness."

+ New Yorker 30:75 Jl 17 '54 170w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 30 '54 850w

"This is an outstandingly fine book, a brilliant contribution to nature writing and Americana, a book of rare perception, evocation, and permanent worth." Alan Devoe

+ Sat R 37:16 My 29 '54 700w

HERKLOTS, HUGH GERARD GIBSON. How our Bible came to us; its texts and versions [Eng title: Back to the Bible]. 174p il $3.50 Oxford

220.4 Bible. Whole—Versions 54-12217

"A British clergyman and Biblical scholar has given us in this book an account of the various texts of the Bible on which the modern versions are based. In describing the recent archeological discoveries which have a bearing on the text of Scripture the author includes the dramatic story of the discovery in 1947 by two Arab shepherds of the 'Dead Sea Scrolls' including an ancient text of Isaiah, and the discovery in 1844 by a German scholar of valuable manuscripts of the Old Testament in Greek which were reposing in a waste basket of a monastery on Mt. Sinai. The author emphasizes the fact that no variant texts have ever come to light which have the slightest effect upon the cardinal Christian doctrines." (Kirkus) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is a very definite contribution to an intelligent understanding of the nature of the Bible." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:1071 S 8 '54 750w

"It is an interesting story, told in such a way as to appeal to the average reader."

+ Kirkus 22:631 S 1 '54 150w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 9 '54 240w

"Told clearly and authoritatively." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p39 S 26 '54 40w

"The author's style has a lucidity and a liveliness which are not always to be found in what are intended to be popular books on the Bible. The production is admirable, the illustrations are well chosen, and the price is, for these days, quite moderate."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p365 Je 4 '54 300w

HEROLD, DAVID E., and others, defendants. Assassination of President Lincoln, and the trial of the conspirators; the courtroom testimony as originally comp. by Benn Pitman; with an introd. by Philip Van Doren Stern. facsim ed 421p il $7.50 Funk
343 Lincoln, Abraham—Assassination

54-8730

"A facsimile edition, reproduced photographically, of the testimony taken down in the courtroom by Benn Pitman during the trial held in May and June, 1865. Although this is one of four versions that appeared at the close of the trial, it is reputedly the most useful, being written by the chief of the court reporters. It is reissued now, after having been out of print for three-quarters of a century."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:402 Je 15 '54

"This volume, a facsimile of the 1865 edition, is an excellent job of photographic reproduction. It is enhanced by a preface by Philip Van Doren Stern covering the facts and circumstances surrounding the commission of crime, the pursuit, capture, trial, and punishment of the alleged conspirators." S. J. Frank

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 J1 18 '54 150w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Ap 25 '54 80w

"To enjoy fully Mr. Moore's fine monograph on the controversial execution of Mrs. Surratt, the general reader needs a broad background of the courtroom drama that preceded it. This book is the ideal source, and now to have readily available a facsimile edition of this work . . . is a service for which many persons interested in American history can be grateful." E. S. Miers

+ Sat R 37:16 J1 10 '54 600w

HERON, ALEXANDER RICHARD. No sale, no job; the economics of American prosperity. 207p $3 Harper

658.01 Industrial management. U.S.—Economic policy 53-11842

"This book is a plea to business management to accept a new responsibility: to make the importance of striving for maximum sales understood in every department and at every level of business enterprise. In the words of the author: 'The ultimate sale has become a measure of the success of every enterprise from the mine or farm to the travel bureau.' And it is, furthermore, the basic source of employment: no sale, no job." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 50:272 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:104 F '54 30w

"A forceful, well written presentation of the increasingly popular theory that American industry must work as hard in the future at selling as it has in the past at producing. . . Heron, a vice president of Crown Zellerbach corporation, has an unusual talent for philosophizing in a straightforward, businesslike manner. His style is crisp and his arguments well supported." William Clark

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 10 '54 160w

"A new philosophy for free enterprise that may appeal to the business man but will be hard to sell to the worker. Simple language makes it accessible to all who are interested in the subject." D. K. Oko

Library J 79:457 Mr 1 '54 110w

"Mr. Heron's book is short, and unencumbered by technical terms or formidable statistical compilations. From it, however, the reader can gain a good knowledge of the fundamentals of economics and of our economic evolution. Moreover, his thinking will be stimulating—which is a real test of the worth of any book of this nature." R. S. Tannehill

+ Management R 43:341 My '54 500w

"Mr. Heron and other business writers would be on sounder ground if they were to recognize frankly that the democratic state has a very important role to play these days in creating conditions under which a private enterprise economy can function effectively for the public good. The managers may even require prodding from time to time to keep them socially responsible." Eugene Staley

Sat R 37:41 Ja 23 '54 950w

Springf'd Republican p5C F 7 '54 90w

Wis Lib Bul 50:129 My '54

HERRLIGKOFFER, KARL MARIA. Nanga Parbat [tr. and with additional material by Eleanor Brockett and Anton Ehrenzweig; with a foreword by Sir John Hunt]. 263p il maps $5 Knopf

954.7 [915.47] Mountaineering. Nanga Parbat 54-8762

"Tells the story of man's efforts to conquer the world's most murderous mountain, from A. F. Mummery's gallant but ill-fated attempt in 1895 to the brilliantly successful German-Austrian Expedition of 1953 and Hermann Buhl's spectacular solo dash up the last 4,000 feet to the summit." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:93 D '54 240w

Booklist 51:128 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:57 D '54 30w

Reviewed by E. A. Richter

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 31 '54 450w

Kirkus 22:564 Ag 15 '54 160w

"Dr. Herrligkoffer has done a difficult job well. He maintains his own clear thread of narrative, and attaches to it skilfully passages from the diaries of others who went higher than he could. He lets them speak for themselves without imposing his own mould on them." P. J. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 9 '54 600w

"In a final chapter Herrligkoffer refers in the most guarded terms to the quarrels after the party came home—of the nine members of the team, six have remained my friends—but gives no hint as to what caused them. His book is unsatisfying in other ways: he has to rely largely on the personal records of the climbing party, and it is not easy to follow the sequence of events in the ensuing patchwork of different accounts. The translators have done their very best, by adding some explanatory passages, and by contributing a long introductory section on the previous efforts on the mountain. There has been nothing like Buhl's solitary achievement in the history of mountaineering, but the whole enterprise raises dozens of questions which the book does little to answer." J. A. Smith

New Statesman & Nation 48:553 O 30 '54 600w

Reviewed by Rodney Gilbert

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 D 5 '54 750w

"From beginning to end, the Nanga Parbat story is not a pretty one. But it is one of the most dramatic and arresting that has been told in our time." J. R. Ullman

+ N Y Times p7 O 17 '54 1000w

"The book is as patchy as the expedition. The translators' good historical chapters draw a parallel between Mummery's method of attack, subsequently derided, and that by which Buhl triumphed in the end. (And certainly Buhl would have been a type after Mummery's heart.) Buhl's own account is just what it should be, taut and vivid, not minimising his sufferings but making them seem richly worthwhile. The rest of the text, mainly by Herrligkoffer, is vaguely pitiful and embarrassing." Elizabeth Coxhead

+ Spec p688 N 26 '54 450w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p781 D 3 '54 230w

HERSKOVITS, MELVILLE JEAN. Franz Boas; the science of man in the making. (Twentieth century lib) 131p $2.50 Scribner

B or 92 Boas, Franz. Anthropology 53-2397

"This analysis of the writings and theories of the great anthropologist, Boas, is by one of our present leading anthropologists. Herskovits has concentrated on interpreting the work of Boas from his writing and in presenting concisely, with quotation from Boas voluminous works, the development of his theories without reference to biographical details or personality traits." (Library J) Bibliographic note. Chronology. Index.

Booklist 50:242 F 15 '54

"Good, succinct coverage."

+ Kirkus 21:476 J1 15 '53 150w

"Recommended for the large library and of specific importance to the college and university library." Paul von Khrum

+ Library J 78:1524 S 15 '53 120w

"Excellent little book." Clyde Kluckhohn

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 20 '53 360w

"Mr. Herskovits does more than present the works of a great scientist and a great man. His book is a nontechnical evaluation of the ideas guiding current research and, as such, provides the layman with an excellent introduction to the science of man." John Pfeiffer

+ N Y Times p11 D 27 '53 450w

"This latest contribution to the Twentieth Century Series is a competent sketch of the great anthropologist's life and work, but the personality of the subject is often lost in the rather detailed discussion of his professional achievements." J. W. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 8 '53 50w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:5 Mr '54 200w

HERTZ, LOUIS HEILBRONER. Making your model railroad; il. by Ava Morgan. 216p $2.75 Crowell

625.19 Railroads—Models 54-5538

"Both the beginner and experienced hobbyist will value this clear, well-illustrated book on planning, selecting, setting up, and operating a model railroad by an authority in the field. Covers locomotives, motors, and track, layout design, power supply, the use of old equipment, scenery, buildings, action accessories, construction projects, and ways in which to enjoy the model railroad. Includes both clockwork and electric trains. An appendix lists sources of supply, books and magazines on model railroads, and requirements for the Boy Scout merit badge in railroading." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 50:456 J1 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p35 D '54

Kirkus 22:157 Mr 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by Dorothy Schumacher

Library J 79:1240 Je 15 '54 90w

HERTZLER, JOYCE ORAMEL. Society in action; a study of basic social processes. 452p $5.25 Dryden

301 Sociology 54-10352

"For many years teachers of advanced general sociology courses in our colleges and universities have yearned for a suitable text. On many occasions, after looking at the books available, they have decided that none are suitable and have resorted to the use of several books placed on reserve in the library. Professor Hertzler has been highly conscious of this situation and his book Society in Action is a tangible answer." Social Forces

"One gains the impression that the author has labored to translate nouns and adjectives into verbs, and by sheer semantic shifts has added an extensive array of terms such as 'culturalization,' 'equalization,' 'ossification,' and 'normalization' to the traditional vocabulary of introductory texts. Many students will find this vocabulary more of a hindrance than an aid in understanding sociology. Despite this criticism, much of the volume is well written. The sections dealing with Differentiation, Stratification, and Social Mobility represent a fresh approach to the writing in these fields. The book is a scholarly effort." Oswald Hall

+ Am Soc R 19:809 D '54 450w

"Because of its extensive-on-the-whole and at the same time intensive-in-parts scope, this book will require more careful study than an orthodox text, but this supposed liability should be more than offset by the stimulating nature of the materials included. As a text for advanced undergraduate and for graduate students it presents a welcome challenge to both the instructor and the students." T. P. Yeatman

+ Social Forces 33:91 O '54 440w

HESELTINE, NIGEL. Inconstant lady [Eng title: Mysterious pregnancy]. 222p $3 Lippincott

54-6117

"Lu Rienzi, a pregnant, unmarried, beautiful, and desperate Irishwoman of twenty-nine, goes to Paris in search of rescue, relief, or comfort. She finds all three, but not in the ways that she had expected. A much younger countrywoman of hers, Sara Blake, who is in the same plight, goes to Paris at the same time, and she, too, finds the solution to her problems." New Yorker

"Inconclusive as much of it may be, it provides a sophisticated spindrift of considerable wit."

Kirkus 22:293 My 1 '54 170w

"It is written with care and precision, but one has the sense throughout of having read it not once but many times before. . . If it has a flavour of the Twenties it is because the Twenties novelists, American and English, did it once for all, and better." Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 45:163 Ag 8 '53 80w

"Mr. Heseltine's material is not new. But he writes with economy, dry wit, and a sophistication which is intellectual as well as social, which goes beyond manners to thought, feeling and action. His book holds the interest and reads fast." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Je 20 '54 390w

"Mr. Heseltine writes brightly and with intelligence, but the origins and goals of his characters are left in something of a fog."

+ New Yorker 30:101 My 29 '54 80w

"Mr. Heseltine's plot relies shamelessly on coincidence, and the description of motives and habits, as in so many promising early novels, owes much to that great forerunner, South Wind. . . Mr. Heseltine has succeeded in writing a witty and scandalous trifle; when he aims higher he will achieve more."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p505 Ag 7 '53 200w

HESELTINE, WILLIAM BEST. Pioneer's mission; the story of Lyman Copeland Draper. 384p il $4.50 State hist. soc. of Wis.

B or 92 Draper, Lyman Copeland 54-7271

"American historians owe an everlasting debt of gratitude to Lyman Draper, who devoted his life to collecting and preserving manuscripts of the old pioneer West. The interesting details of Draper's life, his travels and persistent search for letters, diaries, recollections, and his invaluable contributions to the Wisconsin Historical Society are told here." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"Dr. Hesseltine writes well, despite occasional infelicities such as 'the Reverend Shane,' and his book makes a real contribution to our understanding of the evolution of cultural activities in the nineteenth-century Middle West." S. J. Buck

+ Am Hist 60:133 O '54 600w

"Among those who are now invigorating Wisconsin's American tradition is Prof. William B. Hesseltine. His interesting, well written biography of Draper is scholarly, deft in the use of evidence, highly readable, and full of humor, good nature, and human interest. It makes Draper seem alive, gives an intimate view of historical activities during the last century, and recreates in an absorbing manner, the achievements and trials of a great collector." C. P. Nettels

HESELTIME, W. B.—Continued

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 F 7 '54 380w

"A scholarly, yet readable, biography. The volume should appeal not only to professional historians but also to laymen who are interested in learning how western history is compiled."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:154 Je '54 240w

HETTINGER, HERMAN STRECKER. Financial public relations: for the business corporation; foreword by Oliver J. Gingold; introd. by W. Howard Chase. 204p $3.50 Harper 658.15 Corporation reports. Public relations 53-11843

"Covers the entire field from the 'why of it' to the 'how of it'—why a company should keep its owners, the stockholders, informed of its activities and developments, and how to keep the financial community informed through continuous flow of data to investment bankers, brokerage houses, over-the-counter dealers, investment counselors, the press services, financial and business periodicals—in short, the agencies to whom the public turns for information." (Library J) Index.

"An excellent presentation by a recognized authority." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:936 My 15 '54 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 27 '54 180w

"Although financial public relations is a highly specialized field, Mr. Hettinger draws on his own corporation experience and with commendable clarity and fine writing ability ranges over the whole field from the basic tools to complex methods." Siegfried Mandel

+ Sat R 37:32 N 27 '54 270w

"A volume without which the business executive or public relations specialist's library will not be complete." B. F. K.

+ Springfield Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 60w

HEUER, KENNETH. Wonders of the heavens; il. by Matthew Kalmenoff. 81p $2.50 Dodd

523 Astronomy—Juvenile literature 53-8398

An account of the sun, moon, stars and planets, their motions, sizes, distances and physical make-up, written in terms suitable for grades 5 to 8. Author was a former lecturer at Hayden planetarium.

Booklist 50:282 Mr 15 '54

"This comprehensive survey of the scientific aspects of astronomy is ideal for children, 10 years and up, who are genuinely interested and want solid information on the subject. . . The black-and-white fantasy illustrations by Kalmenoff overemphasize the author's imaginative speculations about life on other planets." Anne Jackson

+ Library J 79:213 F 1 '54 90w

HEUMAN, WILLIAM. Captain McRae; a novel of the northwest frontier. 192p $3 Morrow 54-6382

Historical novel of the American frontier, when the Sioux were on the warpath. Brant McRae, river pilot and captain, is the hero. The action is concerned with Brant's safe piloting of some special guns to the soldiers at a fort on the Missouri river.

"Based on sound historical record of action, we are told, but the narrative and characterization seem two dimensional. No strain on the gray matter; unimportant."

Kirkus 22:11 Ja 1 '54 90w

"The narrative is so fast-moving that it is a wonder that the author also manages to include a bit of early Western atmosphere and a romantic triangle. Withal, light reading, but recommended as escapist adventure." Clarence Gorchels

+ Library J 79:382 F 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by Hoffman Birney
N Y Times p29 Je 6 '54 60w

Springfield Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 80w

HEWES, LAURENCE ILSLEY, and OGLESBY, CLARKSON HILL. Highway engineering. 628p il $8 Wiley

625.7 Highway engineering. Roads 54-10750

"To serve as a text for the advanced engineering student and as an aid to the practicing highway engineer, this book is a comprehensive present-day counterpart to Hewes' American Highway Practice [Book Review Digest 1942]. Laurence Hewes was one of the foremost highway engineers in the U.S., having joined the Bureau of Public Roads in 1920 as chief of Western Headquarters and remaining with BPR until his death in 1950. As his earlier book, in 1942, represented the most authoritative presentation of highway engineering at the time, it is particularly significant that the present work was reviewed and criticized in detail by 31 specialists of the Bureau of Public Roads as a tribute to Dr. Hewes." Eng N

"The text presupposes some knowledge of dynamics, fluid mechanics and engineering economy. Although the work is full and inclusive, a short-course perusal of highway engineering can be taken from the book since more advanced and detailed subject matter has been set in smaller type. This material can be omitted without destroying the continuity of presentation. Chapters on Highway Economy, Highway Finance and Rights of Way are treated more fully and with greater attention to legal and economic detail than in any other book to date on the field of highway engineering as a whole."

+ Eng N 153:99 N 18 '54 250w

"An excellent new text. . . The book should find a fair amount of use as a reference tool for journalists and other non-engineer readers in search of information on specific problems relating to highways, for example, the range of visibility under various conditions of night driving." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:2217 N 15 '54 120w

HEYER, GEORGETTE (MRS G. R. ROUGIER). Toll-gate. 310p $3.50 Putnam

54-10483

Romantic novel of Regency England. The aristocratic young hero leaves a boring family week end party, and loses his way on the moors. In time he reaches a toll gate, left in charge of a small boy, and the captain stays to help him. He finds plenty of adventure when he falls in love with the lady of the nearby manor.

Booklist 51:15 S 1 '54

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 19 '54 390w

Reviewed by N. E. Taylor
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 2 '54 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 30:464 D '54 80w

"Has humor and intelligence."
+ Kirkus 22:450 Jl 15 '54 150w

"Written in the vernacular of the day, this novel presents an entertaining and authentic picture of a romantic society." G. P. Slocum
+ Library J 79:2503 D 15 '54 50w

Reviewed by L. B. Johnson
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 12 '54 300w

"Georgette Heyer has written another of her waggishly frolicsome, pertly paced historical novels sure to please her fans." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 29 '54 280w

"Miss Heyer is a witty writer and an expert at this kind of story, and the reader can just skip over the chunks of period slang she has forced into the dialogue and not miss a thing."

+ New Yorker 30:76 S 4 '54 50w

HEYN, ERNEST V., ed. My favorite true mystery. See The American Weekly

HEYWOOD, ANNE. Be yourself. 189p $2.95 Doubleday

371.425 Vocational guidance. Success 53-5606

"If you find the job which is really right for you, then you are certain to lead a rich, fulfilled life. Mrs. Heywood founded her Career-Changing Clinic upon this deep conviction six years ago. In this honest, unpretentious book she describes the perfect job she has found for herself, the personal tranquillity it has brought her and the help she has given to others toward attaining fulfillment through their work." Library J

Booklist 50:215 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:129 Mr '54 20w

"Here is much practical advice." F. D. Heron
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ja 17 '54 80w

"A self-help book for 100% efficiency and effectiveness in life, for the student as well as the teacher."

+ Kirkus 21:514 Ag 1 '53 190w

"Mrs. Heywood has a wise head and warm heart, and everything she has to say makes sense. Recommended." E. T. Smith

+ Library J 78:1525 S 15 '53 130w

Springf'd Republican p6C F 28 '54 120w

HIBBERT, MRS ELEANOR (BURFORD). Evil in the house, by Elbur Ford [pseud] [Eng title: Such bitter business] 284p $2.75 Morrow

54-5097

Retelling in fiction form of the nineteenth century murder case of Constance Kent.

Kirkus 22:16 Ja 1 '54 60w

"It all adds up to an intense, well-written, emotional story which can be recommended for adults who do not have more than average emotional conflicts of their own." Clarence Gorchels

+ Library J 79:382 F 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 F 14 '54 280w

"Elbur Ford has only proved, I fear, that a great murder case should be fictionalized only by a great novelist: for this version (published in England as 'Such Bitter Business') seems a pretty drab affair compared to even the poorer factual accounts. Despite some serious omissions and anachronisms, it is reasonably faithful, but lifeless; Miss Ford's mild literary competence is hardly adequate to such a subject." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p20 F 21 '54 360w

"Even if you knew nothing of the original case, 'Evil in the House' stands on its own feet as a brilliant piece of psychological fiction. It is horrifying in itself, and doubly so when you realize that the basis of the tale is fact. But the story does not need such foreknowledge to support it. It is a remarkably effective tour de force just as it is." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 3 '54 600w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 20w

"The best compliment that can be paid to his book is to say that it really does read like a novel."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p265 Ap 24 '53 140w

HICKMAN, HERMAN, ed. Reader. 206p il $2.95 Simon & Schuster

808.8 Literature—Collections. Sports

53-10819

"An anthology of anecdotes, short readings and poetry, most of them relating to football and other sports, some inspirational, used by Hickman over TV. Suitable for public speakers and others interested in developing good sportsmanship. Index." Library J

"Hickman, 300 pound coach of the 1951 College All-Stars, is a versatile man. He proves it in this collection of poetry and after dinner stories. It's not especially well organized, but the author warns you in the beginning that you can pick it up anywhere and read—solely for enjoyment." T. E. Ward

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 27 '53 300w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:68 Ja 1 '54 20w

Reviewed by I. T. Marsh

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 F 14 '54 170w

Sat R 36:35 D 5 '53 30w

HICKMAN, WALTER BRADDOCK. Volume of corporate bond financing since 1900; a study. 429p $7.50 Princeton univ. press

332.63 Corporations—Finance. Bonds

53-10140

"Research conducted by the National Bureau of Economic Research has yielded aggregate statistics relating to the volume of new offerings, extinguishments, and outstandings of corporate bonds since 1900; on total new defaults, default settlements, and outstandings in default; and estimates of money flows to and from the corporate sector of the economy arising from transactions in corporate funded debt. The book provides basic statistical series on corporate bond financing in a form useful to investors, government agencies, and students generally; and analyzes and interprets the behavior of these series and their impact upon the economy." Management R

"It will be a useful tool in the hands of research investigators of the American investment and economic scenes." Paul Wasserman

+ Library J 79:211 F 1 '54 100w

Management R 42:563 S '53 80w

"Much of the body of the text is highly technical and is explanatory of the statistical procedure that was followed to obtain the results that are presented both in the text and in complete tabular form in the appendixes. The lay reader, interested chiefly in the conclusions arrived at, will find them intelligibly set forth in the general summary following the Introduction and in the special summaries preceding each chapter."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:77 Mr '54 210w

HICKS, GRANVILLE. Where we came out. 250p $3.50 Viking

335.4 Communism

54-6428

For four years, 1935-1939, the author was a member of the Communist party. He joined it for idealistic reasons, and was never a part of any spy apparatus. The present book describes his experiences, his reasons for dropping his membership, and his present ideas on the subject.

Booklist 50:371 Je 1 '54

"A candid and clarifying volume by the literary editor of the New Leader."

+ Bookmark 13:217 Je '54 30w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 16 '54 300w

HICKS, GRANVILLE—Continued

"Mr. Hicks has written a remarkably temperate book on a highly charged subject, and is, I think, entirely convincing in his contention that he never intended to be a subversive, as that term is commonly understood; and that he really did 'like America' even in those reckless days when he wrote a piece of Communist propaganda entitled I Like America. But the Christian reader will be left in ignorance of what it is that moves him, disciplines him, sustains him, gives him direction, determines his values and commands his loyalties in a moral-spiritual sense." H. S. Tigner

Christian Century 71:823 J1 7 '54 900w

"There are those of us who in a curious way are proud of never having been Communists at all. Not everyone who rejected the Popular Front was a reactionary reinter. It was not just the flat-heads of the right who saw the swindle of Republican Spain. To a reasoning mind the Moscow treason trials were obviously rigged. One is grateful to Mr. Hicks for his explanations and happy about his volte-face, but one wonders a little about that word 'intellectual.'" Francis Russell

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 J1 13 '54 500w

Kirkus 22:178 Mr 1 '54 250w

Reviewed by Louis Barron

Library J 79:620 Ap 1 '54 210w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Manchester Guardian p4 O 15 '54 700w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

New Repub 130:18 My 31 '54 1000w

New Statesman & Nation 48:515 O 23 '54 270w

"The reviewer would be doing an injustice to the book under review if he didn't leave it as his opinion that Granville Hicks is not only a man of good will who, whatever the arguments it may arouse, has written a good-tempered, decent and likable book." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 2 '54 950w

"In my opinion Mr. Hicks' book is not just another confession by an ex-Communist, because, among other things, the author is an eminently sane spirit, whose personal record and observations prove how much democratic justice depends upon common sense plus some degree of moral integrity. . . There is a sane wisdom in all of this analysis." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ N Y Times p6 My 9 '54 600w

"This account of his experience and his present views is terribly defensive in spots, painfully honest in others, very useful in its account of the dullness and indiscipline of lower-level Communist activity, frequently moving, and always readable. Mr. Hicks' principal constructive proposal, a League of Ex-Communists, sounds as though it might be worth trying."

+ New Yorker 30:145 My 8 '54 170w

"Granville Hicks has written the story of his conversion to, and disillusionment with, the Communist Party and its doctrinal mythology with a candor free from self-pity and a hindsight sharpened by common sense. . . What stands out about Mr. Hicks's book is his intellectual courage, his attempt to strike a balanced picture, and his authentic critical liberalism. He has shown a capacity to question his first principles which Justice Holmes regarded as the mark of a civilized mind." Sidney Hook

+ Sat R 37:11 My 15 '54 1300w

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 110w

Wis Lib Bul 50:127 My '54

HIGHET, GILBERT. Clerk of Oxenford; essays on literature and life. 272p $3.75 Oxford 820.4 Books and reading. Radio addresses, debates, etc. 54-10897

A second collection of radio talks, reworked into brief essays, by the author of People, Places and Books (Book Review Digest 1953). The title is chosen because the author, like Chaucer's clerk, studied and taught at Oxford.

Booklist 51:102 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:31 N '54 20w

Reviewed by F. E. Faverty

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 7 '54 350w

"Stimulating, provocative. . . A book to read for pleasure and profit."

+ Kirkus 22:692 O 1 '54 240w

"Professor Highet, who teaches classics at Columbia, writes in urbane, allusive style. . . Public and university libraries." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1887 O 15 '54 100w

"Whether he is discussing 'The Arts of Prose,' 'Poets and Poetry' or even as formidable a subject as 'Imagination and Reality' his spiritual affinity is to Harry Lauder, rather than to John Knox. This gives his pages a sparkle that makes them easy and diverting reading. If his judgments are conventional and his criticism superficial, remember he was writing for a radio audience, not for a seminar in English literature." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 D 5 '54 350w

"At times the reader is conscious, as he was not in the earlier book, of deliberate effort to maintain variety. A biographical and artistic parallel of Tennyson and Brahms, for instance, seems to say little that could not have been as well said in two separate essays. But the old flashing wit is still there." DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Times p10 O 31 '54 470w

"Mr. Highet is learned, witty, and urbane; it is the urbanity that is sometimes a bit hard to take."

+ New Yorker 30:138 O 30 '54 130w

"You'd better read all of Mr. Highet. Like Chaucer's clerk of Oxenford, from whose enthusiasm for 'bookes, clad in blak or reed' Mr. Highet takes his title, he is a man who reads for reading's sake and finds no book alien to him. This is the kind of enthusiasm that is good for books and good for people, too. And in Mr. Highet it is highly infectious." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 21 '54 650w

"Certainly, the man is a lover of books, an ardent lover of many books, and it is fortunate for all of us that he is willing to try to communicate the pleasure he finds in them to an immense number of people through a medium so markedly indifferent, in its usual courses, to books, esthetics, and ideas. . . Sometimes the friendly guide lapses into the grade-school teacher and the charm chills to a briskness perilously near to fatuity. . . There is also an uncomfortable feeling, which the intonations of the voice would, no doubt, have dispelled, that the clerk of Oxenford is trying a little too hard to identify himself with the laity." Bergen Evans

+ Sat R 37:18 O 30 '54 850w

HIGHET, GILBERT. Man's unconquerable mind. [Eng title: Mind of man]. 138p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

153 Intellect. Knowledge, Theory of 54-6133

"This latest gift to America of Gilbert Highet is not history, anthropology, psychology, sociology or philosophy. It is the story told, movingly but quietly, of 'man's unconquerable mind.' . . The book is written by a professor of classics, on a classic theme and in a classic tone. . . The occasion, if occasion be required for the eternal to irradiate the temporal, is the bicentennial of Columbia University, where Mr. Highet has the honor to exemplify the classics. . . This small volume is his personal interpretation of Columbia's anniversary theme, 'Man's right to knowledge and the free use thereof.'" N Y Times

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 193:85 Ap '54 120w

Booklist 50:177; 255 Ja 1 '54; Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:129 Mr '54 20w

"Mr. Highet, a professor of classics, writes in a classic style and tone—calmly, lucidly and simply. Informality and brevity result in occasional oversimplification, but this timely essay will not disappoint the audience for which it is apparently intended—the large one of furrowed middle-brows." Clifford Morris

+ Canadian Forum 34:71 Je '54 210w

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 179:77 Ap '54 200w

"Highet has abundantly earned the right to speak in behalf of man's greatest—perhaps his only—possession." Milton Crane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 7 '54 330w

"I would myself question what Professor Highet makes of his division of universities into those 'devoted to the pursuit and dissemination of knowledge above all other aims' and those 'devoted to supporting authority.'... I believe also that Professor Highet has misinterpreted the doctrine of infallibility in his long note on Church censorship, so that it seems to extend to any pronouncement by a Church authority. But this remains a useful essay. There is a great need for such books as this." J. P. Sisk

+ Commonweal 59:585 Mr 12 '54 550w

"Spacious as it is, it will not be over your head—Highet is never an inaccessible interpreter."

+ Kirkus 21:806 D 15 '53 200w

"From first word to last Man's Unconquerable Mind provides absorbing and stimulating reading. What is more it is readable reading. Highly recommended for all libraries." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:57 Ja 1 '54 150w

"Taken as an appreciation of the wonders of the human spirit it is an admirable essay. But there is nowhere considered discussion of the relation of some other aspects of the human spirit, man's courage for instance, and the more specifically 'rational faculties.' And in considering man's 'reason' there is no debate on whether it is primarily the function of education to discipline the mind or to furnish it with knowledge." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ New Repub 130:19 Mr 29 '54 350w

New Statesman & Nation 48:110 Jl 24 '54 300w

"A nimble, stimulating discourse. It is witty but not to the point of allowing the wit to subvert the thought; it is at times eloquent without becoming wordy; and there is beauty in its simplicity even when, due to its informality and brevity, it is a little too simple." Marvin Lowenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Mr 7 '54 700w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith

N Y Times p13 Mr 14 '54 450w

New Yorker 30:100 Je 19 '54 140w

"Troubled about the present as Mr. Highet is, he nevertheless comes out in the end with unshaken faith in what the human mind can and will do. His book is very well worth the time of any serious reader." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 9 '54 700w

"Professor Highet is versatile and learned, and his pages are bound to be of interest to the large general public that believes in education without quite comprehending the governing philosophy in the field. Mr. Highet inevitably raises more questions than he answers, and I can but wish that he had paused in his rhetorical sweep to deal more directly and richly with some of these problems." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R 37:14 Mr 6 '54 450w

"Professor Highet is a cultivated humanist who places his faith in Greek and Roman rather than Hebraic culture, and illustrates his themes with many excellent examples. His book is edifying. . . For all Professor Highet's good sense, good intentions, delightful allusions and dedicated purpose, his lay sermon is likely to irritate as many as it pleases."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p477 Jl 23 '54 750w

Wis Lib Bul 50:131 My '54

HIGHET, GILBERT. Migration of ideas; three lectures delivered on the North foundation at Franklin and Marshall college on 18 and 19 March 1954. 85p $2 Oxford

901 History—Philosophy 54-7132

"Three lectures which both explain the theory that ideas have had a great influence on human affairs and give examples in support of this relatively new method of regarding and interpreting history. The lectures were delivered on the North Foundation at Franklin and Marshall College in March, 1954." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 18 '54 40w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Ap 25 '54 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 9 '54 1250w

HIGHSMITH, PATRICIA. The blunderer. 277p $3 Coward-McCann

54-6048

Detective story.

"Clever."

+ Kirkus 22:415 Jl 1 '54 90w

"Miss Highsmith manages so well with the understandable if mussy Stockhouse that she can trample plausibility and drag us along in spite of it. Her fancy is at once extravagant and acute. She has written a remarkable tale and a far more telling one (for me, at least) than its celebrated predecessor, 'Strangers on a Train.'" James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 19 '54 120w

"Hardly a successful novel, but an ambitious and largely interesting attempt." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p17 O 3 '54 50w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p28 O 24 '54 100w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:64 O 2 '54 20w

HILDEBRAND, DIETRICH VON. New Tower of Babel. 243p $3 Kenedy

282.04 Catholic church. Civilization, Modern 53-12221

A collection of essays by a German Catholic scholar, who is now associate professor of philosophy at Fordham University. Contents: The new Tower of Babel; The dethronement of truth; The new functionalism in the light of Christ; Catholicism and unprejudiced knowledge; The role of reverence in education; Beauty in the light of the redemption; Efficiency and holiness.

"By this time we have learned to equate the name of Dietrich von Hildebrand with singularly forthright, persuasive expression of singularly sound, yet provocative ideas. And his latest work, The New Tower of Babel, does not disappoint. . . Particularly fine are his reflections on the role that reverence—an acknowledgment of religio—must play in both the education of youth and the mature man's attitude toward creature and Creator." Ruth Hallisy

+ Cath World 179:234 Je '54 350w

"This work has most of the merits we now expect in anything by Dietrich von Hildebrand, and if it is less ordered and unified than some things he has done, it yet has the advantage of being a composite of matters already developed by him on marriage, purity, the person, the liturgy, and the idea of a Catholic university. In that way it is a sort of simple and informal introduction to his works."

L. R. Ward

+ Commonweal 59:203 N 27 '53 480w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:205 Je '54 220w

HILEY, WILFRID EDWARD. Woodland management. 463p $12 De Graff

634.928 Forests and forestry [54-1102]

A comprehensive textbook covering all aspects of forestry activities in the British Isles. The author was formerly lecturer on the subject at Oxford. Later he was manager of Dartington Woodlands, Ltd. Copiously illustrated. Index.

Reviewed by M. P. Price

Manchester Guardian p4 F 23 '54 500w

"Not since Professor Schlick's work has anyone with a proper knowledge of statistics collected, analysed and published so much work on figures of timber growth and yield and the cost of growing trees in Britain. But statistics are by their nature brief and factual. Consequently, Mr. Hiley has sought to combine experience with theory, to grow trees profitably himself and to explain the many aspects of this task, albeit for those with some prior knowledge and a tolerance of technical writing. . . The author does more than record; he seeks to advise, and there he is on less sure ground. Many figures are in terms of pounds, shillings and pence; and the value of money is constantly changing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p411 Je 25 '54 750w

HILL, HOWARD. Hunting the hard way; il. by Raymon Naylor. 318p il $7.50 Wilcox & Follett
799.2 Archery. Bow and arrow 53-4391

An account of some of the author's experiences while hunting with the bow and arrow. Also contains some material of a technical nature in chapters headed: How I shoot a bow; Types of bows; How to make arrows, etc.

Booklist 50:199 Ja 15 '54

"An unusually fascinating book of interest to general reader as well as to sportsmen." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:68 Ja 1 '54 30w

HILL, HOWARD. Wild adventure; foreword by Errol Flynn. 228p il $4.95 Stackpole co.
799.2 Hunting—Africa. Photography of animals 54-6927

"Howard Hill, well known for his exploits in hunting big game with bow and arrow, and for his photography of wild animals, records the high spots of his wild adventures over thirty years, pitting his skill 'against the cunning roebuck, the strong bear, the lordly moose, the wily jaguar, lion and leopard, the crafty buffalo and mighty elephant,' with, for good measure undersea and shark fishing with bow and arrow. His primary interest was photography, but to do this successfully he had to learn to stalk his game, and to run enormous risks. Occasionally he lassoed his animals, releasing them later for photographic purposes. Brief chapter on techniques for those who wish to emulate." Library J

"Recommended as an absorbing collection of true jungle thrills entirely different from the run-of-the-mill wild animal adventures." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 18 '54 180w

"For all adventure lovers whether avid readers or not." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 30:261 Ag '54 80w

"Of genuine interest to general public. Certainly for sporting collections." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:768 Ap 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 21 '54 250w

HILL, MRS IDA CARLETON (THALLON). Ancient city of Athens; its topography and monuments. 258p il $5 Harvard univ. press
913.385 Athens, Greece—Antiquities A53-5235

"The purpose of Mrs. Hill's [book] is to relate the results of excavation and study in Athens during recent years—which, especially in the Agora, have often provided material evidence to refute former hypotheses—to the classic works published about 60 years ago. With it the archaeologically minded visitor will be able to settle down in the area round the Theatre of Dionysus or in the Agora and make some sense out of what might otherwise appear little more than a dusty mess." Times [London] Lit Sup

"This is a serious, erudite work; too specialized for general reader interest, but an important addition to archeological literature." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:632 Ap 1 '54 40w

"Careful and authoritative book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p12 Ja 1 '54 450w

HILL, LORNA. Veronica at Sadler's Wells; il. by Oscar Liebman [Eng title: Veronica at the Wells]. 241p $2.75 Holt

54-10385

"A fifteen-year-old girl tells the story of her training at the famous Sadler's Wells Ballet School. Through patient hard work she finally gets a chance to dance the lead in 'Swan Lake' at Covent Garden. Wonderful inside view of training and life in the school. Good descriptions of the Northumberland country where Veronica spends her holidays with relatives." Library J

"A disappointingly trite and theatrical plot in spite of the English author's authentic background."

Booklist 51:113 N 1 '54

"The author, whose own daughter has taught at the school, understands and writes convincingly of the hard work, the single track ambition—and the heart—necessary to attain a ballet career. Authentic illustrations add interest." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p36 N 14 '54 60w

Kirkus 22:391 Jl 1 '54 150w

"A most satisfying story for ballet lovers. Ages 10-15." R. H. Urban

+ Library J 79:2256 N 15 '54 50w

"There is less about technique than in some of our American ballet career stories, but the whole has charm and reality." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p10 N 14 '54 90w

HILL, PAMELA. King's vixen [Eng title: Flaming Janet]. 313p $3.50 Putnam

James IV, king of Scotland—Fiction 54-7867

Historical novel of Scotland in the days of James IV. The king's vixen of the title is red-haired Janet Kennedy, one of the king's mistresses who was the mother of one of his illegitimate sons.

"A well rounded tale of romance and adventure." Henry Cavendish

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 28 '54 350w

Kirkus 22:77 F 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 20 '54 180w

"Miss Hill seems far too self-conscious, too aware of her own exciting awareness, of the way in which she responds to her historical donnée. We are disturbingly conscious of the writer rather than her heroine." John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 47:233 F 20 '54 110w

"As a novel—a first novel—'The King's Vixen' is somewhat of an apprentice job. The striking thing about it is not that Miss Hill has the writing of it well in hand from the beginning—she hasn't, though the plot is nicely developed from start to finish—but that she improves so much both in skill and judgment as the pages go by." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ap 18 '54 400w

Sat R 37:36 J1 24 '54 180w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 6 '54 80w

"A promising novel, told in sound twentieth-century English with a few Scots words to give it a northern but not an antique flavour."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p53 Ja 22 '54 350w

HILL, ROWLAND, ed. Fibres from synthetic polymers. 554p il $12.50 Elsevier

677.47 Textile fibers, Synthetic 52-5656

"This volume [is] on purely synthetic fibers (as opposed to regenerated natural fibers or chemically altered ones). It is the effort of nineteen authors (including the editor who contributes also a brief historical introductory chapter), all English except for one American (G. H. Fremon) and two German fiber experts. Eleven of the authors are associated with Imperial Chemical Industries, Ltd. The volume is directed toward the applied polymer scientist. However, fully two-thirds of the book is devoted to the basic aspects of linear polymers. These first thirteen chapters not only furnish authoritative summaries of the present-day chemistry of linear polymers, but also provide a basic conceptual understanding of the properties of synthetic fibers and the processes for making them." Am Chem Soc J

"An outstanding work. . . All of the presentations are clearly written and factual. References (including patents) are well selected and form a useful addition to the volume although their order is not always chronological. Particular commendation must go to the editor for the excellent organization of the book and to the authors who have fitted their individual chapters into one of the best collaborative volumes this reviewer has examined." C. S. Fuller

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:2599 My 5 '54 240w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:15 Ja '54

HILLIARD, JAN. View of the town. 269p $3.50 Abelard-Schuman

54-10224

A comedy of social rivalry in a small Nova Scotian community. The unsatisfactory marriage of one of the chief characters is the central fact of the novel.

Booklist 51:176 D 15 '54

Bookmark 14:35 N '54 10w

Kirkus 22:645 S 15 '54 130w

"Recommended for large rental collections."

R. P. Tubby

Library J 79:2099 N 1 '54 70w

"It is fair to note that Canadian divorce laws are stringent and that we southerners must accept that fact as a sufficiently motivating condition for this story. We may be obliged, too, to accept some of the other wee Down-East orts without carping; for Miss Hilliard writes a lively prose, does well with her characterizations and conversations, and leaves a pleasant impression withal." John Gould

+ N Y Times p48 N 7 '54 400w

HILLIER, JACK RONALD. Japanese masters of the colour print; a great heritage of oriental art. 139p il pl col pl $8.50 Phaidon

761 Color prints, Japanese 54-10135

"Here are 83 reproductions of Japanese prints that are rendered, in color and in size, as near as possible to the originals. The pictures are introduced by a long prefatory essay which gives the background of the color-print and a synopsis of its history from the mid-seventeenth century onwards. Brief biographies of the major exponents of this art are given in the Appendix, and there is a list of the signatures of these artists and their principal pupils." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:353 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 15 '54 50w

"Recommended." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:1591 S 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by Lawrence Gowing

New Statesman & Nation 47:640 My 15 '54 200w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 2 '54 50w

Reviewed by Howard Devree

N Y Times p5 J1 4 '54 160w

Reviewed by Karl Kup

Sat R 37:19 J1 31 '54 1350w

"The plates chosen for colour, with the possible exception of the Kiyonaga and the waterfall Hokusai, do manage to convey a reasonable measure of the charm of the originals. These colour plates serve as an aid to an imaginative approach to the wider offering in monochrome; which is all that can be reasonably expected." Oswald Wynd

+ Spec p524 Ap 30 '54 450w

"One of the most delightful volumes published by the Phaidon Press, in the choice and balance of its plates as well as in the quality of its coloured reproductions. These, of course, were favoured by the restricted colour scheme of the Japanese prints, which makes them easier to reproduce than the fine tones combined with strong colour accents of oil painting. Even the size of the Phaidon books harmonizes extremely well with this type of material and the excellence of the lay-out and printing scarcely needs stressing in connexion with the work of this firm. Mr. Hillier's volume is indeed the only one in existence which, for a reasonable price, brings home to a wider public the fragrant poetry, the metamorphoses of style and the various motive cycles of this branch of Japanese art."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p276 Ap 30 '54 750w

HILLS, VERA. All aboard for the beach; il. by Joshua Telford. (Ariel bks) 143p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

The adventures of two small boys on a vacation at the beach. For ages 5 to 9.

Kirkus 22:232 Ap 1 '54 50w

"Useful and realistic for third- and fourth-grade readers but not exciting." Anne Izard

Library J 79:786 Ap 15 '54 50w

"Paul and Tobey and their dog have the sort of everyday summer adventures that all small boys love, and may like as practice reading, but there is too little plot or excitement or interest of style for my taste." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 27 '54 30w

"The child who has not been conditioned by television to expect clatter and calamity will thoroughly enjoy this quiet, realistic story which reaches no peak of great excitement, but whose appeal is its plausibility of character and plot." C. E. Van Norman

+ N Y Times p34 Je 6 '54 110w

HIMES, CHESTER B. Third generation. 350p $3.95 World pub.

52-13247

Story of three generations of a Negro family from their early days of freedom from slavery, through the years of rising to a position of comfort and respectability, to a final degeneration and tragedy. The chief figures are Professor Taylor, gentle, good and quite black, his white-skinned wife with deep hidden ambitions, and the youngest son, Charles, on whom the mother pins her hopes and who brings on the disastrous ending.

Booklist 50:240 F.15 '54

HIMES, C. B.—Continued

"Through tying his story to a Freudian mother complex formula, ruthlessly applied, Mr. Himes removes his characters as far from the reader's sympathy as they are from convincing reality." Riley Hughes

— Cath World 179:72 Ap '54 220w

"There is much tragic power in Himes' new novel. 'The Third Generation' is a strong addition to his growing list of books. Yet there are ways in which perhaps it falls short of the stature it might have had. I do not believe that its structural plan and conception are as good as the writing skill with which it is carried out." Edmund Fuller

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 10 '54 240w

Kirkus 21:716 N 1 '53 180w

"Unfortunately, the author's style—simple yet always on an overt level—is not big enough for his subject and the book degenerates into merely detailing crisis after crisis. But this very objective writing vitalizes his picture of Negro life so that one becomes a part of and in it. Recommended for all adult fiction collections." M. S. Byam

+ — Library J 79:145 Ja 15 '54 100w

"This reviewer was impressed by the controlled force of Mr. Himes' earlier novel, 'Cast The First Stone.' Now 'The Third Generation' has been published, a far less skillfully modulated work which yet seizes the reader with a strong, if incoherent impact of its own. Much obviously autobiographical truth and a great deal of agonized sincerity has gone into the writing of it." Frederic Morton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 10 '54 700w

"Mr. Himes seems to have set out to grip the reader in a vise of despair by cumulative incident and detail. His searing book, with its terrible pathos of the oppressed set against each other, shows how increasingly firm a position he deserves among American novelists. But the impact is weakened by the introduction, in several cases, of chance misfortune unrelated to the characters or their ancestry, and the whole seems at times to lack a certain necessary measure of animal fun and human hope." John Brooks

+ — N Y Times p29 Ja 10 '54 500w

"The Third Generation' appears to be a highly sincere piece of work. Though its theme is a dismal one, there is much food for thought in its pages. Do not expect the book to be entertainment alone, but read it for its portrayal of an important segment life." W. S. Z.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 F 7 '54 210w

"In spite of its excesses, 'The Third Generation' has within it elements of great interest, and it again demonstrates that Mr. Himes's talents are of a high order." Martin Levin

+ — Sat R 37:51 Mr 13 '54 260w

HINCKLEY, F. LEWIS. Directory of antique furniture; the authentic classification of European and American designs for professionals and connoisseurs. 355p il $10 Crown 749 Furniture 52-10776

"A Directory of Antique Furniture consists of an introductory explanatory text, covering 28 double-column pages, followed by the plates (the main body of the book), covering the remaining 355 numbered pages. The text is arranged under the following headings: Preface, Interrelation of Furniture Designs, The Spread of French and English Design Influences, and Structural Methods and Materials. The section entitled 'The Spread of French and English Design Influences' treats of developments in various countries and regions under the sub-headings, Germany, Liege and Aix la Chapelle, Austria, Denmark, Danish West Indies, Bermuda, Sweden, Norway, Russia, Holland, Dutch Colonies, China and the Philippines, and Ireland. The explanatory text contains references to the numbered illustrations in the main part of the book, and provides a useful background of information on the craft and trade of antiques." Subscription Bks Bul

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 O 25 '53 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p31 S '54

"The large number of illustrations, so well described and authenticated, makes the Directory of Antique Furniture a reference volume of great value for students and collectors of antique furniture. The Directory is recommended for general and special libraries and for homes."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:35 J1 '54 850w

HINDUS, MAURICE GERSCHON. Crisis in the Kremlin. 319p $3.95 Doubleday

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations 53-5597

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Booklist 50:215 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:129 Mr '54 10w

Foreign Affairs 32:514 Ap '54 30w

"A prolific and knowledgeable writer on Russia provides another thoughtful book on his favorite subject, with the help of some rather dated first-hand impressions."

+ Nation 178:136 F 13 '54 190w

"There is very little in Crisis in the Kremlin, either in the form of facts or interpretation, that the general reader and scholar cannot find better said in half a dozen other books. Nevertheless, there are occasional gleanings. The sketch of a provincial Party boss, absorbed in the economic and technical problems of his area, does convey the tone and atmosphere of this role and has some added value as its subject has since risen to national prominence. Likewise there are some revealing sidelights on Litvinov's frustration with his superiors, which bring out the familiar difficulty of forcing contrary views upward through a bureaucracy." Barrington Moore

+ — Sat R 37:21 F 27 '54 500w

HINDUS, MILTON. Proustian vision. 288p $4 Columbia Univ. press

843 Proust, Marcel 53-11068

An analytical study of the inner aspects of Proust's genius. Considers the recently discovered novel of Proust, Jean Santeuil (published in France in 1952). Bibliography. Index.

"Milton Hindus, distinguished literary critic, now associate professor of English at Brandeis University, has served on the faculties of the University of Chicago, Hunter College and the New School for Social Research. His 'Proustian Vision' was one of the books chosen to signalize the bicentennial of Columbia University. Clearly and beautifully written, it will incite confirmed Proustians to re-read the entire cycle in the light of this fresh and revealing analysis, and new readers could not have a better guide." Kathleen Cannell

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 24 '54 480w

"An extremely useful book for all collections of modern literature; Mr. Hindus's concern with artistic creation gives it added value in the general field of aesthetics. Recommended." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 78:2210 D 15 '53 90w

"This is a rather loosely knit book, containing essays on Proust's aesthetics, philosophy, psychology, sociology, and ethics. They are always readable and often stimulating but rather short-winded and disconnected. One gets the impression of an interim report on what might be an interesting book with a fuller development of the themes here touched upon." E. M. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p2 Ag 17 '54 240w

"A useful guide for the reader of Proust's novels. Mr. Hindus, who gives the impression of being steeped in his subject, writes with admirable clarity and perception that seldom waver from the goal." E. A. Bloom

+ Sat R 37:17 S 4 '54 400w

"These essays are in the main excellent. Although the ground has been covered by many other critics, Professor Hindus has much to say that is interesting and illuminating. He is a writer of independent judgement who has thought out the problems for himself, and he frequently challenges the views put forward by accepted authorities on Proust." Martin Turnell
+ Spec p120 J1 23 '54 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p458 J1 16 '54 1500w

"Mr. Hindus takes pains to dispose of the popular notion that Proust is immoral, amoral, or decadent. No modern writer, the author maintains, so consistently holds up to admiration justice, charity, and benevolence. 'Proust deals with the abnormal,' says Mr. Hindus, 'in order to find his way to a concept of morality'; he needed to escape from himself and his homosexual instincts, if only in his work."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:189 Je '54 280w

"Milton Hindus' book is written with warmth and obvious love for his subject." V. H. Brombert

+ Yale R n ■ 43:637 summer '54 360w

HINKS, ROGER PACKMAN. Michelangelo Merisi da Caravaggio: his life, his legend, his works. 126p 96pl $8.50 Beechhurst press
759.5 Caravaggio, Michelangelo Merisi da A54-152

"The aim of this book is threefold: to give a brief account of Caravaggio's life; to examine the impact of his life and works upon his contemporaries; and to draw up a canon of the works acknowledged as authentic or reasonably attributable to his hand. In describing his life, [the] object is to enumerate known facts. . . In analysing his works, the chief intention is to present them in a probable historic sequence." Pref

Reviewed by Dorothy Adlow
Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 24 '54 320w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 79:1060 Je 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by Stephen Bone
Manchester Guardian p4 D 15 '53 170w

"Mr. Hink's book is not only the first full-length study of Caravaggio in English—it is also the best in any language." Benedict Nicolson

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:678 N 28 '53 800w

"Roger Hinks's 'Michelangelo Merisi da Caravaggio' appears at a moment when there is need for a publication of this kind. It provides knowledge of great use. The long and detailed deductions concerning the dates of key works, such as the St. Matthew pictures in the Contarelli Chapel, have here been summarized in a few pages. . . It is a natural tendency for an author devoting long study to a single painter to arrive at too high an estimation of his subject. This fault Mr. Hinks has avoided and, in fact, he often tends to the opposite extreme. . . These comments are in part balanced by the last chapter in which Mr. Hinks justly acknowledges the greatness of Caravaggio's contribution, and reverses some of the harsh judgments previously expressed. It is only a pity that remarks disparaging to the subject of the book should remain to discourage a reader who is not familiar enough with the paintings to have a contrary opinion." Jane Costello
+ Sat R 37:21 Ap 3 '54 800w

"Mr. Hinks, who writes with urbanity and wit, makes clear his own conception of Caravaggio. On occasion he disagrees, modestly but firmly, with the great pioneers of Seicento studies, and he is not afraid to indulge in speculation—about Caravaggio's attitude to the Counter-Reformation, for example, or the reason why, unlike Ruskin, so many people admire him today. But such speculation is always kept well in control." A. McL. Y.

+ Spec p54 Ja 8 '54 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p40 Ja 15 '54 800w

HIRSCHFELDER, JOSEPH OAKLAND, and others. Molecular theory of gases and liquids; with the assistance of the staff of the Univ. of Wisconsin naval research laboratory. (Structure of matter ser) 1219p $20 Wiley

539.1 Molecular theory. Gases. Liquids 54-7621

"This large treatise is a detailed presentation of progress made to date in analyzing and expressing mathematically the interrelations of fundamental interactions between molecules and the properties on bulk behavior of dense gases and liquids." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

Chem & Eng N 32:2423 Je 14 '54 10w

"An essential book (in spite of the cost) for libraries serving graduate physical chemists, chemical engineers and applied mathematicians." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1405 Ag '54 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:51 J1 '54

HISCOCKS, RICHARD. Rebirth of Austria. 263p 11 maps $3.50 Oxford

943.6 Austria. Reconstruction (1939-)—Austria 53-4436

In fifteen chapters the author traces the political, economic, social and cultural developments in Austria, mainly since April, 1945.

"Mr. Hiscocks has written a solid, interesting survey of Austrian affairs since 1945. Not only has he given a good account of the political and diplomatic history of the Republic, but he has dealt adequately with the economic and social problems of the little country and the amazing cultural revival that has taken place since the war, in the face of almost insurmountable obstacles." R. J. Rath

+ Am Hist R 60:179 O '54 280w

Am Pol Sci R 48:580 Je '54 30w

"The book is written without footnotes and is meant to be an informative account for the general reader. This the author has provided in admirable fashion. A good bibliography on postwar Austria and several excellent maps are included." E. C. Helmreich

+ Ann Am Acad 293:208 My '54 550w

Reviewed by Norman Found

Canadian Forum 33:281 Mr '54 400w

"The author stayed in Vienna from 1946 until 1949 and since has made several trips to Austria. His book is a fair and lucid presentation." E. S. Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 F 5 '54 650w

Current Hist 26:190 Mr '54 60w

Foreign Affairs 32:677 J1 '54 30w

"If you want to know in outline what has happened in Austria in recent years, this is the book to read."

+ Nation 178:153 F 20 '54 370w

"[The chapter] on Cultural Revival is outstanding. But precisely because the book is intended for generally 'well-informed' readers rather than specialists, the numerous mistakes, inadequate analyses, misleading statements, and omissions raise serious doubts concerning its reliability and usefulness. The chief shortcomings of the book are the omissions—the facts not supplied, the questions not raised." C. A. Gulick

+ Sat R 37:18 F 6 '54 400w

"The rebirth of the Second Republic after the débacle of 1945 is the theme of Mr. Hiscocks's timely book. From the evidence which he marshals with skill and scrupulous attention he is of the opinion that its expectation of life is reasonably good."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p810 D 18 '53 1000w

HITCHENS, MRS DOLORES (BIRK). Beat back the tide. 192p $2.75 Doubleday

54-5505

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:44 Ja 15 '54 70w

HITCHENS, D. B.—Continued

"In the past Miss Hitchens has been inclined to start with bright ideas and then muss them up in the handling. Here she manages deftly on both scores in a nicely teasing narrative, fairly extravagant, but treated persuasively. The consequence is steadily readable." James Sandoe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 4 '54 130w

"The best yet of Mrs. Hitchens' brooding and often chilling thrillers." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p23 Ap 18 '54 80w

"Mrs. Hitchens works everything out tidily enough, but she is a little handicapped by the fact that none of her characters are very ingratiating."

+ — New Yorker 30:140 Ap 17 '54 120w

"Background excellent in the infallible Hitchens manner." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 9 '54 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 20w

HOARE, FREDERICK RUSSELL, ed. and tr. Western Fathers; being the lives of SS Martin of Tours, Ambrose, Augustine of Hippo, Honoratus of Arles and Germanus of Auxerre. (Makers of Christendom ser) 320p $4 Sheed

922.1 Christian literature, Early. Fathers of the church 54-11138

"The lives of, and writings on, St. Martin, by Sulpicius Severus; St. Ambrose, by Pauline the Deacon; St. Augustine, by St. Possidius, Bishop of Calama; St. Honoratus, by St. Hilary, Bishop of Arles; and St. Germanus, by Constantius of Lyons. This is the first volume in the new series." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Though the saints may therefore have to be rescued from their own uncritical devotees, the history of the church in their times needs the light which such documents as these throw upon it." W. E. G.

Christian Century 71:1467 D 1 '54 350w

Reviewed by M. A. Fitzsimons

+ Commonweal 61:341 D 24 '54 330w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 21 '54 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p661 O 15 '54 400w

HOCKING, WILLIAM ERNEST. Experiment in education: what we can learn from teaching Germany. 303p $5 Regnery

940.531 Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany. Education—Germany 54-6345

"This book by William E. Hocking, a Harvard Professor of Philosophy emeritus and former lecturer in Bavaria under the American Military Government, deals with 'the world's first scientifically directed surgical operation on a body politic, our Nazi-ectomy.' Its author admires the non-scientific parts of the operation, the defeat and the Nuremberg Court, whose chief educational effect lay in 'the unalterable record of history revealed in its documents.' But the denazification program was 'incredibly simplistic.' Our 'scientifically directed' efforts he labels 'American knight-errantry in education.' These failed because of our cherished illusion about science, that it can be applied to basic human issues." N Y Times

"While the announced purpose of Professor Hocking's book is impressive, serious students are likely to be disappointed with his finished product. The inclusion of a considerable amount of reminiscence drawn from many years of teaching and travel in the United States, the Far East, and Europe makes for a certain interest, but it also confuses the picture." Harold Zink

Ann Am Acad 295:200 S '54 500w

"Written by one of our country's foremost philosophers, always clearly, and at times with strong feeling, 'Experiment in Education' merits sober reflection not simply on the part of the experts, but every thinking citizen. Its background is a half-century of intimate knowledge of American liberties and of German life and thought." G. K. Chalmers
+ N Y Times p20 S 26 '54 800w

HODGES, CYRIL WALTER. Globe restored: a study of the Elizabethan theatre. 199p il $7.50 Coward-McCann

792.0942 Southwark, England. Globe theatre 54-7135

An illustrated study of the theater, and especially the Globe, during Shakespeare's time. The book is based on research in England and America. Index.

Booklist 50:353 My 15 '54

"Highly recommended to large public libraries, college reference collections, and, of course Shakespeare and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:985 My 15 '54 30w

Reviewed by Gerard Fay

Manchester Guardian p10 N 27 '53 170w

New Statesman & Nation 46:610 N 14 '53 300w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Je 6 '54 50w

Reviewed by G. B. Harrison

Sat R 37:32 S 25 '54 230w

"The book is packed with material, in its text, in the numerous plates from Renaissance sources, in the explanatory notes to these plates, and in the appendices: in all there is everything that the layman needs in order to understand the essentials of the subject, and it is presented in a manner which persuades the expert to look again and see afresh what familiarity has taken for granted. Mr. Hodges is to be congratulated on the scholarly way in which he handles this large mass of material." Bertram Joseph

+ Spec p616 N 20 '53 700w

"Mr. Hodges says, rightly, of the Globe Theatre that 'the problem of reconstructing it has become a fascinating exercise in the field of literary conjecture, the more especially since it is probable that the exact truth about it can never now be known.' Maybe; but some of us will be content to accept the conjectures in a book that Mr. Hodges has illustrated handsomely, and to which he has also attached 60 annotated plates."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p720 N 13 '53 750w

HODGSON, KENNETH WALTER. The deaf and their problems; a study in special education; with a pref. by Sir Richard Paget. 364p $6 Philosophical lib.

371.912 Deaf 54-2803

Examines the problems of deafness from the educational, scientific, and social viewpoints. About two-thirds of the book deals with the history of the treatment of the deaf before 1900. Index.

"While the emphasis is on British developments, due credit is given to the advances made in other countries. This is not a stodgy account, but an important and eloquent contribution to the field. Highly recommended for medium and large public libraries." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1050 Je 1 '54 110w

"Its greatest merit is that its author has assembled information about early work for the deaf which is not available to the general reader. . . . The chapters dealing with modern provision for deaf children betray a lack of study of recent development in the philosophy and practice of education." A. W. G. Ewing

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 O 20 '53 240w
Special Libraries 45:428 D '54 10w

HOETTL, WILHELM. Secret front; the story of Nazi political espionage; with an introd. by Ian Colvin [tr. by R. H. Stevens]. 327p $3.95 Praeger

943.086 Germany—Nazi movement. Secret service—Germany 54-6645

"This is an account of the German S.D. or Secret Service, its development out of the Secret Police and the Nazi Party machines; how it furthered the war effort of Hitler, absorbed its rival the Wehrmacht Military Intelligence Service, and was finally liquidated by the Allies. The author, Wilhelm Hoettl, is an Austrian intelligence officer who joined the German Secret Service in 1938, and later served under Schellenberg in Branch VI." Introd

Booklist 51:36 S 15 '54

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 1 '54 400w

Foreign Affairs 33:162 O '54 60w

"While he has no sensations to tell, his book throws additional light on the Nazi spy network. Ian Colvin has contributed a useful introduction. Recommended for public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 79:1222 Je 15 '54 130w

"Valuable as the book is, it must be read with caution. The author has a critical mind, a firm grasp of political realities, and a sovereign objectivity. But he has had to rely on his own memory, for nearly all the documents that were once at his disposal have been destroyed. His book is almost without references. His memory is exceptionally good, but he does not always distinguish information that came directly to his own knowledge and could be verified by himself from conjecture based on the unverified observation of others. By the exercise of adequate caution, the reader will be able to discard the dross and will be left with much metal of high quality." F. A. Voigt

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 18 '53 480w

Reviewed by Manfred Wolfson

New Repub 131:22 D 20 '54 1200w

"The general authenticity of the work is vouched for by its translator, a British agent who was captured early in the war and spent the rest of it in intimate and painful contact with the Gestapo. Altogether, a fascinating study."

+ New Yorker 30:75 J1 17 '54 210w

Spec p83 Ja 15 '54 220w

Time 64:98 J1 12 '54 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p777 D 4 '53 900w

HOFFMAN, DANIEL GERARD. Armada of thirty whales; with a foreword by W. H. Auden. (Yale series of younger poets) 48p $2.50 Yale univ. press

811

54-5086

A first book of poems by an instructor in English at Columbia University. Many of the poems have already been printed in periodicals and anthologies.

"Mr. Hoffman's poetry is extremely detailed in its observation of nature, and his clams and snails and pears and whales yield intricate parables by being so closely inspected. Perhaps not sentimentality so much as a diffidence about it, or fear of it, weakens so many of these poems just at the ending." Howard Nemerov

+ Atlantic 194:66 S '54 180w

Booklist 50:396 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 79:1232 Je 15 '54 80w

"Hoffman has energy, passion, and a way with words. These gifts lead him to enough successes to reward anyone's reading."

+ Nation 179:78 J1 24 '54 200w

"Hoffman has language, perception, passion and intellect. If he can learn to wear his poetic attitudes more naturally, fine things should be possible from him." John Ciardi

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by G. P. Meyer

Sat R 37:18 O 9 '54 600w

"His sensibility is disciplined and serious, but it has not yet found a style of its own."

Times [London] Lit Sup p571 S 10 '54 300w

HOGBOOM, AMY. Trains, and how to draw them. 39p il $1.75 Vanguard

741.2 Drawing—Instruction. Railroads—Trains—Juvenile literature 52-11126

"This author-artist first shows a beautiful photograph of the train to be drafted. Then with concise directions, such as; 'Begin the Electric Locomotive with a level line for the floor,' she proceeds from this sound basis, step by step. The product is an electric locomotive properly drawn, not just sketched." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 50:225 F 1 '54

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 12 '53 100w

HOGNER, DOROTHY (CHILDS) (MRS NILS HOGNER). Herbs from the garden to the table; il. by Nils Hogner. 236p $3.95 Oxford

635.7 Herbs 53-12027

"Contains a wealth of information on growing, harvesting and cooking the 24 basic culinary herbs with additional facts about other culinary, medicinal, industrial and scent herbs and some recipes. Illustrations. Appendix, bibliography, index." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:155 Ap '54 40w

"Three ninety-five is a lot of pay for such a small book, but herb minded gardeners and creative cooks will get their money's worth. Packed into these pages is a great deal of information on the cultivation and use of culinary herbs. The bibliography will be helpful to those who wish to make a study of herbs." Mary Meade

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 N 22 '53 70w

Reviewed by Lawton Mackall

Sat R 37:39 F 13 '54 30w

HOGNER, DOROTHY (CHILDS) (MRS NILS HOGNER). Wide river; pictures by Nils Hogner. 64p $2 Lippincott

54-7130

Story of what happened one spring when Wide River kept getting wider and overflowed its banks, and made trouble for the little animals along its banks. For ages six to eight.

"This is a story of a chipmunk that will delight boys and girls from six to eight. . . A good story for reading aloud." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 11 '54 100w

Kirkus 22:382 J1 1 '54 40w

"Recommended." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 79:1661 S 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p26 N 14 '54 30w

HOHLENBERG, JOHANNES. Søren Kierkegaard; tr. by T. H. Croxall. 321p il $5 Pantheon bks.

B or 92 Kierkegaard, Søren Aabye 53-8941

"In a competition for the best Danish biography this book, published in Denmark in 1940, won first prize. Now translated by T. H. Croxall, a Kierkegaard scholar, it makes available to English-speaking readers a full-length life of the father of existentialism. As such it is a welcome addition to the literature about this remarkable personality and philosopher, a literature which in recent years has grown by leaps and bounds." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

HOHLENBERG, JOHANNES—Continued

"It is very hard to review a biography of Kierkegaard without reviewing Kierkegaard himself. The author is remarkably successful in leaving his readers to form their own judgments of the man and his philosophy on the basis of the fully documented record." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:851 Jl 14 '54 1400w

Reviewed by J. V. Mullaney

Commonweal 60:323 Jl 2 '54 550w

"As an outstanding biography it will have its place in larger public libraries." A. D. Osborn

+ Library J 79:1054 Je 1 '54 130w

"This is, in the literal sense, a book about the life of the great melancholy Dane—and a good one. Johannes Hohlenberg, born and bred in Copenhagen, descended from burghers who saw Kierkegaard every day, has read all the documents, studied all the gossip, and with the skill of a fine novelist projects his scenes and characters."

+ Nation 179:56 Jl 17 '54 330w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Jl 11 '54 30w

"No one interested in Kierkegaard can afford to pass up this curious book, which, in addition to its other merits, presents a fascinating portrait of the intellectual life of nineteenth-century Copenhagen."

+ New Yorker 30:138 Je 5 '54 160w

Springf'd Republican p12D Jl 18 '54 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p397 Je 18 '54 1300w

Reviewed by Robert Phelps

Yale R n s 44:138 autumn '54 400w

HOKE, JOHN L. First book of photography; with photographs from many sources and drawings, by Russel Hamilton. 69p $1.75 Watts, F.

770 Photography—Juvenile literature 54-5990

Describes the principles of photography in simple text and clear photographs. Brief notes on the history of photography, kinds of cameras, some well-known photographers, and various uses of photography. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 51:21 S 1 '54

"A top notch publication in the activity field." Sylvia Cassell

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p34 N 14 '54 70w

+ Kirkus 22:234 Ap 1 '54 130w

"Many diagrams and photographs distinguish this new 'First Book.' More detailed than the recent Photography With Basic Cameras by William Gottlieb it can be used with fifth-eighth grade boys and girls." L. R. Markey

+ Library J 79:1665 S 15 '54 70w

"This is a fine book to give to a child from about nine up, with his first camera." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 31 '54 210w

"This book can be recommended for the novice who wants to avoid the shudders when his pictures are developed." J. D. Savercool

+ N Y Times p44 O 24 '54 130w

"This is an excellent book to give to a child along with his first camera." R. H. V.

+ Sat R 37:35 Ag 21 '54 130w

HOLBERG, MRS RUTH (LANGLAND). Rowena the sailor; il. by Grace Paull. 224p il $2.75 Doubleday

54-6786

A third story about the stout imperturbable Rowena Carey and Tomboy Row (Book Review Digest 1949, 1952). This time Rowena spends a summer learning to sail.

Booklist 50:405 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:164 Ap '54 10w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 4 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:154 Mr 1 '54 100w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:705 Ap 15 '54 40w

"Recommended for those who liked the two previous books. Not distinguished." Anne Izard

+ Library J 79:1237 Je 15 '54 110w

"The details of a sailing summer seem a bit long drawn out, but will be refreshing for those who have to take their vacations inland. Real young amateur sailors wouldn't have time for it. The end is clever: Rowena is so thrilled at being crew on the boat that wins the 'fish class' that she forgets her glamorous idol, returns to her natural self, and rushes off to her old friend Doody." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 16 '54 150w

Reviewed by S. C. Gross

N Y Times p16 Ag 1 '54 220w

Wis Lib Bul 50:217 O '54

HOLCMAN, JAN. Legacy of Chopin. 113p $2.50 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Chopin, Frédéric François 54-7902

Series of brief chapters on various aspects of Chopin as a musician and teacher of music. Contents: The pianist; The teacher; Freedom of interpretation; Transcriptions; The critic; Symbolic music; On composing; Liszt; The satirical etude; Polish music; Genius and progress.

Booklist 50:276 Mr 15 '54

"This is a pleasant book which can best be described as a long essay. If one measures importance by the amount of research and analysis contained in a volume, Mr. Holcman's modest contribution must not be called weighty; but if one enjoys a thoughtful statement showing how an intelligent young man, some of whose views will doubtless change as the years go by, reacts to the art of his greatest compatriot, then one can read The Legacy of Chopin with pleasure and interest." E. N. Waters

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:470 Je '54 450w

"What Mr. Holcman has done is to use Chopin's alleged dicta as pretexts for airing a vast number of his own views on all these subjects, views that may be divided into three classes: the platitudinous, the cryptic, and the questionable. . . There is a pretense of documentation, but not a single precise reference is given and sometimes no reference at all when one is most eager to have it." Gerald Abraham

— Sat 37:30 Ap 24 '54 320w

HOLDEN, GENEVIEVE, pseud. See Pou, G. L.

HOLDREDGE, MRS HELEN (O'DONNELL). Mammy Pleasant's partner. 300p $4.50 Putnam

B or 92 Bell, Thomas Frederick. Pleasant, Mary Ellen 54-12807

A continuation of last year's Mammy Pleasant (Book Review Digest 1953). This volume tells the story of the fabulous Thomas Frederick Bell, describing his arrival in California penniless, his rise to fortune, and his miserable end. Bibliography.

Kirkus 22:694 O 1 '54 190w

"All California collections will want the companion volume to the author's Mammy Pleasant and those libraries where Mammy circulated well will probably wish to stock this 'sequel' too." R. H. Dillon

Library J 79:2206 N 15 '54 140w

"Told in the manner of 'fictionized biographies,' the text embellished with numerous imagined conversations and with source references few and far between, it can hardly be termed an outstanding work of scholarly historical writing. But whatever its shortcomings in that regard, few who have an interest in the more lurid phases of the city's early history will fail to find it entertaining reading." Oscar Lewis

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 21 '54 800w

"Author Holdredge's solidly researched story suffers from arid stretches, but there is nothing arid about beautiful Mammy Pleasant or the life she led her partner."

Time 64:124 N 15 '54 130w

HOLLAENDER, ALEXANDER, ed. Radiation biology; with the cooperation of Austin M. Brues [and others]. 3v v1 in 2pts, High energy radiation. 626;627-1265p il $17.50 McGraw

574.8 [576.3] Radiation. Biology (53-6042)

"This is the first volume of a projected comprehensive survey of knowledge bearing on 'the biological effects of radiations, corpuscular and electromagnetic, throughout the energy spectrum from the highest available energies to the near-infrared region.' Volume II will be devoted to the ultraviolet range and volume III to visible light. The work is composed of original signed monographs, each of which is a critical digest of report and periodical literature, carefully referenced to a bibliography of sources." N Y New Tech Bks

"It is addressed to educated scientists including physicians, and the style is appropriately technical. Essential for medical and college libraries and for biological collections in public libraries used by science teachers, etc." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1405 Ag '54 130w

"As the table of contents shows, there is pronounced emphasis on genetic and cytological aspects, particularly in this first volume. Nevertheless the work will be of more interest to biophysicists, geneticists, and biologists in general than to medical practitioners."

N Y New Tech Bks 39:59 Jl '54

HOLLAND, VYVYAN BERESFORD. Son of Oscar Wilde. 237p il $3.75 Dutton

B or 92 Wilde, Oscar 54-10920

The younger son of Oscar Wilde relates the circumstances of his life, especially his youthful years, when his father's name was under such a cloud in England that his family changed their name and lived on the continent.

"Though not particularly impressive strictly as an autobiography, [the book] is fascinating for the light it sheds on Wilde's Oxford days and on his domestic life, areas which his biographers have not explored as thoroughly as they might have." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:90 D '54 750w

Booklist 51:129 N 15 '54

Reviewed by Charles Collins

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 7 '54 380w

"At once agonized and accepting, this is a necessarily unique viewpoint of the Wilde tragedy which will find its audience."

Kirkus 22:647 S 15 '54 210w

"Written without rancor—though Mr. Holland repudiates Frank Harris and his book on Wilde—this is an essential addition to Wildeana, by a witness uniquely qualified to testify." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:2100 N 1 '54 100w

Nation 179:410 N 6 '54 250w

Reviewed by Noel Annan

New Statesman & Nation 48:395 O 2 '54 2250w

"Mr. Holland writes without bitterness, but with a frankness which stirs sympathy as no anger could." DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 26 '54 700w

"His book has some value as social history. It also contains thirty-three new Oscar Wilde letters, written while Wilde was an Oxford undergraduate. Its chief importance is to provide a record of how one of the Wilde sons emerged sensibly and honorably from the shadow which darkened his youth and young manhood." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p47 O 24 '54 900w

"This strange chronicle of sustained, cold cruelty to children is not a particularly elegant piece of writing, but it is nonetheless of considerable literary value. The fantastic behavior it describes is that of very ordinary people leading what is known as normal lives. As one reads it one is made to realize how timid the novelists of the time were in their description of the life around them, and how shallow the penetration of the novel still is." Anthony West

+ New Yorker 30:211 N 20 '54 1900w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 26 '54 450w

"Certainly Wilde was more to be pitied than dishonored. The record—and pathology must play an important part in it—has not been set entirely straight even now. It is understandable why Mr. Holland would not wish to be the one to do so . . . but by giving us vivid glimpses of the aftermath of that cause célèbre of the Nineties he has done a valuable service to his father's memory." Hollis Alpert

+ Sat R 37:22 S 16 '54 1250w

"There are two interests in this book which are separate and not even of the same order. First, it tells us something new about Oscar Wilde. . . . Mr. Holland evidently intends to show us a side of his father which reveals what was humane, sincere and spontaneous in him. . . . The rest of the book, about the son, has an interest of its own." R. A. Scott-James

+ Spec p372 S 24 '54 650w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 110w

HOLME, RATHBONE, and FROST, KATH-LEEN M., eds. Modern lettering and calligraphy. 144p il $6.95 Studio

745.6 Lettering 54-2354

This sequel to Lettering of Today (1937) demonstrates uses of calligraphy and lettering in architecture, in book production and in advertising.

"Book for quick reference, prolonged study, and/or leisurely enjoyment." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:1832 O 1 '54 20w

"The best of the three sections of this book is that on architecture, sponsored by Mr. George Mansell. . . . Of the specimens in the sections on book-production and advertising, those of wood-engraved calligraphy by Mr. Reynolds Stone stand out for beauty and utility, and the brush-script of Mr. Hans Tisdall for vigour. The art of the book-jacket is really common to both sections, and it is the best-developed field for lettering at the present time."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p384 Je 11 '54 750w

HOLMES, BURTON. World is mine. 267p il $6 Murray & Gee

B or 92 53-3181

"Burton Holmes, who, by means of his 'magic lantern,' has taken hundreds of thousands traveling with him over the world, here tells the story of a happy life, spent in doing just what he wanted to do and then lecturing about it, thus earning the means of doing more of it. At 83, finishing his autobiography, 'The World Is Mine,' Holmes records his desire to write another volume on the subject, for he feels he hasn't set down half of what he has to tell." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"A fascinating book, which will hold the interest of whilom audiences and, particularly, of lovers of early Chicago." Herma Clark

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 16 '53 370w

"An entertaining volume." W. P. Tryon

+ Christian Science Monitor D 3 '53 350w

HOLMES, ERNEST SHURLIFF, and BARKER, RAYMOND CHARLES. Richer living; a proven therapy for success through right thinking. 366p $3.75 Dodd
131.32 New thought 53-9599

"Daily readings for a year, designed as a guide to the attainment of 'added power' or 'success through right thinking.' Holmes is head of the Institute of Religious Science, Los Angeles; Barker, minister of the First Church of Religious Science, New York, and formerly a minister of the Unity movement." Christian Century

Christian Century 70:1476 D 16 '53 30w

"Orthodox religious thinkers of almost any faith will find the ideas propounded here most puzzling and uninspiring. Followers of New Thought will find in them, I should judge, a wealth of inspiration." G. W. Wakefield
Library J 78:1420 S 1 '53 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ja 24 '54 100w

HOLT, FELIX. Dan'l Boone kissed me. 248p $3 Dutton 54-5830

Historical novel about young love, politics, and family problems, the scene of which is western Kentucky in 1845.

Booklist 50:289; 401 Ap 1 '54; Je 15 '54

Reviewed by V. P. Haas
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 S 12 '54 310w

Kirkus 22:212 Mr 15 '54 210w

"Recommended for all public and college libraries." J. R. Willingham

+ Library J 79:982 My 15 '54 120w

Nation 179:36 Jl 10 '54 390w

"Felix Holt's first novel, 'The Gabriel Horn,' had a freshness and an appeal which one would hardly have expected the author to recapture in a second novel. It is especially satisfying to find that 'Dan'l Boone Kissed Me' is in every respect an even more enjoyable book. Here is the same warmth and humor, but the flavor is fuller and more mellow, the characters are more sharply defined, and the author's narrative skill is more sure." Coleman Rosenberger
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 23 '54 650w

"This isn't a portentous novel or a pretentious one. It is simply the story of an ambitious man and his family and neighbors. But it has reality, and a fundamental truth, with little slanting glances at bigotry and other human sins and shortcomings." Hal Borland
+ N Y Times p23 My 23 '54 440w

"A swiftly moving, pleasant pastoral where true love and justice defeat slander, cowardice, avarice, and mob violence, but also, mostly in the language, some flavor of a way of life now dead. . . . Brief as it is, the work is so carefully plotted as not to appear episodic. . . . 'Dan'l Boone Kissed Me' can be highly recommended to those who enjoy reading matter packed with action and romance and undarkened by reality." Harriette Arnow
+ Sat R 37:16 My 22 '54 500w

Springf'd Republican p5C Jl 4 '54 50w

HOLZMAN, ROBERT S. Stormy Ben Butler. 297p il $5 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Butler, Benjamin Franklin 54-12163

A biography of this fantastic, almost legendary, Massachusetts lawyer, intimate friend of Lincoln, who was in charge of the occupation of New Orleans during the Civil war, where he was violently hated. At his death in 1893 most of the obituaries "were complimentary, even the uncomplimentary articles were tinged with awe."

Booklist 51:82 O 15 '54

Reviewed by B. P. Thomas
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 26 '54 450w

Kirkus 22:423 Jl 1 '54 210w

"Highly recommended as an example of scholarly research." Karl Brown
+ Library J 79:1397 Ag '54 110w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 179:266 S 25 '54 80w

"Searching and provocative biography. . . . Mr. Holzman's own appreciation of the man, which comes at the conclusion of his colorful study, indicates a belief that the good in Ben Butler outweighed the evil, and that at least some reasonable doubt exists that he was a soulless war profiteer, a sharpie and a conniver with a light-fingered brother. Each reader can decide for himself from the facts and surmises, and the differences of opinion are likely to be more than sectional." Hodding Carter
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 S 5 '54 900w

"Holzman provides a judicious selection of episodes, informed by choice quotations from Butler's venomous rhetoric. His own prose, though more generous, is considerably less distinguished than his renowned subject's. But he creates a striking picture of a talented and exasperating man with averted glance, compulsively at war with the world." H. F. Graff

+ N Y Times p4 D 26 '54 600w

"It is in the handling of his sources that the author most flagrantly betrays his background. Every so often he quotes what George Strong, a New York lawyer, wrote in his diary about Butler, although the statements are mere gossip and have no significance whatsoever. . . . The most curious omission of a source is the failure to use any edition of Lincoln's works. Thus, when Dr. Holzman quotes a letter from Lincoln to Butler on a very important matter, he cites a footnote in one of James Ford Rhodes's volumes! He also reproduces only a part of the letter and gives an inaccurate impression of what Lincoln said. Deficiencies like these mar seriously what could have been an important book. This is a good biography, but a better one will have to be written." T. H. Williams

+ — Sat R 37:38 S 11 '54 700w

"Dr. Holzman has covered the 'stormy' career in such detail that his book will take its place as a valuable historical document." R. S. Brooks

+ Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 550w

HOMEMAKER'S encyclopedia; ed. by Miriam B. Reichl. 12v il $3 per volume; $36 per set; special price to libraries; $2 per volume; $20 per set of 12 Homemaker's Encyclopedia, Inc., Room 322, 1 Madison av, N.Y. 10

640.3 Home economics

"The Homemaker's Encyclopedia is designed to furnish a time-and-money-saving, authoritative guide for the American homemaker. Although called a set, this encyclopedia consists of twelve handbooks, each treating a subject important to the homemaker: Housekeeping Made Simple, by Marjorie Roehl Kaschewski; The Hostess's Complete Handbook, by Josephine Shaw; Food-Buying and Meal-Planning, by Barbara Halton Hallam; Etiquette for Everybody, including The Bride's Book, by Adelaide Shaw; Decorating Handbook, edited by Miriam B. Reichl; Home Repairs Simplified, by W. I. Jr. and Eleanor Van der Poel; Needlecraft for the Home, by Eileen Franklin; Fashion Sewing on a Budget, edited by Miriam B. Reichl; Indoor and Outdoor Gardening, by Marie Read Smith; Hobbies for Everyone, edited by Miriam B. Reichl; How To Care for Children, by Dagmar Roberts; and Personal Beauty and Charm, by Nancy Daggett. Each of the authors is listed as being on the staff of the Homemaker's Encyclopedia." Subscription Bks Bul

Reviewed by C. J. and H. L. Roth
Library J 77:2173 D 15 '52 210w

"The Homemaker's Encyclopedia will probably be more useful as a work to be circulated than one to be kept in the reference department. It is recommended for the library which, to meet the popular demand for books on homemaking, may wish to supplement its existing collection by purchasing single volumes or the complete set."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 24:69 O '53 1300w

HONIG, JURGEN M., and others, eds. Van Nostrand chemist's dictionary. 761p $10 Van Nostrand

540.3 Chemistry—Dictionaries 53-10098

"This new dictionary attempts to bring together in one volume the information most often needed by the chemist. According to the Preface, the primary objective of the book is to furnish to the specialist in any one field of chemistry the information in all fields up to the level of the specialist. . . The entries are arranged alphabetically in two columns with extra spacing and capitalization separating definitions. Definitions vary in length from the very short, e.g., congeal: 'To solidify,' to the lengthy 3500 word definition and explanation: chemical nomenclature and pronunciation, covering over five pages. According to the Preface, the explanations are written in the most commonly used terms; atomic entities, for example, are discussed either in the language of quantum mechanics or the 'classical language' in accordance with the most common usage of the particular term." Subscription Bks Bul

"The explanations are given clearly and concisely, though in some instances they assume background knowledge at the university or research level. Many chemical diagrams and some tables are used to aid the explanations; there are no other illustrations. . . The Van Nostrand Chemist's Dictionary seems to fulfill its stated objective of presenting in one volume much useful information for the practicing chemist. It is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:59 O '54 600w

HONIG, PIETER. Principles of sugar technology. 767p il $15 Elsevier

664.1 Sugar 52-11015

"Review of the international literature on sugar-cane technology. The first three of the eighteen chapters present some conventional handbook material on the physical and chemical properties of sucrose and the reducing sugars. Then an up-to-date picture is given of the composition of the nonsugars of sugar-cane juice, their amounts, properties, and reactions during purification. . . The last half of the book takes up the various processes of juice clarification, with the aim of giving the operating techniques and the accumulated chemical and physical data while emphasizing a systematic discussion of theoretical principles." U S Quarterly Bk R

"The information presented has been selected critically, but in many instances opposing views are presented. In the chapters on technology, sugar making processes are described explicitly, and there are numerous diagrams of equipment setups. The indexes do not match the quality of the text. A brief sampling turned up several omissions of authors' names and the subject index has been inexpertly done."

+ — N Y New Tech Bks 39:47 My '54

"The book is of interest primarily to the technical operators and research workers in the world-wide sugar-cane industry. Those engaged in sugar beet processing, however, will also find useful information, and the chapters on the nature of the nonsugar constituents should claim the attention of those studying the composition of plant juices in general."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:272 Je '54 240w

HOOD, MARGARET PAGE. Silent women. 184p $2.75 Coward-McCann

53-11044

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:596 S 1 '54 180w

"The mystery itself is spun with some artful calculation and, wrapped in Miss Hood's lyrical prose, it's one of the season's more telling thrillers." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 7 '54 60w

"The shifting balance of evidence is beautifully handled; the fog-bound, all-but-deserted island is unforgettable; and Maine people, Maine speech and Maine food are vividly regional without condescending quaintness."

Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p40 N 7 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p26 D 5 '54 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:53 D 11 '54 20w

HOOD, WILLIAM C. and KOOPMANS, TJALLING C., eds. Studies in econometric method, by Cowles commission research staff members. 323p $5.50 Wiley

330.182 Economics, Mathematical 53-11008

"This volume is an offspring of Cowles Commission Monograph 10, Statistical Inference in Dynamic Economic Models. Roughly two-thirds of the book is given over to exposition or illustration of some of the more immediately useful results developed in the parent volume, while the remaining third is devoted to advances in the theory of economic models and their quantification." Am Econ R

"For one who has read and understood Monograph 10, this new book is important less for general results than for explicit findings on biases or concrete details of computing routines. But for the many who have found Monograph 10 too formidable for direct assault, it may well provide the means of access to the citadel." Millard Hastay

Am Econ R 44:175 Mr '54 900w

"In the latest Monograph by the Cowles Commission, economists and statisticians will find an excellent introduction to the methodological approach of this prominent research group."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:444 D '53 250w

HOOPER, JOHN. Handcraft in wood; a handbook of training in drawing and practical work for teachers, students and craftsmen. 184p il $4.95 Lippincott

684 Woodwork 53-11415

A discussion of the craft of woodworking by an experienced English lecturer and instructor in educational woodworking and historic tools. Contains much historical background, and many illustrations and diagrams. "This is a new book based upon the 'Wood' section of Handcraft in Wood and Metal by John Hooper and A. J. Shirley, of which five editions were published between 1913 and 1936." (Publisher's note)

Reviewed by William Yates

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 4 '52 30w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 78:1542 S 15 '53 20w

HOPE, CHARLES EVELYN GRAHAM. Horseback riding; il. by John Board. 120p $2 Crowell

798.2 Horsemanship 53-9406

"This little book deals primarily with riding for young folk in the British Isles. . . It is an account of the horse from the time of the cave-men's drawings—when the critter was used not for riding but for eating—and is packed with information for old hands no less than beginners in the saddle. Here is the range of human relations to the horse and the accommodations required when the four-footed animal becomes the servant of a master with only two feet." N Y Times

Kirkus 22:202 Mr 15 '54 40w

HOPE, C. E. G.—Continued
 "An excellent little manual." R. W. Henderson
 + Library J 79:459 Mr 1 '54 30w
 Reviewed by H. I. Brock
 N Y Times p35 Je 6 '54 180w

HOPE, HENRY RADFORD. Sculpture of Jacques Lipchitz [pub] in collaboration with the Walker art center, Minneapolis [and] the Cleveland museum of art. 95p 100pl $3; pa $1.75 Mus. of modern art

735.29 Lipchitz, Jacques. Sculpture 54-10937

A catalog of an exhibition of this Lithuanian artist, now a resident of the United States, which serves as a monograph. Contains a chronology catalog of the exhibition, and a chronologically arranged bibliography. There is an introduction by the head of the department of art at Indiana University.

Booklist 51:35 S 15 '54

"A durable catalog, actually a most satisfactory monograph. . . Studying this slim volume one is impressed by the drive and the power of the sculptor's imagination and execution, and one is eager to see his future work. Recommended." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:1516 S 1 '54 140w

"In view of the mass of Lipchitz's sculpture, and its diversity, compression cannot have been easy, but Mr. Hope (who has been in close and constant contact with the sculptor for several years now and quotes him directly throughout his text), is a clear guide through the years and the styles, and in the space at his disposal indicates the importance of Lipchitz's achievement." Robert Goldwater

+ Sat R 37:34 Ag 7 '54 1100w

HOPKINS, A. T., pseud. See Turngren, A.

HOPKINS, GILES ELBERNE. Wool as an apparel fiber. 110p il $1.50 Rinehart
 677.3 Wool 53-9194

A study on the technical background of wool production, manufacture, and use. Part one deals with fiber characteristics, structure, and behavior; part two discusses quality characteristics of woolen and worsted fabrics. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Hopkins, who is associated with The Wool Bureau, Inc., has as his goal the presentation of some of the technical information in a simple, easy-to-read style for the general public. No technical or chemical terms are used; the text is written for the layman; and the material is illustrated with simple line drawings." Lillian Lund

+ J Home Econ 46:277 Ap '54 220w

"Undoubtedly the book is an inspired brief for wool in comparison to the much publicized synthetic fibers; nevertheless the information included in it is authoritative and of value to consumers. For such readers as specialists in home economics, technicians in the textile industries and retail sales people there is an eight-page bibliography of the modern technical literature."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 39:32 Mr '54

HOPKINS, LEVI THOMAS. Emerging self; in school and home. 366p $4.50 Harper

370.1 Education—Philosophy 54-6437

"A slightly variant philosophy of learning in the adolescent. Breaking away from Dewey and Kilpatrick, Hopkins would base teaching on the biological growth and demands of the young, a process he says would help the young to discover, release, and develop their potential capacities. Not radical in tone or scope, this book is excellent for teachers and parents." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 51:4 S 1 '54

"Perhaps of some possible use as a textbook, but too technical for small public library purchase, and too unoriginal for specialized collections." E. M. Oboler

Library J 79:1313 Jl '54 140w

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:172 Jl '54

HORAN, JAMES DAVID. Confederate agent; a discovery in history. 326p il $5 Crown

973.7 Hines, Thomas Henry. Confederate states of America 54-6637

This is chiefly a biography of Thomas Hines, a young captain attached to Morgan's Raiders and a secret agent for the Confederacy, working to foment rebellion in the middle western states. The work is based on documents long kept secret in the War Department files.

Reviewed by Ollinger Crenshaw

Am Hist R 60:194 O '54 320w

Booklist 50:355 My 15 '54

"As a diverting change from the strategy of Lee and the political genius of Lincoln, Confederate Agent can be heartily recommended." Richard Walsh

+ Cath World 179:397 Ag '54 400w

Reviewed by B. P. Thomas

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 25 '54 380w

"Confederate Agent is an exciting book if one suspends one's belief in its final evaluations." Francis Russell

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 15 '54 180w

"As exciting as the best spy fiction."

+ Kirkus 22:172 Mr 1 '54 270w

"The reconstruction of the details by Mr. Horan is a fine piece of reporting. . . Recommended for American history collections." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:544 Mr 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by M. D. Read

Library J 79:1241 Je 15 '54 60w

"Mr. Horan has brought out a useful and interesting book on the whole conspiracy. He has examined much unpublished material, and if there are still various unanswered questions about the operation, it is probable that they never will be answered. . . The first part of the book is marred by a tendency to overwrite and over-emphasize, and the whole account is not quite the hitherto-untold-tale that the author sometimes seems to imply. All in all, however, here is a solid, readable job, which sheds a different sort of light on the final year of the Confederacy's struggle for existence." Bruce Catton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 9 '54 1000w

"Mr. Horan, author of a number of previous books in the field of American history, has done a tremendous job of assembling the full tale for the first time from documents previously ignored or held under official seal. What is better yet, he has set down the result of his researches in a manner at once vivid and restrained, without overemphasis, but preserving the essential dramatic value of what he has to tell." Fletcher Pratt

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 25 '54 700w

"To do the job Mr. Horan had to unearth documents and letters, some never before seen by investigators, much less published. What they reveal is as startling as any detective novel you could name." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 18 '54 1400w

"Every one likes a spy story. James D. Horan's 'Confederate Agent' is a good one, the more so since it is non-fiction." F. H. Harrington

+ Sat R 37:23 Je 19 '54 700w

Time 63:116 Ap 26 '54 500w

HORAN, JAMES DAVID, and SANN, PAUL. Pictorial history of the wild West; a true account of the bad men, desperadoes, rustlers and outlaws of the old West—and the men who fought them to establish law and order. 254p $5.95 Crown

978 Crime and criminals—West. History 54-11180

"The 500 carefully selected illustrations—photographs, documents, handbills, paintings, contemporary records—justify this being called a 'pictorial history'. But there is also a substantial amount of text, close to four hundred pages. Here the major factors behind the lurid history of American outlawry (for it is that rather than a history of the Wild West) are analyzed." Kirkus

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 12 '54
340w

"A source book for the addicts who have run out of figures of America's days of violence."

Kirkus 22:748 N 1 '54 210w

"For the most part this excellent collection of pictures with a breezy though generally adequate text, contains little that is new, but it is stirring stuff nevertheless, an excellent book for all old frustrated gunfighters and Western fans to curl up with on a cold winter's night. The Messrs. Horan and Sann have proved themselves diligent and dedicated, and have done the best they could in a field that is highly controversial." Stanley Walker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 19 '54 450w

"Unfortunately the book has a debunking tone, which has a certain popular appeal, since it is pleasant for people who have never done much of anything themselves to whittle down figures of history. . . Allan Pinkerton and his operatives are the real heroes of this book, if there are any heroes. They apparently could do no wrong, and spoke nothing but the truth (it says here)." P. I. Wellman

N Y Times p16 N 28 '54 650w

New Yorker 30:242 D 4 '54 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 30 '54
600w

Reviewed by John Haverstick
Sat R 37:22 D 4 '54 20w
Time 64:130 D 6 '54 20w

HORGAN, PAUL. Great River: the Rio Grande in North American history. 2v 1020p maps $10 Rinehart

976.4 Rio Grande river and valley

54-9867

"This is not only the history of ■ river but of one entire region encompassed by New Mexico and Texas from ancient to modern times." (Library J) Contents: v 1, Indians and Spain; v2, Mexico and the United States. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 194:93 D '54 70w
Booklist 51:149 D 1 '54

Reviewed by Stanley Vestal
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 O 17 '54
650w

"Mr. Horgan relishes every detail of his subject, but though this often enables him to sublimate the prosaic, it never forces him to drop the demands of objectivity. . . All of the peoples, as well as their country and their river, are recreated with poetry and integrity in the wide-screen history of the Rio Grande." E. W. Foell

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 14 '54
1250w

+ Kirkus 22:522 Ag 1 '54 400w

"The author, with many novels and histories of the Southwest to his credit, has released ■ monument to diligent, painstaking research that is as interesting as it is definitive. The at times almost poetic prose is a joy to read. Recommended for all college, university and large public libraries for circulating and reference collections." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:1498 S 1 '54 150w

"'Great River' is logically and interestingly organized. The writing is extraordinarily well sustained. Not only feeling for the subject and poetic gift but a real craftsman's technique, control and use of restraint are necessary to hold so high ■ level in a narrative of this length. There is a great deal to be explained, yet the explanations do not lag. Always the story moves." Oliver La Farge

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 O 10 '54
950w

"Some defects of the book are not as urbane as Mr. Horgan's irony. The essay on cowboys is more belletristic than realistic. For some readers the long treatment of American pioneers will seem in places redundant and labored, in contrast to the subtle understanding of the reposeful Pueblos. . . But a work that a fine writer, a gentleman of noble mind, and a painstaking scholar has taken thirteen years to write is not to be finally considered for flaws but for the bounty of life and beauty that it holds." J. F. Dobie

+ N Y Times p1 O 10 '54 1400w

"With the greatest reluctance, it must be argued that the Horgan book, although of high merit in many respects, need not be viewed with either awe or unqualified approbation. In the first place, there is the style. Some people will like it; others, with considerable evidence on their side, are bound to be confused and even embarrassed by its occasional lofty pretentiousness." Stanley Walker

+ New Yorker 30:229 D 4 '54 2000w

"As fine a book of its kind as you'll have read anywhere." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 3 '54
260w

"There is no doubt that this book is ■ labor of love—as a good book must always be. Horgan tells us that it has been in the making since he came to Albuquerque at the age of two. I for one understand what he means. I doubt that anyone can really know an arid land who has not lived long in it, lived there when young to absorb its spirit before he can convey its charm and mystery. I would not say in public that he has turned out the most comprehensive and adequate history of an American river, but I will say that his is as good as the best." W. P. Webb

+ Sat R 37:12 S 16 '54 900w

"Great River is not only ■ fine job of historical research. It fuses the imagination of ■ good novelist (The Fault of Angels) with ■ remarkable sense of a region's character."

+ Time 64:102 N 1 '54 390w

HORIZON (periodical). Golden Horizon; edited together with an introduction by Cyril Connolly. 596p $5.50 British bk. centre

820.8 English literature—Collections

[54-2785]

An anthology selected from the English magazine Horizon, containing what Cyril Connolly considers to be the essence of his magazine.

"Its most valuable section is perhaps that which records, in contemporary articles, the progress of the war. The reading of these evokes uncomfortable emotions nowadays. They show only too clearly that even fighting for the right does not exempt one from brutality, vulgarity, and barbarism." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 18 '54
220w

Reviewed by P. J. Henniker-Heaton
Christian Science Monitor p11 D 16 '54
600w

"A tart, tingling anthology, more humanist than avant-garde. . . Recommended to the literary minded—young and old; public and university libraries." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1506 S 1 '54 90w

"Everybody knows or else should know of the service done to literature by 'Horizon' and its editors during the lean years between 1939 and 1950. Cyril Connolly's anthology selected from the magazine is welcome in that it makes it possible to get a clearer idea of what that service was." Anthony Hartley

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 8 '54 370w

Reviewed by Jacob Korg
Nation 179:217 S 11 '54 20w

"A splendid affair." Arthur Pumphrey
+ New Statesman & Nation 47:195 F 13
'54 2000w

HORIZON (periodical)—Continued

"Many cisatlantic members of Mr. Connolly's audience have had more opportunity to hear about than to read his monthly Horizon. Thus they will be grateful for this collection from its pages even though it is, alas, not only anthology but epitaph. For eleven years Horizon dwelled lively among the arts. In 1950 it died after an unconventional career of an all too orthodox disease—lack of funds. Now Mr. Connolly has resurrected in the permanence of book form six hundred of Horizon's ten thousand pages." Frederic Morton

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 8 '54 1050w

"There are excellent stories, poems, and essays by the young and unknown as well as by the old and well-known—few of them available elsewhere. Inevitably there are variations in quality but the general level is high. Most of the writers say something illuminating entertainingly; very few write ponderously or superciliously." H. C. Webster

+ Sat R 37:15 Ag 14 '54 1250w

"This delightful book deserves to be taken seriously. But it goes without saying that it is also the finest bedside anthology of our time, an unrivalled jackdaw's nest of bits and pieces." John Wain

+ Spec p75 Ja 15 '54 1650w

Time 64:100 Ag 16 '54 900w

"Everyone, of course, would make a slightly different choice, but in general few could disagree with the bulk of Mr. Connolly's inclusions. As a record of his editorial interest The Golden Horizon is fair and substantial, and as a bedside book for the civilized man it will have few equals. Nevertheless, it must be seen in relation to those adjacent panels, adorned by the graffiti of Mr. Connolly as parodist, literary critic, gourmet and traveller, which together go to make up the complete man."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p8 Ja 1 '54 3900w

HOROWITZ, ISRAEL ALBERT, and REINFELD, FRED. Chess traps, pitfalls, and swindles. 243p il $3.50 Simon & Schuster

794.1 Chess 54-9790

"Presented with gusto by experts for expert and middle-weight players. The point of the book is how to set, see through and parry traps of various natures. There are the swindles, when a strictly losing player trips up his opponent; the pitfalls when the aggressor gives his opponent a chance to go wrong; there are sly and stagey gimmicks that keep players guessing. These are illustrated with games in which masters figured, sometimes falling for the bait, sometimes playing it themselves." Kirkus

Booklist 51:127 N 15 '54

"An entrancing and hitherto unworked theme for a chess book."

+ Kirkus 22:359 Je 1 '54 90w

"Highly recommended to chess players, new and experienced, as a most interesting and stimulating collection of clever chess games, and end games, with most illuminating comment." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1521 S 1 '54 20w

"One word of admiration right off the bat is for the exceptional fine large print and clear-cut diagrams in this book, and there are many of them. . . . We recommend this new chess book to all chess fans." G. K.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 15 '54 330w

HORSTMANN, MRS LALI (VON SCHWABACH). We chose to stay; with an introd. by Harold Nicolson [Eng title: Nothing for tears]. 206p $3 Houghton

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, German 54-7600

"With moving restraint, the widow of a retired, anti-Nazi diplomat and landowner recalls the relentless sweep of the Russian occupation of Berlin, the bombing of their estate and her husband's disappearance and death in a concentration camp." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:129 Mr '54 30w

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 23 '54 360w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 1 '54 550w

Foreign Affairs 32:512 Ap '54 20w

"It is Lali Horstmann's own courage and outlook and her ability to convey a sense of immediacy to the reader which makes the book impressive and its message important." R. B. Robertson

+ Library J 79:979 My 15 '54 120w

"Natural, personal narrative [which] reveals a spirit of integrity which can rise beyond self-pity or hatred." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 45:708 Je 13 '53 2450w

Reviewed by Virgilia Peterson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 13 '54 420w

"Mrs. Horstmann's account should be read by everyone: its Goyaesque scenes illuminate the ravished face of Central Europe in our century." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p6 My 23 '54 700w

"There is remembered fear in the book, and remembered pain and terror, but not one sigh of self-pity. In a foreword, Harold Nicolson, an old friend from the diplomatic days, describes Lali Horstmann in a way she never permits herself to adopt, and in doing so points up the rare quality of this moving and encouraging book."

+ New Yorker 30:134 My 22 '54 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 7 '54 500w

"Unselfconsciously Frau Horstmann reveals the depths of her own humanity and also her brilliance as a literary portraitist in her thumbnail sketches of her fellow-sufferers who could do so little for each other and yet did so much by a chance word or friendly gesture. . . . One lays down this story of human suffering illumined by a great but tragic love wondering was it defeat—or victory?"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p344 My 29 '53 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 50:71 Mr '54

HORWICH, MRS FRANCES (RAPPAPORT), and WERRENATH, REINALD. Have fun with your children. 187p il $2.95 Prentice-Hall

649.1 Children—Management 54-5676

"Miss Frances of the well-known TV Ding Dong School has collaborated with the producer of her program on a book designed to help parents burdened with the responsibilities of raising a family, have fun along the way. There are suggestions on family teamwork, the art of sharing, and relationships with friends and relatives, as well as many ideas on play, observance of special occasions and holidays, anticipating first experiences, learning to take responsibility, and enjoyment of literature, music, and other arts in the family circle." Booklist

Booklist 51:1; 77 S 1 '54; O 15 '54

"Although we have many books for parents that are superior to this one, and it may seem that what this book offers has been served up to us many times before, it is possible that, because of the enormous following 'Miss Frances' has, the book may reach an audience never before tapped by the publishers of books for parents." M. E. Keister

J Home Econ 46:748 D '54 250w

"Particularly for parents of pre-school youngsters, a plain and practical approach, along with Miss Frances' motherly assurance."

+ Kirkus 22:510 Ag 1 '54 110w

"Enthusiastic devotees of Spock and Gesell will probably not regard this book as an important new contribution to the overflooded field, but will undoubtedly benefit from its semihumorous approach and friendly feeling for members of every generation." Louis Barron

Library J 79:1585 S 15 '54 140w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 14 '54 50w
Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 40w

HOSKINS, HALFORD LANCASTER. Middle East; problem area in world politics. 311p maps $4.75 Macmillan (N Y)

956 East (Near East) 54-12387

"[This book considers] the contemporary Middle East and its significance for the western democracies. Against the background of known Soviet objectives in this area, the author examines the problems and difficulties to which it is prey. He feels that from the point of view of the West, its dangers lie not only in the threat of open Soviet aggression, but also in the political unpredictableness of its countries, their growing and militant nationalism, and their very real sources of friction." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:79 O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:58 D '54 30w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 71:1434 N 24 '54 280w
Kirkus 22:422 J1 1 '54 210w

"This is not an outline, like so many other current books on Near East, but a detailed and careful study of the present day issues in the light of their historical development. Recommended for all large libraries, and for any library needing an authoritative picture of the Near East." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 79:1829 O 1 54 140w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 S 19 '54 60w

"Our knowledge of the Middle East has grown substantially since a House of Commons inquiry in 1832 found it necessary, for adequate data about the Euphrates, to dig all the way back to Herodotus and chronicles of Roman legionary marches toward the Persian Gulf. But our need for full understanding today—in view of the free world's anxious involvements in the area and our fumbling diplomacy there—has grown even more. Although no single book can close the desperate gap, this latest study by one of our best Middle Eastern hands will take the reader a considerable distance." Hal Lehrman

+ N Y Times p3 S 19 '54 950w

San Francisco Chronicle p27 O 24 '54 160w

"Mr. Halford is an outstanding student of the Middle East and his book is perhaps the clearest and most complete work on the subject published to date." Donald Derby

+ Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 480w

HOSS, MRS MAY DIKEMAN. The pike. 303p $3.50 Appleton

54-10705

Story of a North Carolina family, the Clabos. Hugh, the youngest, is twenty-five. He has been around the world more than once in the Merchant marine, but is not ready to settle down. The story is of some of the troubles the Clabos get into over the red-headed Northerner, Vivian.

"A regional story of truths and trivialities, of feisty folks and tacky folks and mountain men and women, this has an echoing ring of local talk and living, that combines something of Arnow and Caldwell."

Kirkus 22:449 J1 15 '54 210w

"A first novel which reveals a novelist of promise and a teller of good stories. For the large fiction collection." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:1893 O 15 '54 90w

"The Pike is neither profound or important. As a comedy of outlandish manners, it is not nearly so amusing as, say, 'Tobacco Road' or 'Taps for Private Tussey.' But it is a first novel of some originality." C. L. Snyder

N Y Times p41 N 28 '54 320w

"In spite of its brevity, multiplicity of events, and complexity of situations, 'The Pike' drags at times, particularly in the long, tedious, and never quite credible conversations between Hugh and his many loves." Harriette Arnow

Sat R 37:32 Ag 28 '54 320w

HOSTOVSKY, EGON. Midnight patient; tr. from the Czech by Philip H. Smith, jr. 278p $3 Appleton

54-8694

"The plot centers on a Czech psychoanalyst in New York, who is approached by a mysterious Colonel working for the U.S. Psychological Warfare Institute, and is offered a large sum to restore the shattered nerves of a super-duper secret agent known as Alfons, so that Alfons may complete the execution of a great idea as devastating to Russia as an atomic onslaught. The doctor is warned that both Soviet agents and the American agents trailing them will show up as patients, and that he won't know one from the other or from the normal run of neurotics. This forecast is fulfilled, with the added complication that everybody, including the Colonel, is double-crossing everybody else." Atlantic

"An original and highly intriguing psychological thriller." C. J. Rojo

+ Atlantic 194:83 S '54 130w

"An excellent plot and a serious issue: these assets are impressive. They should add up. But The Midnight Patient is not quite successful either as thriller or as a serious political novel. So I think. However, in fairness to the author and his potential readers I should add that on the dust jacket of the book may be found four other opinions, all contrary to mine, but as one in setting a very high estimate on what Mr. Hostovsky has done." P. F. Quinn

+ — Commonweal 60:517 Ag 27 '54 800w

"A psychological suspense story which pursues its action, and argument, on an intellectual terrain, this is effective and suggestive."

+ Kirkus 22:405 J1 1 '54 210w

"All this combines the machinery of a novel of ideas with the high-speed motor of a thriller. Mr. Hostovsky is very good at fusing both literary genre in the case of Dr. Malik's patients: in order to hide their identity as spies they are quite truthful about their real-life maladjustments. This seems to be a sharp commentary on how we expose every recess of the soul to the dogma that enlists us. Yet on the whole, the author's latest effort does not have the impact of 'Missing.'" Frederic Morton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ag 29 '54 450w

"Complex novel of intrigue and, despite its Manhattan setting, a curiously Middle-European one, suggesting such writers as Perutz or Capek or even at times Kafka. Here are the intricacies of double and triple agents for the U. S., the U. S. S. R. and a strikingly conceived third force; and here is also a subtle novel on the sickness of a world in which such intricacies flourish and seem almost normal. Thriller and serious novel interfere with as often as they reinforce each other; I'm not sure the book will wholly satisfy devotees of either form, but it's an oddly fascinating work." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p20 Ag 29 '54 130w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

— Sat R 37:23 S 4 '54 750w

Time 64:90 S 6 '54 150w

HOTCHKISS, ALLEN G., and WEBBER, HARLAN M. Protective atmospheres. 341p il $7 Wiley

669.8 Gases. Factories

53-8521

"In a considerable number of metallurgical processes atmospheric air if present will produce undesirable effects such as oxidation or scaling. To avoid these effects, methods have been worked out for excluding the atmosphere and surrounding the metal with an atmosphere composed of some other gas or gases. This book deals with these 'atmospheres' and the techniques of their use. Its purpose is to inform technicians in the metallurgical industries, hence the presentation, though technical, is largely descriptive." Library J

HOTCHKISS, A. G.—Continued

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 78:2037 N 15 '53 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:84 N '53

"The volume will appeal to the industrial engineer and the plant metallurgist. It contains much useful information on the latest engineering practice on protective atmospheres used in a wide variety of metallurgical industries."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:130 Mr '54 160w

HOTSON, JOHN LESLIE. First night of Twelfth night. 256p il $4.50 Macmillan (N Y)

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Twelfth night. Shakespeare, William—Stage history

54-14837

"In this book, Dr. Leslie Hotson, one of the world's foremost literary detectives, sets out to reconstruct the setting and atmosphere of the first performance of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night. He begins his investigation with the recognized probability that Twelfth Night with its 'Duke Orsino' in the cast, was in fact a command performance at Whitehall, ordered by Queen Elizabeth to entertain her guest, the Duke, Don Virginio Orsino, on her magnificent feast of the Epiphany, 1600-1. In dispelling the obscurity which has surrounded the initial production of Twelfth Night, Dr. Hotson has uncovered startling contemporary evidence." (Publisher's note) Index of interpretations.

"Exciting and lively book, which has the zest and thrill of a detective story." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 D 9 '54 400w

"Mr. Hotson's common sense prevents his making preposterous conjectures, but his inclination to test his hypotheses is less ardent than his zeal to push farther on. The result is a book far more exciting to read than scholars' books generally are; and Mr. Hotson is indubitably a very fine scholar." H. B. Charlton

+ Manchester Guardian p6 S 24 '54 1050w

"Unfortunately, in addressing himself to vindicate his hypothesis, Dr. Hotson (although he stoutly refuses to admit it) has for once had less luck than his brilliant powers and matchless assiduity deserve. The Lord Chamberlain's notes for the ordering of the evening are elaborate, but they do not name the play, or describe it, or even state that it was the Lord Chamberlain's own company that was preferred to come before the Queen. . . Dr. Hotson's contention is fascinating. But it is not really very strong, and of the resourceful and endlessly learned subsidiary arguments at least some must appear strained." J. I. M. Stewart

New Statesman & Nation 48:510 O 23 '54 800w

"The experts will have a merry time testing the strength of large and small limbs out on which Hotson has climbed, some of which are pretty sure to be sawed off or at least pruned radically. But everyone who likes a racily told story about V. I. P.'s should read 'The First Night of Twelfth Night.'" J. G. McManaway

+ N Y Times p4 D 12 '54 600w

"It is a brilliant account that Dr. Hotson gives us, and well-informed readers will be as much impressed by the knowledge held in reserve as by the knowledge displayed. An admirable example of his gift of using far-flung sources to create a vivid picture of the past is his character of Sir Jerome Bowes, a giant in stature and in courage, who as the Queen's Envoy had dared Ivan the Terrible in the Kremlin and on this day was suitably employed in escorting the Russian Ambassador from and to his lodging near Billingsgate. If this book had no other claim to our attention it would deserve it merely as the best and most readable account of a day spent at the Court of the great Queen. . . To this reviewer Dr. Hotson seems much more certain of the way or ways of producing plays at Court and at the Globe than the evidence warrants. But when all has been said this will remain one of the most exciting books on Shakespeare's environment yet published, and it should please a 'great Variety of Readers.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p607 S 24 '54 1150w

HOUDINI, HARRY. On magic; comp. and ed. by Walter B. Gibson and Morris N. Young. 280p il $2.95 Dover

793.8 Magic

53-13518

Explains in Houdini's own words some of his spectacular magic, plus some more simple tricks which could be performed by amateurs. Bibliography.

"Biographical and critical forewords make this volume devoted to Houdini and his famous 'magic' tricks fascinating. . . Highly recommended for magic and theatre collections regardless of size." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1407 Ag '54 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 24 '54 80w

HOUGH, HENRY BEETLE. See Alcoholic to his sons

HOUGRON, JEAN. Blaze of the sun; tr. from the French by Mervyn Savill. 278p $3.75 Farrar, Straus

54-9370

"An exotic love-story, set partly in a Vietnamese prison camp and partly in Saigon. The early chapters describe the ambush of a French convoy, and later ones analyse in some detail the love of a captured Frenchman for a colleague's Annamite wife." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 5 '54 400w

— Kirkus 22:368 Je 15 '54 200w

"Local color is well handled and author shows knowledge of life in Indo-China, both French and native. Not too well written, however, and not of great importance. Recommended only for very large collections." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 79:1512 S 1 '54 60w

"The narrative has strong excitement and the scenic effects are admirably done, but the writing seems to me to lack the obsession, the controlling myth, or whatever it is that turns a document or a personal adventure into a novel." Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 7 '54 80w

Reviewed by Stanley Cooperman

Nation 179:194 S 4 '54 180w

"Despite her conversion to Western ways, My-Diem remained a 'girl of Asia.' The author has brought her vividly alive in these pages. So vividly, in fact, that she makes his rather melodramatic story-line seem completely alive as well." M. J. Tweedy

+ N Y Times p11 S 5 '54 320w

Reviewed by Kingsley Amis

Spec p445 Ap 9 '54 300w

Time 64:120 S 13 '54 90w

"M. Hougron tells a violent, sensual tale, in colourful prose and even more colourful surroundings."

Times [London] Lit Sup p245 Ap 16 '54 70w

HOUSEHOLDER, ALSTON SCOTT. Principles of numerical analysis. 274p $6 McGraw

510.83 Numerical calculations 53-6043

"Numerical analysis has taken on new importance in recent years because of the increased use of computing machines—both desk and electronic—in the analysis of advanced engineering problems. This book is an introduction from the standpoint of numerical analysis to such mathematical concepts and techniques as matrices and linear equations, interpolation, numerical integration, and the Monte Carlo method. As indicated in the title, it covers basic principles rather than the actual techniques of computation." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:778 Ap 15 '54 80w

"Assuming a familiarity with the calculus and with the elements of probability theory, the volume is intended for senior-graduate courses and for mathematicians and directors of computing groups. There is no doubt that it will be valuable to competent numerical analysts who are interested in specialized topics, but its suitability as a text can be questioned. The treatment is too exclusively theoretical; only in the initial chapter and in the final collection of examples is there any

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:262 Je '54 240w

HOUSTON, SAMUEL. Autobiography; edited by Donald Day and Harry Herbert Ullom. 298p il $5 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Texas—History—Sources 54-10051

"The book covers the life of Houston, beginning with his own story of his birth in Virginia in 1793, and ending with a short account of his death in 1863. The authors have wisely interpolated brief transitions printed in italics between papers written by Houston."

Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by Stanley Vestal

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 7 '54 220w

Reviewed by L. M. Bradshaw

Library J 79:2209 N 15 '54 100w

"An epic life, indeed. One can only wish that it had emerged with greater sharpness and clarity than it does in the present work." Marquis James

N Y Times p5 D 26 '54 550w

"What comes from these letters is a clean picture of a lucid mind deeply concerned with basic issues and basic principles affecting the rights of the individual under God, Country and Home and the responsibilities of the individual to that same Trinity." W. H. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 31 '54 430w

HOWARD, ELIZABETH. Star to follow. 222p $2.75 Morrow

54-5078

Novel for junior high school age. The time is 1875, and the three Stacey girls had been left with an aunt in Detroit to be "finished" because their father was commander of a frontier army post. Julia Stacey's stylish wedding begins the book. The rest of the story follows the two younger sisters to Arizona, where one of them marries "into the army," but the third sister returns to "the states" to learn to become a doctor.

"This is a well written story with strong appeal for older girls who like an unusual setting and subject and a heroine of independence and character." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 My 16 '54 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

Horn Bk 30:185 Je '54 110w

Kirkus 22:35 Ja 15 '54 130w

"Recommended for junior high age." C. A. Hulton

+ Library J 79:790 Ap 15 '54 70w

"The book is a charming first love story, without the emotional grip of some current books, but very good reading for girls of about twelve to fourteen." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p10 Ap 4 '54 180w

"A fast-reading, enjoyable novel. It is unfortunate that the author gives us so little of the flavor of the time. More period atmosphere—as in the vivid description of Ellen and Nettie's journey to Arizona—might make this a book of more than passing interest." Alberta Eiseman

+ — N Y Times p28 My 9 '54 130w

Sat R 37:66 My 15 '54 280w

HOWARD, TONI (MRS JAMES O'DONNELL). Blood like new wine. 274p $3 Appleton

54-6212

"Jacques Dongeres, schooled to violence as a Resistance hero, is anything but domesticated on his return home, and finally murders his wife. A partial justification exists in Jania, a Polish girl, whom he had married (bigamously) during the war and who is back in France, with him, singing in a small night club. There she is seen by Dan Morrow, an American travelling abroad, with the wife he has never loved, and drinking himself away from the guilt of his brother's death in the Pacific. Impressionable, susceptible, Dan sees a chance to redeem himself, in his attempt to save Jacques, but he succeeds only in destroying himself." Kirkus

Kirkus 22:206 Mr 15 '54 160w

"Into her deeply moving story, written with a fine mastery of pace and tension, Miss Howard weaves the character of an American alcoholic, obsessed with a sense of personal defeat, who in his desire to befriend the Polish girl and attain stature as a man, tragically and ironically, becomes the instrument of justice." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 11 '54 220w

"The ordeal of Jacques Dongères is not merely the crisis of this uneven but finally compelling novel, it is the heart of it. Paris, 'everybody's dream home-town' with all its sounds and smells, is in these pages, but aside from Jacques, the other characters are shadows most of the time. . . Yet the fanatical Jacques is someone else again. He is the kingfish in Toni Howard's book, and the story leaps and plunges and seethes whenever he is on the end of her line." Roger Pippett

+ — N Y Times p14 Ag 1 '54 260w

HOWARTH, DAVID ARMINE. Thieves' hole. 252p $3 Rinehart

54-5396

Mystery story.

Booklist 50:229; 240 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54

"There is more than a touch of Buchan in this yarn of a brave and resourceful man on the trail of a mystery." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 30:260 Ag '54 100w

"More resolute than adroit, this is action adventure which is brisk and bluff."

+ — Kirkus 22:14 Ja 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by G. P. Slocum

Library J 79:2503 D 15 '54 30w

"Here, in a season thick with thrillers (many of them capable of sustaining interest), is the thriller against which to measure the others. It's a tight, intense venture with a fairly constricted and rugged setting in the north of Scotland and, a good deal of it, well underground in the frightening cave of the title." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 28 '54 220w

"David Howarth's Thieves' Hole has that wonderful quality of the best British thrillers of conveying the splendor of physical adventure—in this case, climbing, cave exploring and boating." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p27 Ap 11 '54 130w

"Told in the detailed, easy style of the best Buchan stories, with some legitimate surprises as to guilt, it's all delightful. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 25 '54 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat ■ 37:32 My 15 '54 30w

HOWARTH, THOMAS. Charles Rennie Mackintosh and the modern movement. 329p il $10 Wittenborn

B or 92 Mackintosh, Charles Rennie 53-13143

"Superbly illustrated monograph. . . Usually pigeonholed in the textbooks as a contemporary of the promoters of the Art Nouveau and the Vienna Secession on the Continent, Mackintosh designed the Glasgow School of Art as early as 1896. . . One of the most playful achievements of the anti-traditionalists, the Glasgow School was shortly followed by the series of fanciful tearooms Mackintosh fashioned for Catherine Cranston, whose aim was to woo the workers in the Glasgow shipyards away from their usual relaxation—the public houses. Born in 1868, a year earlier than Wright, Mackintosh died in London in 1928." Commonweal

"That this gallant and extremely talented son of a Glasgow police superintendent was overlooked in London, is the tragedy which Thomas Howarth describes with both compassion and discretion in this study." Wayne Andrews

+ Commonweal 59:337 Ja 1 '54 260w

"This account of him shows a sane and balanced judgment. A great deal of research has evidently gone into this book, and interesting new works have been discovered, such as the furnishings in Holy Trinity Church, Bridge of Allan. It is gratifying that Glasgow is at last taking serious steps to preserve what remains of the work of her remarkable son, that the last of Miss Cranston's tearooms is to be preserved, and that a Mackintosh museum has been formed at the Glasgow School of Art." Stephen Bone

+ Manchester Guardian p9 N 28 '52 310w

"A compendious and admirably careful monograph." John Summerson

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:784 D 27 '52 750w

"Mr. Howarth tellingly interprets the moods and atmospheres with which this poetic architect imbued each of his interiors. The photographs alone, excellent as they are, cannot convey Mackintosh's range of feeling. . . The scope of this book transcends the man Mackintosh. With his two-chapter survey of the European development, his cross-references to recent decades, his fine chronological table and bibliography, Mr. Howarth gives us a valuable tool for appreciating the modern movement as a whole." Martin James

+ Sat R 37:17 F 20 '54 1050w

Spec p882 D 26 '52 350w

"In producing this important work the author is to be congratulated upon his extensive researches into hitherto unexplored regions of a somewhat elusive subject. He has gathered information from many scattered sources and woven them into comprehensible form. . . The book is well produced, and the excellent illustrations are logically arranged."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p200 Mr 27 '53 900w

HOWE, IRVING, and GREENBERG, ELIEZER, eds. Treasury of Yiddish stories; with drawings by Ben Shahn. 630p $5.95 Viking

Short stories—Collections 54-9599

Over fifty stories by Yiddish writers, in translation. Among the contributors are Mendeley, Sholom Aleichem, Peretz, Sholem Asch, I. J. Singer, Lamed Shapiro, and many others. An introductory essay by the editors contains an account of the rise and decline of the Yiddish language and literature.

Booklist 51:151 D 1 '54

"Marked by its serious intent and fine editing. . . At once a tribute and critique and treasury, this has a literary, commemorative and reference value."

+ Kirkus 22:526 Ag 1 '54 210w

"The editors' introduction is an authoritative and perspective account of the rise and inevitable decline of the Yiddish language and literature. To round it out, one should read

Judd L. Teller's article in the July 1954 Commentary, 'Yiddish Literateurs and American Jews.' An essential item for all public and circulating libraries." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1890 O 15 '54 100w

"Irving Howe, a relative newcomer to the field of Yiddish, is well known for his critical work in American English literature. Mr. Greenberg is an American Yiddish poet and critic of recognized standing. Their informative and original seventy-page introduction is one of the most intelligent essays on Yiddish belles-lettres available in English. . . The high quality of the translations makes for delightful reading." Uriel Weinreich

+ N Y Times p22 N 28 '54 380w

New Yorker 30:186 N 6 '54 120w

HOWE, QUINCY, and SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR MEIER, 1917- , eds. Guide to politics, 1954; with an introd. by Joseph S. Clark, jr. 230p il $2.50 Dial press

973.92 U.S.—Politics and government—1953-. Elections—U.S. 54-11042

"Prepared under the auspices of Americans for Democratic Action in the interest of informed and effective participation by independent voters in public affairs." (Subtitle) Partial contents: Individual freedom and national security, by A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.; Farm surplus and farm income, by H. H. Humphrey; Public resources and private profit, by Wayne Morse; Labor, management and government, by J. E. Murray; The U.S. and the UN, by Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt; The U.S. and her allies, by W. A. Harriman; American politics: how they work and how you can work in them, by Gus Tyler; Forecasting the 1954 Congressional elections, by L. H. Bean; The political scoreboard: voting records and election statistics.

Booklist 51:79 O 15 '54

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 26 '54 430w

"A sketchy, highly partisan work, which, as a 'tract for the times,' hardly seems worth library purchase, unless balanced by similar Republican National Committee publications." E. M. Oboler

Library J 79:1830 O 1 '54 140w

"Here is no pot boiler—no conventional 'campaign document' but a temperate, well reasoned, factual appeal to the independent voter. It is merciless and persistent in search for weak spots in the Republican record. Remarkable is the avoidance of irritating gibes—many independents are heirs of the Republican tradition. It must be comforting for these contributors after nearly a quarter of a century to be on the outside relieved of governmental responsibility and now free to put their opponents on the defensive." W. E. Binkley

+ New Repub 131:19 S 27 '54 1450w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 O 31 '54 30w

HOWE, MRS. ROBIN. Italian cooking. 204p $2.50 British bk. centre

641.5 Cookery, Italian [54-3642]

A cookbook of Italian dishes which has two purposes: it contains recipes of some of the best and most typical Italian dishes; and it helps the traveller in Italy to know what the dishes are on the Italian menus. Index.

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 79:1230 Je 15 '54 20w

Reviewed by Margaret Lane

New Statesman & Nation 46:728 D 5 '53 100w

Reviewed by Mary Poore

N Y Times p32 My 16 '54 30w

"This is not an Italian cookbook of the spaghetti and ravioli variety. It is packed with authentic Italian dishes, and the necessary ingredients for same." Jane Friendly

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 4 '54 50w

"Mrs. Howe is the wife of a journalist, and her residence in Italy has led her to produce a book of Italian recipes. It is not free from inaccuracies, but it is not meant for native Italian cooks, and English cooks can learn a good deal from it." N. P. R.
+ Spec p162 F 5 '54 90w

HOWELL, TREVOR HENRY. Our advancing years; an essay on modern problems of old age. 192p il $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)
618.97 Old age

"Dr. Trevor Howell has called his latest book on Gerontology 'an essay on modern problems of old age.' . . . As Dr. Howell states in the Preface, his viewpoint is that of a physician whose daily professional work lies mainly among the aged and chronic sick, and he has written this book to draw attention to the problems of old age and to make certain recommendations for the solution of some of these problems." Ann Am Acad

"Dr. Howell has written a book of real value full of sensitive understanding of the attitudes and wishes of old people. A visit to one of his wards is an exciting and stimulating experience as the reviewer knows, and we should be grateful that Dr. Howell has found time to pass on some of this excitement to those who read Our Advancing Years." Dorothea Ramsey
+ Ann Am Acad 296:189 N '54 650w

New Statesman & Nation 47:48 Ja 9 '54 250w

HOWELLS, WILLIAM WHITE. Back of history; the story of our own origins; il. with maps and drawings. 384p $5; text ed $3.50 Doubleday

571 Man, Prehistoric

54-7593

Textbook on anthropology for college students. "Evidences of physical evolution, cultural development, and social history, are shown as facets of culture and society related to each other in the story of the evolution of man. Using the interesting literary device of 'the ethnographic present' the book describes cultures in their primitive states as observed by scientists in all periods but without mention of the effects of our most modern age." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 51:6 S 1 '54

Bookmark 13:235 Jl '54 30w

Cath World 180:80 O '54 130w

Reviewed by W. M. Krogman
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 20 '54 500w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 71:1399 N 17 '54 430w

"The book has humor and often fascination and more popular appeal than Lewinsohn's Animals, Men and Myths."

+ Kirkus 22:282 Ap 15 '54 150w

"This is the anthropology book college, public and school libraries have needed for a readable, integrated explanation of the practical values of archeological and ethnological discoveries toward understanding man's place in the world. . . . Recommended." Lee Ash
+ Library J 79:1050 Je 1 '54 210w

"Most recent popular books in this field have been written by amateurs, who sometimes write well but who know too little of the subject to be convincing. Here we have a book which is written superlatively well and is also the work of a leading specialist. It is not altogether surprising that the grandson of William Dean Howells should be literate, since he grew up in an atmosphere of books and art. But he also has a knack for clear writing, with a keen sense of humor, and a punch in every paragraph. As a rule his wit is gentle, but it can sometimes be as mordant as that of his late teacher, Ernest Hooton." W. F. Albright
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 20 '54 1000w

"Mr. Howells gracefully puts the reader on something more than bowing terms with his immediate non-human ancestors. . . . The author's examination of the meaning of society not only brings together much otherwise hard-to-come-by information on the societies of monkeys and apes, but also provides the reader with a profound insight into the distinction between the societies of our nearest animal relatives and those of human beings. This insight is further deepened in the chapter dealing with culture, which is surely one of the ablest popular expositions of this important concept." Ashley Montagu

+ N Y Times p22 Je 27 '54 500w

"Dr. Howells, Professor of Anthropology at the University of Wisconsin, is an admirable writer who assumes that the reader is his equal in intelligence, if not in knowledge of anthropology. He defines—or, rather, delimits—his terms (like 'culture,' 'primitive,' 'magic,' and so on) and keeps his discussion within those bounds, so that the reader always knows where he is. Cultural anthropology can be extremely exciting in the hands of a good man, and Dr. Howells is a very good man."

+ New Yorker 30:67 Jl 31 '54 180w

"Howells is a leading physical anthropologist who has pursued a variety of researches in human biology, but here he addresses himself to the general reader with charm, wit, acumen, and authority. He writes with Wellsian breadth, rendering the trees into patterned forests." H. L. Shapiro

+ Sat R 37:27 N 20 '54 150w

"The man who reads this book will have got more than a glimpse into strange old ways of life. He will have been listening to a wise and perceptive scholar who knows how to relate the past to the present." L. C. Eiseley

+ Yale R ns 44:122 autumn '54 320w

HOWES, BARBARA. In the cold country. 48p $2.75 Grove

811

54-6802

Second collection of Barbara Howes' poems.

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 79:1232 Je 15 '54 50w

"Her balance deserts her, I think, only in the lesser satirical pieces, where disapproval can sometimes weaken into mere loathing. Elsewhere, in lyrics exceptionally varied in tone and matter, there is a blending of full sensibility with the New England taste for no nonsense." Richard Wilbur

+ — N Y Times p12 Ap 4 '54 170w

"Miss Howes is daring with language, but she is also accurate. Her originality stands in constant close reference to the material in hand, and although much of that material is fantastic or exotic, it is never so simply for its own sake. Her diction becomes more exact the more it is applied to certain dissolving effects in nature that attract her, and her poems are full of movement." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 30:134 Je 5 '54 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 20 '54 90w

"Miss Howes is not 'important' in the sense that her contemporaries Richard Wilbur and John Ciardi and Richard Eberhart are; but there are no failures, and 'In the Cold Country' is warm delight." Dudley Fitts

+ Sat R 37:19 O 9 '54 700w

HOWES, FRANK STEWART. Music of Ralph Vaughan Williams. 372p $6 Oxford

730.81 Vaughan Williams, Ralph 54-12522

"This work on Vaughan Williams, the 20th Century English composer, is, in the author's words, 'wholly expository.' All the music of Vaughan Williams other than the slightest and most ephemeral is examined and there are numerous music examples." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

"Not a critical or rigorously analytical discussion of the works, but rather gracious, evocative description. A certain amount of technical material creeps in, but not enough, I would say, to discourage a serious non-musician." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:2455 D 15 '54 110w

HOWES, F. S.—Continued

"If Mr. Howes enters only a sketchy demurrer to the charge that all but one of Vaughan Williams's operas are impaired by serious dramatic weakness, he expounds clearly and in detail all that happens on the stage and in the orchestra, and elucidates the composer's various revisions. Indeed he has taken great care over our enlightenment throughout the book." Winton Dean

+ — New Statesman & Nation 48:446 O 9 '54 1000w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 10 '54 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p652 O 15 '54 1000w

HOWES, PAUL GRISWOLD. Giant cactus forest and its world. 258p il $7.50 Duell; Little 574.9791 Natural history—Arizona. Cactus 54-6888

"A brief biology of the giant cactus forest of our American Southwest." (Subtitle) "This book is the major result of the southwestern field trips undertaken by the curator of the Bruce Museum of Greenwich, Connecticut, and his wife, to the land of the giant cacti and that greatest of all cactus belts in Southwestern Arizona." (Prefatory note)

Booklist 51:6 S 1 '54

"This is especially for students and nature lovers, but it also offers a surprising panorama for the alertly curious."

+ Kirkus 22:304 My 1 '54 180w

"The author's . . . great interest in the desert ecology and his ability to share this with the reader makes this useful for every library. There are numerous photographs and drawings and an appendix listing other references useful to desert visitors. Recommended." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:1307 Jl '54 100w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 15 '54 70w

"Partly in the form of a journal and partly a more formal exposition, the work combines the travel book with the 'how to know' guide and makes good reading as well as an extremely useful and handsome handbook." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Times p15 Jl 25 '54 500w

"The book falls far short of being a well-organized comprehensive account of the biology of the desert but does contain some interesting information and some excellent pictures of Arizona wild life." A. C. S.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 28 '54 170w

HOYT, ELIZABETH ELLIS, and others. American income and its use; with a commentary by Walter G. Muelder. (Ethics and economics of society) 362p $4 Harper

339.42 Income. Consumption (economics). Cost and standard of living 53-8538

"A compendium of studies on the impact of changing economic conditions on our society, with some attempt to expound the need for ethical concepts that will fit changed conditions." Sat R

"Though well written and expressing many excellent ideas, Miss Hoyt's discussion of the ethics of consumption (Part I) fell short of the reviewer's expectations. . . Miss Reid's discussion of the economics of income distribution and consumption in Part II is an excellent summary statement of current thought on these subjects. . . However, there are a few critical comments which should be made. . . The criticisms are not intended to convey the impression that this is an inferior work. On the contrary [this] is a first-rate book. It accomplishes rather well its major purposes, and should prove useful and stimulating reading for both its church audience and professional economists." R. C. Cave

+ — Am Econ R 44:998 D '54 900w

Reviewed by W. E. Moore

Ann Am Acad 296:181 N '54 270w

Booklist 50:351 My 15 '54

"It is a sometimes tedious but frequently rewarding and generally satisfying work." J. P. Owen

+ — Christian Century 71:925 Ag 4 '54 1000w

"More than half the book is taken up with statistical and descriptive studies. . . There are few surprises here, but ■ most workmanlike job has been done of summarizing scattered monographs, facts, and recent figures." J. S. Gamba

+ Sat R 37:31 My 22 '54 600w

Wis Lib Bul 50:203 O '54

HUBBARD, HARLAN. Shantyboat; il. by the author. 352p $4 Dodd

797.14 River life 53-12760

The author, an artist with a love for rivers, and his wife, an ex-librarian, spent five years in building a shantyboat and drifting in it along the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. At times they would drop anchor and make a garden on shore, living on the boat. When the harvest was over they would go down river, meeting floods and bad weather with courage. This is their account of the experiences they had during the five years.

Booklist 50:182 Ja 1 '54

Bookmark 13:156 Ap '54 40w

"'Shantyboat' is suggested to anyone who would like to share the serene, constantly changing life the Hubbards enjoyed on their picturesque inland voyage. It is lavishly illustrated with woodcuts and pen and ink sketches by the author." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 D 13 '53 250w

"All the details of their shantyboat life are interesting: where they got their cook stove and how they built their open hearth, and how they stowed their bedding, and designed a closet even for the 'cello. Not many men have wives as neat as Mrs. Hubbard; few wives have husbands as observant as Mr. Hubbard and as passionate about wind and weather—listening, seeing all the beauty 'round them. . . Imperceptibly, the reader goes along." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 29 '53 850w

"If you're crazy too and want to go drifting, grind your own corn and keep bees on the deck, navigate the dams and cut-offs, and explore the dead pioneer towns and new cities, here's a complete handbook for you. It even has a lot of drawings by the author, a professional painter, to make everything extra clear. If you don't want to go, read the book anyway—you'll think you've lived the whole thing. And there's not a word of hokum in the whole story, a new record." Richard Bissell

+ N Y Times p19 D 20 '53 600w

"A satisfying glimpse of a not unenviable life, attractively illustrated with woodcuts and line drawings by the author."

+ New Yorker 30:134 Mr 13 '54 160w

Wis Lib Bul 50:70 Mr '54

HUBLER, RICHARD GIBSON. In darkest childhood. 250p $3 Coward-McCann

818 Parent and child 54-6537

A father writes of his trials and errors and successes in raising his two lively, motherless sons.

Booklist 51:128 N 15 '54

"There is a slight confusion of tone when he lapses from the warm, light touch into an occasional mild blast-off that doesn't quite fit. But 'In Darkest Childhood' is genial reading for those who like chronicles of harassed parental life." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 7 '54 250w

"Mr. Hubler's account of his children's upbringing is often discursive and never conclusive. But he produces some charming passages of dialogue between the boys, and if their father emerges as a well-meaning duffer, he obviously is aware that he creates that impression."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 12 '54 400w

"Mr. Hubler clearly thinks of this as a very funny book, and so it is, after the fashion of a television comedy program—if it goes by fast enough, it entertains. Mr. Hubler's children never mention their mother (although it seems that even taking Mr. Hubler's known opinions into consideration they must have entered the world in a fairly usual manner, or else he would surely have put that into his book)." Shirley Jackson

N Y Times p38 N 28 '54 260w

HUFF, DARRELL. How to lie with statistics; pictures by Irving Geis. 142p $2.95 Norton
311.2 Statistics 53-13322

"The author runs the gamut of every popularly used type of statistic, probes such things as the sample study, the tabulation method, the interview technique, or the way the results are derived from the figures, and points up the countless number of dodges which are used to fool rather than inform." Library J

"This is a pleasantly subversive little book, guaranteed to undermine your faith in the almighty statistic."

+ Atlantic 193:83 F '54 120w

Booklist 50:178 Ja 1 '54

Reviewed by Pierre Martineau

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 3 '54 450w

Kirkus 21:688 O 1 '53 60w

"Illustrator and author pool their considerable talents to provide light lively reading and cartoon fare which will entertain, really inform, and take the wind out of many an overblown statistical sail. Highly recommended for general purchase." Paul Wasserman

+ Library J 79:57 Ja 1 '54 110w

"Mr. Huff's lively, human-interest treatment of the dry-as-bones subject of statistics is a timely tonic. It is a reminder for prudent executives that statistics, surveys, and tests are tools to work with, not mechanical substitutes for human judgment. . . This book needed to be written, and makes its points in an entertaining, highly readable manner." M. S. Rukeyser

+ Management R 43:339 My '54 400w

Reviewed by Spencer Klaw

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 3 '54 250w

New Yorker 30:126 Mr 20 '54 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ja 8 '54 600w

"Mr. Huff does it all with such humor and with such a lack of pompousness that it makes quick and interesting reading. Some apropos cartoons by Irving Gies don't hurt, either." R. M. F.

+ Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 31 '54 220w

HUGHES, ANSELM, ed. Early medieval music up to 1300. See New Oxford history of music, v2.

HUGHES, DONALD JAMES. Neutron optics. 136p il pa $2.50 Interscience

535.2 Optics, Physical. Neutrons 53-10757

"A rather brief survey of basic principles and applications, designed for readers who have backgrounds in the fundamentals of physics and who understand advanced physical terminology but who are not specialists in nuclear physics. Whenever possible the author has framed his exposition in terms of analogies to light optics. However he has also stressed the differences between light optics and neutron optics." N Y New Tech Bks

"The author's own pioneering researches and contributions in neutron optics have assisted his natural talent for lucid exposition in making this book easy to understand and pleasant to read." K. H. Sun

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:3867 J1 20 '54 750w

Chem & Eng N 32:341 Ja 25 '54 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:13 Ja '54

HUGHES, GEORGE BERNARD. Living crafts. 192p il $4.75 Philosophical lib.

609 Arts and crafts

54-9069

"The aim of this book is to look beyond picturesque escapism and to observe certain ancient and honourable crafts that are practised to-day solely because, for achieving certain results, no better methods have been found. Each craft in this book has been selected because its materials, tools, techniques have proved their worth down the centuries and also it still constitutes an integral part, however small, of present-day production." (Pref) Partial contents: The clay tobacco pipe-maker; The gold-beater; The silversmith; The carpet-maker; The wood-turner; The basket-maker; The parchment-maker. No index.

"Barely a technical book and definitely British in viewpoint, but it contains authentic, readable accounts of many crafts of perennial interest."

+ Library J 79:917 My 15 '54 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:23 Mr '54

"Written and printed in Great Britain, there are many references to the British scene, although the information should be of great value to those considering some field of the crafts as a career. It will also be of value to those who seek only an appreciation of hand-work."

+ School Arts 53:47 Je '54 220w

HUGHES, HENRY STUART. United States and Italy. (American foreign policy lib) 256p maps $4 Harvard univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Italy. Italy—Foreign relations—U.S. Italy—Politics and government 53-9038

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by A. W. Salomone

Am Hist R 59:901 J1 '54 650w

"Despite the title, the book is more in the nature of a general introduction into Italy's past and present rather than an analysis of the United States and Italy, as the title promises. Professor Stuart is very well qualified to write on Italy, as he understands both the pressing economic and institutional problems of the country as well as its psychological imponderables. It is therefore doubly regrettable that the book does not quite come off. In the first place, the volume is so short that the material rarely opens up new vistas of fact or interpretation. Secondly, in the opinion of this reviewer too much of the scarce space is allocated to background and history, and too little to contemporary problems." William Ebenstein

+ Ann Am Acad 291:162 Ja '54 320w

"The high standards of the American Foreign Policy Library series is more than upheld in this concise, literate study of Italy."

+ Current Hist 26:62 Ja '54 200w

Foreign Affairs 32:512 Ap '54 20w

"Professor Hughes knows Italy very well indeed; his book is well balanced, a product of good scholarship, and eminently readable. Even persons who think they are well acquainted with Italian life and problems may read the book with interest and profit."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:22 Mr '54 260w

HUGHES, LANGSTON. Famous American Negroes. 147p il $2.75 Dodd

920 Negroes—Biography

54-5985

Contents: Phillis Wheatley; Richard Allen; Ira Aldridge; Frederick Douglass; Harriet Tubman; Booker T. Washington; Daniel Hale

HUGHES, LANGSTON—Continued

Williams; Henry Ossawa Tanner; George Washington Carver; Robert S. Abbott; Paul Laurence Dunbar; W. C. Handy; Charles C. Spaulding; A. Philip Randolph; Ralph Bunche; Marian Anderson; Jackie Robinson.

Booklist 50:262 Mr 1 '54

"In this volume, perhaps some of the more familiar personalities, such as Booker T. Washington, could have been left out and equally illustrious but less well-known figures included. However, since some similar books are out of print, this is recommended for all children's and young people's collections." Ann Nelson

+ Library J 79:461 Mr 1 '54 80w

"Here, inevitably and properly, are Frederick Douglass, Booker T. Washington, George Washington Carver, Ralph Bunche and Marian Anderson. There are also figures less familiar to the average reader, such as Ira Aldridge the actor who charmed nineteenth century Europe; Charles C. Spaulding, business and civic leader; Robert S. Abbott, newspaper publisher and editor. The sketches of these lesser-known men make this collection a particularly interesting addition to the biography shelf." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 My 2 '54 170w

HUGHES, LANGSTON. First book of rhythms; pictures by Robin King. 63p $1.75 Watts, F.

701 Rhythm—Juvenile literature 54-5991

"Mr. Hughes begins 'Let's make a rhythm' with a pencil on paper, goes on to the rhythms of music, painting, sculpture, of nature, of building, of folk-songs, poetry, dancing, athletics, machines. All his ideas are briefly put and introductory. We rather longed for that old musicians' trick of being able to count different rhythms with hands, feet, head, and for an explanation of syncopated time." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:406 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by Beatrice Landeck
Horn Bk 30:457 D '54 70w

Kirkus 22:199 Mr 15 '54 110w

"A book to be shared by creative adult with creative children." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 79:1325 Jl '54 80w

"A true poet here talks to children with dignity, and with zest that will stimulate them to think about the world in a creative way. The two-color pictures sometimes match his feeling, but when they are too factual, they completely fail to carry his points, and the colors laid on are irritating. It is interesting to hear that the book resulted from a talk given often to children of various ages by this famous writer."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 My 16 '54 200w

"A rewarding look into our everyday world. Few will leave 'The First Book of Rhythms' without a sharper eye and a keener sense of sound and smell." Pat Clark

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 15 '54 160w

"A poet's way of expression has combined with an artist's sensitive interpretation to give us an attractive, exciting little book which will challenge the imagination of children. The entire family should enjoy using it as a 'reading aloud' book and it might well have a place on the family bookshelf." A. B.

+ Sat R 37:39 Je 19 '54 250w

HUGHES, PHILIP. Reformation in England. 2v; v2, Religio depopulata. 366p il maps $7.50 Macmillan (N Y)

942.052 Reformation—England. England—Social conditions

"In the second volume of his history of the Reformation in England Father Hughes deals with the period during which [the] uncertainty about the authority of the Papacy was to be converted into assurance—namely, the reigns of Edward VI and Mary." (Times [London] Lit Sup) For volume one see Book Review Digest 1951.

"A scholarly and interestingly written work... Yet for all its very considerable merits this book has one great weakness, which the author would probably cheerfully admit to, and not regard as a 'weakness' at all. Father Hughes is a partisan. He writes from the Roman Catholic point of view, and his evident distaste for the Reformation and all its works leads him occasionally into rather strained interpretations of his factual material." Maurice Lee

+ — Am Hist R 60:80 O '54 600w

"The illustrations, photographs of portraits and documents are numerous, handsomely executed, and fully annotated. Documentary appendices, a bibliographical note, and an excellent index complete the book. It is rather refreshing in this age of short cuts and the tyranny of high printing costs to see scholarship reclaim these externals of its time-honored kinship with leisure and contemplation." Mildred Campbell

+ Ann Am Acad 296:203 N '54 450w

"Here, again, Dr. Hughes displays the careful scholarship that we have come to associate with his work... Early in the volume we come upon a careful study of the numerous and serious differences between the statements of doctrine in the 'Bishops' Book' of 1537 and the 'King's Book' of 1543... Later in the volume we are given the kind of study which serious readers so often seek in vain—a balanced, thoroughly documented discussion of the treatment of heretics under the misunderstood and cruelly maligned Queen Mary." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 179:396 Ag '54 200w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 25 '54 50w

"While we vigorously dissent from its premises, we welcome a scholarly Roman Catholic interpretation of the complex, controversial, and not always edifying English Reformation—and such this undoubtedly is. The Roman church has a case, which deserves to be competently presented—as it is here on its historical side—and given a respectful hearing, whatever we may think of its merits." P. V. Norwood

+ Christian Century 71:1206 O 6 '54 1150w

Reviewed by Conyers Read

Pol Sci Q 69:636 D '54 950w

"As in his first volume, Father Hughes has again given full measure, pressed down and running over, for which the student of Tudor ecclesiastical history will be abundantly grateful. His footnotes are a mine of erudite information and historical learning; and he has been at pains to include almost everything in his narrative. Perhaps he has erred on the side of superfluity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup pviii Ap 30 '54 1600w

HUIE, WILLIAM BRADFORD. The execution of Private Slovik; the hitherto secret story of the only American soldier since 1864 to be shot for desertion. 247p $3.50 Duell; Little

355.133 Slovik, Edward Donald. Desertion. Military 54-5099

"Although since 1864 thousands of American soldiers have been tried and convicted for deserting in the face of the enemy, only one has been shot. He was Private Eddie D. Slovik of Detroit, Michigan, who died before the firing squad on January 31, 1945. Why? Why did he alone have to die? Why did the Army, which had spared so many, feel that it could show no mercy for Slovik? Was he so much more wicked or only so much more unfortunate than the others who had equally defied authority? William Bradford Huie explores these central questions and along the way raises many more which must challenge every thinking American." Sat R

"A tremendously moving book... Mr. Huie is a writer who has shown a fondness for the stance, J'accuse. But in this case, while exploiting to the full the elements of pathos and drama in his story, he has presented the facts with fairness to all concerned as well as with great journalistic skill; he has brought into sharp relief the element of genuine tragedy in the life and death of Eddie Slovik." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:80 My '54 650w

Booklist 50:351 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 25 '54 800w

"The facts of Private Slovik's tragic life and death are most depressing. This book deserves careful, thoughtful, prayerful reading. Its implications affect everyone." A. P. Klausler

+ Christian Century 71:675 Je 2 '54 750w

Reviewed by J. A. Lynch

Commonweal 60:151 My 14 '54 950w

Kirkus 22:145 F 15 '54 240w

"Regardless of one's attitude toward Huie's comments, this is an interesting book. Recommended for larger public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 79:984 My 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by Nigel Nicolson

New Statesman & Nation 48:748 D 4 '54 500w

"Mr. Huie has recounted the tragedy, simply, movingly and illuminatingly, for what it was." Walter Millis

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ap 25 '54 1100w

"Mr. Huie does not spell out the meaning of the Slovik tragedy in unequivocal language. Possibly there is no way to handle such a delicate subject tactfully and still do it. At any rate, the moral is obscured by the method. In bending backward to be fair, both to Slovik and the service, he makes a point, later qualifies or kills it with a conflicting view. . . . Conceivably, in this age of massive retaliation the infantry requirement is no longer the decisive consideration. But there is always a first line of some kind, and it is not a place for Eddie Sloviks. Unless that is the point, Mr. Huie should have left the incident decently buried. And unless Mr. Huie's readers approach this book reflectively, dwelling less on its horror than upon its meaning, then it should never have been written." S. L. A. Marshall

N Y Times p3 Ap 25 '54 1400w

New Yorker 30:145 My 8 '54 180w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 21 '54 700w

"If the final conclusion is indisputable, the nagging questions remain: Was it necessary for the case of Slovik against the United States to come to this pass? Was he executed only because he deserted? Clearly these questions are not only of deep moral concern, but they go to the heart of some very practical problems about the relation between the citizen and the nation in these times of insecurity. The story which Mr. Huie tells, thoughtfully for the most part and with dramatic effect, cannot furnish any complete answers. Yet the evidence here brought to bear is vital and vitally worth the attention of all Americans, the more so since the book addresses by implication to the people as a whole one last big question: If the Army executed Private Slovik to make an example of him for the good of discipline, why has the case been kept under wraps for eight years?" Gordon Harrison

Sat R 37:15 Ap 24 '54 1000w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 2 '54 600w

Wis Lib Bul 50:128 My '54

HULME, KATHRYN CAVARLY. Wild place. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 275p $3.75 Little 940.531 Reconstruction (1939-). World war, 1939-1945—Displaced persons. Wildflecken (displaced persons camp) 53-10233

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"There have been so many books written about the aftermath of war that you are apt to approach another one with a certain feeling of reluctance. But that feeling will vanish as soon as you have read half a dozen pages of Miss Hulme's fascinating and moving story. She writes vividly and with deep compassion mingled with humor and understanding, and she brings to life such a rich variety of human beings that you will find yourself quite unable to put the book down." Edith Fowke

+ Canadian Forum 33:285 Mr '54 420w

Reviewed by J. B. Sheerin

Cath World 178:397 F '54 230w

Foreign Affairs 32:676 Jl '54 30w

New Statesman & Nation 47:711 My 29 '54 240w

"In this bittersweet memoir, she recalls with a calm that suggests emotional exhaustion the horrifying, hilarious, heartbreaking stream of battered Poles—men, women, and children—that passed before her eyes, a thousand a week, during those years of hope, hopelessness, and resignation. A shattering book, and one that defines, once and for all, the meaning of that ghastly twentieth-century invention, the displaced person."

+ New Yorker 29:116 F 13 '54 120w

"Miss Hulme writes as an American for an American public. Britain is hardly mentioned. . . . It is a story of the American zone and finally of emigration to America. But the lack of British interest makes no difference to the readable quality of the book. Nor, incidentally, do some odd mistakes in German. It is told vividly, with reported conversations, amusing and touching incidents and a host of personalities. Miss Hulme may slightly over-colour the picture. Drab routine is omitted to such an extent that the reader cannot quite picture how ordinary days went by. But the incidents selected have a high entertainment value and they do illuminate the displaced-persons problem."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p246 Ap 16 '54 550w

"Miss Hulme tells her story with such skill, understanding, and immediacy that the reader will feel close to its drama and its moral implications. The capacity of human beings to survive under hardship, and to build community patterns; the bonds of friendship, family, custom, and nationality; the shifts of mood in response to changing hopes and fears, all are recreated by the author. She registers firm and frank opinions about army red tape and about the wavering immigration policy of the United States. The American citizen should better realize from this record how national laws and the administration of them have affected the lives of millions of stranded persons."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:6 Mr '54 240w

HULME, WILLIAM EDWARD. Face your life with confidence: counsels for youth. 232p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

179 Christian life. Youth—Religious life 53-9630

The chaplain of a mid-west college presents some of the case histories of young people confused or uncertain in their everyday living, and tells what the counselor can suggest to improve matters.

Booklist 50:194 Ja 15 '54

"Half a hundred questions are treated. They have to do with faith, conduct, mental health, and the choice and attainment of satisfying ends. Most of the discussions are cast in the form of conversations. Many young people, from the teens to 20, will be helped by this wise Christian counseling." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:114 Ja 27 '54 80w

"The young people Dr. Hulme tells about seem to accept Christian presuppositions and pious answers rather too easily. But pastors and other leaders of youth may find his technique of value even with young people not so 'goody-good.'"

Kirkus 21:626 S 1 '53 150w

Springf'd Republican p40A D 13 '53 120w

HUMPHREY, ZEPHINE (MRS W. W. FAHNESTOCK). God and company. 128p $1.75 Harper

231 God 53-8372

A group of twenty devotional essays in which it is the author's intention "to write humbly and joyfully about nothing else but God and His supreme excellence."

"A readable book with a fresh approach to religion. There is nothing of theology nor of traditional pious phraseology but rather a simple and beautifully phrased plea for the recognition of the dominant place of God in the life of the individual and the world."

+ Kirkus 21:674 O 1 '53 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 15 '53 30w

"To read the book is to sense her delight in being called to be one of God's fellow laborers, a person whose labor of love is essential to the working out of God's redemptive purpose for this sinful world. The tempo of this book, meant for daily use, is the same as the tempo of many of the Old Testament psalms, which abound in expressions of thanksgiving and praise." O. J. Aldrich

+ Springf'd Republican p10C D 20 '53 260w

HUMPHRIES, ROLFE, ed. New poems by American poets. 179p $2; pa 35c Ballantine 811.08 American poetry—Collections 53-10418

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"A more enlivening anthology than most... Strenuous selectivity on the editor's part has resulted in a collection of genuinely dynamic writing." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 F 14 '54 80w

"The anthology has an air of freshness and vitality."

+ New Yorker 30:120 Mr 6 '54 160w

"Nothing here shows to worse advantage than Humphries' choice of previously unpublished poets. Here (with a couple of notable exceptions) we have the 'easy' poem, the poem done in good taste, the poem whose thought and technique are safe and unshocking. Nothing much is happening here. But there are some very wonderful poems by some of the older poets." Laurence Ferling

— + San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 31 '54 180w

"The new and substantial anthology of verse 'New Poems' is an unusually good buy. It represents the frequently wise and infrequently biased preferences of Rolfe Humphries, who does a service in bringing to light new and established poets, some known only to the craft... Mr. Humphries modestly enough excludes his own superb lyrics, but that Frost, Gregory, Ransom, Schwartz, Tate, Van Doren, and Viereck should elude him is surprising." I. L. Salomon

+ — Sat R 37:20 Ja 16 '54 200w

"Himself an accomplished poet as well as a critic whose taste is both varied and excellent, Rolfe Humphries has given a noteworthy performance in the editing of this anthology of new American poetry."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:54 Mr '54 240w

HUMPHRIES, ROLFE. Poems, collected and new. 298p $4.50 Scribner 811 54-8691

This volume presents the work included in Mr. Humphries' earlier books, Europa and Other Poems and Sonnets, Out of the Jewel, The Summer Landscape, Forbid Thy Ravens, and The Wind of Time, together with a group of new poems, some 30 in number, under the general title, "The Golden Bird," which have not hitherto been published in book form. The volume contains over 200 poems, many of which first appeared in The New Yorker, The Atlantic, Harper's Magazine and other periodicals.

Booklist 51:171 D 15 '54

Bookmark 14:31 N '54 20w

"It is essentially easy reading, melodious and agreeable, with a touch of worldliness—almost vers de société but not quite. Not for high-brows but certainly for civilized tastes."

Kirkus 22:524 Ag 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 7 '54 330w

"Although it is hampered by the inclusion of too many journalistic poems, the spirit of the eclogue runs throughout this whole volume, in which to the poet as to the painter, 'seeing is a form of praising,' and to a wise man, courage seems greater than wisdom. But Rolfe Humphries is bold enough to break with tradition whenever he cares to, and this brings an extra charm to listening to the language of humility and of concern." R. T. Swartz

+ N Y Times p16 O 24 '54 320w

"Had this been a book of selected rather than collected poems Mr. Humphries would have had a volume of first-rate poetry. Too many of his lyrics are written with such casual carelessness that they sound like magazine pieces to be read but once. Despite this, there is at least half the book that deserves the attention of the modern reader. Good as this part is, the volume is overloaded." I. L. S.

+ — Sat R 37:33 N 27 '54 260w

HUNT, FRAZIER. Untold story of Douglas MacArthur. 533p $5 Devin-Adair

B or 92 MacArthur, Douglas 54-10811

A biography of General MacArthur by a seasoned war correspondent who has known his subject since the World war I campaigns in France.

Booklist 51:107 N 1 '54

"Hunt's is an uncompromisingly admiring account... The greatest interest of the book lies in the final chapter, which is powerfully stated." George Morgenstern

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 31 '54 650w

"Mr. Hunt himself has had long experience as a newspaper writer and commentator. But his story of the great General adds little to the many books which have already been written about the controversial episodes." Gordon Walker

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 22 '54 240w

"In sum an approval, it is hard to disagree with Hunt's judgments in the light of the evidence he gives. Rather the fault is with the evidence—of which there is none in MacArthur's disfavor—that could provide the balance needed for a more convincing study."

Kirkus 22:573 Ag 15 '54 270w

"In the current Battle for History (as intense in its way as were those for the Bulge or for Guadalcanal) all the letters, diaries and indiscreet memoirs are not yet published. So no one can write in 1954 the ultimate truth. Frazier Hunt's book will be weighed by history. But it is well documented, it is often startling, and it cannot be ignored." W. L. White

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 7 '54 1200w

"The 'untold story' is but the retold and now familiar epic of an unexampled heroism and infallible judgment, more skillfully elaborated as to the early MacArthur years than other books, warmly written, argumentative, greatly detailed, yet fast moving. It should be loved by all who love MacArthur, and their name is legion... It is a racing, readable book. Those who believe in the sanctity of judgments based on one-half the evidence may also deem it a great book." S. L. A. Marshall

+ N Y Times p3 O 24 '54 1200w

"It is inevitable that when such a great man is frustrated, there are evil machinations afoot, according to Hunt. Therefore the latter part of his book breaks down into a ranting attack on practically the entire then-administration. It's all a plot, we are told: an ideological anti-MacArthur bloc took over the entire State Department and thwarted MacArthur's effort to save the world from Communism." Jack Howard

— San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 24 '54 350w

— Sat R 37:28 D 25 '54 270w

HUNT, SIR JOHN. Conquest of Everest; with a chapter on the final assault by Sir Edmund Hillary; foreword by H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh [Eng title: Ascent of Everest]. 300p il maps $6 Dutton

954.2 [915.42] Everest, Mount. Mountaineering. Mount Everest expedition, 1953 54-5825

An account, written simply and in considerable detail, of the preparations and explorations which preceded the final successful assault on Mt Everest in May 1953. The main part of the book is written by the leader of the expedition; one chapter on the final assault and the attainment of the summit is contributed by the New Zealander who was one of the two-member team assigned to the ultimate task.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 193:82 Mr '54 490w

Booklist 50:177; 296 Ja 1 '54; Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:104 F '54 30w

"It is a remarkable tale, simply and interestingly told and those who read the book will agree that the conquest was worthwhile." Edward Peters

+ Cath World 179:77 Ap '54 270w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 24 '54 370w

"The Conquest of Everest' is an eloquent, swift-moving, factual account of every detail of this historic enterprise. It is richly illustrated with innumerable photographs in black and white and a number of superb ones in color. The text is further illuminated by exceptionally interesting line maps and by delightful pen and ink drawings by Charles Evans, a member of the party." H. C. James

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 21 '54 950w

Horn Bk 30:113 Ap '54 90w

Kirkus 21:775 D 1 '53 220w

"Definitely essential for all libraries." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:141 Ja 15 '54 190w

"A stirring and magnificently illustrated account of a great achievement. Of especial interest is Hillary's story of the dash to the summit."

+ Nation 178:116 F 6 '54 50w

Reviewed by Bruce Bliven

New Repub 130:17 F 1 '54 1050w

"Here and there, in The Ascent of Everest, one wishes that Hunt had let himself go a little more, had allowed his memories to bubble up more freely. But there is plenty of time for more personal records, his own and the others. Given more leisure, he could certainly have produced a better finished book; but it could hardly have been more impressive. Soldierly, practical, precise—it has the prose virtues, but its conception comes from something beyond prose." J. A. Smith

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:638 N 21 '53 1500w

"This book is a classic. It will lift the hearts of men as long as there are mountains." W. O. Douglas

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ja 24 '54 1350w

"It is a complete job. An utterly honest, modest and, of course, authoritative job. Over the years many books have been written about Everest. But here at last is the book—the book of triumph and fulfillment." J. R. Uhlman

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 24 '54 1650w

New Yorker 29:102 Ja 30 '54 200w

Reviewed by Austin Blair

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 31 '54 1200w

"To the layman this account may seem a prosaic succession of storms and snows, of battered tents and depleted oxygen tanks. But a report, necessarily detailed, is a permanent addition to mountaineering records. . . An enthusiastic climber from New Zealand, Hillary had visited the Himalayas before. It was Tenzing's sixth expedition to Everest. But to exalt the men who made the final dash is unfair to other members of the party. For each had contributed his share, particularly Sir John himself, now forty-two, whose careful planning and supervision of all details was a masterpiece of efficiency." F. C. Lane

+ Sat R 37:18 Ja 23 '54 1200w

"The photographs are splendid and the maps are of the standard that one would expect. It was perhaps a pity—since the book will reach a wide public unversed in mountaineering technique or in the configuration of Everest—that a simple diagram was not included, showing the relation to each other and to the main landmarks of the climb of the various camps. . . Although he is careful to follow the objective, dispassionate example set by his leader, Sir Edmund Hillary's chapter on the climax of the whole venture is the most vivid thing in the book. This was partly inevitable, for he has the easiest as well as the most exciting part of the story to tell; but perhaps it is also partly because story-telling comes easier to him than it does to Sir John. But the latter, too, can rise to an occasion when events give him a chance." Peter Fleming

+ Spec p588 N 20 '53 1900w

"The account is undramatic, unemotional, and impersonal. And yet, perhaps because the daring enterprise is recorded so matter-of-factly and relentlessly, 'The Conquest of Everest' progresses with mounting tension. This is the more remarkable since the reader knows the outcome before he begins—that all hazards were surmounted, that the climb was successful, and even which two of the party ultimately got to the top. Sir John's very thoroughness, in planning and explaining, helps make impressive the magnitude of the undertaking and the dangers inherent." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p5C, Ja 24 '54 800w

"A first-rate report of a dazzlingly successful expedition. The Conquest of Everest may well mark the peak of books on mountain climbing. Its point is that the long climb was a combined operation, that against the mountain's cunning and its terrifying heights, man had to match his own cunning no less than his valor."

+ Time 63:114 Ja 25 '54 800w

"Sir John Hunt speaks as well as he climbs, and this book now shows that he writes as well as he speaks. . . Sir John Hunt's book combines two qualities which do not always go together. It tells an epic story in a form which will be read with the deepest interest by a public far beyond the narrow circle of the Alpine and mountain clubs of this and other countries; and, with its appendices, it provides a text-book on how a great Himalayan expedition should be prepared and conducted."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p729 N 13 '53 1200w

HUNT, SIR JOHN. Our Everest adventure; the pictorial history from Kathmandu to the summit. 127p $3.75 Dutton

954.2 [915.42] Everest, Mount. Mountaineering. Mount Everest expedition, 1953

54-12164

"Largely told in pictures with descriptive captions—including pictures taken by Hillary at and from the summit. The text of Hillary's own account of his successful ascent with Tenzing closes the book." N Y Times

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S '54 60w

HUNT, JOHN—Continued

"It is a handsome book, and by far the best photographic account of the successful expedition yet available." R. R. Brunn
 + Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 26 '54 170w

"The text is curtailed and simplified and the camera takes precedence. This has been well worth doing. There are some impressive pictures not included in the earlier book. All Hillary's photographs taken from the summit are included."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 20 '54 50w
 N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 O 31 '54 50w

Reviewed by Raymond Holden
 N Y Times p13 S 5 '54 30w

HUNT, MABEL LEIGH. Singing among strangers [decorations by Irene Gibian]. 213p $3 Lippincott

54-7128

A novel for girls which tells the story of a Latvian family thru the years of war and exile to the time when they find a new home in the New World.

Bookmark 13:164 Ap '54 10w
 Kirkus 22:116 F 15 '54 140w

"So far as any one of another country could do, using records and stories told her by individuals, Mrs. Hunt has woven reality and fiction to make us share a tragedy common to our time and to help 'renew our faith in Freedom.'" L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p6 N 14 '54 320w

"Despite the problems in the book, there are warmth and hope, courage and strength, and the quiet happiness of people who have kept not only their lives but their self-respect. Many Latvian customs are described and folk songs and stories given." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:90 N 13 '54 130w

HUNT, MARIGOLD. First Catholics; il. by Emil Antonucci. 146p $2.75 Sheed
 226.6 Bible stories 53-12268

The story of the Acts of the Apostles retold for children of eight to twelve. Most of this book has already appeared in the Children's Page of Our Sunday Visitor.

"Parents who seek help in teaching the story of the Church will be glad to come upon this book; and after they have become familiar with it, they will be delighted."

+ Cath World 178:240 D '53 90w

"A good introduction to the reading of the full text of the Acts. Miss Hunt has known how to present the dramatic beginnings of the Church and she has tried to do so in all fairness to the Jews who were the first Christians—a term which would have made a better title for this book."

+ Commonweal 59:179 N 20 '53 30w

HUNT, PETER. Cape Cod cookbook; il. by the author. 181p $5 Hawthorn bks.

641.5 Cookery 54-6458

"A discursive cookbook, with almost as many reminiscences as recipes. Three types of dishes predominate: traditional Cape Cod, Portuguese, and author's favorites from off the Cape. Items like squid stew and red pepper jam are on the exotic side, but most of the dishes seem likely to appeal to robust American appetites. Decorations in typical Peter Hunt style make an eye-arresting volume." Booklist

Booklist 50:373 Je 1 '54

Kirkus 22:305 My 1 '54 170w

"A pleasant 'extra' sort of cookbook that supplements the basic ones." K. T. Willis
 + Library J 79:1230 Je 15 '54 30w

"'Peter Hunt's Cape Cod Cookbook' has great charm. . . New England regional cookery and a smattering of sophisticated foreign cookery which, with Mr. Hunt's editing and illustrating, make a very attractive book." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 22 '54 160w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
 Springf'd Republican p7C Je 27 '54 170w

HUNTER, EVAN. Blackboard jungle. 309p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

54-8649

"Interesting but uneven first novel, timely in its story of an idealistic young man, facing the bitter realities of being a teacher in the frighteningly brutal world of a big city vocational high school. A near-rape, student sluggings, a knifing—all these plus a strong indictment of the inadequacies of routine teachers college preparation in helping teachers to learn how to discipline near-morons and prospective or actual delinquents." Library J

"A highly dramatic if devastating demonstration of the unequal job of education in an area such as this; of classrooms in which nothing can be taught, since there is no desire to learn; of teen-age delinquents equipped with switch-blades, not pencils, sullen, illiterate, and resentful. Mr. Hunter establishes an unmistakable immediacy and identity here, and writes in the vernacular which is in this case an eloquent medium, while The Amboy Dukes will indicate the potential market here."

Kirkus 22:412 Jl 1 '54 320w

"Broad characterizations and rather obvious plot, but fast-paced, colorful style gives some promise for author's next book. Realistic in approach and language, so conservative libraries disliking Anglo-Saxon monosyllables might not want this one." E. M. Oboler

Library J 79:1503 S 1 '54 130w

"Evan Hunter breaks through the verbiage which has long clouded the facts of vocational teaching with his story of a young man who tries to extract meaning and hope from this educational underworld. It is true that he makes only cursory attempts to probe the well-springs of the action he photographs so well, but he succeeds in dramatizing an area heretofore neglected in fiction." Stanley Cooperman

Nation 179:493 D 4 '54 240w

"The author has not used his shocking material merely to appall. With a superb ear for conversation, with competence as a storyteller, and with a tolerant and tough-minded sympathy for his subject, he has built an extremely good novel." Barbara Klaw

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 17 '54 550w

"As it happens, the author is not only a Navy veteran but once taught in a vocational high school and there will be those who inevitably may suspect the novel of having some autobiographical elements in it." Gilbert Millstein

N Y Times p43 O 24 '54 500w

"Evan Hunter's 'The Blackboard Jungle' is the most realistic account I have ever read of life in a New York City vocational high school. I can testify to its accuracy, having had some years of experience in one of them, as has Mr. Hunter. His novel more than matches the sensations in some of the stories we have seen recently, in newspapers that have become happily school-conscious. But it is free of their distortions and dishonesty." Nathan Rothman

+ Sat R 37:16 O 9 '54 600w

"A nightmarish but authentic first novel." Time 64:134 O 11 '54 200w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
 Yale R n s 44:318 winter '55 190w

HUNTER, JOHN ALEXANDER, and MAN-NIX, DANIEL PRATT. Tales of the African frontier. 308p il $4 Harper

967 Africa, East—Discovery and exploration. Africa, East—Biography 54-9215

Stories of thirteen men and one woman who played important roles in the early history of the East African frontier. "It is a veritable
'Who's Who' of early East African notables, some of them heretofore scarcely heralded.
The first was 'Tippu Tib,' an Arab, probably the greatest slaver in history and, by our standards, certainly a devilish yet colorful villain. His assistance, however, made possible the work of Livingstone, Stanley, and the explorers Speke, Cameron, and Wissman." (Sat R)

Booklist 51:173 D 15 '54

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 14 '54
550w

"This is a first-class piece of work in its line.
There is much daring here and much courage.
But the reader must be warned that there is also much horror." J. A. May

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 10 '54
270w

Kirkus 22:567 Ag 15 '54 190w

"Unfortunately the writing is stodgy, the characters wooden, and the book badly in need of maps. Recommended only for public library popular collections." R. S. Taylor

Library J 79:1887 O 15 '54 100w

"The book is an utterly enthralling sometimes hair-raising adventure story that brings to life again a primeval Africa that was still the heart of darkness." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p20 O 24 '54 850w

"Written simply and with an obvious admiration for the early figures of Kenya's history, this book has no ax and no apologies to make; because of this it deserves a prominent place in the literature of a continent that still remains an enigma to many people." A.
N. C.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 31 '54
380w

"There have been books on almost every phase of early East African history, but J. A.
Hunter and Daniel P. Mannix have succeeded in knitting together in a single volume what can be termed the highlights of the whole fabulous story... These two authors, through previous writing and first-hand knowledge of the African scene as well as new sources of information, are indeed equipped to give us this amazing, thoroughly interesting, and historically valuable book. Theirs is the straight-from-the-shoulder type of narrative, just what is needed to paint the picture in the way that can hold a reader almost spellbound through every chapter." J. W. Lippincott

+ Sat R 37:20 O 23 '54 900w

Time 64:120 N 15 '54 170w

HUNTINGTON, DAVID. Tahitian holiday. 309p il $4.95 Holt

996.211 [1919.6] Tahiti 54-6539

A record of a five-months stay in Tahiti, where the Huntington family, father, mother, and young son went for a vacation. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 50:356 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Percy Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 2 '54
410w

Christian Century 71:1072 S 8 '54 50w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 6
'54 500w

"Pleasant, at times penetrating."

+ Kirkus 22:179 Mr 1 '54 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p11 My 9
'54 50w

"In the beginning, you're likely to fear that Mr. Huntington is writing just another light and airy tourist yarn; before you're through you find that he did his best to get at the inwardness of Tahiti while he and his wife were getting at the inwardness of themselves. And you'll realize that the book is quite a bit better than you may have thought at first." J. H.
Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 Ap 27 '54
550w

"This book gives, as no other I am familiar with does, the answers to what life is like in Tahiti, as well as a highly amusing picture of the zany complications the foreign householder has to wrestle with in procuring his daily breadfruit." James McConnaughey

+ Sat R 37:30 Jl 10 '54 320w

Springf'd Republican p5C Jl 4 '54 150w

HURD, MRS EDITH (THACHER). Devil's tail; adventures of a printer's apprentice in early Williamsburg; il. by Clement Hurd.
216p $2.75 Doubleday

54-5175

Adventures of Tom Cartwright, printer's apprentice to Alexander Purdie, publisher of the Virginia Gazette, in Williamsburg, Virginia, in 1775. The book closes with Mr Purdie's illness, making it necessary for young Tom to set up the Declaration of Independence for the day's paper. For ages 11 to 14.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 F 21 '54
150w

"Exciting, well grounded historical fiction."
+ Kirkus 21:760 D 1 '53 120w

"It gives a good picture of the impact of the Revolution on Virginia, and ends with the thrilling reading of the Declaration of Independence which the young hero then sets up in type for the Virginia Gazette. The actual sheet is shown on the back of the jacket.
Too bad it is not within the book." L. S.
Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 21
'54 100w

"Williamsburg in its heyday, faithfully presented in story and illustrations, is a colorful background for an exciting plot concerning a lively, likable boy." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p28 F 7 '54 170w

Springf'd Republican p11C My ■ '54
30w

HURD, MRS EDITH (THACHER), and HURD,
CLEMENT. Nino and his fish. [31p] col il $2
Lothrop

54-8907

Picture story book about a little boy living in Monterey, California, who caught a very large fish and exchanged it for an even larger birthday party. For ages 4 to 8.

Booklist 50:346 My 1 '54

"This gay picture book set in Monterey village and harbor will delight small children, both as an unusual birthday story and as an account of a little boy doing a grown-up job." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:171 Je '54 80w

Kirkus 22:230 Ap 1 '54 60w

"An appealing story which children under ten will enjoy. Full-page illustrations in deep blue and soft rose. Recommended." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 79:864 My 1 '54 70w

"There is occasional intrusive local detail in the telling, but the whole leaves a vivid sense of a gay, real slice of life. Neither story style nor art style is unified so that the whole just misses real distinction." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 My 16
'54 140w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 16 '54
70w

Wis Lib Bul 50:215 O '54

HUREWITZ, JACOB COLEMAN. Middle East dilemmas; the background of United States policy. 273p $3.75 Harper

327.73 East (Near East)—Foreign relations —U.S. U.S.—Foreign policy. U.S.—Foreign relations—East (Near East) 53-5372

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"As a political chronicle, the book is successful; for it includes almost everything of importance and is related with accuracy and objectivity. The dense compilation of dates and data is made tolerable by a brisk and lucid style of writing. However, the nonspecialist, whom the author had primarily in mind, will not put the book down with a full comprehension of the difficulties facing the State Department." S. G.

+ Am Hist R 59:442 Ja '54 370w

Reviewed by S. N. Fisher

Ann Am Acad 291:163 Ja '54 280w

"Following the opening chapter on the United States and the Middle East are chapters on Iran, Egypt, the Arab-Israel Area, and Turkey. These chapters are more than a treatment of immediate American aims and interests; they are historical studies of the factors with which the United States has had to contend in the areas. Succinct and authoritative, they will interest students and informed general readers seeking an account of this development in American foreign policy. . . In the concluding chapter, Dr. Hurewitz sketches the dilemmas which face American policymakers. . . In this section, Dr. Hurewitz again deals primarily with facts and background; one wishes he had said more about how the problems may be solved. Failure to do so does not, however, detract from the value of this study as an introduction to the Middle East and to American policy there."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:455 D '53 240w

HURLIMANN, MARTIN, II. Eternal Greece. See Warner, R.

HURST, EARL OLIVER. Big book of space; scientific detail approved by Willy Ley. [24p] col il $1 Grosset

629.14353 [629.1388] Interplanetary voyages —Juvenile literature 53-12972

An account of how men may one day reach the moon via rockets, written for young readers.

"If piled atop each other, all the books about space which have been written for children probably would reach the moon, but anyone thinking of going there would enjoy the trip a lot more after a little time spent with this fine children's volume." J. E. S.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p46 N 15 '53 120w

"The ten large, colorful illustrations are very dramatic and will delight any child's imagination. The accompanying text on jet motors, rocket construction, etc., the scientific detail approved by Willy Ley, will be confusing to young children without some background in aerodynamics." Anne Jackson

Library J 78:2108 D 1 '53 90w

"Quite young enthusiasts will read the best they can, and gloat over the pictures. It has been checked for scientific accuracy by the famous Willy Ley." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 31 '54 70w

HUSTON, HOWARD C. Blind saw murder. 211p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

54-10119

Detective story.

"High melodrama in a fantastically incredible concoction." Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 23 '54 100w

Kirkus 22:169 Mr 1 '54 40w

"After all of the heaving hanky-panky it's difficult to say why one can't quite dismiss the proceedings as too foolishly feverish for diversion. Probably because Mr. Huston is a little infectious and transmits the ailment. But he'll be a much more entertaining writer when he lets do with one plot or the other and feeds a little more on deduction than ear-chawing. Meanwhile, he's more tolerable than a good many." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 My 16 '54 160w

"Far more competent, in prose and movement, than such vulgar agonizing deserves." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p18 My 30 '54 60w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 27 '54 50w

"Dullish." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:29 Je 5 '54 20w

HUSTON, MCCREADY. Saving grace. 287p $3.50 Lippincott

53-11115

Hume Probyne, a bachelor of forty-three and a member of a wealthy Philadelphia family, is practically ordered to New York by his sister to rescue her son from the clutches of a girl she considers unworthy. Hume has rebelled to a certain extent from his family's rigid standards, so he finds himself in sympathy with his nephew. But at this point it is Hume who becomes involved, not with one woman, but with three.

Booklist 50:259 Mr 1 '54

"'The Saving Grace' is a fine story of people you won't want to miss knowing. You may drag your feet toward the end, as I did, to postpone the unhappy moment when the friendship ends. It is tightly knit, finely crafted, beautifully drawn, with every sentence saying exactly what McCready Huston meant it to say. The characters are alive, consistent, and believable. You'll like it!" A. F. Otis

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 17 '54 360w

Kirkus 21:717 N 1 '53 180w

"The characters are alive and highly credible, as are the situations. Recommended." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 79:59 Ja 1 '54 100w

"The result of it all is good entertainment. Mr. Huston can turn a phrase with such skill that he lends freshness to platitudes; while his characterizations, if superficial, are both clever and apt."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 My 16 '54 230w

"An elegant soap opera, 'The Saving Grace' is rather transparently rigged for satiric contrasts and rebellious romance. Yet it is diverting not only for its pungent characterizations (Hume's mother is a delight) but also for its own saving grace of intelligence." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 17 '54 370w

Time 63:109 Ja 18 '54 450w

HUTCHINS, ROBERT MAYNARD. University of Utopia. 103p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press 370.973 Education—U.S. Colleges and universities 53-13355

"The Walgreen lectures of 1953, in which the former chancellor of the University of Chicago criticizes education in the U.S. for its inclination toward industrialization and specialization, and describes the ideal educational system as he envisions it, along the lines which he attempted to develop at the University of Chicago." Booklist

Booklist 50:179 Ja 1 '54

Reviewed by Joseph Frank

Canadian Forum 34:140 S '54 450w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 7 '54 100w

"The University of Utopia is altogether ■ charming book, relevant, urbane, needling, and written in one of our best prose styles." L. R. Ward

+ Commonweal 59:432 Ja 29 '54 550w

Reviewed by Harold Taylor

New Repub 130:17 Mr 22 '54 450w

"Historically Mr. Hutchins' manner has frustrated the high sharing which his remarkable sensitivity required. But his voice has notably mellowed in this volume. Mr. Hutchins' bedside manner is much improved, but he still uses his gifts to lure patients to the surgery."

T. V. Smith

N Y Times p4 Ja ■ '54 1400w

Reviewed by G. E. Arnstein

San Francisco Chronicle p26 F 14, '54 600w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 80:136 O 30 '54 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p514 Ag 13 '54 2600w

"Like the other works of Dr. Hutchins, The University of Utopia will surely stimulate controversy; but the controversies that he has occasioned by his vigorous and straightforward presentation of a constructive philosophy have been and will undoubtedly continue to be beneficial to American higher education."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:215 Je '54 170w

HUTCHINSON, ANN. Labanotation; il. by Doug Anderson [pref. by George Balanchine; foreword by Rudolf Laban]. 274p $3.50 New directions

792.8 Dance notation

54-2859

Explanation of the first successful system for recording human movement. There is a foreword by the originator of the system, and a preface by George Balanchine. Contains more than 500 line drawings to illustrate the text. Index.

"Highly recommended to physical culture, dance, ballet and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1407 Ag '54 30w

"Labanotation works. Its value and accuracy have been demonstrated. There is little doubt but that in time all reputable dance schools, modern or ballet, will include Labanotation as an integral part of the curriculum. Balanchine, who along with other contemporary choreographers has had some works set down in this system, has supplied the preface to the text, and the introduction is by the original creator of the system, Rudolf Laban." Rosalyn Krokover

+ Sat R 37:25 Jl 3 '54 180w

HUTCHINSON, GEORGE EVELYN. Itinerant ivory tower; scientific and literary essays. 261p il $4 Yale univ. press

504 Science

53-7769

A collection of essays and book reviews by the Stirling professor of Zoology at Yale. In them he considers subjects ranging from oriental philosophy to flying saucers. Index.

"I found 'beauty' and 'fun' in reading the book. I also found perplexity and humility, for I lack Hutchinson's vast erudition. Nonetheless, I highly recommend the book. It illustrates how properly combined humanistic and scientific interests may produce admirable results. It possesses originality and a successful inclusion of both scientific and ethical considerations." H. C. Moore

+ Am Anthropol 56:1160 D '54 600w

"Professor Hutchinson suffers none of the inhibitions that confine the writing of most scientists to their own work in their own fields. He is at his best in his home territory, which he defines broadly as biology. Readers will share his pleasure in the sense and beauty which he finds in the ordered dynamics of a Connecticut pond, the domestic arrangements of California field mice, and the baroque courtship of the Australian bower-bird. But Professor Hutchinson makes himself equally at home in other branches of science." Gerard Piel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 20 '53 550w

"In the section entitled 'Why Is the Atom So Small,' Mr. Hutchinson refers to the 'Maxwellian demon,' but he does not consider it necessary to describe for his readers this interesting abstract varmint. Often he uses words, such as 'galactotrophouseia' and 'arachnodactylous,' that will stop the average reader short in his stream of consciousness. Readers willing to brave such occasional land mines will find Mr. Hutchinson's book an introduction to many fields of thought that they hardly knew existed. . . One gets the impression that Yale is lucky to have Mr. Hutchinson. His students will have learned zoology from him, but they will have learned, as well, a great many other things." J. N. Leonard

+ N Y Times p14 O 4 '53 450w

"For the professional scientist, these essays will bring mixed feelings of delight and alarm. I make bold to suggest that each such person read certain of them very thoughtfully." K. F. Mather

+ Yale R n s 43:455 spring '54 600w

HUTCHISON, TERENCE WILMOT. Review of economic doctrines, 1870-1929. 456p $6 Oxford

330.1 Economics—History

[53-1537]

"Mr. Hutchison's present work is indeed ■ review and not an exhaustive treatise. In one volume of 430 pages of text he deals with the contributions to economic science of approximately eighty persons, whose works account for the evolution that took place in economics during this sixty-year period." Am Econ R

"In Part I, Hutchison's treatment of his British forebears is generally well balanced and interesting. . . Hutchison's chapters on the Austrians are excellent and comparable with his adept treatment of the British. . . Hutchison's characterization of Wicksell's capital theory will not be taken seriously by those who have familiarized themselves with Wicksell's own, final capital-structure concept. . . On the other hand, one can not complain about Mr. Hutchison's competent discussion of Wicksell's monetary theory. . . A real virtue of Hutchison's Review is that it brings out the contributions of several economists whose works rarely receive mention, to say nothing of the attention they apparently deserve, in standard texts on economic doctrines." C. G. Uhr

+ — Am Econ R 43:936 D '53 1650w

"The volume represents a first-rate achievement of exposition and analysis, which will hold its own among the current harvest of notable contributions to the history of economics. . . This is one of the books which can be read from cover to cover with a great deal of sustained pleasure. It belongs in the hands of all economists whose horizon encompasses more than the narrow task of the day." H. W. Spiegel

+ J Pol Econ 61:542 D '53 1200w

Reviewed by D. H. Macgregor

Manchester Guardian p4 F 13 '53 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p471 Jl 23 '54 1300w

HUTTER, CATHERINE. Alien heart. 276p $3 Holt

54-5449

"This story of a boy's devotion begins before he is in his teens and continues through his twenties. Told in the first person, it covers the years before Hitler's rise until after World War II. Robbie, an American with a father in the diplomatic service, feels Europe is truly his home. So, his is the alien heart, torn between two ways of life and between two loves—the idealized love he has for Sofie and the brotherly kind he feels for Glory, the girl in America." N Y Times

Booklist 50:278 Mr 15 '54

HUTTER, CATHERINE—Continued

"'The Alien Heart' is warm, moving and perceptive as it weaves across international lines in the tormented modern world." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 21 '54 340w

Kirkus 22:10 Ja 1 '54 210w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:205 F 1 '54 60w

"'The Alien Heart' is written scrupulously as a novel about individuals, not a treatise on the times or an apologia for Europe, and it holds its own as a story. Its distinctive contribution, however, goes beyond storytelling to its picture of people in older civilizations that, in part alien to us, have become bound up with our destiny." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 21 '54 450w

"Miss Hutter's knowledge and understanding of the foreign locale are unmistakable and her delineation of the temper of Europe and its people before and after the war is excellently done. Yet Robbie does not have, for this reader, the inner warmth or sensitivity to make his dedication to Sofie a real or moving thing. Nor does Sofie possess the rare qualities to justify his love. The author builds her novel on an unusual premise; what she fails to do is to create two characters who can give this premise credibility." Anne Richards

+ — N Y Times p22 F 21 '54 360w

New Yorker 30:117 Mr 6 '54 120w

"Excellent political conversation does much to reinforce a book whose situation is tenuous and whose characters are only fitfully interesting." Nicolas Monjo

Sat R 37:34 Ap 17 '54 180w

HUTTON, DAVID GRAHAM. See Hutton, G.

HUTTON, EDWARD. Assisi and Umbria revisited. 247p il $4.50 McKay

945 [914.5] Assisi, Umbria [54-19588]

"A prolific writer on Italian art and history, Edward Hutton takes his readers to the city of Assisi and environs in his latest book. Using photographs and history-crammed commentary, Mr. Hutton explores the countryside notable for its Romanesque and Gothic churches, its treasured frescoes and sculpture by master craftsmen like Jacopone da Todi and Giotto." (Sat R) Index.

Reviewed by John Cournos

Commonweal 59:456 F 5 '54 400w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:633 Ap 1 '54 60w

"The place descriptions are good, the comments on artistic and monumental treasures competent. Mr. Hutton's book should be of some use as a guide book if one is not traveling light. Or it is something to read carefully at home before setting out." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p7 F 7 '54 370w

"Mr. Hutton is an always entertaining and informative guide." Siegfried Mandel

+ Sat R 37:54 Ja 2 '54 70w

"So mellow and seasoned a traveller as Mr. Edward Hutton appears, even in a newly written account, as something of a classic. When he goes to Umbria it is not to note ephemeral changes but to recapture permanences. Time, relating either to a fortnight's tour, a five-year interval, or the machinery of rail and road connexions, is immaterial, and his own wanderings between shrine and townlet may in turn belong to 'yesterday, or 50 years ago.' That is of little consequence, since what he sees and loves is not of such brief duration, while his chance encounters and discussions are with people whose nature is unaffected by fashions and topicalities."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p820 D 18 '53 750w

HUTTON, GRAHAM. We too can prosper; the promise of productivity. 248p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

338.01 Efficiency, Industrial. Industrial management [53-12088]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by M. E. Murphy

Ann Am Acad 292:199 Mr '54 460w

Foreign Affairs 32:516 Ap '54 30w

Library J 79:910 My 15 '54 80w

"History will certainly record the international reciprocal productivity team projects of these past war years as one of the most important stimulants to world industrial progress. We Too Can Prosper analyzes Great Britain's profitable experience with this unique experiment and its promise of future gain. In this same process, Americans have been provided with a penetrating and provocative look at themselves. . . This book merits wide circulation on this continent, as well as abroad, for we, too, have much to learn from it. Because Americans are not a people 'to rest on their oars,' Great Britain should not be surprised to find that we are making as good use of this trenchant book as they are." R. R. Manley

+ Management R 43:342 My '54 800w

"Hutton has not written a eulogy of America; along with the good he finds much to criticize. Nor has he denigrated Britain. Here also he finds a great deal to praise. But no country is 'able to contract out of the problems and dilemma posed by the technological revolution of our time.' There is a good deal in all this which might be criticized. But in the main the argument must stand." R. A. Brady

+ Sat R 37:42 Ja 23 '54 700w

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. Doors of perception. 79p $1.50 Harper

615 Mescaline

54-5833

First hand description of the effects of mescaline—a drug which is the active principle of peyote used by the Indians of the Southwest in religious rites.

Atlantic 193:88 Ap '54 190w

Booklist 50:253 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 28 '54 130w

"All this cannot be taken too seriously, but it makes amusing reading as well as a controversial commentary on current intellectual preoccupations. His addicts, but not in full strength, will provide the market."

Kirkus 21:779 D 1 '53 200w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 F 12 '54 360w

Nation 178:245 Mr 20 '54 280w

Reviewed by Noel Annan

New Statesman & Nation 47:228 F 20 '54 650w

"Mr. Huxley may be right in thinking that unlike alcohol or tobacco, mescaline does no harm. But his eloquent description of mescaline's effect on himself does not alter the probability that he could have been as eloquent and as undeniably interesting had he looked merely at the shifting, bright pattern and colors of that charming toy of childhood, the kaleidoscope." Gouverneur Paulding

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 7 '54 800w

"It would be too much to say that the metaphysical convulsions that seized Mr. Huxley under mescaline excessively try our patience. He is usually, in this as in all of his more supersonic flights, well worth attending. One might wish, however, considering the unusual nature of his spree, that he had given us a somewhat briefer review of his current intellectual preoccupations and a somewhat fuller account of exactly what happened, objectively and mechanistically, on that recent bright May morning." Berton Roueche

N Y Times p6 F 7 '54 700w

"Parts of the book, chiefly its discussions of painters, are perceptive, and a few spots, particularly a comparison of Zen Buddhist doctrine with Groucho Marx's style, are authentically funny, but most of it is the old, weary dance of abstractions named Not-Self, Eternity, Mind at Large, Suchness, and the Absolute."

— + New Yorker 30:133 Mr 13 '54 200w

"Whether you agree that the experiment was worth trying or feel that the author is knocking on doors that 'should' be left untouched, you are likely to admit that a challenge is forcibly put, that ideas are freshly and prodigally presented, and that even to try to answer Mr. Huxley honestly might well be a valuable experience in itself for the hostile reader." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 F 18 '54 700w

Reviewed by H. M. Champness
Spec p270 Mr 5 '54 650w

"The fact, which he admits, that even an ideal drug would be conditioned in its effects by the nature of the person who took it forbids any generalization. But a realist approach to the urge, never more feverish perhaps than to-day, to escape from self-imprisonment, is of value. And the comparisons which he draws between the kind of consciousness that he experienced and the vision of certain artists and mystics throw some new light on the nature of pure perception."

Times [London] Lit Sup p115 F 19 '54 750w

Wis Lib Bul 50:66 Mr '54

HUXLEY, JULIAN SORELL. From an antique land; ancient and modern in the Middle East; with 66 photographs by the author. 310p maps $6 Crown

956 [915.6] East (Near East)—Description and travel 54-14343

"It was in 1948 that the author, as Director-General of Unesco, made the extensive journey he describes here. But as the region is the original home of civilisation, and as Dr Huxley is a humanist, a scientist, and an evolutionary thinker, he stopped wherever he went in space in order to make a journey in time back to the beginning of things—in Phoenicia and Egypt, in Persia and Iraq, in Turkey and Crete. He speaks of his experiences as 'a rain of impressions'; but the rain never becomes an indistinct drizzle or an uncontrollable storm." Manchester Guardian

Booklist 51:80 O 15 '54

"Interwoven with his impressions is a large amount of history and archaeology, product of wide reading in the standard works, designed to be informative and helpful to the general reader, but too often creating an air of turgid pedantry, so that Huxley's imaginative, often beautifully delineated portraits of people and places are dimmed by the Baedeker atmosphere with which they are associated. . . It is magnificently illustrated with both colored and black and white photographs taken by the author." R. M. Saunders

+ — Canadian Forum 34:116 Ag '54 350w

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 3 '54 350w

"Well written with nearly 70 photographs, many done in color, all made by the author. A travel book of exceptional merit, with special appeal to the thoughtful reader." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 79:1397 Ag '54 140w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 30 '54 250w

"Mr. Huxley visited the Middle East as Director-General of Unesco, but he is in himself many men—biologist, zoologist, botanist, and not least, an acute observer of history. It is the comments of such different personages that give interest to his accounts of places as often described as Baalbeck and Memphis. From An Antique Land will surprise and instruct even the reader who is at home in the Middle East." Robin Fedden

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:676 My 22 '54 300w

"This delightful recognition of what is rare, beautiful or significant to the intelligence, as well as a perfect willingness to scramble around and look for it (over whatever precipice and at whatever peril) is the fine flower of the book. It shows up repeatedly in the prose passages, of course: skill, charm and erudition are imbibed with the milk in the infancy of any Huxley. But it shows up even more explicitly by means of photographs. These are quite wonderful photographs." Vincent Sheean

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 3 '54 1000w

"During the war and afterward, I visited more than half the places Mr. Huxley describes. But reading this book has made my own memory of them inadequate and unsatisfactory. Mr. Huxley has given me a terribly strong desire to rush off immediately to see them all again; to see what he has seen, and to use his book as a guide and a stimulus. It has that quality. I am very pleased that the book came into my hands." James Aldridge

+ N Y Times p46 O 17 '54 1000w

"Despite the Victorian pace and tone of his book, it is literate as well as learned, and in spots quite funny and charming."

+ New Yorker 30:240 D 4 '54 240w

Reviewed by Carolyn Stull

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 17 '54 500w

"For the reader wishing to learn about the architecture, landscape, history, social structure, and current political situation of Crete, Cyprus, Turkey, Lebanon, Syria, Jordan, Egypt, Iraq, and Iran it is worth reading and painless to take. For the biologist, anthropologist, and other scientist interested in the area it probably contains something new and intriguing. For the lover of good photographs in color and in shadow it is a bargain at six dollars." C. S. Coon

+ Sat R 37:27 N 20 '54 1050w

"The very real virtues of Dr. Huxley's book can briefly be enumerated. It is the product of a lively mind; it brings to the landscapes and social stresses of the Near East a keen and immediate response; and it is adorned by some exceptionally good colour photographs. Having said so much, the reader comes up against an obstacle. The countries through which Dr. Huxley travelled have afforded material for some of the best travel literature in our language. . . Here Dr. Huxley is less successful."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p323 My 21 '54 500w

HYDE, MARGARET OLDROYD. Driving today and tomorrow; il. by Clifford N. Geary. (Whittlesey house bk) 143p $2.50 McGraw

629.28 Automobiles—Driving 54-7363

"[The author] has been a science teacher and a lecturer in elementary education at Temple University. She gives the young driver the information he needs on how engines run and should be cared for with careful attention to the causes of accidents, rules of the road, and a special section on hot rods and national skill competitions." Library J

Booklist 50:403 Je 15 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 22 '54 60w

"This is entertaining and instructive reading for young and advanced students of the road. It's a game we all are playing, and the more libraries in which books like this one appear, the safer and more pleasant will be the sport of driving on traffic-jammed motorways." W. C. Harvey

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 My 13 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:203 Mr 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:720 Ap 15 '54 60w

"An excellent book for schools, libraries and homes, this will be just as illuminating to adults as to teen-agers." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 6 '54 90w

HYDE, M. O.—Continued

"This is a fine book for a beginning driver to read before he—or she—gets behind the wheel." L. T. Bullman

+ N Y Times p35 Je 6 '54 100w

"This book is addressed to boys and girls who are learning to drive, but is excellent reading for every person who drives a car." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:39 Je 19 '54 140w

HYDE, MARGARET OLDROYD. Flight today and tomorrow; foreword by Glenn O. Blough; il. by Clifford N. Geary. (Whittlesey house publication) 140p $2.50 McGraw

629.1 Aeronautics—Juvenile literature
53-10627

"This book on flight is quite comprehensive—covering an introduction to the basic science of flight, private planes, commercial planes, military planes, engine types, jets, rockets, navigation, blind flying, the social and economic significance of aviation, and even space travel. The style is simplified, to make the complex subject matter comprehensible. One-color drawings appear on nearly every page." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 50:244 F 15 '54

Reviewed by John Lewellen
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 D 27 '53
120w

"A satisfactory once-over-lightly on flight by an established school science director. . . All possible essentials, for so short a book, are well presented, and its unique contribution is its over-all view instead of a particular aspect, of all flight."

+ Kirkus 21:539 Ag 15 '53 90w

"Short, simple, declarative sentences are monotonous for bright high school students but are just about right for retarded readers. Explanations are clear and examples, well chosen. Many excellent diagrams. Since there is always need for more material on aviation, this book, with timely chapters on new war planes, rockets, and space travel will be useful in elementary and high school libraries."

Dorothy Schumacher

+ — Library J 78:2226 D 15 '53 70w

HYDE, WILLIAM J. Dig or die, Brother Hyde; as told to Harriet Harmon Dexter; il. by Susanne Suba. 253p $3 Harper

B or 92 Clergy—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-6902

Autobiography of a Canadian-born Methodist minister who began his career at the age of 22, on the Dakota frontier in the 1880s.

Booklist 50:398 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:235 Jl '54 30w

Reviewed by Clarence Seidenspinner
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 2 '54
330w

"These reminiscences of the career of a pioneer Methodist preacher make fascinating reading."

+ Kirkus 22:309 My 1 '54 220w

"Highly recommended for public libraries."

R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 79:620 Ap 1 '54 100w

HYLANDER, CLARENCE JOHN. Animals in armor. 203p il $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

598.1 Reptiles 54-14273

"Takes up crocodiles, turtles, tortoises, lizards and snakes. In foreword and afterword, he gives general facts and recommends further reading. There is an index with scientific names, and there are many clear and handsome photographs. This is for ages over twelve." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:179 D 15 '54

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon
Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '54
100w

Kirkus 22:491 Ag 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p14 N
14 '54 40w

Reviewed by R. K. Plumb

N Y Times pt2 p22 N 14 '54 30w
Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 150w

HYLANDER, CLARENCE JOHN. Macmillan wild flower book. See Macmillan wild flower book

HYMAN, HAROLD MELVIN. Era of the oath; northern loyalty tests during the Civil war and reconstruction. 229p il $5 Univ. of Pa. press

973.78 Loyalty. U.S.—History—Civil war.
Reconstruction 54-7108

"Beginning with the early 1860s this book describes how the Union found it must differentiate between treason and loyalty and how it acted upon this knowledge." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Hyman has written a sound book based upon solid research. For this he deserves commendation. The general excellence of the work is marred by careless proofreading and by fuzzy identifications of the characters."

T. H. Williams

+ — Ann Am Acad 296:177 N '54 400w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 27
'54 120w

HYMAN, MAC. No time for sergeants. 214p
$2.95 Random house

54-9435

Will Stockdale, a Georgia cracker, inducted into the army with difficulty, is the hero. Will tries to help everybody, even sergeants, but his artless way only gets him into trouble. When Will is awarded two medals posthumously, altho he is not dead! it is the payoff.

"A delightful spoof. Mac Hyman writes with the deceptively easy touch of a natural humorist." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 194:90 O '54 350w

Booklist 51:63 O 1 '54

Reviewed by Tom Morrow

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 3 '54
210w

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p18 D 2 '54
230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

Kirkus 22:497 Ag 1 '54 270w

"Occasional contrived humor, especially in the beginning, but this first novel will help out the very light humor collection. Larger fiction collections, and may interest teen-agers." H. L. Leet

Library J 79:1824 O 1 '54 100w

"The book is painstakingly written in first-person Huckleberry Finn talk and you'd expect that any literary colt out of 'Huck' by 'Schweik' ought to be a sure winner, but Mac Hyman, the author, gives it a bad ride all the way. His gags are elaborately contrived and widely spaced." Bill Mauldin

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 3 '54
250w

"You can look high and low for books about the Army that are humorous and that maybe you can give to some young lad going in, and you won't find one because not much funny stuff has been written about the Army, and brother, you know why. Of course, this is all fiction and told for laughs and not very believable but heck, if a whole book written in this redneck and gallus dialect don't wear, it is fun to read." Herbert Mitgang

+ N Y Times p4 O 3 '54 550w

"Something about Mr. Hyman's manner of telling this story indicates that he considers himself a very funny writer."

New Yorker 30:182 O 9 '54 90w

"All this is preposterous but pretty funny. And Mr. Hyman does it well enough so that even the most implausible episodes have a kind of inner plausibility about them—which is the test of this kind of thing. It makes no difference if the basis of such a story is wildly improbable. If the premise once granted, the author can maintain an inner logic, then the story comes off. In Mr. Hyman's case, the whole business is a success, switches and all." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 6 '54 600w

"Will Stockdale is not likely to push Don Quixote or even Schweik off library shelves, but he belongs to the same earnest, honest, and uproarious company and gives a pleasant dividend of lightness to the season's reading." Al-Hine

+ Sat R 37:30 O 2 '54 450w
Time 64:114 O 4 '54 220w

HYMAN, SIDNEY. American president. 342p $4; college ed $3 Harper

353.03 Presidents (United States) 52-5451

This study of the American presidency discusses the nature of the job today and in the past, the history of its development, and the necessary qualifications of the man who holds it.

Reviewed by C. P. Patterson

Ann Am Acad 294:180 J1 '54 850w

Booklist 50:193; 253 Ja 15 '54; Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:158 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by Avery Craven

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 My 23 '54 500w

Reviewed by W. H. Stringer

Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 25 '54 800w

"A most useful contribution to our understanding of that unique, powerful, yet vulnerable institution, the American presidency. Well written, it is of particular merit in contrasting the responsibilities vested in the office with the real obstacles to their fulfillment."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:673 J1 '54 30w

"A book for historians, political scientists, students; thoughtful, provocative even when biased, a thorough job."

+ Kirkus 21:810 D 15 '53 420w

"This study is written in a witty, frequently irreverent style, which is highly readable. Recommended for large public, college and university libraries." James Heslin

+ Library J 79:201 F 1 '54 160w

"While many of Mr. Hyman's readers, whatever their politics, are likely to disagree with him, all of them should find his book very pleasantly stimulating." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 178:181 F 27 '54 700w

Reviewed by W. E. Binkley

New Repub 130:19 Mr 1 '54 1100w

"Numerous judgments expressed in this book seem dubious to this reviewer. At times, as well, Mr. Hyman is needlessly partisan in favor of the Democratic party, which he has served as a campaign aid. He also ignores the case of Congress against the Presidency as it has developed in recent years. Despite these and other lapses 'The American President,' on the whole, is a helpful contribution to a better understanding of this unique office." Samuel Lubell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 14 '54 1050w

"This is a thoughtful and brilliantly written book about the most important office in the Western World. 'The American President,' to my mind, is far superior to 'The American Presidency,' written a decade ago by Harold J. Laski, and it deserves to be read and pondered by the widest possible audience." P. H. Douglas

+ N Y Times p6 F 14 '54 1050w

"Mr. Hyman's book is not the definitive work on the Presidency—no single volume can ever be. But it makes a substantial contribution to our understanding of this most important and baffling institution." P. H. Odegard

+ Sat R 37:21 Mr 13 '54 1300w

"This is a perceptive book on an ever timely subject by a former assistant to Senator Douglas and one time Director of Research of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial Foundation. It is brisk in style and sound in substance and is an exhaustive and compact reference on facts and theories concerning the presidency and the past, present, and probable future procedural problems of its incumbents." Carl Pettersch

+ Social Educ 18:280 O '54 550w
Wis Lib Bul 50:63 Mr '54

HYNDMAN, MRS JANE ANDREWS (LEE) (LEE WYNDHAM, pseud). Susie and the dancing cat, by Lee Wyndham; pictures by Jane Miller. 80p $2.25 Dodd

54-6493

A sequel to A Dance for Susie (Book Review Digest 1953). Susie is now in her fourth year in Miss Mara's class, and her award of real ballet slippers comes at the end of the story. Even the cat Susie brought to class receives an award. For ages 7 to 10.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 23 '54 120w

"Recommended." Mary Strang

+ Library J 79:1065 Je 1 '54 30w

"The happenings are so relaxed as to be scarcely a story at all. Children interested in ballet will learn some practical facts about the art from the note to parents at the end. Jane Miller's drawings have wit and easy charm." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p14 My 30 '54 150w

I

ICKES, HAROLD LE CLAIRE. Secret diary; v. 2, The inside struggle, 1936-1939. 759p $6 Simon & Schuster

973.917 Statesmen—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. U.S.—Politics and government—1933-1953 (53-9701)

The second volume in the series of Ickes diaries. "This volume, covering the period from Roosevelt's first reelection to the beginning of war in Europe, carries us more than half way, in time, in Ickes' long service as Secretary of the Interior and relentless recording angel of the New Deal." (N Y Times)

Booklist 50:397 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by E. D. Canham

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 27 '54 240w

"The second volume of Harold Ickes' secret diary—aptly named 'The Inside Struggle'—is a much better book than the first volume. There is, in it, somehow, more than the author ever put there. The hour in which it was written contributed something of its own, so that what begins as simple gossip assumes now and then the somber dignity of words spoken by a man who stands at the edge of descending night and sees doom taking shape in the shadows." Bruce Catton

+ Nation 179:35 J1 10 '54 750w

"The first volume of this massive diary showed Mr. Ickes to be a shrewd observer and confirmed the image of a truculent but honorable public figure which the country had gained during his long term as Secretary of the Interior. The second volume fortifies these points; and it has the advantage of going deeper and spreading the net of its interest more widely." August Heckscher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 My 9 '54 2000w

"The one thing above all others which becomes increasingly clear with the publication of this second volume of the secret diaries of pugnacious and painstaking old Harold Ickes is that in overwhelming measure they are being kept secret still. Those who buy this volume will get at least six dollars' worth of historical fireworks, but it is already obvious that if future historians could now confront readers of this much-cut version their verdict would be: You ain't heard nothing yet!" Jonathan Daniels

ICKES, H. L.—Continued

N Y Times p7 My 9 '54 1900w

"It is a negative virtue of the diary that it is very nearly jokeless. Contrived humor takes contriving, and Ickes, dictating these entries at what must have been breakneck speed, didn't have the time for it. The most that can be said for the manner of the diary is that it is straightforward and always concrete; the style, though often clumsy, is good, clear, common-American English. Many unengrossing books have been written in precisely the same form. This one is engrossing." R. H. Rovere

+ — New Yorker 30:126 Je 5 '54 1250w

Reviewed by Richard Johnston

San Francisco Chronicle p11 My 30 '54 600w

"The diary is a mine of riches. To be sure, the circumstances of its composition were responsible for defects as well as merits. It is obviously a diary dictated day by day to a stenographer. . . . Seldom does a diarist show so little interpretive or philosophical quality. . . . But the entertainment value of the book is high, for it is suffused with emotion, full of novel and revealing incident, and studded with good stories. Its historical value, which is more important, doubtless gains on the whole from Ickes's habit of dictating close to the event and without inhibitions. Many scenes are almost as vivid as if the reader were present." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R 37:10 My 15 '54 850w

Time 63:120 My 10 '54 750w

ICKES, HAROLD LE CLAIRE. Secret diary; v. 3, The lowering clouds, 1939-1941. 695p $6 Simon & Schuster

973.917 Statesmen—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. U.S.—Politics and government—1933-1953 (53-9701)

"The third volume of Mr. Ickes' Secret Diary brings his story up to the day of Pearl Harbor. In it he discusses the domestic political situation, including an extensive account of the 'third term' uproar, plans for mobilizing for war, and his various battles with other political figures, among them the President. Of particular interest are his remarks about the Dies Committee and the attitude of the Administration toward it, and his very frank attitude about the need for the United States to get into the war." Library J

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 26 '54 1100w

"A highly personal running commentary, over-detailed for today's reader."

Kirkus 22:697 O 1 '54 240w

"Fine and brave as he was, Mr. Ickes sometimes sounds a little petulant, but since this is an unedited account, perhaps this is an unfair criticism." Donald Wasson

Library J 79:2318 D 1 '54 210w

"To pick up the third volume of Mr. Ickes' diary is, for one who has read its predecessors, to be immersed again in a familiar world. The outward circumstances of the times change: by now the war has broken out in Europe, Roosevelt is being elected for a third term, and the attack on Pearl Harbor is inexorably approaching. But the days pass for Mr. Ickes amid the same rounds of conferences, speeches, cabinet meetings, travels. He continues old feuds and opens new ones. He submits his resignation to the President at more or less regular intervals." August Heckscher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 5 '54 1200w

"The psychologists as well as the historian will find this third volume of the monumental diaries of Harold Ickes full of fascinating material. . . . War had come to America, but not in any sense of leadership to him. He must have been a lonely man on the Maryland road. And his book about such a man, lost and lonely in a great place at a great time, stands as a human story and not merely as one volume in a series of thick diaries by an articulate, able and often angry former official." Jonathan Daniels

+ N Y Times p6 D 5 '54 1350w

New Yorker 30:146 D 18 '54 200w

ICKIS, MARGUERITE, and ESH, REBA SELDEN. Book of arts and crafts. 275p il $4.95 Assn. press

745.5 [680] Handicraft

54-7697

Instructions for making more than a thousand useful things from low-cost materials. Can be used by parents, teachers, and therapists. Arranged under headings: crafts in the home; crafts for personal adornment; crafts for camps and playgrounds; crafts for little children; and crafts for special needs. Indexes.

Booklist 50:274 Mr 15 '54

"While many of the crafts are covered only briefly, the sections on crafts for camps and playgrounds, and that on crafts for small children, present many fresh and detailed ideas which should endear the book to anyone involved in summer camp or vacation church school work." M. M. Remenih

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ap 18 '54 50w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1317 J1 '54 20w

Special Libraries 45:217 My '54 10w

IDELL, ALBERT EDWARD. Mighty Milo; a series of incidents in his now famous career by Fred Anspach, also known as Honeyboy Hackenschmidt, by Phillips Rogers [pseud]. 191p $2.95 Hermitage

54-6512

Humorous novel about wrestling in which Fred Anspach, amateur wrestler, describes his friendship with the Greek wrestler, Milo, and the bearing it had on his life.

Booklist 50:341 My 1 '54

Kirkus 22:76 F 1 '54 210w

"A delicious spoofing of wrestling as a show business, with no holds barred. Idell is a popular historical novelist, who was a middle-weight wrestler. Highly amusing, for general public." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:772 Ap 15 '54 80w

IKIN, ALICE GRAHAM. Life, faith and prayer; with an introductory note by Leslie D. Weatherhead. 127p $2.50 Oxford

248 Christianity. Psychology, Religious. Psychology, Pastoral

54-6909

An English author, widely known for her work in psychology and psychiatry, here discusses some aspects of the tension between science and religion. Partial contents: Scientific thinking and religious experience; Youth and middle age; Psychological problems of maturity; Psychology and prayer.

Christian Century 71:640 My 26 '54 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 25 '54 100w

ILEANA, princess of Rumania. Hospital of the Queen's Heart (Spitalul Inima Reginei). 310p $3.50 Rinehart

B or 92 Spitalul Inima Reginei, Bran, Rumania

54-6378

Continues the life story of a Rumanian princess, begun in I Live Again (Book Review Digest 1952). She describes the founding of a hospital on her Rumanian estate, in memory of her mother, Queen Marie. Her experiences are recounted up to the coming of the communists and her own exile.

Booklist 50:309; 351 Ap 15 '54; My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:217 Je '54 40w

"The story of the hospital is written in serene simplicity, in gentleness that is true gentility. It is a heart warming book of touching personal stories." M. B. Snyder

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 23 '54 300w

"A testament of faith, of fortitude and of patience, this has a warmth and an unashamed sentiment that is touching and inspiring."

+ Kirkus 22:180 Mr 1 '54 160w

"The book is written seriously and with sentiment and reminds one often of Queen Marie of Roumania for whom the hospital was named. Readable but not an essential book for all libraries." W. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:857 My 1 '54 90w

"Full of vivacity, humor and religious inspiration, the book should find a ready public." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 9 '54 230w

Springf'd Republican p12D Jl 18 '54 200w

ILIFF, MRS FLORA (GREGG). People of the blue water; my adventures among the Walapai and Havasupai Indians. 271p il $3.75 Harper

970.1 [970.3] Havasupai Indians. Walapai Indians. Indians of North America—Education 54-8956

"Mrs. Iliff has taught American Indians in Arizona, Oklahoma, and Oregon for many years. This book is the account of her experiences among the Walapai and Havasupai tribes in the Colorado River Canyons at the turn of the century. Both groups held to ancestral ways of life, and Mrs. Iliff, as teacher and superintendent, had many amusing and some harrowing adventures in trying to get them to adopt the ways of the white man." Library J

Booklist 51:79 O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:4 O '54 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 12 '54 300w

"It is interesting as an adventure story in an era when few women dared such independence, and it is as easy to read as a chatty sort of diary. But it has value beyond this."

Helen Henley

+ Christian Science Monitor p4 N 4 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:425 Jl 1 '54 180w

"The general reader will enjoy this lively narrative and the ethnologist may obtain some valuable data from it." E. T. Smith

+ Library J 79:1498 S 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Mari Sandoz

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p3 S 19 '54 500w

"'People of the Blue Water' makes delightful reading about an exotic life in a stupendous natural setting, with overtones of universal human meanings. And behind all the charm and color is a solid background of factual accuracy." Angie Debo

+ N Y Times p26 O 31 '54 450w

"Mrs. Iliff's pleasant recollections, informally set down as they are here, are worth having. They reflect a way of life now almost vanished, and they picture, for the record, what things were like along beautiful Havasu Creek all those years ago." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 3 '54 600w

"A quiet, good-humored book about a vanishing life."

+ Time 64:122 S 13 '54 130w

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS RESEARCH ASSOCIATION. Manpower in the United States. See Haber, W.

INGLE, CHARLES. Waters of the end. 213p $3 Lippincott

53-8927

"When Brian Bruce was twenty, he returned with his Brother Rob and his cousin Richard to their old burned-out home 'Sealey' in the tidelands to recondition their boat and sail her into a thunderstorm on the tenth anniversary of his father's drowning. At home forty miles away, his grandmother Bruce, chatelaine at 'Test,' his mother, Barbara, and his uncle, Henry relived their memories and repelled their frustration in ways peculiar to each." Library J

"There is little to recommend about this effort. The characters are unrealistic and unimpressive, and the narrative is a feeble and faltering thing. Outside of a weak hint that a sensitive personality is at work this flight of fancy never gets fully airborne." George Miles

— Commonweal 59:385 Ja 15 '54 240w

"Lifelike, perceptive, plotless, successful with this reader who recommends it for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 78:2212 D 15 '53 80w

"Better read and evaluate appeal." Karl Brown

Library J 79:145 Ja 15 '54 140w

"Excellently written and sustaining its mood throughout, 'The Water of the End' must be judged a novel of promise and achievement—but both a little sad, as if the sun also sets upon the flaming youth of today." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 24 '54 600w

"Mr. Ingle aims at the heart of the matter, occasionally lands one near the target—and deserves the interest he'll get. May his unmistakable talent be more firmly harnessed next time." J. K.

+ — N Y Times p23 Ja 17 '54 600w

"Under a title borrowed from a poem by D. H. Lawrence, Charles Ingle's novel represents an ambitious attempt to speak up for the Silent Generation. If it fails in its larger purpose, there is yet much to recommend this first book by a 27-year-old." D. R. McD.

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 18 '54 400w

"Fails to transform the author's overriding interests into the stuff of fiction, ultimately destroying the effectiveness of the novel both as poetry and as fiction." Milton Crane

— Sat R 37:44 F 6 '54 320w

INGRES, JEAN AUGUSTE DOMINIQUE. Ingres [paintings; with text] by Georges Wildenstein. 26p 200il 112pl 8 col pl $12.50 Phaidon

759.4 Paintings, French

54-4521

"The text is no more than a short introduction of some ten pages, and the bulk of the letterpress is devoted, firstly to an historical survey of the painter's life, year by year, in small type, and secondly to an extensive analytical catalogue of his works. Three hundred and twenty five items are listed; the most important of them are illustrated on 120 full-page plates, and many of the others are reproduced throughout the text of the catalogue on a smaller, but perfectly adequate, scale. This is a most satisfactory system, and is to be fully commended, for good illustrations and authoritative lists, with dates, are the things that are most needed by the art historian at the moment." Spec

"Recommended." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:1517 S 1 '54 140w

"Many of the portraits are masterpieces. . . The introduction by M. Wildenstein is no doubt the result of long thought and study, but it is a pity the author has been rash enough to try to translate himself from the French; it not only makes it a labour to read him—it also leads to real ambiguity." Stephne Bone

+ — Manchester Guardian p6 F 5 '54 200w

"The present volume as a whole does not measure up to the standard previously set in these monographs. . . Wildenstein's nine-page essay can only be described as a perfunctory assortment of easy platitudes. . . Although the catalogue of Ingres' work in oil is an admirably professional job, it has its limitations." S. L. Faison

INGRES, J. A. D.—Continued

— + Nation 179:347 O 16 '54 750w

"It is hard to think of a more beautiful picture book, or one so suited to the pictorial consistency of its subject. In addition to the plates, which are perfection, there is a most useful catalogue. It is probably not quite perfect; the revealing early criticisms would have been worth fuller note, and the reference to Hourticq, perhaps pardonably, is strangely confused. . . The critical apparatus here is by far the best obtainable: the introduction, by contrast, will certainly be the least used part of the book. It was evidently conceived in the French grandiloquent style, which is appropriate enough. But the execution, or perhaps the translation (if it was translated) has gone awry." Lawrence Gowing

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:444 Ap 3 '54 600w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ag 8 '54 40w

Reviewed by Howard Devree

N Y Times p5 J1 4 '54 120w

"Phaidon Publishers's new catalogue raisonné of Ingres' paintings appears at a time when interest in the master is particularly appropriate. It was compiled by Georges Wildenstein, one of the giant art dealers of today. At least twenty-three paintings by Ingres have passed through his firm or are still in its possession. A labor of love was thus mixed with more habitual routines, but M. Wildenstein's generosity in undertaking his formidable task, and of financing the vast amount of research that went into completing it, has put us all in his debt." T. B. Hess

+ Sat R 37:12 Je 5 '54 1300w

Reviewed by D. T. Rice

+ Spec p187 F 12 '54 450w

Reviewed by Clive Bell

Times [London] Lit Sup pxxviii Ag 1 '54 2200w

INGSTAD, HELGE MARCUS. Nunamiut; among Alaska's inland Eskimos. 303p il $3.95 Norton

979.8 [917.98] Kaniaqmiut (Eskimo tribe) 54-11657

"So many books have been written about the Eskimos that one thought they were pretty well known. Now comes a Norwegian scientist with a book about some unknown people. They are Eskimos; they speak the language in use along the Alaskan coast and way over to Greenland; yet they only go down to the sea for short trading visits. They hunt caribou in the interior of Alaska and live in the heart of remote mountains north of the forest border. Helge Ingstad shows us the Nunamiut Eskimos as human beings. They have long been in contact with white traders and trappers, but none of those understood that they were dealing with a people unknown to the world at large." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:11 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:31 N '54 20w

"At first sight I supposed that 'Nunamiut' would appeal chiefly to the student of primitives and perhaps the northern traveler. But Mr. Ingstad soon won interest by his narrative skill and insight." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 19 '54 550w

"Descriptions of hunting methods, housing, eating, sex mores combine with insights into Nunamiut mentality and genuine friendships with the people to give a valuable and personal account of a valiant, lovable people."

+ Kirkus 22:423 J1 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1597 S 15 '54 70w

"Unfortunately, his translations are often unlikely, unintentionally humorous, or just wrong. Small matter though, for some of the Nunamiut know English and all of them know the jargon. Praise be, there are a folding map, an index and a bibliography in this book; but there are also incorrect and various spellings of the same name, bad grammar and clumsy idiom." Evelyn Stefansson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 8 '54 1000w

"Ingstad's studies of the Nunamiut are valuable to science. He also had added in a most splendid way to the understanding of man's fortitude and love of place. Whether they can survive is not discussed in the book. But as long as they are there, the spirit that keeps them alive today will enrich their traditions. Helge Ingstad's book displays the spirit, a great value in a highly entertaining volume."

Peter Freuchen

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 8 '54 600w

+ New Yorker 30:154 S 11 '54 130w

"How much Ingstad contributes scientifically here is for scientists to decide. He does tell his story pleasantly. The glimpse he provides into a culture thousands of years old will interest many, and the unpretentious manner in which he presents his story will leave most readers with a genuine liking for him and for the friends he made among the Nunamiut."

J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 26 '54 500w

"What Mr. Ingstad tells us of the Nunamiuts he tells with no attempt at dramatic emphasis or exaggeration, yet the drama is there, and it is essentially tragic. Vilhjalmur Stefansson's report on the Eskimos of Coronation Gulf was more important from an anthropological and literary point of view, but we are glad to learn, before they vanish into oblivion, of the people of Raven Lake. Not the least of what we learn of them comes from Mr. Ingstad's excellent photographs." Raymond Holden

+ Sat R 37:13 S 4 '54 700w

Reviewed by Oswald Wynd

Spec p178 Ag 6 '54 80w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 10 '54 390w

"Herr Ingstad's account of the Nunamiut has the straightforward virtues of the simple and the matter-of-fact."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p503 Ag 6 '54 250w

INKS, JAMES M. Eight bailed out; ed. by Lawrence Klingman; il. by Morton D. Rosenfeld and John H. Schuffert. 222p $3 Norton

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939-1945—Yugoslavia 54-7903

"In diary form relates the experiences of an American bomber crew who, posing as Chetniks, lived among German troops for months after a forced landing in Yugoslavia. Map, drawings." Bookmark

Booklist 50:377 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:132 Mr '54 20w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 23 '54 110w

"The book has dash, romance, and plenty of excitement. Recommended for general collections." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:448 Mr 1 '54 140w

"The author's bafflement about the Yugoslav situation is understandable. His book is another of the many World War II escape stories, and it is unusual mainly because the escape locale is different." Marcus Duffield

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 21 '54 350w

"The author dedicates his book to the Chetniks. This strange attitude by the author, which goes beyond gratitude and enters the field of political interpretation, is where the book stumbles. The irony of the dedication, especially since the author and his crewmates saw with their own eyes that the Partisans and not the Chetniks fought the Nazis, is repeated in a number of places. Though the book makes fairly interesting reading as edited by Lawrence Klingman, it is infected with the author's political naïveté." Herbert Mitgang

N Y Times p14 Mr 14 '54 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 18 '54
300w

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 21 '54
160w

"This volume is part of the raw material of history, and should be read by those seeking to understand the implications, both national and international of World War II for a country like Yugoslavia. The author himself attempts to draw no clear-cut conclusions, but he does record in a very direct and personal way many things that happened among the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:154 Je '54 220w

INNES, HAMMOND, pseud. See Hammond-Innes, R.

INNES, MICHAEL, pseud. See Stewart, J. I. M.

INSTITUTE FOR RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL STUDIES. Jewish theological seminary of America. Hour of insight. See MacIver, R. M., ed.

INTERNATIONAL BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT. Economic development of Mexico; report of the Combined Mexican working party [comp. by Paul Ortiz Mena and others]. 392p il $10
Johns Hopkins press

330.972 Mexico—Economic conditions. Finance—Mexico 53-6495

"This differs from the earlier reports in that it is not the product of a Bank mission, but of a working party of two members from the Bank's staff, and of two Mexican members from Nacional Financiera and the Banco de Mexico. The discussion is centered on national income, and little attention is given to financial institutions, the fiscal system, government administration, or such problems as education and public health, that have been covered in detail in some of the Bank's earlier country reports. About two thirds of the text of 150 pages is a description and analysis, backed by extensive statistical appendices, of growth in the principal economic fields in the period 1939-1950, with particular emphasis on output, investment, government policy, and the prospects for the future. The remainder of the Report deals largely with the balance of payments, with special reference to foreign investment." Pol Sci Q

Reviewed by R. S. Smith

J Pol Econ 62:177 Ap '54 1050w

"The Report is written in readable, straightforward English, and the statistical material is well presented. It gives an excellent statement of the accomplishments of the Mexican economy, and a judicious presentation of the actions that will contribute to the country's continued economic growth." F. W. Fetter

+ Pol Sci Q 69:145 Mr '54 850w

"The exhaustive survey is supported by numerous charts, tables, and maps, and is an invaluable source of information for public officials, private investors, and economic historians."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:316 S '53 280w

INTERPRETER'S Bible: the Holy Scriptures in the King James and revised standard versions with general articles and introduction, exegesis, exposition for each book of the Bible [Nolan B. Harmon, editor] 12v; v3 1198p maps $8.75 Abingdon

220.7 Bible. Whole—Commentaries. Bible. O.T. (51-12276)

Volume 3 of this twelve volume work includes the first and second books of Kings, the first and second books of Chronicles, and the books of Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther, and Job.

Booklist 51:98 N 1 '54

"Here it seemed that there might be a chance to break the monotony of my unstinted praise for the 'great commentary' by saying that this volume, the seventh in order of appearance, is rather dull—except, of course, for the section on Job. Job is always exciting. . . It turns out that I was wrong. If there is to be a dull volume in this 12-volume commentary (which I doubt), this isn't it. All the more praise to its authors for having brought to life so many passages which have little prima facie interest for people of this age." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:1369 N 10 '54
1150w

+ Kirkus 22:699 O 1 '54 380w

"The Interpreter's Bible is recommended heartily as essential for all libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 79:2449 D 15 '54 550w

INTERPRETER'S Bible; the Holy Scriptures in the King James and revised standard versions with general articles and introduction, exegesis, exposition for each book of the Bible [editorial board: George Arthur Buttrick, and others] 12v; v9, The Acts of the Apostles; The Epistle to the Romans. 668p maps $8.75 Abingdon

220.7 Bible. Whole—Commentaries. Bible. N.T.—Acts. Bible. N.T.—Romans

(51-12276)

Volume 9 of this twelve volume work includes the Acts of the Apostles and the Epistle to the Romans.

Booklist 50:290 Ap 1 '54

"My impressions are all favorable so far as they go, but a review of a work of such magnitude as this so soon after its publication can scarcely be more than a preliminary report." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:465 Ap 14 '54
250w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 20
'54 280w

"Some of the exposition is wordy, but in the case of Dr. Ferris' interpretation of Acts there is provided a plethora of suggestions for sermons, some of them but distantly related to the text of the book. But, on the whole, the high standard of the previously issued volumes is maintained, giving us a book that is both scholarly and practical."

+ — Kirkus 22:187 Mr 15 '54 240w

IRANEK-OSMECKI, GEORGE, tr. See Unseen and silent

IRION, HENRY GIFFORD. Windward of reason. 376p $3.50 Dial press

54-7126

"When she was eleven in 1929, and practically an orphan, Virginia-bred Mary went to Back Bay Boston to live with her bachelor cousin Charles Brendan. For the next ten vital years she was reared according to his rational Plan, involving a private tutor, Bryn Mawr, frequent visits to concerts, lectures, museums and trips to Europe. It was not altogether her cousin's fatuous fault that she turned into a potential Frankenstein with destructive powers even over herself." Library J

"Fine first novel recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 79:982 My 15 '54 90w

"A solid if sluggish novel whose strongest claim to attention is the author's facility in writing in the first person as a young girl. . . Unhappily, after modernizing Dickens for some five-sixths of its course, 'Windward of Reason' suddenly yawns. . . The reader can only assume that Cousin Charles's great plan is totally defective, with evil implicit; he gets no clue from the author. It would almost seem that Mr. Irion, after carefully and lovingly writing most of his book, laid the manuscript aside and returned to it in a different and wearier mood."

IRION, H. G.—Continued

— + Nation 179:158 Ag 21 '54 280w

"This is a competently written novel. . . . At times the author, H. Gifford Irion, captures for the reader a glimpse of beauty and of truth, as when Mary Brendan gazed wonderingly at the stained glass and gargoyles of certain European cathedrals." H. F. West

+ N Y Times p23 Je 13 '54 550w

IRWIN, MARGARET EMMA FAITH (MRS J. R. MONSELL). Bloodstock, and other stories. 206p $3 Harcourt

54-9725

A collection of eleven short stories arranged in three groups: Stories from Ireland; Uncanny stories; and Mrs Oliver Cromwell and Where beauty lies.

"Miss Irwin has been both historian and biographer, as well as a writer of fiction, and with a handful of sentences she can call up time or place, or build a little novel of character. The stories opening this collection are laid in Ireland, the troubled Ireland of Cromwell's day and of our own, and have as much freshness as though no one had ever written before of horseflesh or the long-dead Irish kings. . . . Miss Irwin's second group of stories is ghostly, with the black arts her special preserve. . . . The last two stories in Miss Irwin's book are set by themselves. 'Where Beauty Lies' is a not-too-successful attempt at a comedy of manners, but 'Mrs. Oliver Cromwell' is a masterly and pathetic little story." Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 26 '54 500w

"Admirers of Margaret Irwin's brightly tapestried historical novels will find happy recognition in the eleven stories here collected. . . . If the tone is usually Elizabethan, at least it is not a monotone; and if the climate is invariably warm and romance-producing, it nearly always stops before sentimentality. What faults there are stem mostly from an excess of costuming and an effusiveness which at times all but chokes the gossamer plots and fragile actors." James Kelly

+ N Y Times p32 S 26 '54 500w

"'Stories from Ireland' [has] five horsey little tales about some horsey Irish people and Irish horses. . . . Neither the stories nor the people have much to offer. Neither does the second category of Miss Irwin's offerings, a collection which she has labeled 'Uncanny Stories.' . . . Fortunately, however, Miss Irwin has included a third and unclassified section which she has simply called by the names of the two stories in it. In the first of these, 'Mrs. Oliver Cromwell,' Miss Irwin has returned to the vineyards where her grapes are ripest and has written a moving and intuitive story of the dowdy wife of the Lord Protector of England. . . . If you can wade through the rest you may find that this historical one is the only one which Miss Irwin's heavy hand has made worthwhile." John Haverstick

— + Sat R 37:30 N 6 '54 270w

IS the common man too common? an informal survey of our cultural resources and what we are doing about them, by Joseph Wood Krutch [and others]. 146p $2.75 Univ. of Okla. press

917.3 U.S.—Intellectual life 54-5938

"This book might have been called 'The Cream of the Saturday Review,' since the bulk of its contents first appeared in that magazine. It consists of examinations of certain phenomena questionably described as 'American culture' by Mr. Krutch, the late Eduard C. Lindeman, Alistair Cooke, Gilbert Seldes, Arthur Mayer, Norman Cousins, Harold K. Guinzburg, A. Whitney Griswold, John W. Dodds, C. W. de Kiewiet, George F. Kennan and D. W. Brogan." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:417 Jl 1 '54

"A brief, provocative symposium."

+ Bookmark 13:235 Jl '54 20w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 Ag '54

Reviewed by Jean Holzhauer

Commonweal 60:588 S 17 '54 1400w

Nation 179:448 N 20 '54 300w

"To a man these are able citizens who write well. Every essay in the book has some distinction and several are brilliant; but to the question, 'Is the common man too common?' they answer, 'Yes and no,' which is substantially the answer given by a dozen other studies of our contemporary culture. It is doubtless correct, but it isn't exciting. The most interesting aspect of the book, adumbrated in several of the essays but sharply defined in one only, is the idea that this existing American culture is no more a culture than the steel framework is a building; and the second idea, yet more faintly suggested, that the completed structure will astonish us all." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Jl 11 '54 470w

New Yorker 30:91 Je 26 '54 200w

"The list of contributors to this informal survey is distinguished—Joseph Wood Krutch, Alistair Cooke, Gilbert Seldes, George F. Kennan, and eight others—and the conclusions are interesting, if not always heartening. The articles deal specifically with our own civilization and its cultural trends, and they originally appeared in this magazine." William Murray

+ Sat R 37:40 Ag 7 '54 180w

ISBERT, MRS MARGOT BENARY-. See Benary-Isbert, M.

ISH-KISHOR, JUDITH. Joel is the youngest; il. by Jules Gotlieb. 190p $2.75 Messner

54-10587

"The richness of the heritage of a Sephardic Jewish family in Brooklyn forms the matrix of this story of 7-year old Joel, who proved himself a person in his family pattern." Kirkus

Booklist 51:139 N 15 '54

"Tho not always entirely orthodox, this is a gentle and fine story of Jewish home life, holidays, and customs." Roberta Forsyth

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 14 '54 160w

"Although the book is, of course, planned to get in historical and holiday material, one forgets that it is contrived because the author writes well and makes Joel and his family and friends so real that one is interested in everything that happens to them." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:333 O '54 170w

"The Mendozas have deep roots, both Spanish and American. They are a likeable family, deeply conscious of their religious background, yet alert to the world around them. . . . Adult and aware handling."

+ Kirkus 22:388 Jl 1 '54 90w

ISHERWOOD, CHRISTOPHER. World in the evening. 301p $3.50 Random house

54-5960

Stephen Monk discovers his second wife's infidelity at a garish Hollywood party. He rushes East to his Quaker aunt-by-courtesy, Sarah Pennington, who lives in a Philadelphia suburb. Injured in an accident Stephen lies in bed for many weeks, reviewing his life: his happy first marriage; a homosexual experience; his second marriage; and his divorce. The book closes as Stephen and his ex-wife have a farewell party in New York, on the eve of Stephen's departure for the war.

"The World in the Evening seems to me a very disappointing performance for the author of Good-bye to Berlin." C. J. Rolo

— Atlantic 194:84 Jl '54 270w

Booklist 50:451 Jl 15 '54

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 4 '54 190w

"So much that is featureless and commonplace in The World in the Evening cannot extinguish the authentic tone of Mr. Isherwood's voice: one catches it here in the unmistakable accents of humane sympathy; in the note of private feeling which suddenly, surprisingly reverberates; in the occasional echo of raillery, and the delicious sound of vanity expiring upon wit. That voice is quiescent in this novel, though not stilled; all it lacks is linguistic discipline and restraint, and a theme which will project it into the elegance, power and authority of art." Richard Hayes

+ — Commonweal 60:421 J1 30 '54 1100w

Kirkus 22:247 Ap 1 '54 130w

"From time to time various characters assure Stephen that he is so charming and delightful as to be able to get anyone to do anything for him; but the Stephen depicted is essentially a sensitive bore whose experiences the reader follows only because of the felicity of Isherwood's writing." Louis Barron

Library J 79:1051 Je 1 '54 210w

"Mr. Isherwood still writes with the unsparing honesty that marks all his work, and he is still a master of narrative, but he shows for the first time an emotional unsureness in filling out his characters. It is perhaps necessary in his development as a writer that he has forsworn comedy for a more serious—if it really is—attitude to life, but the price seems a high one." Patricia Hodgart

+ — Manchester Guardian p6 Je 29 '54 330w

"The frame of this Rahmenerzählung . . . is surely the worst piece of writing the author has ever published, incredibly slick and stale; and the themes refuse to hold the connection he tries to establish between them and keep falling into an unintended one. It is only in the narrative of Stephen Monk's past life, his two marriages, his homosexual experience, and his relationship to the elderly Quaker, Aunt Sarah—these flashbacks do make up about two-thirds of the novel—that Isherwood is again an admirable writer, in possession of his right style. But only the style is right; the novel itself might as well have been a case history, for all that Isherwood was able to do with it." Isaac Rosenfeld

Nation 179:15 J1 3 '54 750w

Reviewed by J. B. Ludwig

New Repub 131:19 J1 5 '54 1400w

"The World in the Evening is simply the Berlin stories, re-sown in America and coming up as a poor thin crop of lowered vitality. Since Mr. Isherwood is a clever man and an ingenious story-teller, he is not negligible; but I did not for a moment believe in his lapsed and worried Quaker or his two dreary wives and his hysterical boy-friend. There remain only a descriptive talent and a few witty aphorisms." V. S. Pritchett

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:803 Je 19 '54 220w

"Christopher Isherwood's book is of a kind to be read on a lonely evening—and a minor pleasure that may be derived from the reading of it is overhearing its American characters talk as Americans actually speak the English language. No writer, British born or of American growth, has a better ear for conversation than Christopher Isherwood. His gift of hearing things said aloud never fails to shock the reader into recognition." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Je 6 '54 550w

"The new Isherwood novel is a brilliant enigma. It is brilliant in the manner to which Mr. Isherwood's earlier work has accustomed us, in that body of precisely presented detail that evokes so effortlessly, as it seems, a variety of social atmospheres. It is enigmatic in that whatever it means seems to exist not so much in what it asserts as in its structure, which is to say in the juxtaposition of its assertions. It is a novel of contrasting persons and types of scene, and seems ultimately to rest on the juxtaposition of contrasting worlds." Mark Schorer

+ N Y Times p6 Je 6 '54 900w

Reviewed by Brendan Gill

New Yorker 30:72 J1 10 '54 230w

"The novel does not seem to me satisfactory, but I cannot trace its unsatisfactoriness to the homosexual theme. Rather, it seems to me, the trouble lies in the mechanism of the story and in the main characters. . . I should like to cite some of the descriptive passages in the book, which are, in many instances, rather wonderful bits of writing. It must also be said that curiosity about the next development of the theme, together with expectation aroused by the device of removing veil after veil from the past, piques the curiosity of the reader. But the awkward mechanism of the structure, the monotonous lack of distinctiveness in the conversations, and the uncertainty about the chief characters, for me, at least, got in the way of my accepting the story as a first-class work of art." H. M. Jones

+ — Sat R 37:14 Je 5 '54 950w

"The first thing to be said is that this novel was worth waiting a long time for. Mr. Isherwood was in a very difficult position, and he has the right to expect a sympathetic as well as a demanding audience." John Wain

+ Spec p742 Je 18 '54 2050w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 1 '54 170w

"Author Isherwood's prose still has the crisp grace of a good tennis match. He is an exterior decorator of chic and competence, whether the setting is Athens, the Alps, or the South of France. But by now he has splashed all the water out of his stagnant, neurotic pool and seems more and more like his hero—a high-and-dry orphan of the Saxophone Age."

+ — Time 63:118 Je 7 '51 550w

"The World in the Evening is more a record of experience than an individual character-study. At moments Mr. Isherwood writes with surprising sentimentality and at others he is unnecessarily and embarrassingly frank, but at all times he is impressive as a writer who with complete sincerity and to the best of his ability puts his considerable talent to the service of his experience."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Je 18 '54 800w

IUSUPOV, FELIKS FELIKSOVICH, kniaz.
Lost splendour; tr. from the French by Ann Green and Nicholas Katkoff. 307p il $4.50
Putnam

B or 92 Russia—History

54-10507

"This offspring of one of Russia's wealthiest noble families, famous as assassin of Rasputin, writes his autobiography from his childhood in the eighties to end of First World War."

Library J

Reviewed by Milton Crane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 O 17 '54 200w

Kirkus 22:471 J1 15 '54 190w

"Not a scholarly nor literary work, but author has gift of sketching people and relating humorous sidelights of the world of Russia's highest ruling circles, shedding some light on personalities and mores of his times. He has remained a typical product of that period, a combination of sophistication and childishness as shown in mystical visions and miracles, and a few equally childish antisemitic hints. But on the whole quite interesting and amusing, while some parts are even exciting, as in the description of Rasputin's death. Suitable as light reading." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:1502 S 1 '54 110w

"One puts down the book with a feeling that here was an aristocrat with guts. If there had been a few more like him the attempt to build up an enlightened and progressive regime in Russia might have got nearer to success than it did." M. P. Price

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 26 '54 300w

"Youssoupoff brings this book of memoirs to the moment when he left Russia on board a British battleship sent to rescue the Dowager Empress Marie. He promises a second volume which will tell of his life in exile. It can hardly compare with this book which covers

IUSUPOV, F. F.—Continued
such an important scene in the drama of modern history, reported by its main actor." Sonia Tomara

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 17 '54 700w

Reviewed by Rene Fueloep-Miller
N Y Times p38 O 17 '54 750w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Yorker 30:166 O 23 '54 850w

"Author Youssouppoff, now 67 and living in Paris, often bogs down in mediocre writing and puerile prejudices, but tells a fine, fabulous story."

+ — Time 64:94 O 25 '54 220w

"One would like to give these memoirs full praise. Unfortunately, they are marred by persistent antisemitic bias. These references not only show the author in his least attractive light, but cast doubt on the reliability of his historical evidence. They are also an insult to the reader's intelligence. The English translation reads smoothly, but there is a regrettable inconsistency in the transliteration of many of the Russian names."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p6 Ja 1 '54 550w

IVES, BURL. Tales of America; with decorations by Helen Borten. 305p $3.95 World pub.

398.2 Legends, American 54-8177

"My search for the music of our country's past has led me almost accidentally into an endlessly unrolling panorama of stories and people, a gallery of pictures of the unique personalities and fabulous happenings which went into the making of America. . . My mind is full of the things I have learned. And, since I am by nature a collector of all kinds of things—of songs and stories and tidbits of information, and of people who have things to tell me or who can open up new paths for me to explore—I have managed to assemble notes and jottings and clippings and books and documents, and all manner of material which overflow my bookcases and my files. From all these things I have been jotting down my own notes and writing my own stories, and doing this has given me much joy." Pref

Booklist 51:133 N 15 '54

"The stories have a compiled-from-the-library feel and the failure to acknowledge sources is glaring. Neither folklore nor history is served and one ends by saying, 'Please, Burl Ives, sing.'" M. B. King

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 21 '54 100w

"The touch of a true storyteller, for whom legends and reality are one, is evident always, and Burl Ives will find an eager audience."

+ Kirkus 22:626 S 1 '54 110w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller
Library J 79:2455 D 15 '54 100w

"Many of these episodes out of the American past have been discovered and told before—some of them told with more art though none with more enthusiasm. The majority of them are not widely known, however, and it is unfortunate that a man, so gifted in delivering a song with the precise impact it deserves should be sometimes a bit off in his timing and emphasis when he tells a tale." Carl Carmer

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 12 '54 300w

"A kind of commonplace book, filled with the stories Burl wants to remember and have handy. As one reads them, one sees and hears the big, bearded man—who looks like a mixture of Santa Claus and Satan and talks like the man next door—telling his story, as he sings his ballad, with style and beauty. These stories, some familiar, some not, will be popular with both young and old. They are short and simple; they tell what everyone can understand, with the old narrative nonchalance of American frontier storytelling." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p6 N 14 '54 600w

"A well-packed book filled with echoes of America's past. It has, indeed, the very tone of voice of Ives himself, which is what will endear it to its audience." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 18 '54 550w

Reviewed by John Haverstick
Sat R 37:22 D 4 '54 30w

Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '54 200w

IWAMATSU, TOMOE (SASAKO) (MITSU YASHIMA, pseud) and IWAMATSU, JUN (TARO YASHIMA, pseud). Plenty to watch. 39p il $2.50 Viking

54-12294

"Life in the Japanese island village where authors Taro and Mitsu Yashima grew up was a wonderland of things to watch. . . The story of what the children saw as they walked home from school is told in short, direct sentences. The colorful illustrations eloquently do the work normally assigned to adjectives." N Y Times

Booklist 51:23 S 1 '54

"Young Americans will find a fascinating new world in this record of happy memories." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 7 '54 120w

Commonweal 61:204 N 19 '54 30w

"For the picture-book age and also for older boys and girls who are studying Japan." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:327 O '54 160w

"A book of timeless appeal."

+ Kirkus 22:381 J1 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p5 N 14 '54 110w

"'Plenty to Watch' is a delightful excursion into a strange but wholly believable far-off place. It is a worthy successor to Taro Yashima's earlier book, 'The Village Tree.'"

Pat Clark

+ N Y Times p26 S 19 '54 160w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:207 N 27 '54 90w

"Superb and colorful art, superb and simple writing."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 14 '54 80w

Sat R 37:26 D 25 '54 130w

IZZARD, RALPH. An innocent on Everest. 319p $3.75 Dutton

954.2 [915.42] Everest, Mount. Mount Everest expedition, 1953 54-8120

"When the British 1953 Everest Expedition set out, it had an exclusive contract with the London Times. In spite of this, other papers sent correspondents to get what news they could. Izzard, representing The Daily Mail (London), with no knowledge of mountaineering, scratch equipment and a few Sherpas, set out from Katmandu over the hazardous trail to Namche Bazar, and thence to Hunt's First Base Camp at 18,000 feet. Because of The Times contract and the conduct of the British Ambassador to Nepal Izzard got little news. His own story, however, relating his foolhardy attempt at mountaineering, his description of the Nepal country and picturesque inhabitants, his frustrated efforts to get news, and an evaluation of the mysterious 'Abominable Snowman,' is well worth reading." Library J

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:86 Ag '54 70w

Booklist 51:11 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:4 O '54 40w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 5 '54 250w

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 26 '54 130w

Horn Bk 30:361 O '54 120w

Kirkus 22:325 My 15 '54 200w

"Highly interesting, of general appeal as travel, adventure and sidelights on journalism. Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1222 Je 15 '54 170w

"Izzard gives his readers a fresh, close-up picture of what it means to tackle the Himalayas."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p12 Ag 8 '54 160w

"His book is not only entertaining, it is valuable, both for its fine picture of Nepal and for its accurate account of the lamentable public relations of the British expedition." Raymond Holden

+ N Y Times p13 S 5 '54 200w

"Mr. Izzard is a newspaperman of unusual fortitude, perseverance, and ingenuity, and in this wholly delightful, if occasionally irreverent, travelogue, he tells us how, in spite of a harrowing insufficiency of experience and equipment, he managed to dog the footsteps of John Hunt and his party to within a few thousand feet of their destination, and to keep the readers of the Daily Mail reasonably well informed about what was happening on the perilous heights above him."

+ New Yorker 30:83 Ag 14 '54 250w

"Mr. Izzard took pains to find out what went on beside just the 'how' of the climb itself, and his book is an admirable companion-piece to the official story as Sir John Hunt wrote it. The general reader may take it that way and be well rewarded; indeed it is not going too far to say that 'An Innocent on Everest' is almost mandatory reading for anyone who wants the whole Everest story." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 9 '54 320w

"Besides his amusing sidelights on Nepalese life, the engaging personalities of his Sherpas, and Hunt's somewhat stuffy behavior, the author gives us considerable Everest lore. He traces the histories of early expeditions and gives a clear account of the difficulties of the climb itself." T. E. Cooney

+ Sat ■ 37:32 Ag 7 '54 300w

Time 64:80 Jl 26 '54 550w

J

JACKSON, ANNETTE. My life in the Maine woods; a game warden's wife in the Allagash country. 236p il $3.50 Norton

B or 92

54-11194

"In this simply written book are the day-to-day experiences of a woman who married a game warden and went to live with him in the depths of Maine's wildest country. . . The little cabin where the Jacksons lived was located on Umsaskis Lake, up near the Canadian border. Mrs. Jackson's neighbors were few, mostly lumberjacks and guides, and her husband was of necessity away much of the time. With great good sense, however, she didn't give herself time to be lonely or afraid. She kept herself constantly busy, and her accounts of her culinary adventures and of her efforts to make a bare cabin into a home are genuinely interesting." N Y Times

Booklist 51:9 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:5 O '54 30w

Reviewed by Walter Harding

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 8 '54 100w

"Simple, pleasant summer reading."

Kirkus 22:326 My 15 '54 80w

"Recommended to public libraries, and as a gift book." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1307 Jl '54 130w

"While her book shows the uneven hand of a novice at writing, it frequently stops the reader by its poetic simplicity of language. Often her husband left her alone in the cabin for days and movingly she evokes the feeling of listening and placing the sounds that break the silence of a winter night. . . Interspersed with her adventures as a game warden's wife, Mrs. Jackson gives a number of recipes which, it is safe to assume, will never be found in an ordinary cook book." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Jl 11 '54 380w

"The gentle charm of this account lies in Annette Jackson's unpretentious narrative manner, in her obvious love and knowledge of the region she describes, and particularly in the fact that she makes it very clear to the reader—undesignedly, perhaps—that the Jacksons are thoroughly nice people." L. D. Rich

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 11 '54 290w

"She writes a loose, rambling narrative that may pain the fastidious reader, she slurs over hardships so that, as in the sun dial motto, only the bright hours are marked. But these faults will be more than adequately balanced for many readers because the book has the authentic feeling of earth and water at their untamed source." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 15 '54 300w

Wis Lib Bul 50:177 Jl '54

JACKSON, MRS BARBARA (WARD). See Ward, B.

JACKSON, CAARY PAUL (COLIN LOCHLONS, pseud). Barney of the Babe Ruth league. 148p $2.50 Crowell

54-5615

A baseball story for boys in grades five and six.

Reviewed by Harry Molter

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:155 Mr 1 '54 50w

"Recommended where extra sports material is needed." Helen Perdue

+ Library J 79:992 My 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 4 '54 20w

"[A] book in which the young hero is not given major credit for winning the championship game. This in itself ought to rate Mr. Lochlons some kind of award, since he brings it off without sacrificing interest in his chief character." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 18 '54 60w

JACKSON, HENRY CECIL. Sudan days and ways; with a foreword by Lord Vansittart. 262p il $3.50 St Martins

962.4 Sudan, Egyptian

54-11220

"Recollections of a retired British civil servant who went straight from Oxford to Khartoum in 1907, only nine years after the Sudan had been liberated from the murderous misrule of the Dervishes, and stayed there for twenty-four years." New Yorker

Booklist 51:37 S 15 '54

Reviewed by H. B. Ellis

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 8 '54 140w

Kirkus 22:262 Ap 1 '54 210w

Manchester Guardian p4 S ■ '54 30w

"The old-fashioned but oddly fresh recollections of a retired British civil servant."

+ New Yorker 30:152 S 11 '54 160w

Reviewed by Herman Ausubel

Sat R 37:21 N 27 '54 190w

"A delightful book, very hard to put down." + Times [London] Lit Sup p327 My 21 '54 750w

JACKSON, SHIRLEY (MRS STANLEY EDGAR HYMAN). Bird's nest. 276p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

54-9352

"Miss Jackson sets forth the predicament of Elizabeth Richmond, a pallid young woman who lives with her aunt in a small New England town. A series of disquieting incidents

JACKSON, SHIRLEY—Continued

leads this girl to a psychiatrist, who discovers that her mind is divided among, and tortured by, four separate, strong-willed personalities, each struggling for dominance. These four personalities, which are visible by turns, according to which one is in control, are designated by the doctor as Elizabeth, Betsy, Bess, and Beth. Some terrifying experiences and her doctor's patient guidance bring the girl to a state resembling peace." New Yorker

"A tour de force such as this is, prolonged beyond its high point, pays rapidly diminishing returns. To my mind, Miss Jackson's story is enormously intriguing and brilliantly handled up to about the halfway mark. But I began to find it contrived and overdrawn after Elizabeth the fourth had stepped into the act." C. J. Rolo

+ — Atlantic 194:86 Ag '54 250w

Booklist 50:451 J1 15 '54

"I think this is Shirley Jackson's best novel, the most unified and fully realized. It is brilliant, swift, at times immensely funny, and alternately frightening. Her portrayal of a personality in disintegration is masterful. I am not wholly sold on the simplicity of its resolution, but this is a minor reservation in the face of a considerable achievement." Edmund Fuller

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 27 '54 370w

"For a special audience, an exploratory of precarious and unpredictable variations, this has a certain fascination."

Kirkus 22:316 My 15 '54 130w

"The story is written with the author's usual competence particularly the ability to set down in words the nightmarish quality of the disturbed mind. The writing is tight and so well organized that it is only at the end that one finally fits together all the pieces to see how the story turns out. Typical Shirley Jackson but not at all like her last." C. J. Roth

+ Library J 79:1225 Je 15 '54 110w

"How seriously 'The Bird's Nest' is taken will depend largely on the individual reader; but although it may be a little too long, it is undeniably brilliant. For all its incidental obscurities—none of them so baffling as those which made 'Hangsamen' ultimately elusive—it is superlative entertainment; much the best book Shirley Jackson has written." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Je 20 '54 650w

"At times [the book] is esthetically confusing. However, there is real skill in the author's detailing of unhappy childhood and adolescent experiences—blighted alike by the inner tyrannies of Elizabeth herself and the influences of that terrible yet touching aunt. For the portrayal of this character, at least, Miss Jackson relies exclusively on the empirical insights basic to every classic of fictional realism." Evelyn Scott

+ — N Y Times p4 Je 20 '54 450w

"Miss Jackson's style is direct and occasionally humorous."

New Yorker 30:90 Je 26 '54 120w

"This kind of thing requires a master hand in the telling, and Miss Jackson supplies it. She scares you, true enough; no writer ought to understand so much. But this novel, about matters you'd rather believe weren't there at all, is so well done that you'll go along willy-nilly. . . . No, it doesn't sound as though it could possibly be made to come off, but it does. Try it and see." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 J1 25 '54 600w

"This extremely unusual novel, centering around the struggle between various facets of a young woman's personality, is, I think, Miss Jackson's best book of fiction thus far." William Feden

+ Sat R 37:11 J1 17 '54 500w

Time 63:108 Je 21 '54 550w

JACOBY, OSWALD. What's new in bridge. (Hanover House bk) 158p $2.50 Garden City bks.

795.41 Contract bridge 54-5551

"Expert presentation of important ideas for the modern bridge player to know about for use or defense. Liberal examples." Bookmark

Booklist 50:293 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:182 My '54 20w

JAEGER, ELLSWORTH. Land and water trails. 227p il $2.95 Macmillan (N Y)

796.5 Outdoor life 53-13357

Information for the camper and nature lover, based on the author's own outdoor life and his knowledge gained from the Indians. Contents: Water travel; Saddle and bridle; Knots and lashings; Annoying and dangerous pests; Wilderness critters; Critter signs; Tomorrow's wilderness. Index.

Booklist 50:199 Ja 15 '54

"The author of this profusely illustrated guide to easier and happier outdoor travel and living combines practical tips with a wealth of nature lore to make it unusually interesting to campers, canoeists, fishermen, or big game hunters." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 20 '53 70w

Kirkus 21:617 S 1 '53 90w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 78:2103 D 1 '53 30w

Reviewed by Dorothy Sargent
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ja 24 '54 30w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck
Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 24 '54 180w

JAMES, BRUNO SCOTT, tr. Letters of St Bernard of Clairvaux. See Bernard of Clairvaux, Saint

JAMES, DANIEL. Red design for the Americas: Guatemalan prelude. 347p $4.50 Day

972.8105 Communism—Guatemala. Latin America—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—Latin America 54-12439

"After a brief discussion of the threat of communism in Latin America to the security of the United States, author describes in detail the recent situation in Guatemala. He presents political conditions there during the last few years and tells how the civil war developed. Concluding, he states what the U. S. attitude toward Guatemala should be. And advocates that at least the three following steps be taken: we should see that a stable, democratic government is maintained there; private U.S. business interests should not be allowed to return on a 'business-as-usual' basis; our government should extend economic aid." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 51:172 D 15 '54

Cath World 180:v D '54 110w

Reviewed by Jules Dubois

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 12 '54 220w

"Detailed and documented, this may convince politically but it lacks the human insight that might have made it a more forceful plea, and hope, now, for better relations."

Kirkus 22:614 S 1 '54 250w

"A well-reasoned presentation. Recommended." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 79:1887 O 15 '54 140w

"It is a book of energetic and scholarly reporting, yet of occasionally misleading interpretation. And because of its frequently inflammatory tone it must be considered with caution lest fanatics should use it to start a witch-hunt below the Rio Grande." Betty Kirk

+ — New Repub 131:19 D 20 '54 1700w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 28 '54
950w

"Daniel James, the former managing editor of The New Leader, has done more than merely achieve the earliest publication date. He is, in effect, the biographer of an issue. He has set down the ten-year story of Communist intrigue in this Central-American republic in hard-hitting but never hysterical terms." Milton Bracker

+ N Y Times p45 O 24 '54 1000w

JAMES, MARQUIS, and JAMES, BESSIE WILLIAMS (ROWLAND). Biography of a bank; the story of Bank of America N.T.& S.A. 566p il $5 Harper

332.1 Bank of America national trust and savings association. Giannini, Amadeo Peter 54-6015

"This is the story of the Bank of America, the world's largest bank, and an account of the careers of the Gianninis, father and son. Amadeo Peter Giannini began banking in San Francisco with the Bank of Italy which catered to small farmers, mostly of Italian descent. When the fire and earthquake of 1906 forced many bigger banks to close their doors, Giannini set up two planks on a wharf and continued business. By 1930 these two planks had grown into the Bank of America and the Giannini policy of developing local agriculture and commerce through a system of strong branch banks had become a new force in financial history." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Employing bank records and other standard sources, the Jameses have written an accurate and interesting history of an important regional banking system and its complex role in the economic development of twentieth-century California. There is not a dull page in the whole book, and, so far as this reviewer can tell, the treatment of Giannini's struggle with Wall Street is the only instance where the author's views might be questioned." V. P. Carosso

+ Am Hist R 60:221 O '54 380w

"The authors have performed a difficult task with better than average success. A book of half the length could have provided a more fascinating but less scholarly and complete biography. To do a satisfactory job, it was necessary to introduce a certain amount of statistical and factual data that makes for dull reading, but the authors have kept this to the least amount compatible with sound biographical standards." F. A. Bradford

+ Ann Am Acad 295:169 S '54 450w

Booklist 50:371 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Philip Hampson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 Ap 25 '54
450w

"This is a fascinating book." Kimmis Hendrick

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 26 '54
500w

"Exhaustive in its analysis of the aspects and attributes of the monolith of money and the men who made its many faces, this is food for the economist as well as a prestige volume on one of our financial 'greats.'"

+ Kirkus 22:100 F 1 '54 260w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Ap 25
'54 70w

"Mr. James' story is told skillfully for a lay public and is based on the most exacting scholarly research. As the narrative unfolds one catches two things at once. Giannini believed in California's destiny—in its booming cities, its diversified agriculture, its new and growing motion-picture, oil and steel industries. Giannini also believed that California's credit requirements could be served best by state-wide branch banking." L. M. Hacker

N Y Times p6 Ap 18 '54 1200w

"Most company histories start out with dramatic tales of early struggles and triumphs over obsolete problems, then slope off into less interesting material on current operations, avoiding any kind of vigorous grappling with issues still hot or even warm. 'Biography of a Bank' furnishes a welcome variation from this pattern. It has the advantage of being prepared by more able historians than most. And one suspects that it reflects the late A. P. Giannini's own boredom with struggles past and his vigorous interest in struggles present."

Ruth Teiser

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 18 '54
700w

JAMES, PRESTON EVERETT, and JONES, CLARENCE FIELDEN, eds. American geography: inventory and prospect; John K. Wright, consulting ed; maps by John C. Sherman; published for the Association of American geographers. 590p il $6 Syracuse univ. press

910.7 Geography—Study and teaching

54-9225

"The fiftieth anniversary of the Association of American Geographers is marked by the publication of this volume on modern American geography. As indicated by the title, this volume is a stock-taking of the present status and future prospects of the field. It constitutes . . . a progress report on the objectives and procedures of geographic research as of January, 1954. . . and contains considered suggestions for directions of future geographic research." Am Soc R

"Scholarly and thoughtful volume. . . For geographers this volume undoubtedly will be the beginning of new and rewarding lines of research, for other social scientists it is a useful reference to the products of two generations of geographic research." Wendell Bell

+ Am Soc R 19:641 O '54 300w

"No reader is likely to minimize the difficulties of compiling and editing a book in this way, and a tribute is due to the exacting work entailed and the measure of success attained. The essays are inevitably unequal in length, quality, and substantive content. Three perhaps stand out most clearly as contributions to the subject in their own right: The Regional Concept and the Regional Method (Derwent Whittlesey), Historical Geography (Andrew Clark), and Political Geography (Richard Hartshorne). Many of the others are straight summaries and brief commentaries that depend for their relevance on the content and objectives of the book as a whole. This statement implies no criticism of the authors, who evidently did exactly what the editors required of them." S. W. Wooldridge

+ Geog R 44:604 O '54 1050w

Special Libraries 45:217 My '54 20w

JANNES, ELLY. Nomads of the North; pictures by Anna Riwwin-Brick [tr. by William Cameron and Karin Wander]. [78p] $3 Macmillan (N Y)

948.5 [914.85] Lapps

In a series of photographs with brief text this book tells about everyday life in a small Lapp community in the district of Jokkmokk in northern Sweden.

Booklist 50:117 N 15 '53

"Text may prove difficult for those under twelve, but illustrations will fascinate all. Of wider scope than Elle-Kari by the same author, the book would be of great value in social studies. Inadequate map." Elizabeth Mitchell

+ Library J 78:2046 N 15 '53 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 21 '54
50w

"A book for the whole family." C. H. B.
+ Sat R 36:81 N 14 '53 20w

JARRELL, RANDALL. Pictures from an institution. 277p $3.50 Knopf

54-5973

"This is a searching novel about a mean lady novelist writing a mean novel about a college where she is spending a year teaching creative writing. It portrays a savage, lethal-tongued bluestocking, pitilessly intent on pinning down her colleagues as specimens for her already gruesome collection, while remaining insensitive to much that Randall Jarrell, as narrator, finds genuine and fine in the community." N Y Times

JARRELL, RANDALL—Continued

Booklist 50:358 My 15 '54

"This is the most appallingly witty novel in years. . . Here is a savagery of insight delicately restrained, and a command of language that is gay, gruesome, and absolute." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 2 '54 360w

"Mr. Jarrell is so perfectly a novelist that his readers are left drooling in angry envy, for a poet has no business etching so well in vitriol, nor producing the perfect character-revealing gesture or incident. Indeed, he should not know so much about individuals and their hidden springs, for poets are supposed to be distillers, not psychologists." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 60:347 Jl 9 '54 1100w

"A spiked broth in which headiness comes close to a headache but which does have the leaven of a discriminating and uncompromising humor. Difficult."

Kirkus 22:163 Mr 1 '54 220w

"I'm not a novelist, and naturally I'm unprejudiced; I don't insist that a novel be by a novelist; so I won't judge this delightfully pre-tentious novel by a beginner as if it were War and Peace. But I would gladly abandon the dunces leagued against Mr. Jarrell's true wit if he didn't try so hard." Louis Barron

Library J 79:860 My 1 '54 150w

"Mr. Jarrell takes his characters apart in a few debonair and devastating phrases. He does it not by prolonged analysis but by a truly poetic use of epigram and literary allusion, revealing the worse in a matter of seconds. This is a blissfully funny book, sharp and malicious, and as full of wisecracks as the Marx brothers." Patricia Hodgart

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 12 '54 390w

"Roman à clef, we mutter after the first sentence, and having identified the President and others satisfactorily, we move on to the novel thus unlocked. . . The chapter called 'Art Night' is the showpiece of the book and a delight to read; how familiar it all seems and how shrewd the sensibility that shows it to us. . . All in all, it's a wonderful evening, a guided tour of the progressive women's college. Mr. Jarrell doesn't miss a trick. There one begins to think, the trouble lies; he misses and leaves out—nothing, at least nothing that can make his people and their world of Benton grotesque, heartless, inhuman." L. O. Cox

+ New Repub 130:19 My 10 '54 900w

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson
New Statesman & Nation 48:480 O 16 '54 180w

"Mr. Jarrell has the deeper wit—wit in its other sense of knowledge—to see what lives beneath the odd and diverse appearances of the victims. It is his sympathy for the 'musician in residence,' the Southern lady English teacher, and even for the lady novelist herself, that provides this book with the undercurrent of humanity without which wittiness is of no avail." Gouverneur Paulding

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 2 '54 750w

"Mr. Jarrell is on the side of the angels. His is a divine meanness, and he exposes his female writing devil punitively, matching her stream of poisonous wisecracks with a series of coruscating cracks of his own worthy of Dorothy Parker at her most hilarious and deadly. This double display of sacred and profane meanness on the same bill makes the show well worth the price of admission. . . It is scarcely surprising that in performance of such kaleidoscopic brilliance the elements of coherence and staying-power should to some extent be sacrificed." Francis Steegmuller

+ N Y Times p4 My 2 '54 470w

"It arouses in this reader, at least, the sort of dismay aroused by those oils in which the artist is discovered solemnly painting himself, the back of his canvas, and his easel, as he sees them in a looking glass on his studio wall. This kind of picture is, like the feature story in a magazine about the preparation of a feature story for the magazine, a petition of bankruptcy, indicating that the workshop set up for the artist's convenience has become a cell from which he cannot escape." Anthony West

New Yorker 30:93 Je 19 '54 1950w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 9 '54 500w

"Mr. Jarrell's quiet comedy of ideas and people is a welcome gift. While it laughs at much of our intellectual pride and pomposity, it also develops a breadth of warm sympathy for the angelic touch that may visit the most foolish of us." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R 37:15 My 8 '54 600w

"Of course, as a whole, there's a lot wrong with the book. . . And, at times, the cleverness becomes strident, the jokes inbred, the language clipped and mannered; yes, at times Mr. Jarrell strains too hard at the gnat of effect and forgets what he's been meaning to say (and which one wants to hear) about someone. But, all this accepted, here's a book that's broken through, that's witty and exhilarating and right, right in the inevitable way of a book you're not going to forget. So let's be excited about it." John Metcalf

+ Spec p506 O 22 '54 700w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p18D My 16 '54 550w

"What Author Jarrell has done is to set up a straw woman, a progressive girls' college, and then knock it down, page by page, for 277 rounds. The result is resolutely high-brow and sometimes highly amusing, even if Author Jarrell devastates his theme and his characters more than he develops them."

Time 63:106 My 3 '54 500w

JARRETT-KERR, MARTIN. François Mauriac. (Studies in modern European literature and thought) 61p $2.50 Yale univ. press

843 Mauriac, François

A54-8890

A study of two aspects of the writings of Mauriac: as a novelist and as a Catholic. The author, a theologian and a literary critic, is vice-principal of St Peter's Theological College, Johannesburg, South Africa. Bibliography.

"While no one could discuss Mauriac without referring to his religion, many have come to admire his novels without feeling quite as worried as the present writer about his theology. They are prepared to accept Mauriac for what he is, while Father Jarrett-Kerr laments in vain that he is not what he would wish him to be. His method is not suited to so short a book, and the result, though worth while, lacks true critical intuition and is not very stimulating in style." J. T. B.

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 11 '54 210w

"I wish to emphasize that this is a substantial book. But it betrays that well-mannered amateurishness which one finds, at its best-known, in the mild pages of F. R. Leavis and Lord David Cecil." A. J. Guerard

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 8 '54 360w

"The essay, which is rather thickly strewn with quotations from the novels and from books by M. Mauriac other than fiction, seems at first well considered and well written, but the reader soon becomes aware of a lack of measure in Mr. Jarrett-Kerr's severely critical epithets. . . In point of fact, moreover, although he quarrels with M. Mauriac's theology, he does not seriously address himself to the connexion between the latter's art and his purpose as a specifically Catholic novelist. The essay is perhaps more closely concerned than is helpful with M. Mauriac's earliest works of fiction and with the opinions of other critics."

Times [London] Lit Sup p311 My 14 '54 260w

JASPERS, KARL. Origin and goal of history [tr. by Michael Bullock]. 294p $4 Yale univ. press

907 Historiography 53-11595

"[This treatise] on history divides the subject into three periods. The first is the long obscurity of pre-history, of which so little has been discovered. The third is the immeasurable future. In between lie the brief 5000 years visible to us. Professor Jaspers examines world history in the axial or prehistoric period to sum up what we have learned about it. The second part discusses history as we know it. The final section is on the meaning of history." Current Hist

Reviewed by T. I. Cook

Ann Am Acad 294:209 J1 '54 550w

"In sum, I may stress my disappointment in Jaspers' philosophy of history but point out that the present work is important, nevertheless, for the full understanding of the philosophy of its author, a major contemporary thinker. . . It is my guess that when the philosophy of Karl Jaspers is given a full and systematic evaluation, The Origin and Goal of History will prove to be one of the weaker moments in the thought of an otherwise creative and rewarding mind." Maurice Natanson

Christian Century 71:15 Ja '54 1500w

"A thought-provoking treatise."

+ Current Hist 26:126 F '54 70w

Foreign Affairs 33:157 O '54 50w

"No brief review can do justice to the rich details of historic analysis and illustration to be found in Jaspers' The Origin and Goal of History. There are many bold and simplifying generalizations about the past, but no strait-jacketing attempt at rigid categories. Jaspers shows himself once again to be one of the most diligent and sensitive students of contemporary history." William Barrett

+ N Y Times p6 F 7 '54 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p183 Mr 20 '53 900w

JAUSS, ANNE MARIE, ed. Legends of saints and beasts; il. by [the editor]. [46p] $2.50 Aladdin

Saints—Legends. Animals, Legends and stories of 54-9271

The stories of four saints retold for grades three to five. They are: Saint Jerome and the lion; Saint Roch and the dog; Saint Francis and the wolf; and Saint Macarius and the hyena.

Booklist 51:156 D 1 '54

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p34 N 14 '54 90w

"Well told with colored pictures and printing type somewhat reminiscent of illuminated manuscripts."

+ Commonweal 61:202 N 19 '54 20w

"Highly recommended for ages 8 and up."

E. J. Bowland

+ Library J 79:2496 D 15 '54 90w

"Many who search in the piles of new books that look all alike, with art work hastily dashed off and garishly colored, will sigh with relief when they find this distinguished little book." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 19 '54 150w

JAY, CHARLOTTE, pseud. See Jay, G.

JAY, GERALDINE (CHARLOTTE JAY, pseud.) Fugitive eye. 212p $2.50 Harper

54-6016

"Its hero, who is blind in one eye, sees the tail end of a murder in a forest near London. After he is temporarily blinded in the other eye by an accident, the murderers capture him, and the action gets under way as a dipsomaniac doctor prepares to pour acid in the hero's good eye. The chase in the dark has the reader identified with the hero all the way." Time

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 J1 4 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:46 Ja 15 '54 60w

"Not the least remarkable thing about it all is that working with extravagant materials, Miss Jay never once loses balance and puts her foot through the illusion." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 13 '54 180w

"Miss Jay creates a subtle and complex world of terror and uncertainty. Deliberately, this book lacks the depths of moral and psychological exploration of Jay's first; but on its own level it is rich in moments of pure excitement which you should long remember." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p13 Je 20 '54 250w

"Don't start this unless you can finish it at a sitting." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 J1 27 '54 40w

"Highly effective." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:31 J1 10 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p5C J1 4 '54 50w

Time 63:114 Je 14 '54 80w

JEFFERS, ROBINSON. Hungerfield and other poems. 115p $3 Random house

811

53-9714

Fifteen new poems and a one-act play comprise this volume of Jeffers' poetry, the first he has published since 1948.

Reviewed by Howard Nemerov

Atlantic 194:68 S '54 300w

Booklist 50:255 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:129 Mr '54 20w

Reviewed by Nicholas Joost

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 24 '54 300w

"Jeffers seems old. His talent, rooted in nature and nature's powers, seems to be running out. There is a curious narrowness of vision, a lack of self renewal which was always inherent in his poetry. But he still has a following."

Kirkus 21:778 D 1 '53 180w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 79:558 Mr 15 '54 100w

"Something that is not resignation, yet has the serenity of self-knowledge, enters the fourteen short poems of the book. In taking the road beyond middle age few American poets have stepped so far with a more deeply expressed humility and courage. With this book and those that may follow it Jeffers' contribution to the poetry of our day is of mature inspiration and accomplishment. His position is secure and singular." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 24 '54 550w

"As is so often true of Robinson Jeffers' work, the best poems in the present collection are not the long, tortured narratives but the short and quasi-lyrical pieces. The successful moments in the long poems are relatively few and always precarious." Dudley Fitts

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 10 '54 420w

New Yorker 30:148 My 8 '54 30w

"It is hard to think of Jeffers writing another book after this one, for in it he has plumbed the depths of his despair. Yet he may. Thirty years ago, he hints in several of the shorter poems, something happened which made him decide to shut himself away from mankind; in consequence, his stoicism and his acceptance of isolation give him unique powers of survival. To reiterate this dirge supremely well is Jeffers' glory. But though he would not regard it as such, it is also the penalty—this loneliness of the man and dessication of the artist—he has had to pay for living for himself alone so that he can see in other lives nothing but the horror of waste and the tyranny of time." Selden Rodman

Poetry 84:226 J1 '54 1850w

JEFFERS, ROBINSON—Continued

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 14 '54
370w

"Here, once more, is Jeffers's approximation of Greek tragedy transferred to the melodramatic coast of California. . . Here, too, are Jeffers's familiar similes and symbols: the beauty of hawks flying, knife-keen winds, plunging promontories, streams tearing at rocks, the black strength of the flooding tide. A Jeffers reader will be prepared for all this. But, although he will no longer be either shocked or surprised, he will not fail to be roused. Jeffers has not lost the gift of biting language and the ability to communicate the phantasmagoria of terror." Louis Untermeyer

Sat R 37:17 Ja 16 '54 850w

Time 63:112 Ja 25 '54 600w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:197 Je '54 120w

JEFFERSON, THEODORE BREWSTER, and WOODS, GORHAM. Metals and how to weld them. 322p il $2; outside U.S. $2.50 James F. Lincoln Arc Welding Foundation, 22801 St Clair, Cleveland 17

671.521 Electric welding 54-2508

"Elementary basic information on metals and practical information on welding procedures for specific metals and alloys are combined in this book. In the early chapters physical and mechanical properties such as hardness and tensile strength are explained in simple terms. From the 6th chapter through the 20th, however, the topic is welding; and much useful information is presented on what electrodes to use, how to build up the weld, what to do about preheating, annealing, etc. for each metal and alloy. Suitable for study at home by student welders and for reference by practical welders in job welding shops." Library J

Booklist 50:445 Jl 15 '54 *

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 79:1405 Ag '54 90w

JEFFERSON, THOMAS. Farm book; with commentary and relevant extracts from other writings; ed. by Edwin Morris Betts. (American philosophical society. Memoirs) 178,552p il $15 Princeton univ. press

B or 92

"The Farm Book itself belongs to the Massachusetts Historical Society, which is ever generous with its treasures, and is reproduced here in facsimile. It is altogether in Jefferson's own hand, which at its best is clear and pleasant, and the entries run from 1774 until a little before his death in 1826. Just inside the cover is the family tree of his horse Caractacus, and the book contains much about his animals, of which he liked the horses best by far." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by E. M. Sowerby
Am Hist R 59:1023 Jl '54 300w

"This edition of Thomas Jefferson's Farm Book, with the letters and commentary, is both an important source book and a contribution to biography. It will be of particular interest to students of the life and personality of Jefferson, to agricultural and other historians who are concerned with plantation agriculture, and with the emergence of scientific agriculture. To the 'countryman' this is a classic for those who live in the country and enjoy and appreciate its historical literature." M. L. Wilson

+ Ann Am Acad 294:182 Jl '54 750w

"'Thomas Jefferson's Farm Book' shows the many-sided Jefferson, not as a fine gentleman living in a brilliant foreign city, but as a down-to-earth planter in the Virginia hills. In 1944 the American Philosophical Society published his Garden Book, edited by Prof. Edwin M. Betts of the University of Virginia, a biologist by profession. . . The Farm Book now appears under the same sponsorship and the same highly competent editorship. It contains an admirable introduction by Francis L. Berkeley, Jr, who has the keeping of the Jefferson manuscripts, among others, in the University of Virginia Library. . . This is an invaluable source book for the man himself and a useful one for the life and particularly the agriculture of his age, but it needs explanation and supplementation." Dumas Malone

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 17 '54 850w

"One of the most important items of Americana to be published in years. To the average American and to the scholar, Jefferson's multiple achievements in politics and public life have overshadowed his work as a scientific agriculturalist." B. H. Wall

+ Sat R 37:36 Jl 10 '54 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p263 Ap 23 '54 700w

"Editorial matter which will assist the student through the rather bewildering facsimile comprises an index with special type for references to it, a table of abbreviations, a glossary of unusual terms, a biographical dictionary of persons mentioned, and a list of places not generally known. Even with these helps provided, the first and the final thirds of the Farm Book remain insufficiently elucidated. . . Professor Betts has assembled a mass of valuable and hitherto unpublished materials, but appears to have furnished inadequate guidance to those which interest him least."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:155 Je '54 240w

JEFFERSON, THOMAS. Papers: Julian P. Boyd, editor; Mina R. Bryan and Elizabeth L. Hutter, associate editors. 52v v8-9 il ea $10 Princeton univ. press

308.1 U.S.—History (50-7486)

Volume 8, 25 February to 31 October, 1785.

Volume 9, 1 November 1785 to 22 June 1786.

Reviewed by Leslie Lipson

Ann Am Acad 295:155 S '54 400w
(Review of v8)

Reviewed by R. J. Graf

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 15 '54
180w (Review of v9)

Reviewed by R. J. Graf

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ja 10 '54
350w

Christian Century 71:370 Mr 24 '54
200w

Christian Century 71:1181 S 29 '54 250w
50w (Review of v9)

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p7 F 11 '54
700w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 79:207 F 1 '54 110w

"Seven hundred handsomely printed, magisterially edited pages, the reading of which is a constant delight to both the eye and the mind." George Genzmer

+ Nation 178:222 Mr 13 '54 420w

"A comparison of this volume with the previous collections of Jefferson's writings for this period is an impressive index of the quantitative addition to Jeffersonian scholarship that is being made by the 'Papers.' Most of the new material, of course, consists of letters to Jefferson, and their interest and significance can hardly be exaggerated. The qualitative contribution made by the 'Papers' is equally impressive. Here one sees Jefferson's career in as sharp focus as will ever be attainable."

+ Nation 179:218 S 11 '54 260w (Review of v9)

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 8 '54
50w (Review of v9)

"The illustrations are of unusual interest. . . The editing continues to be more exhaustive than in any comparable work, and if this volume as a whole is less appealing in content than others in the series, there cannot fail to be many bright bits from any eight months of Jefferson's fascinating life." Dumas Malone

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 17 '54 750w

"Illuminating and delightful bits of writing can be found throughout this volume. There are important observations on the political situation at home and abroad—in Jefferson's official correspondence and, especially, in the letters from and to Madison and Monroe. More than anything else, however, the materials are diplomatic, and at this stage of American national weakness they point to essentially negative results. During these months Jefferson and Adams were unsuccessful in their negotiations with the British and were unable to work things out with the rapacious Barbary powers." Dumas Malone

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 1 '54 900w (Review of v9)

"Once more, this volume reveals the richness of Jefferson's papers and the superb quality of their production in book form." J. M. England

+ Sat R 37:37 J1 10 '54 270w (Review of v8)

Times [London] Lit Sup p490 J1 30 '54 1150w (Review of v8)

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:7 Mr '54 280w

JEFFRIES, GRAHAM MONTAGUE (PETER BOURNE, pseud). Twilight of the dragon. 371p $3.95 Putnam

54-8708

Novel of China during the Boxer Rebellion. Among the chief characters are Randall Lockhart, a young American; a lovely English girl; a Russian prince; and various high and low class Chinese. The Empress is one of the characters.

Booklist 50:420 J1 1 '54

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 11 '54 400w

Reviewed by Gordon Walker
Christian Science Monitor p11 J1 22 '54 140w

"It is an extraordinary picture and Bourne has handled it with fascinating vividness. . . Plenty of action and drama, and though the story is a bit contrived, the background provides its own reward."

+ — Kirkus 22:294 My 1 '54 180w

"The amalgam for all these materials so rich in interest is provided by a romantic plot no better and no worse than that of most competent historical novels. But—far more important—Mr. Bourne, though scamping his European and American figures, has managed to create a lively portrait of the old Empress Dowager, as ■ wily, foolish, vain, shrewd, once beautiful concubine fully capable of all the fearlessness and all the follies which history attributes to her." F. H. Bullock

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 27 '54 600w

"Obviously, there are great narrative possibilities in the material. . . Some of the descriptions of the walled cities within walled Peking, of the court and the imprisoned Emperor are well done. A vivid portrait of the Boxer Rebellion emerges. Unfortunately Mr. Bourne's writing is stilted and tedious. His novel is no match for the history it attempts to depict." M. J. Tweedy

+ — N Y Times p20 Je 27 '54 500w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 5 '54 110w

"Shows traces of the assembly line. If it is all rather mechanical it is nevertheless the product of an efficient machine."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p357 Je 4 '54 30w

JENKINS, ELIZABETH. Tortoise and the hare. 252p $3.50 Coward-McCann

54-11485

A gentle, self-effacing English woman, married to a brilliant barrister, fifteen years older, discovers that "the other woman" in her husband's life is a wealthy but unattractive woman more nearly his age. Helplessly Imogen gives in to the idea of a divorce, since there seems no alternative. In her desolation she is touched and surprised that her mainstay is to be a small boy who had been a friend of her young son.

"The story's pace is on the slow side and its drama remains rather low-keyed, but the admirable characterization and fine craftsmanship make the book seductive reading. Miss Jenkins writes 'with impressive insight, subtlety of feeling, great precision and charm.'" C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:97 N '54 140w

Booklist 51:152 D 1 '54

"A controlled and delicate domestic drama."

+ Kirkus 22:550 Ag 15 '54 220w

"Painful as this is, there is such sympathy, charm and insight along the way that the book offers rewarding reading and will be welcomed by serious and intelligent readers who are tired of the slick and the sensational." R. B. Robertson

+ Library J 79:2100 N 1 '54 110w

"Miss Jenkins's precise embroidery of the upper-suburban scene is not quite for all tastes, but her novel will be widely enjoyed, and deservedly. The relationship between ■ gentle water-colour wife and an overdriven, overbearing husband is skilfully carried to its fated end." Norman Shrapnel

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 7 '54 120w

Reviewed by Betty Askwith

New Statesman & Nation p480 Ap 10 '54 260w

Reviewed by Carol Field

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 14 '54 350w

"The Tortoise and the Hare is minutely planned and tightly packed with action and relevant detail. Its main theme, dealing with 'that chemical sexual affinity which can exist without any of the outward attractions and graces,' is developed with such emotional intensity that one is left exhausted." Nancie Matthews

+ N Y Times p4 O 31 '54 550w

"An engrossing and painfully realistic story up to the last page. The last page, unhappily, presents a nice evasion instead of an honest ending."

+ — New Yorker 30:185 N 6 '54 170w

"Represents a quietly achieved perfection which is rare indeed." Jerome Stone

+ Sat R 37:30 N 6 '54 320w

"This story, exquisitely told, fulfils one of the novel's highest functions by leaving us with a deeper understanding of life. Every husband with a streak of honesty will search his heart as he ponders Evelyn's usage of Imogen. But Miss Jenkins plays fair. It is a part of her triumph that she nowhere glosses over Imogen's shortcomings." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p474 Ap 16 '54 370w

"Among a welter of novels dealing with human relationships in a more or less woolly manner it is a joy to come upon a writer of the calibre of Miss Jenkins, in whom the most delicate perception of shades of feeling is joined to irony and wit as well as to real gentleness and sympathy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p245 Ap 16 '54 370w

JENKINS, SHIRLEY. American economic policy toward the Philippines; with an introd. by Claude A. Buss [pub. under the auspices of the Am. inst. of Pacific relations]. 181p $4 Stanford univ. press

338.914 U.S.—Foreign relations—Philippine Islands. Philippine Islands—Foreign relations—U.S. 53-9962

"Mrs. Jenkins, past associate editor of Far Eastern Survey and UN political officer summarizes pre-war relations between the U.S. and its colony and then carefully analyzes post-independence legislation, missions, and other actions concerning Filipino national economy, touching briefly on its effects on politics and diplomacy. She concludes that the Philippines' basic economic ills (inefficient production and very low incomes) result from U.S. failure to provide a strong economic basis for political independence, and that moral responsibility and strategic planning make it necessary for us to help remedy the ills." Library J

Reviewed by R. K. Arnold

Am Econ R 44:956 D '54 650w

Am Pol Sci R 48:589 Je '54 60w

JENKINS, SHIRLEY—Continued

"Mrs. Jenkins has examined the economic record with great care and her account is lucid and well-balanced. Since economic policy issues in these days are seldom motivated solely by nonpolitical considerations, the political setting outlined in a lengthy introduction by Dr. Claude A. Buss is particularly helpful." Grayson Kirk

+ Ann Am Acad 296:167 N '54 400w

Current Hist 26:256 Ap '54 120w

Foreign Affairs 32:683 Jl '54 30w

"Claude Buss' introductory background information is excellent. Altogether, a concise, readable presentation of important up-to-date material. Recommended." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 78:1680 O 1 '53 130w

Nation 179:56 Jl 17 '54 360w

"Two things make Shirley Jenkins' modest study timely. The first is the inauguration of the Magsaysay administration, committed to make sweeping changes for the better in the entire economic structure of the Philippines country. The second is the urgent proposal to make some modification in the terms of the Philippine Trade Act before the provisions that are adverse to the Philippines come into effect on July 4 of this year." R. A. Smith

+ N Y Times p19 F 14 '54 550w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:210 Je '54 200w

JENNINGS, JOHN EDWARD. Banners against the wind. 299p $3.75 Little

Howe, Samuel Gridley—Fiction 54-8291

A biographical novel based on the life of Dr Samuel Gridley Howe. The greater part of the novel is concerned with Dr Howe's share in the struggle for Greek independence. The later part of the story describes the founding of the school for blind. It ends with his marriage to the beautiful Julia Ward.

Booklist 51:41 S 15 '54

"As a novel, this is perhaps hampered by the limitations of dependence on sources; as an introduction to the beginnings of our national concern for causes and public welfare, it is an eye-opener, and worth reading."

+ Kirkus 22:344 Je 1 '54 270w

"Mr. Jennings writes clumsily and without plot-architecture but in this case, his subject is so good that the result is an interesting historical novel." E. L. Acken

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 5 '54 320w

"Inherent in Sam Howe's Greek experiences are all the elements of a swashbuckling novel. . . Being a skilled novelist, Mr. Jennings knew how to use these ingredients to full effect." Frank Slaughter

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 8 '54 500w

"Mr. Jennings makes good use of documentary sources. His purpose is to convey the direct experience itself, rather than to interpret its meaning. Dealing more with character in this novel than he has in his other fiction, he shows how, by losing himself in a cause, Dr. Howe grows the mental and moral sinew that serves him in the humanitarian work of his later years." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 S 12 '54 500w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

Sat R 37:15 Ag 7 '54 750w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 15 '54 350w

JENNINGS, OTTO EMERY. Wild flowers of western Pennsylvania and the upper Ohio basin; il. by Andrey Avinoff. 2v $60 Univ. of Pittsburgh press

581.9748 Wild flowers 53-6669

"Volume One, all text except for an abundance of special maps (soil, rainfall, contour, etc.) presents a truly fascinating history of the botany of the region, across whose pages botanists of world fame came exploring, from early America onward. Articles on the geological formation and on plant geography, while written for the specialist, are illuminating to the lesser student. The remainder sets forth plant life in families, including trees along with shrubs and herbaceous plants. Much intimate detail enriches the interest. Volume Two contains gravure reproductions of Dr. Avinoff's superb water colors. He painted the plants life size from living specimens brought him by Dr. and Mrs. Jennings, sometimes working through the night in order to complete a painting while the plant remained fresh." Christian Science Monitor

"The Jennings work approaches as closely as is humanly possible a complete account of the flowering plants [including trees] of its region, which contains most of the species occurring in the eastern United States. It is a scientific work of great distinction." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 21 '54 300w

"The plants themselves come to life in these pages. Each plate is a work of art, but faithful botanically to the original, and the coloring is true. Facing each plate is descriptive text by Dr. Jennings—delightful little nuggets of information." Millicent Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 18 '54 430w

"The text is a lifework; the pictures make this book, along with Mrs. Walcott's albums, a sort of Audubon of the wild flowers of our continent. For both Mrs. Walcott, and Avinoff combined, as Audubon did, the passionate accuracy of the collector with the imaginative eye of the artist." Lewis Gannett

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 3 '54 230w

"The book, both for its text and its plates, will be much valued."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p743 N 19 '54 950w

"The two volumes will prove invaluable to the taxonomist, student, and flower lover. It is unfortunate that, even with the grant from the Buhl Foundation to aid publication, the necessary price of the books will limit the distribution they deserve."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:237 Je '54 350w

JENNINGS, PAUL FRANCIS. Oddly enough: il. by Arthur C. Collins. 175p $3 Macmillan (N Y)

827 54-12933

The author writes a weekly column for the London Observer. This collection of brief essays from that column is Mr Jennings' first book to be published in America. In it he wonders about such things as old automobiles, British railways, plumbing, and what would happen if two motormen entered a streetcar at opposite ends and started to drive.

Booklist 51:102 N 1 '54

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p18 D 2 '54 230w

Kirkus 22:607 S 1 '54 160w

"A little gem, but classical references, British vocabulary and geography, the quirks of British life, may throw American readers. With these reservations, recommended to all libraries." H. L. Leet

+ Library J 79:1825 O 1 '54 140w

"All very pleasant."

+ New Yorker 30:138 O 30 '54 160w

Reviewed by H. A. Smith

Sat R 37:14 N 13 '54 650w

JENNISON, KEITH WARREN. Green mountains and rock ribs; stories and pictures. 90p $3 Harcourt

974.3 [917.43] Vermont—Views 54-11325

Photographs of Vermont scenery and people, with pithy comment on both.

"An amusing and handsome book. Its lovely photographs tell half the story. Its text authentically reproduces the dryly scathing voices. This is, necessarily, inexpert judgment. I have lived in Vermont only twenty years and still belong to that tolerated caste dismissed by my native neighbors as 'permanent summer people.' " F. F. Van de Water

+ N Y Times p41 O 31 '54 350w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 90w

JENNISON, KEITH WARREN. Green place. 109p $3 Funk

54-6359

A short novel which tells how a young advertising executive went to Central Park to meditate on a problem that confronted him, and what happened there to help him to a solution.

Booklist 50:451 J1 15 '54

Reviewed by Milton Crane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 8 '54 110w

"A slight story, written with grace and a sensitivity to pertinent concerns."

Kirkus 22:247 Ap 1 '54 150w

"A short novel which is entertaining although a bit contrived... The author uses his plot as a framework for his opinions on some of modern life's larger issues. Well written." W. K. Harrison

+ — Library J 79:1315 J1 '54 110w

"That no man can escape the violence of life, no matter where it is staged, is the obvious moral of the story. It is well told in swiftly moving incidents but somehow fails to jell into character conviction."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J1 25 '54 200w

"Mr. Jennison has written an artificial story that suggests but one moral: a park is no place to try to think in." Charles Lee

— N Y Times p15 J1 18 '54 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 19 '54 450w

JENS, WALTER. Blind man; tr. from the German by Michael Bullock. 92p $2.50 Macmillan (N Y)

54-8660

"A short novel telling of the accident of a German schoolteacher and of his blindness. In the days after his accident, he finds his only solace in a set of blocks which enable him to project himself in such a way that he is able to follow the lives of those he loves. The blocks begin to fail him, however, until he learns from an old Jew who had them in a concentration camp how to use them and value them." Library J

Booklist 50:229; 297 F 15 '54; Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 25 '54 130w

Kirkus 22:12 Ja 1 '54 160w

"This is a stark, unsentimental allegory. Appeal is to a limited audience, not recommended for small libraries." W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:451 Mr 1 '54 100w

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson

New Statesman & Nation 48:716 N 27 '54 140w

"The brave despondency of the hero of this short novel proves more depressing, and perhaps more destructive, than outright despair or even bitterness would."

New Yorker 30:129 Mr 27 '54 40w

"Cloudy as his intentions often are, it is certain Jens suggests that the suffering of the Jews will mitigate the 'blindness' and brutalities of the Third Reich, and that only a generous concern for mankind will overcome that terrible German self-absorption the world knows so well. But apart from the story's fugitive thesis, it is wise to modify the above assertion that Mr. Jens has written a 'moving lesson' until there is substantial proof that a new Germany has learned that lesson well." Nicholas Monjo

Sat 37:15 My 8 '54 450w

JENSEN, VERNON HORTIN. Nonferrous metals industry unionism, 1932-1954; a story of leadership controversy. (Cornell studies in industry and labor relations) 328p pa $4 N.Y. State School of Industry and Labor relations, Ithaca, N.Y.

331.88 International union of mine, mill and smelter workers. Communism—U.S.

54-62642

"A valuable contribution to trade union history by a professor at the New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations, who has studied and written about unions in this industry over a period of years. In tracing the development of these unions, he also reveals how Communists come to dominate an organization and how in this case they maintain their hold." Library J

"This is a fascinating account, necessarily in detail, for it was by attention to many seemingly unimportant details that the web was spun. And when the victims began to struggle, it became clear how well the Party had done its job." H. J. Lahne

+ Ann Am Acad 296:182 N '54 500w

"This scholarly account throws a clear cold light on one of the basic problems that still confront labor in this country. Should interest students of industrial relations as well as others concerned, sincerely, with the serious aspects of Communism. Recommended for purchase wherever such a need exists." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 79:1519 S 1 '54 90w

JEPSON, SELWYN. Black Italian. 224p $2.95 Doubleday

54-10771

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:552 Ag 15 '54 40w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 47:840 Je 26 '54 70w

"A razzle-dazzle thriller, best taken with a shaker of salt and an eye alert to miss the occasional purple patches." James Sandoe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 14 '54 120w

"I hereby nominate Selwyn Jepson's Eve Gill as the most wildly conceived heroine in detective fiction. Take Pearl White, Pamela North, Robin Hood, Arsene Lupin, Superwoman, Tommy Hambledon, and a bevy of the rashest idiot-heroines ever devised by the Had-I-But-Known school, melt them all down in a pipkin or crucible, and the residuum may be a shadow faintly resembling the egregious Eve. She is as preposterous as she is somehow, to my critical puzzlement, delightfully entertaining." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p40 N 7 '54 120w

New Yorker 30:244 D 4 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p31 N 28 '54 30w

JERROLD, DOUGLAS. The lie about the West; a response to Professor Toynbee's challenge. 85p $1.75 Sheed

901 Toynbee, Arnold Joseph—World and the West. Civilization, Occidental 54-11145

In this book Douglas Jerrold has provided a reply to Professor Toynbee's book The World and the West, which was in substance a reprint of his Reith Lectures. Mr Jerrold analyzes the professor's thesis, examines the evidence on which it rests, and seeks to demolish it in a reasoned argument. (cf Publisher's note)

"Jerrold's verdict that The World and the West is more likely to undermine than promote the defense of the West is amply justified. But his own account of the world dimensions of the crisis, especially China, imperialism and the first world war, has a more than Churchillian narrowness. On these matters Toynbee speaks from greater knowledge and

JERROLD, DOUGLAS—Continued
wide vision. Nevertheless, "where Toynbee leans to the conciliation of surrender, Jerrold defends essentials." M. A. Fitzsimons

+ — Commonweal 61:47 O 15 '54 550w

"In spite of the ultimate importance of the attitude of the East toward the West, and in spite of the fame which surrounds anything which deals with Toynbee, this book is not recommended for any but the larger libraries. The subject is big, but somehow the debate seems small in the narrow and academic manner in which the author presents it." James Heslin

Library J 79:2100 N 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by Chilton Williamson

Sat R 37:22 N 20 '54 550w

"Mr. Jerrold's book is drastic, yet (except, it may be thought, in its title) not impolite. It was very necessary to be written." Arundell Esdaile

+ Spec p693 Je 4 '54 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p225 Ap 9 '54 2850w

JOHN, EVAN, pseud. See Simpson, E. J.

JOHNS, WILLY, pseud. Fabulous journey of Hieronymus Meeker. 370p $3.50 Little 54-6889

A combination of satire and science-fiction.

Booklist 50:420 J1 1 '54

"Some of the most amusing mysteries in the world are literary. This is one of them. What I mean is that I am wondering who really wrote this book—this outrageous science-fiction satire on the human race. Willy Johns is definitely a pseudonym." Fritz Leiber

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 11 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:244 Ap 1 '54 130w

"One of those occasional pieces of science fiction which are also literature; ironical, satirical, often ribald in its details and choice of targets. . . . Public libraries and browsing rooms; pay collections too, of course." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:982 My 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by J. F. McComas

N Y Times p25 Je 13 '54 100w

"Mr. Johns' satire is frequently quite heavy-handed and obvious, and his book is wordier than seems necessary, but it is a welcome adventure in reading and a pleasing oasis in a desert of so-so books. And even if you find no joy in satire, the fearful denizens of Thalia prove to be the most imaginative since C. S. Lewis took Dr. Ransom on his space voyage to Malacandra." R. F. H.

+ — Springf'd Republican p12D J1 18 '54 350w

JOHNSON, ENID, and JOHNSON, MARGARET. Sally's real estate venture. 190p $2.50 Messner

54-6769

A career story for girls in grades eight to ten. Seventeen-year-old Sally discovers at the death of her wealthy father that she will have to get a job. In attempting to sell the family estate in Westchester she discovers her field: real estate selling.

Booklist 50:403 Je 15 '54

"The goals are fine, but won with the use of a dream-come-trueism most girls don't experience."

Kirkus 22:65 F 1 '54 120w

"The usual flaw of easy success is balanced by more realistic incidents and a human interest in rather than a detailed approach to the business. Light, society romance for girls." M. H. Emonds

+ Library J 79:790 Ap 15 '54 60w

JOHNSON, FRANK HARRIS, and others. Kinetic basis of molecular biology. 874p $15 Wiley

574.19 Physiological chemistry. Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 54-7856

"This book should take on the status of a milestone in the progress of our understanding of biological processes. It is written at an advanced level, and most of it demands on the part of the reader enough mathematical maturity so that he can grasp the main ideas of quantum mechanics and statistical mechanics; however the nonspecialist reader who is interested in the physico-chemical trend in biological theory will find scattered passages which he can understand." N Y New Tech Bks

"An important high-level study." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:2218 N 15 '54 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:66 S '54

JOHNSON, GERALD WHITE. Mount Vernon. 122p il $2.75 Random house

B or 92 Mount Vernon, Virginia. Mount Vernon ladies' association of the Union. Washington, George 53-10373

An account of the rehabilitation of Mount Vernon begun one hundred years ago by the "Mount Vernon Ladies' Association of the Union." Contains also many extracts from Washington's dairies and letters which cover phases of the furnishing of his home. Index.

Booklist 50:164 D 15 '53

"All in all, this small volume is a major contribution to Mount Vernon lore." Josephine Ripley

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 18 '54 350w

Kirkus 21:706 O 15 '53 190w

"Mr. Johnson makes a good story of all this." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p40 N 15 '53 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 13 '53 40w

Reviewed by G. C. Smith

Social Studies 45:267 N '54 200w

JOHNSON, J. RICHARD. How to troubleshoot a TV receiver. 124p il pa $1.80 Rider, J.F.

621.3883 Television apparatus—Repairing. Television receivers 53-12400

Contents: Getting the most out of TV service data; TV receiver sections; Tools, equipment and accessories; Preliminary observations and checks—the trouble-shooting approach; Use of the test patterns and cross-hatch patterns in troubleshooting; Controls and their adjustment; Tubes and tube checking; The dead receiver; Interpreting raster on picture distortion; Sound troubles; Index.

"Should prove very useful to young television servicemen." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 78:2223 D 15 '53 80w

"Although not intended for laymen, the book will appeal to some amateurs who are interested in understanding if not repairing TV receivers."

N Y New Tech Bks 38:96 N '53

JOHNSON, JOHN CLARK. Physical meteorology. 393p $7.50 Mass. inst. of technology; Wiley

551.5 Meteorology 54-7836

Contents: Atmospheric refraction; Scattering in the atmosphere; Theory of atmospheric visibility; Radiation processes in the earth's atmosphere; Radiation studies and the heat budget of the earth; Refraction and diffraction by atmospheric suspensoids, atmospheric optics; The physical conditions attending the formation of cloud particles; Natural and artificially stimulated precipitation, icing of aircraft, and radar meteorology; Atmospheric electricity; The ionosphere and the ozonosphere; The temperature, density, pressure, and humidity of the upper atmosphere. Appendix. Index.

"A useful complement to standard texts on meteorology and a recommended addition to public library collections on meteorology even though it is too technical for readers without a sound training in physics." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1405 Ag '54 110w

"A knowledge of basic physics and calculus is assumed. Well-selected reference lists are included in the chapters. In addition to its use by students, the book will be useful to graduate meteorologists both as a survey of fundamental knowledge and as a guide to important research papers. Also such chapters as that on radiation processes in the earth's atmosphere are potentially of value to scientists and engineers in fields other than meteorology."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 39:57 JI '54

JOHNSON, MARJORIE P., comp. Concise encyclopedia of favorite flowers; ed. by Montague Free; with 10 color photographs; 106 drawings by Katharine Burton. 256p $3.95 American garden guild, 444 Madison av, N.Y. 22; Doubleday

635.903 Gardening—Encyclopedias and dictionaries. Flowers—Encyclopedias and dictionaries 53-9991

Reference book for the home gardener. It lists 106 flowering plants, arranged in alphabetical order. Includes a black-and-white drawing of each, with information on uses, habits of growth, description of flowers and foliage, and culture of plants. Index.

Booklist 50:197 Ja 15 '54

Bookmark 13:136 Mr '54 40w

"The encyclopedia is of particular value to amateur gardeners." Helen Reber

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 D 27 '53 20w

Kirkus 21:618 S 1 '53 110w

JOHNSON, PAMELA HANSFORD. Corinth house; a play in three acts; with an essay on the future of prose-drama. 143p $2.50 St Martins 822 54-9471

The play in this volume tells the story of a struggle between two women, an ex-head mistress of a girls school, and a younger woman who had once been a pupil under her. The scene is a London boarding-house where the older woman is living in comparative peace and quiet when the younger one enters and tries to take revenge on her for her expulsion from school.

Booklist 50:354 My 15 '54

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 79:1322 JI '54 20w

"In its final form it is an admirably tense study in feminine psychology on a higher dramatic level than much that the London stage has offered audiences in the present season."

Times [London] Lit Sup p244 Ap 16 '54 500w

JOHNSON, WILLIAM. Sam Houston, the tallest Texan; il. by William Reusswig. (Landmark bks) 185p $1.50 Random house; to schools and school lib. only $1.68 Hale, E. M.

B or 92 Houston, Samuel—Juvenile literature 53-6256

The life story of Sam Houston, written for age ten and older. He was governor of Tennessee and later of Texas; he was congressman from Tennessee and later senator from Texas; and he was president of the Republic of Texas in 1836. Index.

"A level headed, exciting story of an American hero."

+ Kirkus 21:537 Ag 15 '53 130w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr

Library J 78:1857 O 15 '53 40w

"The many phases of Houston's long career are presented with a fine sense of historical and local color." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p28 F 14 '54 40w

Wis Lib Bul 50:78 Mr '54

JOHNSTON, MRS EDITH FARRINGTON, II. Macmillan wild flower book. See Macmillan wild flower book

JOHNSTON, JOSEPH. God's secret armies within the Soviet empire. 268p $3.75 Putnam 274.7 Russia—Church history Communism and religion 54-5488

An American journalist's report of what he learned concerning the fight against communism carried on by secret organizations of Protestants, Jews, and Catholics behind the Iron Curtain.

"Johnston's investigation confirms the findings reported by Greta Palmer in her book, 'God's Underground,' and shows that religion is far from dead behind the Iron Curtain. 'God's Secret Armies' is an inspiring and thrilling account of the exploits of present day heroes, martyrs and saints who demonstrate the inability of tyrannies to crush the religious conscience of devout and sincere members of all the great faiths." J. A. O'Brien

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 17 '54 500w

"The material is not well organized. While one would like to believe the author's thesis, it is not convincingly set forth."

Kirkus 22:577 Ag 15 '54 210w

"Recommended for all libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 79:1887 O 15 '54 130w

"Despite its good intentions, the book has many faults. Unfortunately the author failed to give adequate heed to his Jesuit friends' advice to read up on the subject. Had he done so he would have avoided some of his mistakes in history and geography, but chiefly he could have learned of the religious life carried on in the open by millions of faithful in the great cities as well as the towns and villages of the Soviet Union. As a thriller the book has some merits." Paul Anderson

+ N Y Times p30 D 5 '54 350w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 24 '54 40w

JOHNSTON, RUBY F. Development of Negro religion. 202p il $3 Philosophical lib.

277.3 Negroes—Religion 54-7966

"A concise history of Christianity as conditioned by the social background and changing environment of American Negroes. Drawings, tables. Notes, index." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:182 My '54 20w

"Obviously a thesis only slightly refurbished for the book trade, poorly written and carelessly edited, this is not a very important or very inspiring contribution. However, libraries with a large Negro clientele will find it useful." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 79:544 Mr 15 '54 140w

JOHNSTONE, JOHN K. Bloomsbury group. 383p $5 Noonday

820.9 Forster, Edward Morgan. Strachey. Giles Lytton. Woolf, Virginia (Stephen). English literature—History and criticism [54-4229]

"A study of E. M. Forster, Lytton Strachey, Virginia Woolf and their circle." (Subtitle) "Mr. Johnstone's book has one main thesis. He sets out to show that the members of the Bloomsbury Group had common values stemming from an original gospel, the early Cambridge philosophy of G. E. Moore, formulated in his Principia Ethica, and published in 1904." (Times [London] Lit Sup)

JOHNSTONE, J. K.—Continued

Reviewed by Vivian Mercier

Commonweal 61:42 O 15 '54 2050w

"Mr Johnstone's subtitle is more accurate than his title. He is not really writing about Bloomsbury at all. . . . What he does is to guide us through the work of his three authors. He expounds their purposes, their methods, their felicities; of these he tells us which are peculiar to each writer and which held in common; and he achieves a modest success." John Rosselli

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Je 4 '54 330w

Reviewed by Jacob Korg

Nation 179:470 N 27 '54 30w

"The book is something of a university thesis, but it is much better written than this kind of book usually is; it is an appreciation or apologia, but it is neither fulsome nor laborious. The weakness lies in the absence of fundamental criticism. We hear nothing, for example, of the damaging attacks made by D. H. Lawrence and Wyndham Lewis on a set which they found to be priggish, self-consuming, insulated from life and fatally intellectual. . . . I do not regret this weakness, for Bloomsbury was attacked too recklessly in the doctrinaire Thirties." V. S. Pritchett

+ — N Y Times p36 S 26 '54 1050w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 28 '54 100w

"The first part of Mr. Johnstone's book gives a learned and often penetrating survey, which can confidently be recommended. The second part of the book, however, in which he treats his chosen novelists more separately, is not, perhaps, quite so successful. . . . he does not seem to have learned his own lessons, he criticises by the light of the literature schools rather than by the lights his authors themselves had lit." Richard Hughes

+ — Spec p716 Je 11 '54 1900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p521 Ag 20 '54 4850w

JOHNSTONE, MRS MARGARET (BLAIR).

When God says no: faith's starting point. 311p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Clergy—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-5808

Autobiography of a woman minister of the Congregational church.

+ Kirkus 22:101 F 1 '54 210w

"Mrs. Johnstone's writing is lively and popular, with incidents dramatic, sad or humorous. But it is her honest confession of times of great spiritual letdown, followed by upsurgings of faith renewed, that make it helpful."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p9 Ag 1 '54 420w

"Moralizing in theme but never 'preachy' in tone, this book will help any person seeking a firmer faith in these troublesome times." Ben Bradford

+ N Y Times p16 Je 27 '54 350w

JONAS, CARL. Riley McCullough. 311p $3.95 Little

54-6882

"Just as the narrator, Riley McCullough, makes a point of the long pregnancies in his family, so is this the extended parturition of an adult for Riley finally comes to the end of his reveals and accomplishes what he always wanted to do, to marry his cousin, Anastasia Westward. And through the long years between is the long inventory of Riley's life as, Mitty-like, his dreams of glory run alongside the chain reactions that involve him." Kirkus

"In this reviewer's judgment, the book should have gone back into the author's typewriter to be rewritten, with 'Jefferson Selleck' breathing down the author's neck, for ■ good influence." Fanny Butcher

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 23 '54 420w

Kirkus 22:211 Mr 15 '54 200w

"Much symbolism, satire and some mumbo-jumbo included. Some readers will enjoy and others will be bored." R. P. Bartolini

Library J 79:860 My 1 '54 90w

"'Riley McCullough' is alternately deft and savage. Some of the monsters jabbed by Mr. Jonas are already dead horses, like dianetics. Others are very much alive, and will unfortunately survive his belaboring, but we can be grateful for the blows he does get in, in the most satisfying novel this reviewer has read in years."

+ Nation 178:528 Je 19 '54 330w

"'Riley McCullough' lampoons too much to be always effective. But at its best its satire is acerb and refreshing." Coleman Rosenberger

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Je 20 '54 750w

"Satire has become rare enough in United States letters. Anyone with the authentic gift ought to be put on government subsidy as a contributor to the general welfare. . . . This quality makes Carl Jonas' new book a particularly refreshing and heartening one. . . . At its best the book is as funny as anything being published today. It seems too bad that in the effort to make it a full length novel a good deal that isn't funny has been included." Harry Sylvester

+ — N Y Times p5 My 23 '54 550w

"The author was criticized for ■ certain lack of subtlety in his previous novel, but he has more than made up for that this time. The entirely different mood and atmosphere of this book, and the fact that the strange Riley is believable throughout and the fact that the tone and spirit of the work are completely Riley's and completely different from the tone of 'Jefferson Selleck,' are facts that testify to the growing skill and the great promise of Mr. Jonas. He has successfully handled two very difficult assignments and he has shown himself to be a humorist of considerable stature." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 13 '54 800w

JONAS, KLAUS W., ed. Maugham enigma. 217p $4 Citadel

B or 92 Maugham, William Somerset

53-13462

"Dr. Jonas, a devout admirer of Maugham and one of his bibliographers, teaches at Rutgers University and is the founder of the Center of Maugham Studies there. This book is an entertaining anthology of critical essays and reviews of the octogenarian writer's work, by 24 contributors ranging from Maxwell Anderson to Evelyn Waugh." Library J

"For public and university libraries." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:141 Ja 15 '54 110w

"This is a modest but probably ■ fair estimate of Maugham's eventual place in literary history." John Raymond

New Statesman ■ Nation 47:101 Ja 23 '54 1750w

"Those who have found Maugham puzzling, as many have, may read here what biographers, reporters, serious critics and newspaper book reviewers have had to say on the subject. Whether they will be any nearer to solving the 'Maugham enigma,' if there is such a thing is another matter. . . . There is little question that one of the cycles Mr. Maugham has lived to observe is currently operating to raise him in the general esteem. This collection of opinion suggests how that has happened and why, which is the reason for its publication, and ■ good one." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 25 '54 650w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p57 Ja 22 '54 1000w

JONES, A. MILES (ANN BULLINGHAM, pseud). Penelope. 282p $2.50 St Martins

53-2512

The story of an English school teacher, in ■ little rural school, who fights valiantly to keep her job, loses it for a time, and is re-instated. The story is told largely as it appeared to five-year-old Penelope.

Kirkus 21:275 Ap 15 '53 180w

"Miss Bullingham tells her slim little story in a series of dialogues. It is a method which is sometimes monotonous, but it conveys a surprisingly good sense of both ideas and character, and in general it makes a charming book."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 30 '53 330w

"A delightful story." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p14 D 20 '53 430w

"Penelope, if too slight a piece of work to have any claims to real originality, is at any rate an entertaining oddity. . . . Simple as it is, however, Penelope is a lively and homely satire upon what might be called official idealism in education; and the staccato repetitive style of the children's speech has a curious effectiveness and charm."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p393 Je 19 '53 240w

JONES, ELI STANLEY. Growing spiritually.

364p $1.50 Abingdon

242.2 Yearbooks (devotional, etc)

53-11338

Brief essays, one for each day thruout the year, embodying suggestions and precepts for religious growth.

Bookmark 13:83 Ja '54 20w

Reviewed by Clarence Seidenspinner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 17 '54 150w

"365 daily devotional readings comprise this little book. The fact that they are from the pen of the well known missionary, evangelist and author, Stanley Jones, will in itself commend the book to a wide circle of readers."

+ Kirkus 21:791 D 15 '53 110w

JONES, FRANCIS CLIFFORD. Japan's new order in East Asia; its rise and fall, 1937-45. 510p $6.10 Oxford

952.03 Japan—Foreign policy 54-9924

"Most of it is a detailed diplomatic history of the events leading up to Japan's entry into the war and those leading up to her surrender. . . . An introductory chapter threads its way skilfully through the jungle of Japanese politics in the 1920s and 1930s and is particularly illuminating on the peculiar position of the Army and the peculiar, semi-feudal ideas of its officers; but the story would have had to be carried much farther back in time, and deeper into the political and social origins of the situation in 1937, to be fully intelligible to a reader without previous knowledge of Japan; and to do that would have thrown out of balance the whole plan of the work." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Dr. Jones has been careful of his facts, shrewd and judicious in his comments, and the tragic story which he develops is one which we should not forget." H. F. Angus

+ Canadian Forum 34:165 O '54 300w

"A scholarly and copiously documented account." O. D. Tolischus

+ N Y Times p3 My 23 '54 950w

"The book is a very good one of its kind. Its kind is not for the general reader. . . . The voluminous documentary evidence (largely from the 'War Guilt' trials) has been carefully sifted, the conclusions drawn from it are reasonable, and when the author has to guess at motives his guess is almost always plausible, though it may be doubted whether he has quite fathomed the reasons for the strange appointment as Foreign Minister of Matsuoka, brash, bombastic, rude and indiscreet—the Japanese Ribbentrop, as he aptly terms him."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p567 S 10 '54 850w

JONES, ILION TINGNAL. Historical approach to evangelical worship. 319p $4.50 Abingdon

264 Public worship

53-11339

"Dr. Jones feels that the present Protestant trend toward more ritual and interest in ancient liturgical forms is dangerous and a backward step. The first half of Dr. Jones' book is an account of the historical background of evangelical worship, in which he sketches the conflict of priestly and prophetic religion in the Old Testament period and the rise of the synagogue. . . . The second half is headed 'Developing an Evangelical Cultus in the Light of this Historical Background.' There are chapters on the nature of an evangelical cultus, the interpretation and observance of the Lord's supper, symbolism, materials for worship, and the order of service." San Francisco Chronicle

"Had the author's approach to his problem been less a protest against Protestantism's current movement toward a better ordered worship, and more a constructive evaluation of the uncritical attitudes and psychologically unsound innovations of some of its devotees, his book could have well served as a timely caution. . . . The value of Dr. Jones' study, no doubt, lies in its moving interpretation of those qualities of genuineness and spirituality which should characterize all worship, whether liturgical or nonliturgical." G. E. Osborn

+ Christian Century 71:674 Je 2 '54 750w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 28 '54 450w

JONES, OLGA ANNA. Churches of the presidents in Washington. 109p il $3 Exposition

975.3 Presidents (U.S.). Washington, D.C.—Churches 54-7289

An account of "visits to 15 national shrines." They are the Washington, D.C. churches attended by the various presidents of the United States during their residence in the city.

"This [is an] exceedingly worth-while book." Josephine Ripley

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 10 '54 300w

Reviewed by R. S. Brooks

Springf'd Republican p9C Jl 11 '54 140w

JONES, ROBERT ARTHUR. Outdoor picture cookbook; photographs and illustrations by the author. 126p $2.95 Hawthorn bks.

641.5 Cookery, Outdoor 54-6455

"Meats and simple accompaniments are the recipes featured and man or boy can prepare a meal. Not the barbecue type, however. No index." Library J

Booklist 50:352 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Madeline Holland

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 18 '54 130w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 79:1230 Je 15 '54 40w

"Attention: hunter, trapper, scout! Maximum ingenuity with the minimum equipment can provide good eating. See the 'Outdoor Picture Cookbook,' read the text." Mary Poore

+ N Y Times p32 My 16 '54 20w

JONES, STANLEY WILSON. Public administration in Malaya. 229p $3 Royal inst. of int. affairs

354.595 Malaya, British

53-8786

Organization, methods and problems of public administration of Malaya, considered mainly in terms of historical development. "Its author was colonial secretary for the British Straits Settlements from 1940 until the Japanese conquest of early 1942 and was an officer of the Malayan civil service for some thirty years." (Ann Am Acad)

Am Pol Sci R 47:904 S '53 20w

"Students of government will welcome this account of the administrative system of Malaya, which is also a contribution towards understanding of the requirements for efficient public administration in all the countries of southeastern Asia." V. J. Puryear

JONES, S. W.—Continued
+ Ann Am Acad 290:179 N '53 500w

"Mr. Jones seems unfamiliar with the content and format of public administration as it is taught as a social-science subject in the middle of the twentieth century. . . . The student or teacher of public administration will seek in vain for information regarding systems of recruitment, promotion and disciplinary controls in the civil service. It is regrettable that a book of this nature should omit consideration of budgetary controls, the system of audit, the Crown Agents, and currency and exchange controls. Problems relating to licenses, permits and other aspects of administrative law are likewise ignored." U. A. Aziz

— Pacific Affairs 26:361 D '53 1000w

JONES, TIMOTHY ANGUS. Mr Twining [Eng title: Mr Twining and the god Pan]. 378p $3.50 Knopf

53-6844

Story of a timid little English schoolmaster. One Easter vacation Mr Twining goes to the French Riviera and gets mixed up with a nudist colony. Later he acts as tutor to the niece of a wealthy jeweler, and is so out of his depth that he has to have his headmaster's help before he can re-establish his self-respect.

Booklist 50:278 Mr 15 '54

"For a leisurely, contemplative and gently philosophical peregrination, schoolmaster Twining's unexpected adventures have a whilom appeal, but no great impact."

Kirkus 21:796 D 15 '53 170w

"Leisurely in style, this sensitive whimsey just misses a book club. A few French sex words. Rental collections buy sparingly." H. L. Leet

Library J 79:205 F 1 '54 30w

"This is a gay, light-hearted novel, written with distinction and, though fantastic, refreshingly free of all pretence, like Mr Twining himself." H. I.A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 J1 3 '53 160w

"There is a curiously winsome pseudo-innocence about the entire novel, an innocence not to be taken too seriously, or should one say too innocently? 'Were you in the War?' a character asked the schoolmaster, and when informed that the authorities had considered him better employed in teaching, the reply was: 'Good job too. Awful waste of time, the War.' . . . Read 'Mr. Twining.' It contains, besides witty entertainment, an exposition of something rather difficult to understand about the English, but also in its way rather reassuring." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 14 '54 750w

"Mr Jones writes with grace and style, but is apparently charmed with the sound of his own mellifluous words. Had he curbed his prolixity and speeded his tempo, Mr. Twining would have lingered longer in our memory." J. B.

+ — N Y Times p27 F 14 '54 500w

New Yorker 30:117 Mr 6 '54 70w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Sat R 37:16 Ap 17 '54 380w

"Mr. Twining is an unconscious bore and no matter how lively the people he meets may be when he meets them they too become bores as soon as they open their mouths." John Metcalf
Spec p138 J1 31 '53 290w

"From his character-drawing and his dialogue there is no doubt that Mr. Jones will prove a writer of considerable interest. But in this novel he seems to have lost his way, to be uncertain with which of those worlds contained on the Inner Sea he wants to confront his hero. Nor is he at his happiest with Mr. Twining and the elaboration of his story."

Times [London] Lit Sup p425 J1 3 '53 230w

JORDAN, MRS GRACE (EDINGTON). Home below Hell's Canyon. 243p $3.50 Crowell

B or 92 Frontier and pioneer life—Idaho 54-6332

Describes the years the author spent on a sheep ranch located in a deep canyon on the Snake River in Idaho. With her was her husband and their three young children, and a part of her time was taken up in training the children to become good pioneers. The time was the early 1930's.

Booklist 50:338 My 1 '54

Reviewed by Russell MacFall

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ap 18 '54 50w

"Mrs. Jordan combines picture with drama, and her writing is nuggeted with eye-witness phrases. She sums up survival in nine words, one 'must first master the art of preventing the unexpected.' She is especially adept at drawing character with justice and affection as well as with a sense of the ludicrous. She is fair to other women." T. M. Longstreth
+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 1 '54 460w

"Her story is one of pioneer hardships in this inaccessible spot set within high walls. Girls with an interest in unusual experience will enjoy it." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 30:262 Ag '54 40w

"Mrs. Jordan writes with a view toward a woman's day-to-day life rather than toward the spectacular; and housewives in less isolated areas may well be drawn to her story."

Kirkus 22:31 Ja 1 '54 200w

"Most entertaining and readable book. . . Highly recommended." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:544 Mr 15 '54 120w

"In this book ■ governor's lady has written about the years when she was a sheepman's wife just below the mile-deep Hell's Canyon of the Snake River, and for this reviewer, at least, it would be difficult to make life in the executive mansion at Boise half as interesting or meaningful as there among the rock walls and the rattlesnakes." Mari Sandoz

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 4 '54 600w

"As she tells it, the drama of their life in the canyon is underplayed. Mrs. Jordan seems to have a better eye for the small detail than for the major action. One would like to know a little more of what went on inside the minds of Grace and Len Jordan in those years. Neighbors, the mortgage and the price of wool surely didn't crowd out all plans and dreams. One would like to know some of the basic 'whys' as well as all the 'what happened.' Without these things the book remains a memoir, when it could have been considerably more." Hal Borland

N Y Times p12 Ap 11 '54 450w

Wis Lib Bul 50:132 My '54

JOSEF, MICHEL A. Chicken cook book. 219p $3 Greenberg

641.5 Cookery (poultry) 52-9969

"A collection of the author's favorite recipes—American and foreign—for main dishes, soups, salads, and snacks. Few directions for selecting and preparing the fowl; the value of the book lies in the variety of recipes." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 50:179 Ja 1 '54

"Here is a truly impressive volume on chicken cookery, written by a well known Indiana restaurateur, an authority on foreign and domestic foods. . . . Chapters on how to buy chicken and a description of the herbs and spices used in some of the recipes, in addition to basic chicken cookery from stewing methods to frying and roasting poultry, are carefully outlined." Mary Meade

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 F 14 '54 170w

"One would know the writer to be a chef by his oneness with his subject, by the simplicity and sharpness of the directions given; and also by the occasional recipe left dangling, as if the final treatment were considered too simple for further notice."

+ Sat R 37:36 F 13 '54 100w

JOSEPH, HARRY, and ZERN, GORDON. Emotional problems of children; a guide for parents. 310p $3.75 Crown

649.1 Child study. Children—Management. 54-6634

A portrayal of the growth of children and the emotional problems which they encounter as they are growing up. The author is director of the Guidance Center of New Rochelle, Inc. Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 51:6 S 1 '54

"The material is not new, but it provides a solid basis for parent education and application."

+ Kirkus 22:299 My 1 '54 150w

"Two chief values of this book are its comprehensiveness and thoroughness. . . Most of the chapters in this section have been written by experts in the field. Excellent and extensive bibliography. The careful organization of the book makes it equally useful as a reference volume or for general reading in college and public libraries. Recommended for first purchase." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:979 My 15 '54 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 24 '54 150w

JOSEPHS, RAY. How to make money from your ideas. 318p $3.95 Doubleday

371.425 Business. Inventions. Occupations. 54-5177

"Practical and spirited suggestions on how to get ideas, how to channel them into productive fields, and how to protect them. Cites numerous instances where an idea for a modest bit of convenience goods has paid off with a lucrative business today—especially in the fields of house appliances, toys, novelties, and cosmetics." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 51:124 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:31 N '54 10w

"A book to stimulate as well as instruct, this is a notion counter in practical terms."

+ Kirkus 22:470 J1 15 '54 120w

"Useful for those seeking home businesses as well as for those in the business and industrial world, and especially timely in consideration of the 'Do-It-Yourself' movement throughout the country. Recommended." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:2216 N 15 '54 110w

JOUHANDEAU, MARCEL. Marcel and Elise; with a pref. by Henri Mondor; introd. and tr. by Martin Turnell. 223p $3.50 Pantheon bks.

848 53-9946

Since his marriage in 1929 this French author has published several autobiographical works or novels revealing the psychological and emotional aspects of his union with the former dancer Elise. In this volume there are extracts from these works woven into a more or less continuous narrative.

"Certainly a unique document in the vast literature dealing with the splendors and miseries of conjugal life." C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 192:89 O '53 550w

"It is especially satisfying to find Pantheon Books taking such exemplary pains to introduce Jouhandeau here in America. The book-making is handsome; the translation sensitive; and the text itself an authorized selection by Kurt Wolff from eight of Jouhandeau's quasi-autobiographical novels—the so-called 'Elise' books—which together make up the most moving celebration of an intricately human marriage that I know of in any literature." Robert Phelps

+ New Repub 130:20 F 8 '54 600w

"From any point of view it is a delightful book. M. Jouhandeau's thought and style shine with sophisticated wit, as excellently translated by Martin Turnell." Robert Halsband

+ Sat R 37:39 Ja 16 '54 290w

JOYCE, JAMES. Chamber music [poems] ed. with an introd. and notes by William York Tindall. 236p $3.75 Columbia univ. press

821

54-5333

"For a number of years under the spell of Joyce, Professor William York Tindall of Columbia University has written a long introduction, supplemented by a series of notes, to a new edition of 'Chamber Music.' If the work was not precisely a labor of love, I would say Mr. Tindall was bewitched and enthralled; he enjoyed his labors. He successfully relates 'Chamber Music' to Joyce's writings in prose and to the Symbolist Movement in literature." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

"Any one who undertakes an interpretation of Joyce's poetry is likely to run into a dark corner where error grows. In this case the dark corner is the Elizabethan song. Mr. Tindall could not find Ben Jonson's song that Stephen sang in 'A Portrait of the Artist,' which may be found in Jonson's masque, 'A Vision of Delight.' The song that Mr. Tindall quotes on page 35 of his introduction is by Thomas Campion, a poet and musician of the seventeenth century. I strongly suspect that Joyce read A. H. Bullen's selections of Elizabethan and seventeenth century verse; all bright young poets of Joyce's day knew Bullen well." Horace Gregory

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 11 '54 650w

"Professor Tindall's Introduction and Notes, comprising together one page of commentary for every three short lines of verse, are calculated to communicate even to the general reader something of the fascination of trying to put together the vast jigsaw puzzle of Joycean writings; not the less because his interpretations are punctuated by sallies of irreverent wit and are kept in perspective by the conviction that Joyce's greatness lies not so much in his method as in the distinctive vision of human life which the method permits him to reveal."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:197 Je '54 220w

JOYE, MADELEINE. He was not my son; tr. from the French by Michael Scott [pseud]. 155p il $3 Rinehart

136.7 Children—Management. Parent and child. 54-9865

"Account of the mix-up of Madame Joye's twin boys. Born in a Swiss hospital in 1941, one of the twins was, inadvertently, placed with another mother, Madame X, whose son, born the same night, became the second twin. The error was discovered about six years later. . . The remainder of this chronicle describes Madame Joye's efforts toward assimilating a strange child into her household and lays bare her innermost thoughts and yearnings for the 'son' she had to yield to Madame X." Library J

Booklist 51:74; 122 O 15 '54; N 15 '54

Kirkus 22:655 S 15 '54 160w

"Without sentimentality, without melodrama, Madame Joye's story is intelligently, yet touchingly, presented. She writes of her own and the three boys' reactions vividly and with perception. The book will have wide appeal. Recommended for general library collections." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:2206 N 15 '54 220w

"Mrs. Joye's unpretentious account is bound to give imaginative parents plenty to think about next time they take a baby home from the maternity ward."

Time 64:122 N 15 '54 170w

JUBELIN, ANDRE MARIUS JOSEPH. Flying sailor; tr. from the French by James Cleugh. 276p il $3.50 British bk. centre

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, French [54-12751]

Personal narrative of a French naval officer who, after the fall of France in 1940, was able to join the British and served in the Royal Air Force until he was recalled by the Free French to take command of a sloop.

Booklist 51:59 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:31 N '54 30w

"His book stands out as one of the best of many fine war autobiographies. It is a tingling book. It has adventure. It has honesty. It has ideas. It has some fine passages about flying. It has a Frenchman's reactions to the youth of England in a time and a place of proving. And it has charm." J. A. May

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 14 '54 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 24 '51 180w

JUDSON, MRS CLARA (INGRAM). Andrew Jackson; frontier statesman; il. by Lorence F. Bjorklund. 224p $3.50 Follett

B or 92 Jackson, Andrew—Juvenile literature 54-10101

"This chronicle of Jackson's life and contributions reads as easily as fiction and illuminates a good slice of American history for eleven- to fifteen-year-old youngsters." New Yorker

Booklist 51:180 D 15 '54

"Mrs. Judson set herself a difficult task in this fifth of her fine biographies of Presidents. To re-create a complex individual and an equally complex period, when our young country was beset by internal growing pains and external pressures, in a way to interest young readers was not easy. But, with typical vigor and clarity, the author has succeeded brilliantly. Without minimizing his human faults, she shows Andrew Jackson ■ the vital person and ardent patriot he was." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p44 N 14 '54 140w

"In simple dimensions, this is distinguished young biography that preserves our ideals to advantage. Pencil drawings by Lorence F. Bjorklund are detailed and realistic."

+ Kirkus 22:753 N 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:220 N 27 '54 20w

JUDSON, HORACE. Techniques of reading; an integrated program for improved comprehension and speed; in consultation with Kenneth P. Baldrige. 406p $4.75; pa $3 Harcourt 428.4 Reading 54-2040

"The assistant director of the New York Reading Laboratory expounds his techniques designed to increase skill in reading factual prose for information; a skill, he affirms, that is markedly different from that needed for interpretive reading of creative literature. Gives a thorough explanation of the basic techniques of pre-reading and skimming, and demonstrates the use of these techniques by means of numerous exercises." Booklist

Booklist 51:125 N 15 '54

"One thing is certain. The printed word thrusts itself at everybody nowadays ■ never before. To master this situation demands special ability, and since this ability is not taught in the schools generally, the man who needs to read faster and better must acquire the skill himself. This book is written to enable such people to do so. Provided they will take the time and really work at the method, I believe it will be enormously helpful." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 7 '54 600w

JUNGK, ROBERT. Tomorrow is already here; scenes from a man-made world; tr. from the German by Marguerite Waldman; with an introd. by Herbert Agar. 241p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

973 [917.3] U.S.—Civilization. Technology 54-6672

"A young German Jew who has already experienced too much of the inhumanity of modern man reviews the technological developments and research he saw on a recent tour of the U.S., and, since he interprets all such activities as man's attempt to usurp God's power, the picture he draws is both unflattering and pessimistic. In their way these strictures on Americans who grasp at omnipotence, heaven, the atom, nature, people, and the future are very readable reporting, but even those readers who may be inclined to join in the author's objections to atomic research will probably jibe at his equally violent denunciation of agricultural and meteorological experimentation." Booklist

Booklist 50:448 J1 15 '54

"A well written and stimulating book." M. Shubik

+ Canadian Forum 34:95 J1 '54 300w

Chem & Eng N 32:3208 Ag 9 '54 20w

"This is an utterly distorted report of the United States in the atomic age. Nevertheless it is a useful warning. Americans should read it and see that it never represents a true picture of themselves and their society. The unfortunate fact is that many Europeans have already read it, many Asians probably will, and up to now there are few voices telling them the countervailing truth." E. D. Canham

—Christian Science Monitor p5 J1 15 '54 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 Ag '54

Reviewed by Geoffrey Ashe

Commonweal 60:561 S 10 '54 1400w

Kirkus 22:299 My 1 '54 430w

"A depressing book, recommended for all libraries." Louis Barron

Library J 79:1508 S 1 '54 140w

"Although it is written in the coarse style of the glossy magazines, it is a deeply serious book, and it makes two solemn charges against the avant-garde of American science. First Herr Jungk discerns totalitarian trends in the organisation of scientific research under conditions of Angst-ridden secrecy. . . Unfortunately Herr Jungk is not content to say this. He protests also that American scientists are carrying the conquest of nature so far that they are trying to make themselves gods. This is nonsense, and not even original nonsense. . . Herr Jungk would have written a very much better book if the intensity of his feelings had been matched by discrimination of the mind." Maurice Cranston

Manchester Guardian p4 F 12 '54 450w

Reviewed by David Cort

Nation 179:176 Ag 28 '54 650w

"Perhaps the most interesting fact about Tomorrow Is Already Here is that it is being published in eleven countries. It will probably get a wide reading and it should help us to keep the cup in the international unpopularity contest, for it is perfectly tailored to that universal desire to believe the worst of the USA which is a mark of the age." Margaret Marshall

New Repub 131:18 S 6 '54 650w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin

New Statesman ■ Nation 47:168 F 6 '54 750w

"In Mr. Jungk's pages, America takes the rap almost alone; partly because her scientific techniques are especially exciting and/or sinister, and partly—though the author fails to point this out—because there is no other place where Mr. Jungk would have been free to collect evidence for a hostile case. He neglects to say, also, that some of his prize exhibits would not exist if there were not a current and special fear of war. These omissions detract ■ little from the impact of 'Tomorrow Is Already Here.' But it is ■ forceful piece of work, just the same, by a writer with some of the quality of Jules Verne—grimmer than Verne, but eager and self-assured, reporting realities with the same zest and melodramatic flair that Verne gave to possibilities." John Lardner

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 J1 11 '54 550w

"Whereas most books of this type attack their problem directly by way of cultural analysis and generalization, this one is distinguished by the almost total absence, outside of a brief opening chapter, of generalizations and summary judgments. . . The main body of his book is straight reporting in the best tradition. . . In my opinion, this is one of the important books of our time." W. G. Pollard

+ N Y Times p3 J1 11 '54 750w

"Mr. Jungk has a taste for the pat symbol and the rhetorical question, but he is quite in earnest, and the world he describes doesn't seem altogether mythical. It doesn't seem altogether real, either."

New Yorker 30:86 Ag 21 '54 120w

"Jungk may be right. Perhaps, as a European visitor, he can perceive fatal stains on our national character which we mistake for mere smudges on the washable, acid-resistant, colorfast, DuPont-patented surface of things. . . The tyrants have badgered, frustrated, and hounded him a good deal of his life. He very well may have developed a special sensitivity to totalitarianism, enabling him to deliver this warning before it's too late. But if he is right, only a few Americans will believe him. Many will enjoy his offbeat approach to the fascinating parts of the country he has seen, and will like his writing style, his sense of irony, and his wry humor. They will know that he saw the strange, often terrifying, phenomena he describes. But most Americans will reject Jungk's pessimism and refuse to agree that God, as he here declares, has discarded the United States." Bruce Bliven

Sat N 37:8 J1 24 '54 1400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p99 F 12 '54 40w

Wis Lib Bul 50:173 J1 '54

JUPO, FRANK J. Mailbox takes a holiday [il. by the author]. [31p] $1 Macmillan (N Y)

53-12471

Not only the mailbox, but also the waste basket and the traffic light felt they were not sufficiently appreciated by the village folk, so they decided to go on a holiday. The holiday for them consisted mostly of being chased, and for the town there were littered streets, traffic jams, and worse. So when Old Nick, the street cleaner, finally caught up with the fugitives, everybody was happy.

Kirkus 21:666 O 1 '53 90w

"Gay drawings full of action make this a pleasant picture-story to read aloud or for second-graders to read themselves." Ann Izard

+ Library J 79:78 Ja 1 '54 50w

"A manufactured story that does not give life or individuality to the three objects. Illustrations by the author are better than the text. To be read to small children or by 8-9-year-olds. Not recommended." E. W. Turpin

— + Library J 79:78 Ja 1 '54 60w

"The story line is jerky in spots, but Mr. Jupo supplies some amusing variations on the theme of the mechanical hero and adds conviction to his story with some very lively pictures." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p30 O 11 '53 160w

JURY, WILFRID, and JURY, ELSIE MCLEOD (MURRAY). Sainte-Marie among the Hurons; il. by Julius Griffith and Paul Buchanan. 128p $4 Oxford

971.3 Sainte-Marie aux Hurons. Jesuits in North America [54-1177]

"During the years 1948-1951 Wilfrid Jury, archeologist from the University of Western Ontario, with the help of his wife, Elsie McLeod Jury, directed the excavation of the site of Fort Sainte-Marie, central Residence of the Jesuit Mission to the Huron Indians, 1639-1649, and headquarters of Brébeuf and his brethren. This account by Professor and Mrs. Jury is mostly concerned with the methods of excavation, the actual findings, and the deductions and reconstructions based on such findings when added to the scanty factual material from The Jesuit Relations." Canadian Forum

"The dramatic story of the Mission to the Hurons has been told elsewhere both in prose and poetry, but for those who want proofs this volume supplies the data. The book is illustrated and has an attractive dust jacket with a wood-engraving by Julius Griffith." A. P.

+ Canadian Forum 34:21 Ap '54 300w

"The present volume belongs in the romantic school, and serious students who had hoped for a second comprehensive report, concerning the more recent archaeological campaign at the site, will be disappointed. It is even difficult to reconcile some of the results of the two investigations. . . An unfortunate characteristic of the present work is an unscientific or unhistorical pretentiousness, or naïveté, which overworks the word 'obviously,' and permits an annoying dogmatism over certain of the data, ill becoming a serious report. There is even some evidence of lack of familiarity with the best archaeological methods. All in all, one can scarcely believe that the work will provide, as the publishers hope, the 'indispensable companion' for those who will visit the site in years to come." G. H. Smith

Canadian Hist N 35:250 S '54 650w

Reviewed by August Derleth

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 28 '54 200w

"The Jurys' book is an interestingly written, illustrated account of the mission itself and of recent excavation at the site as part of a historic reconstruction project." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 18 '54 70w

K

KAESE, HAROLD, and LYNCH, RUSSELL GEORGE. Milwaukee Braves. 309p il $3.50 Putnam

796.357 Milwaukee. Baseball club (National league). Boston baseball club (National league) 54-5496

A history of a baseball club from its founding in 1871 as the Boston Red Stockings to the present day as the Milwaukee Club.

Booklist 51:9 S 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 16 '54 100w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:1521 S 1 '54 20w

"The Milwaukee Braves' is the product of a happy collaboration. Harold Kaese, sports columnist of 'The Boston Globe' is the historian of the team when it was in Boston. Russ Lynch, sports columnist of 'The Milwaukee Journal,' takes over when the boys changed their ball park and their attitude and moved West. It is a well told tale." Irvin Marsh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk N p13 Je N '54 50w

KAFKA, FRANZ. The castle; tr. from the German by Willa and Edwin Muir; with additional materials translated by Eithne Wilkins and Ernst Kaiser; with an homage by Thomas Mann. 481p $4.50 Knopf

54-5972

"A new and greatly expanded edition of this classic, including chapters not hitherto translated, alternate versions of some passages, and a certain amount of material that the author deleted from the original edition. There is a preface by Thomas Mann." New Yorker

Booklist 50:323 Ap 15 '54

KAFKA, FRANZ—Continued

"It is fortunate that Knopf should make available this much expanded version of one of the 20th century's great novels. The original edition was incomplete, and this one is not really ended, but it adds enough new material to make the novel at last a genuine whole."

Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 21 '54 300w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 60:98 Ap 30 '54 350w

Reviewed by Henry Popkin
Nation 179:75 Jl 24 '54 350w

New Yorker 30:126 Mr 20 '54 30w

"In 'The Castle,' as always, Kafka is a fascinating, tantalizing writer. His approach to his readers appears at first to be as direct as Chekov's; he seems to establish contact with us immediately, and quickly wins our confidence. Here is an author, we think, who knows exactly what he wishes to say, and how to get on with the business of saying it, in a style of classic clarity. But then, abruptly, we realize that we are not in close contact with him at all, that he has slipped away from us and is dancing on ahead of us, and around us, always just beyond our reach." B. R. Redman

+ — Sat R 37:26 Ap 3 '54 700w

"The appearance in this edition of passages deleted by the author provides a particular fascination, since they allow the reader to catch a glimpse of Kafka's creative imagination at work. In some cases the deletions were obviously made to avoid repetition, but in others Kafka's motive seems to have been more subtle—a desire to avoid, at all costs, an over-explicit formulation of K.'s predicament. After all, it is the elusive nature of K.'s adversaries that gives The Castle its power to trouble and haunt the imagination."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p21 Ja 8 '54 400w

KAFKA, FRANZ. Dearest father; stories and other writings; tr. by Ernst Kaiser and Ethne Wilkins [ed. by Max Brod]. 409p $5 Schocken

B or 92 54-12097

"Kafka's long and remarkable letter to his father, covering their entire relationship, is here sandwiched between fragments of unfinished stories, aphorisms, odds and ends from notebooks and loose pages, poems, and all of the other jottings that a writer makes. The letter itself, being autobiographical, self-justifying and self-blaming, is fascinating and valuable to anyone who has read any of Kafka's novels and stories." Kirkus

Reviewed by Michael Harrington
Commonweal 60:635 O 1 '54 1150w

"A book for the Kafka addicts."
Kirkus 22:280 Ap 15 '54 210w

"Followers of Kafka will require this book and will find it most rewarding. The translation is good and the notes, by Max Brod, terse and informative. Recommended for college and larger public libraries." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:1589 S 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by Jacob Korg
Nation 179:217 S 11 '54 10w

"Kafka's quality informs the best pieces in 'Dearest Father,' although the book as a whole is an extremely miscellaneous and uneven collection of his literary remains. . . The 'Letter to His Father' is Kafka's principal attempt at self-clarification. It is also one of the great confessions of literature." F. W. Dupee

+ N Y Times p42 S 12 '54 600w

"This collection of old ashes, chipped flints, and broken pottery, assembled and provided with notes by Max Brod, would seem to pretty well complete the excavation of Kafka's literary remains. Indeed, except for the title piece, a forty-page letter of speculation and self-analysis, written in 1919 but never mailed there, is nothing here of interest to any but the most insatiable devotees."

New Yorker 37:144 O 2 '54 40w

"The letter, as is not surprising, is brilliantly done, a tour de force, moving sometimes, always keen, and with an extraordinary ability to characterize the father and to portray him from the son's point of view. But, unlike his fictions, it is humorless." Charles Neider

+ Sat R 37:21 S 18 '54 1050w

KAFKA, FRANZ. Letters to Milena; ed. by Willi Haas; tr. by Tania and James Stern. 238p $3.75 Schocken Bks, Inc, 342 Madison Av, N.Y. 17

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-1529

Translations of the letters of Franz Kafka to Milena Jesenska who translated some of his early prose pieces into Czech. Her replies have evidently been destroyed, as none of them appear here.

"Kafka was lucky always in his translators, from Milena on. The Letters to Milena are quite astonishingly well rendered by Tania and James Stern: here is no trace of accent, only the English language that has taken unto itself Kafka." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 60:98 Ap 30 '54 1400w

Manchester Guardian p4 S 4 '53 300w

Reviewed by Henry Popkin
Nation 179:75 Jl 24 '54 350w

"It is a pity that these letters, so valuable to explorers of Kafka, have been edited on a sort of mystification principle. The editor, Herr Willi Haas, withholds Milena's surname, which is merely tiresome, as it has appeared in several books. His introduction, though it tells something of Milena's life, personality, and heart-rending death in Ravensbrück concentration-camp in 1944, is gingerly vague, both about her and Kafka, in an exasperating way that diminishes gratitude for his laborious arranging by date of scores of undated letters." Giles Romilly

New Statesman & Nation 47:17 Ja 2 '54 700w

Reviewed by Gene Baro
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ap 11 '54 800w

"Franz Kafka met Milena Jesenska as a translator—into Czech—of some of his early prose pieces. His 'Letters to Milena' have now been put into English by Tania and James Stern with a genuine flair for expressing the eccentricities of Kafka's mind." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 28 '54 950w

New Yorker 30:139 Ap 17 '54 140w

"The letters published in 'Letters to Milena' constitute, in my opinion, the most revealing factual document by or about Franz Kafka yet published. . . Unfortunately, we have only Kafka's side of the affair. Milena's letters have presumably been destroyed. . . The translation is a very good one, although now and then one notices lapses of coloration." Charles Neider

+ Sat R 37:27 Ap 3 '54 850w

Reviewed by Anthony Hartley
Spec p516 N 6 '53 650w

"Although the story of Kafka's relationship with Milena is on the whole a painful one, luridly illuminated, as the editor points out, by no fewer than five distinctly Freudian dreams; and although his frequent wild self-accusations and the glimpses given of his spiritual anguish are dreadful to witness, nevertheless these letters are not only absorbingly interesting, they are often fascinating and delightful. His irrepressible sense of humour, fun and drama, his creative fantasies, the delicacy of his psychological penetration bring him near and make him dear to the reader."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p547 Ag 28 '53 1200w

KAHL, VIRGINIA. Away went Wolfgang! il. by [the author]. [29p] $2 Scribner

Dogs—Legends and stories 54-7246

All the other dogs in the village had important jobs but Wolfgang got so excited that he was unable to do his job—drawing the milk-woman's cart—without upsetting somebody. Quite by accident one day, however, Wolfgang found a job he was successful in, and then everybody was happy.

Booklist 50:283 Mr 15 '54

"How Wolfgang's running wild over the rough cobblestones unexpectedly brought happiness to the village—especially the women—makes a delectable nonsense tale for small children. The author-artist shows a fine sense of design in her full page pictures and hearts-and-flowers borders. They are charming." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 F 28 '54 160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

"This original picture story from an American librarian working in Austria has the humor and simplicity of a folktale." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:92 Ap '54 130w

Kirkus 22:60 F 1 '54 60w

"This is a love of a picture-story book from a new author-artist-librarian now living in Austria, which is the scene and inspiration for the story." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 79:460 Mr 1 '54 50w

"Here is gay bookmaking that reminds us of some of the Czech and German picture books of the '20s. The story has the slapstick action that will appeal to younger listeners; it leaves atmosphere and foreign detail to the pictures. Many a soldier father who knows Bavaria will enjoy sharing this with children of five to eight." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 16 '54 170w

"This is wholesome slapstick, bolstered delightfully with bright Tyrolean-type drawings and border designs. Irrepressible Wolfgang deserves further adventures." Pat Clark

+ N Y Times p28 F 7 '54 190w

Wis Lib Bul 50:140 My '54

KAHN, FRITZ. Design of the universe; the heavens and the earth. 373p $5 Crown

523 Universe 54-6641

"Dr. Kahn has the rare gift of presenting complex ideas—even including relativity and atomic fission—in a way that is scientifically accurate, yet more exciting than a good mystery story. His series of illustrations, prepared especially for this book and produced in large size, adds dramatic clarity to the panorama." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 51:166 D 15 '54

"While there was more than one spot where the writer lost this reviewer, who, however, admits to being a rank amateur in such matters, on the whole, this book is satisfyingly clear and simple in its presentation of complex subjects." J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p15 D 2 '54 320w

Kirkus 22:556 Ag 15 '54 130w

"Fritz Kahn has undertaken the daring and ambitious task of surveying the universe in terms of matter, energy and time and interpreting the conclusions reached by scientists of the past and of our own day in language that a well-educated but technically uninformed reader should have no difficulty in understanding. That task has been accomplished with skill and with an encyclopedic sweep that testifies to wide knowledge and reading." Walde-mar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p7 N 21 '54 650w

KAHN, ROGER, and HELFER, AL, eds. Mutual baseball almanac. 254p il $3 Doubleday

796.357 Baseball 54-7864

"A reference book of big league baseball facts and figures compiled by a sports writer and sports announcer. Includes information on how big league clubs are organized and operated; how the leagues are run; official American and National League Records for 1953; big league club rosters and diagrams of ball parks; complete records of all current major league players; also tips on how to watch the game, read scores, figure averages; and a concise history of baseball." Booklist

Booklist 51:78 O 15 '54

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:1521 S 1 '54 10w

Reviewed by I. T. Marsh

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 11 '54 70w

KAKUYU. See Toba Sojo

KALLAY, MIKLOS VON. See Kállay, N.

KALLAY, NICHOLAS. Hungarian premier; a personal account of a nation's struggle in the second World war; with a foreword by C. A. Macartney. 518p maps $6 Columbia univ. press

943.9 Hungary—Politics and government. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Hungarian. World war, 1939-1945—Hungary 53-11533

"As Premier of Hungary (1942-44) Mr. Kállay was well known for his pro-Western but strongly anti-Russian policy. In these memoirs he gives a true account of his nation's struggles during the Second World War, emphasizing little known angles of traditional Hungarian statesmanship." (Library J) Index.

"The book is an epitome of the beliefs and desires of the Hungarian gentry, and the author belongs to that group of prominent refugees who, while striving toward the liberation of Europe, have weakened their cause by perpetuating the old country nationalistic and religious squabbles on which the Communism they hope to destroy feeds and thrives." W. S. Vucinich

Ann Am Acad 296:208 N '54 600w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 1 '54 750w

"Although some of the author's interpretations are open to question, this is both a valuable source book and a moving narrative."

+ Current Hist 26:376 Je '54 170w

"Although Kállay was unable to rely on documentary material, his dignified recollections are a valuable source to our understanding of the still largely unfamiliar history of the wartime Nazi sphere of control."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:679 Jl '54 60w

"This book is an important historical document and should be acquired by all libraries covering the fields of international relations." Lajos Borsody

+ Library J 79:60 Ja 1 '54 50w

"An important contribution to recent history, though too long for the English reader. At half the length it might have been a popular success." A. J. P. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 9 '54 360w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 11 '54 100w

Reviewed by Stephen Borsody

Pol Sci Q 69:631 D '54 1050w

KALLMANN, FRANZ JOSEF. Heredity in health and mental disorder; principles of psychiatric genetics in the light of comparative twin studies; with a foreword by Nolan D. C. Lewis. (Thomas William Salmon memorial lectures) 315p il $6 Norton

616.8 Mental diseases. Twins. Heredity 53-12196

"More than twenty-five years ago Dr. Kallmann, then a young psychiatrist, undertook his first family study to 'disprove' the inheritance of schizophrenia. In the ensuing years of study of hundreds of pairs of twins and their families, both in European laboratories and at the New York State Psychiatric Institute, he has found impressive evidence of the inheritance of schizophrenia and of certain other forms of mental illness." U S Quarterly Bk R

KALLMANN, F. J.—Continued

"This book calls for concentrated attention in reading, as well as technical familiarity with human biology. The author appeals to the intellectually serious and dedicated devotee of advanced public health. There is no better book to be used as a vade mecum of practical human genetics for today." Haven Emerson

+ Am J Pub Health 44:265 F '54 320w

"Dr. Kallmann devotes a good part of his book to the practical and constructive application of findings in the field of medical genetics, and puts the aims of this new science in sensible perspective. In this respect, particularly, his discussion is a long step away from the views and proposals of the early fanatical eugenisists. Altogether, this book will offer much useful enlightenment and profit to social scientists, medical men, and serious-minded laymen alike." Amram Scheinfeld

+ Ann Am Acad 293:183 My '54 440w

"The balanced treatment of thesis and antithesis in this informative contribution from a distinguished investigator in the field of medical genetics is welcome. Environmental influences are examined throughout in proper perspective. The reader will find profitable the thoughtful discussion in the concluding section of the book on the role of genetics in the many problems presented in sound mental-health planning."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:114 Mr '54 220w

KAMPF, HAROLD. When He shall appear [Eng title: My brother, oh my brother]. 177p $2.75 Little

54-5126

A novel based on the question: How would men treat Christ if he came to live among us today? The scene is contemporary London, and Janek Lazar, son of unnaturalized Russian immigrants is the hero.

Booklist 50:240 F 15 '54

Kirkus 21:802 D 15 '53 200w

"Highly recommended for the intellectual, not the emotional, literary adventurer." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:379 F 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by Peter Girvin

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 7 '54 320w

"Mr. Kampf, with unquestionable sincerity, has assayed to penetrate a field that by its very nature requires consummate skill. This he does not possess—and the figure of Janek, upon whom his edifice must naturally rest, comes at times too close to the burlesque. A modern Lollard, possibly; Christ, no." J. W. Chase

N Y Times p19 J1 25 '54 340w

"Mr. Kampf writes compactly and on the whole convincingly, boldly, but with restraint and a genuine quality of reverence." Tangye Lean

+ Spec p712 My 29 '53 80w

Springf'd Republican p18D My 16 '54 90w

KANE, HARNETT THOMAS. Spies for the Blue and Gray. (Hanover House bk) 311p $3.50 Garden City bks.

973.78 Spies. U.S.—History—Civil war 54-10780

Both Union and Confederate spies, male and female, figure in this composite biography of Civil war days. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:104 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:58 D '54 30w

Reviewed by B. P. Thomas

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 O 17 '54 280w

"All in all, a beguiling sort of book, in which Kane's own sympathies are put aside for full employment of his gift as a spinner of tales. Some will argue that the material is romanticized and fictionalized, but the end result is good entertainment, and informative as well."

+ Kirkus 22:646 S 15 '54 180w

"Recommended for American history collections and merits consideration for general collections also." James Heslin

+ Library J 79:1891 O 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 179:495 D 4 '54 60w

"The pleasantly prolific Mr. Kane does quick sketches like this collection very, very well. . . Mr. Kane plays no favorites among them. You would never know he came from south of the Line. Union and Confederate, his spies are all brave, reckless, and picturesque, good copy then and now." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 19 '54 550w

"Mr. Kane's own careful sleuthing took him far and wide, geographically and bibliographically. Perhaps from his subjects he acquired the habit of covering his tracks. However, many of his readers are going to feel bedeviled by the lack of source references. This is unfortunate, for Kane has rescued from limbo an engaging collection of gamblers who insistently played for mortal stakes." H. F. Graff

N Y Times p47 O 17 '54 500w

"Having done two previous books on Confederate characters, Mrs. Jefferson Davis and Mrs. Robert E. Lee, Mr. Kane has a mastery over his material that makes it possible—as all too frequently it fails to be in specialized aspects of the war—to relate his immediate action to the total situation without an obvious intrusion of facts. Thus, while the episodes read like escape fiction, the book is a most solid contribution to an understanding of the relatively primitive and highly personal systems of espionage evolved in an internecine war." Clifford Dowdey

+ Sat R 37:50 D 11 '54 650w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 400w

KANTOR, MACKINLAY. God and my country; decorations by John O'Hara Cosgrave II. 128p $2 World pub.

54-5543

Story of a Scoutmaster during his forty years of service in a small town in Iowa.

Booklist 50:240 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54 30w

"This is a warm book and a friendly one. If you are a Scout, ex or otherwise, you are going to be delighted with it, but the appeal is wider than that, for I never was a Scout and I got keen enjoyment from it." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 7 '54 350w

Kirkus 21:769 D 1 '53 120w

"Recommended." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 79:385 F 15 '54 50w

"'God and My Country' is a simply and skillfully written little book about a man who loves people by an author who apparently does likewise. As such, it will bring reassurance and enjoyment to many who lack either the opportunity or the gifts to live Lem Siddons' kind of life. For the Boy Scout movement, it should prove a bonanza." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 7 '54 450w

"The Boy Scouts of America should give MacKinlay Kantor an Eagle Badge, diamond studded and with plumes lightly dipped in the very best ink, for this one. That very good organization will never have a better piece of justifiable propaganda disguised in pleasant narrative than this tale." Phil Stong

+ N Y Times p5 F 7 '54 450w

"Mr. Kantor's story is as folksy as butter-milk pancakes. It is another of his rather limited, optimistic peeks at the surface of the American scene. Those of you who read and liked 'The Voice of Bugle Anne' and 'The Romance of Rosey Ridge' will find more of the same here. Anyway, it is a nice tribute to the Boy Scouts." D. R. McD.

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 11 '54
200w

"In the first decade of our [century] when moral uplift was deemed the chief justification of popular art, reviewers used to praise novels with words like 'clean,' 'wholesome,' and 'inspiring.' These words apply most emphatically to Mr. Kantor's latest offering. There are clear echoes here of Mr. Chips, more muffled ones from 'The Great Stone Face.' . . . At any rate, it is a tribute to Mr. Kantor's storytelling skill that his simple tale (one is supposed to say 'deceptively simple,' but I regard that phrase as deceptive itself in the present case) firmly grasps and holds the reader's interest and arouses at least some of the emotions it was intended to arouse." K. L. Davis

+ Sat R 37:12 F 6 '54 650w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p10C Mr 7 '54
230w

Wis Lib Bul 50:137 My '54

KARIG, WALTER, and BIRD, HORACE V.
Don't tread on me. 442p $4 Rinehart

Jones, John Paul—Fiction 54-7074

John Paul Jones is the hero of this historical novel. It traces the course of his life from the time of his command of a Spanish privateer-smuggler to a captain's rank in the new American navy; his raids on Britain and the great fight against the Serapis. The book ends as he is at the height of his career.

Booklist 50:369; 420 Je 1 '54; J1 1 '54

Bookmark 14:9 O '54 20w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 4 '54
650w

"Definitely a book for armchair sailors, but with an immense amount of technical seamanship for the pros as well."

+ Kirkus 22:274 Ap 15 '54 130w

"Conforms to the pattern of the historical novel and will please adult devotees of this genre." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 79:1225 Je 15 '54 140w

"'Don't Tread on Me' is not biography but rather an historical novel, which freely intermingles fictional and historical characters, real and invented incidents. . . . Ashore, the book never quite loses its sea legs. It totters along in a fantasy of a South that never really existed, with an all too conventional young heroine. 'Don't Tread on Me' is exciting standard fare. It could have been much more." Taliaferro Boatwright

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 27 '54
550w

"Although an impression of Jones' character—his motivations and beliefs—emerges, there is no sharp portrait. There are numerous clues, but they are seldom developed. His unorthodoxy is stressed as are his vanity, his acute sense of integrity and his impatience with politics. However, if one wants to read 'Don't Tread on Me' as a vigorous and exciting account of adventurous times, set in the framework of a great career, it is good reading indeed." C. B. Palmer

+ — N Y Times p4 Je 27 '54 850w

"As a piece of fiction the book has many virtues, chiefly those of the adventure-story school, but not entirely. It moves along briskly through credible and well-told adventures, the characters talk and act like people, and the background is sketched in with such admirable skill that the reader finds himself really living the life of the period." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 37:36 S 18 '54 270w

KARRAKER, WILLIAM ARCHIBALD. Bible in questions and answers; a guide to the study of the Holy Scriptures, based on the King James version; with annot. from the Am. and rev. standard versions; introd. by William A. Irwin; v. 1, Old Testament. 856p $7.50 McKay

220 Bible. Whole—Catechisms, question books, etc.

This volume contains questions and answers, chiefly factual in nature, on the meanings of individual verses or groups of verses in the Old Testament. The book is divided into four parts: Genesis thru Deuteronomy; the Historical books; Wisdom literature; and the Later prophets. Index.

"The author is endeavoring to have the Bible interpret itself. He offers essentials, builds them up by adroit questioning, relates them to other parts of the Bible, then leaves the reader to his own conclusions. A Baptist by choice, Dr. Karraker has worked mainly in the general Protestant field, teaching Bible. With theological and academic degrees behind him, he nevertheless offers here a plainly written, but skillful help to Bible study." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 18 '54 360w

"There is no particular denominational bias, Catholic or Protestant, conservative or liberal, except that involved in accepting the Bible as if it were history as well as a book of inspiration and devotion. The story of the Creation is re-told as if it were historically and geologically true. But some of the findings of Biblical criticism are followed. Theologians and clergymen will find little value in this catechetical treatment of the Bible."

Kirkus 21:736 N 1 '53 170w

"Recommended for the theological seminaries and profound students of the Bible—not for public libraries and the lay reader." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 79:63 Ja 1 '54 150w

KATES, EDGAR JESSE. Diesel and high-compression gas engines: fundamentals. 396p il $5.50 Am. tech. soc.

621.436 Diesel engines 54-8831

"A textbook for practical students. Although familiarity with spark-ignition engines (such as are used in most automobiles) would be helpful, the author has not assumed that his readers will have this knowledge. He has started the exposition with the very elements of diesel engines and of combustion in such engines. Mechanical details of modern diesel engines, such as the various methods of connecting piston rods to piston, are described explicitly without reference to particular makes." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1234 Je 15 '54 70w

"The book is suitable for home study as well as for use in organized classes."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 39:39 My '54

KAUFFMANN, STANLEY. Change of climate. 343p $3.50 Rinehart

54-8253

A youngish college professor, Alex Harris, decides to leave the teaching profession and go into the business world. He gets a job with a watch manufacturing company and is outwardly successfully launched on a new career, when circumstances lead him to re-examine his philosophy of life.

Booklist 51:109 N 1 '54

Kirkus 22:409 J1 1 '54 160w

"Mr. Kauffmann tells his story chiefly in dialogue, keeping things moving at a brisk rate despite some moments of heaviness. His characterizations are not profound, but it is a pleasure to read a book about moral pygmies who finally achieve some stature." Charles Lee

N Y Times p31 S 12 '54 370w

KAUFFMANN, STANLEY—Continued

"Mr. Kauffmann understands family and racial relations, Miami style, and he gives us people who are intrinsically interesting for what they think and how they develop. He writes with intellectual clarity about whatever interests him along the novel's way, with plenty of narration and exposition tossed in to help the reader navigate. . . For all the effort, though, 'A Change of Climate' never advances from readability to distinction. Page by page it's fun; taken as a whole it's a grab-bag in which not many searchers will find anything very memorable." James Kelly
+ — Sat R 37:40 S 11 '54 550w

KAUFMAN, MILTON, and THOMAS, HARRY
E. Introduction to color TV. 140p il pa $2.10
Rider, J.F.

621.388 Television 54-7852

"A book designed to inform such persons as radio and TV servicemen about the principles and special electronic features of color television. It is devoted particularly to the NTSC compatible system which has been approved and is now under intensive development in the U.S.A. A fairly detailed explanation is given of tri-color picture tubes, but other special circuit elements such as the color sync channel are described in more general terms. A folded plate contains schematic wiring diagrams for two color receivers now available." Library J

"The book will not be useful to lay readers except those few who have mastered the technology of black and white television." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1234 Je 15 '54 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:47 My '54

KAUFMAN, S. JAY. How to arrange a public function; every known detail of every kind of event. 175p $2.50 McKay

301.158 Meetings. Entertaining 53-7536

"Here are the answers to the many questions that arise in connection with the staging of such public functions as concerts, theater parties, bazaars, conventions and dinner meetings. The author, who has had many years' experience arranging such affairs including the opening of the Radio City Music Hall, includes many useful details such as programs, press releases, receiving the distinguished guests, what to do about the 'Star-Spangled Banner' and other information." San Francisco Chronicle

Bookmark 13:154 Ap '54 40w

"It is sound. Recommended for small public libraries." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:148 Ja 15 '54 20w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ja 24 '54 50w

KAY, JAMES ALAN. Nature of Christian worship. 115p $2.50 Philosophical lib.

264 Worship 54-2129

A guide for those who participate regularly in Christian worship, with perhaps little knowledge of its true nature. The four essays included are: Union with God through Christ; Corporateness in worship; The means of worship; The Holy Communion.

"Writers in the field of worship are too often content to assemble services and parts of services, color-schemes and postures, from everywhere, and to offer them as compendia handy for experimenting parsons. J. Alan Kay's slender book is a serious and valuable inquiry into the nature of Christian worship, rather than a mere catalogue of its forms." G. M. Gibson

+ J Religion 30:308 O '54 250w

"This is a rather elementary analysis of the various factors which enter into Christian worship. . . The author is an Anglican but his presentation is not of the 'High Church' variety so that non-anglican readers will find it applicable to their situation. The discussion of the use of symbols is the most valuable part of the book. Best suited for use as a text book for seminarians."

Kirkus 22:310 My 1 '54 90w

"Recommended especially for Theological Seminary Libraries. All other libraries interested in building the subject ought to purchase it." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 79:858 My 1 '54 130w

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA (MRS THEODORE PENROSE FRY). View from the parsonage. 277p $3.50 Harper

54-8960

The rector of an Anglican parish in Kent is the narrator; the time is the turn of the century. Henry Chamberlain, who is a bachelor, gains a kind of vicarious family life thru his friendship with the local squire and his family. The squire, a rationalist, discovers too late that his lack of religion has had a destructive effect on the lives of his two daughters. The rector, who tried to serve as a balance wheel, was too peaceful and too British to succeed.

Booklist 51:53; 109 O 1 '54; N 1 '54

"It is a pity that this book, one of the most brilliant and satisfying novels of the entire year, should be permitted to appear under such a dismal title. . . One of the triumphs of this book, a Catholic novel with a difference, is the author's refusal to falsify: her Anglican rector remains an Anglican throughout. There is no special afterglow as in Brideshead Revisited, but instead clear, unsentimental contemplation of the lives of people who even in error and sin, retain their own integrity and their hold upon the reader. An unusual, an outstanding book." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 180:230 D '54 320w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 7 '54 300w

"There's almost a Victorian flavor that goes beyond period to the manner of telling, but it has a very definite charm, and Sheila Kaye-Smith's followers will like it."

+ Kirkus 22:546 Ag 15 '54 310w

"Miss Kaye-Smith has here given us her usual mixture of village intrigue, tragedy, and beauty of the Sussex countryside; but the enchantment of her earlier novels seems strangely absent from this one. Maybe it's because one suspects that this is supposed to be a religious tract. Recommended for moderate purchase by public libraries." E. T. Smith

Library J 79:2102 N 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by Patricia Hodgart

Manchester Guardian p4 J1 27 '54 60w

"The view from the window includes glimpses of the kind of beauty that no Englishman could keep out of his novel if he wanted to. Love of the place, the house, the soil itself is an integral part of each characterization. Miss Kaye-Smith has brought her parable to resounding, satisfying life." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p43 O 24 '54 350w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Sat R 37:52 D 11 '54 300w

Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '54 110w

"The View from the Parsonage is a restricted view, perhaps too simplified and sharply telescoped to be very profound: the most successful character is undoubtedly the narrator himself, a gentle, intelligent example of the Church non militant."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p485 J1 30 '54 190w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 44:319 winter '55 250w

KAZANTZAKES, NIKOS. Greek passion; tr. by Jonathan Griffin [Eng title: Christ crucified]. 432p $4 Simon & Schuster

53-10810

"Novelist Nikos Kazantzakis shows how the suffering and crucifixion of Christ in Roman Judea might be re-enacted in a modern setting—a Greek-inhabited Turkish town, circa 1920." Time

"Mr. Kazantzakis is unquestionably a writer with large creative powers. His novel is thickly peopled with vivid, strikingly individual characters; his storytelling is dexterous, flowing, and richly inventive; his touch is both vigorous and tender. Some readers will find this novel a refreshingly different product from most contemporary fiction, and some will find it a bit old-fashioned for their taste. For better or for worse, The Greek Passion has the flavor of a parable enlarged to epic dimensions." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:82 F '54 380w

Booklist 50:221 F 1 '54

"The Greek Passion is a morality play of great power; it transcends its small theater of an obscure Greek village under Turkish sway to speak for the entire human condition." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 179:152 My '54 280w

Reviewed by Warren Beck

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 10 '54 350w

"Kazantzakis has here a much better, and more dramatic, plot than he did in Zorba, but unfortunately he has no fine character to set it in motion. In fact, he has no characters at all, only puppets in masks, and the passions he attributes to them are spent on nothing. And in spite of vigorous scenes and often fresh writing, the drama cannot be carried by the philosophical content alone."

Kirkus 21:715 N 1 '53 240w

"A novel of tremendous dramatic power, excellently translated, presenting a picture of Greek peasants, poor, illiterate, superstitious, earthy and elemental in their passions, easily swayed by their domineering priest, and fearful of the bestial Turkish governor. The religious theme is provocative: harshly critical of the Greek Orthodox Church, and perhaps, by implication, others. For large public libraries." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 78:2212 D 15 '53 180w

Reviewed by Isabel Quigly

Manchester Guardian p4 F 9 '54 150w

Reviewed by Kimon Friar

New Repub 130:17 Ja 25 '54 750w

"Surely an author should be of tremendous stature to challenge direct comparison with the most moving, the most exciting and the most economically told story in the world? Dostoevsky might perhaps have done it but Mr. Kazantzakis is no Dostoevsky." Betty Askwith

New Statesman & Nation 47:201 F 13 '54 120w

"That this novel is written with passion there is no denying. The story is tensely told, and the grotesque panorama of evil as the villagers and the indolent Agha who rules them parade before us has a certain horrid fascination. But the book will certainly strike some readers as essentially perverse and evil. Violence has today many effective advocates and one wonders if it needs also the authority of Jesus." J. W. Krutch

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 10 '54 800w

"Bitterness and beauty are here; degradation and transcendence. The Greek Passion is a massive and tragic novel, purging with pity and terror, as another Greek said of the tragic art." Edmund Fuller

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 10 '54 600w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Yorker 29:96 Ja 16 '54 490w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 7 '54 290w

"As this strange and wild story develops, the forty or more characters in the novel come vividly to life. Through its wild scenes greed and lust vie with the faith and love of the Christian doctrine and the hope for freedom of an enslaved people. But among its many virtues the dominating quality of The Greek Passion is the passionate vitality of its many characters. It is a novel that will be long remembered by its readers." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R 37:17 Ja 23 '54 600w

"The Greek Passion is a powerful parable of the Christian conscience and a high mark for the rest of 1954's novelists to aim at."

+ Time 63:84 Ja 11 '54 600w

"In spite of an excessive narrative slowness, Christ Recrucified remains a novel of wisdom, beauty, and wit."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p117 F 19 '54 280w

KEARNEY, NOLAN CHARLES. Elementary school objectives; a report prepared for the Mid-century committee on outcomes in elementary education. 189p $3 Russell Sage

372 Education, Elementary. Education—Aims and objectives 53-7361

"Composed of thirty-four outstanding educators, including research specialists, classroom teachers, and administrators, the Mid-century Committee, whose conclusions and recommendations are here summarized, undertook to identify and describe the measurable goals of American elementary education." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. R. Douglass

Ann Am Acad 291:184 Ja '54 500w

"The result is perhaps the best statement of elementary-school objectives that has appeared in recent years. Well-written and easily read, the report should be of particular interest to teachers, administrators, board members, and parents who are especially concerned with elementary education."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:449 D '53 250w

KEATING, EDWARD. Story of Labor; thirty-three years on rail workers' fighting front. 305p il $3.50 Darby pte. co, inc, 24th & Douglas, N.E., Washington 18, D.C.

331.881 Labor (periodical)

"Only in part the story of how Labor the national weekly of organized railroad workers came to be established and how it grew to be one of the leading labor papers. Drawing upon back issues and upon his memory, the man who was its editor for nearly fifty years also tells some dramatic stories of American trade unions, especially of some of the railroad unions." Library J

"To be read for the atmosphere more than for the facts. Recommended for special labor collections." D. K. Oko

Library J 79:989 My 15 '54 130w

"Keating's newspaper style ('newspaper English is the only English I know') makes for easy reading but does not allow for deep or prolonged analysis of important issues."

Nation 178:284 Ap 3 '54 360w

KEELER, OSCAR BANE. Bobby Jones story; from the writings of [the author; ed] by Grantland Rice. 304p il $3.95 Tupper

B or 92 Jones, Robert Tyre. Golf 53-13159

Stories about Bobby Jones by the late O. B. Keeler, golf reporter, have been compiled to form a biography of Jones. Chronology. No index.

Booklist 50:165 D 15 '53

"Keeler's coverage of the important matches is as flawless, in a way, as Jones' playing of them was. He describes not only the course condition, Jones' state of health and mental outlook, and how and with what the shots were played, he even eavesdrops on the galleryites and sets down their reactions." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 22 '53 400w

"Grantland Rice has done a fine job of editing Keeler's life of the world's best and most popular golfer. Good writing, dramatic moments. Well illustrated. Recommended for all sporting libraries." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:68 Ja 1 '54 20w

KEELER, O. B.—Continued

"Good reading for the golfer who wants to know how the great and near-great of the links act under pressure." I. T. Marsh
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p42 D 6 '53
60w

KEEN, ALAN, and LUBBOCK, ROGER. The annotator; the pursuit of an Elizabethan reader of Halle's Chronicle involving some surmises about the early life of William Shakespeare; with genealogical tables by Norman Long-Brown and Frances Keen. 216p $4 Macmillan (N Y)

822.33 Shakespeare, William. Hall, Edward —Union of the two noble and illustre families 54-3810

The author, a London bookseller, came into possession of an old copy of Halle's Chronicle containing notes in the margin in an Elizabethan handwriting. Was or was not the "annotator" the young William Shakespeare doing research for his historical plays? This is an account of the author's detective work on the problems.

"This daring attempt to account for the 'lost years' of Shakespeare's youth is plausible and attractive, but, unfortunately, far from conclusive." Milton Crane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S ■ '54
140w

"The theory has nothing in itself objectionable, except for its extreme tenuousness. But in presenting it, Messrs. Keen and Lubbock take an attitude that is objectionable and disappointing in a serious work on Shakespeare." J. F. Sullivan

Commonweal 60:585 S 17 '54 1550w

"An ingenious theory, but it is easy for the scholars to shoot it full of holes. Keen himself refers to 'our slender framework of conjecture and coincidence'—and this in final analysis it remains."

Kirkus 22:375 Je 15 '54 130w

"Highly recommended for Shakespeare and theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 79:2338 D 1 '54 40w

"In putting forward these propositions Mr Keen's conjectures run from the remotely possible to the wildly improbable. In his own way, he is honestly objective. But he has neither the specialist's knowledge of literary history nor the scholar's way of assessing evidence." H. B. Charlton

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 20 '54
650w

Reviewed by J. I. M. Stewart
New Statesman & Nation 47:326 Mr
13 '54 450w

"The chain of conjectures is fascinating, and some of the book's appendixes—particularly a study of the six authenticated specimens of Shakespeare's signature by an expert, who finds in them symptoms of rapid alcoholic degeneration—are well worth having."

+ New Yorker 30:143 S 25 '54 160w

"Perhaps Mr. Keen has opened several doors to a wholly new biography of William Shakespeare. At least he has discovered several highly fascinating keys that may well fit some ancient and stubborn locks." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 19
'54 470w

Reviewed by G. B. Harrison
Sat R 37:22 S 25 '54 260w

"Much care and enthusiasm have gone into this book, yet even at the end we are left with some tantalising irresolutions. But some of the incidental research itself—for instance, the further evidence in support of the 'he dyed a papist' story—is worthwhile despite its subordinate interest to the main case. Both the amateur Shakespearian sleuth and the professional will find much to interest them in this modest and surprisingly cautious book." Anthony Thwaite

+ Spec p656 My 28 '54 450w

"This story of Shakespeare's 'hidden years' is attractive, and if it is not more plausible that is not the fault of the authors of this book, who present their case with some spirit and ingenuity. They may be right, but then they may so easily not be right."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p198 Mr 26
'54 850w

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Dangerous angel. 250p $2.75 Harper

54-6017

The scene is San Francisco in the 1870's. The heroine, an exceptionally beautiful young woman from Kentucky, is a determined person, dedicated to the idea of making her twenty thousand dollar inheritance into a fortune. Altho she is determined not to allow love to enter into her scheme, she is lucky that it does.

Booklist 50:341 My 1 '54

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Mr 28 '54
320w

"A pastiche of San Francisco days and doings, with dollars, diamonds and silver more interesting than its people."

Kirkus 22:43 Ja 15 '54 160w

"Swift, entertaining yarn." Alden Whitman
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 4 '54 360w

"This comes under the general head of magazine fiction; the yarn ran in one of the big national weeklies just a year ago. What is exceptional about it is the care with which the author has established his setting—the character of the city in those free-wheeling days when practically everyone thought only in terms of grab-and-get-out, and the specific episode of the Diamond Hoax. In both instances Mr. Kelland has obviously read carefully, chosen well, and used his material with a decent respect for the way it all was." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 22 '54
600w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 11 '54
110w

Time 63:116 Mr 22 '54 550w

Wis Lib Bul 50:181 Jl '54

KELLER, JAMES GREGORY. All God's children; what your schools can do for them. (Hanover house bk) 292p $2 Garden City bks.

377.1 Religious education. Church and education 53-12979

"A popular discussion of the religious element in American life, past and present, especially in public education. Father Keller not only emphasizes the role of religion but suggests what the average citizen can do to maintain the historic place of God and religion in American law, institutions and traditions." N Y Times

"The most valuable part of the book consists of concrete suggestions to teachers of ways and means of fortifying the religious traditions of America in and through the public schools. A book for Christian teachers and parents, and not necessarily exclusively Catholic."

+ Kirkus 21:576 Ag 15 '53 160w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p22 D 6 '53 110w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p29 O 18 '53
140w

"Emphasis is placed on what parents, teachers and students can do to see that the concepts of God and religion assume what he calls their rightful place in the educational system." J. C. C.

Springf'd Republican p5C F 14 '54 190w

KELLER, MARTHA. War whoop of the wily Iroquois; pictures by Richard Powers. 30p $2 Coward-McCann

54-6318

"A clipping from a Connecticut newspaper of 1780 inspired this lively pioneer story. Warned by the Indian signal, a hoot owl's cry, John Dexter, his wife and two children, held attacking redskins at bay for six hours with one rifle." N Y Times

"Told with enough gusto to satisfy the most bloodthirsty young modern savage, this tale of pioneer courage has wonderfully funny and dramatic pictures to match." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Mr 28 '54 210w

Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:59 F 1 '54 90w

"A brief but rousing story, retold and illustrated in lively vein for the entertainment of 6-9-year-olds. Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 79:1410 Ag '54 90w

"Emphasizes the killing of several Indians by the father in the text and in pen-and-ink illustrations by Richard Powers. For this reason and because it gives such an unfriendly feeling toward Indians, book is not recommended." H. E. Walker

— Library J 79:1410 Ag '54 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 16 '54 220w

"The simplicity and matter-of-factness with which this story is told is its greatest charm. Martha Keller, a poet, gives to her prose narrative a folktale quality and Richard Powers' sympathetic pictures make a fine setting. Any child under 10 will thrill to the courage of those people who took life as it came." Laura Benet

+ N Y Times p24 F 28 '54 150w

"This is a very unusual book. It relates a true incident in our history told in one tells a folk-story with clear continuity and rhythmic wording." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 37:54 Mr 20 '54 280w

KELLOGG, FREDERIC HARTWELL. Construction methods and machinery. 415p il $10 Prentice-Hall

690 Building. Building machinery 54-6524

"One of the few available books on its subject. It was written by the Dean of the School of Engineering of the University of Mississippi, and is designed for use as a text in junior and senior classes in engineering colleges. The subject is treated from the viewpoint of the application of quantitative methods to the planning and carrying out of construction operations, especially large-scale operations requiring the use of power machinery. The reader is shown how to analyze such problems as the comparative efficiency of various techniques. The analytical approach is maintained even in the descriptions of construction machinery. However, much information best described as 'know-how' is included also." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 79:919 My 15 '54 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:18 Mr '54

KELLY, EMMETT. The clown; with F. Beverly Kelly; decorations by Alicia Flene. 271p $3.95 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Circus 54-5677

Memoir of Emmett Kelly, the sad-faced hobo clown of the Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey circus. "The story follows Kelly from his first attempts to train himself on a backyard trapeze along the rocky road to success on circus tanbarks all over the world." (Library J)

Booklist 50:340 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:182 My '54 20w

"On the whole, Clown makes agreeable light reading and has enough of the authentic atmosphere about it to make you lick your lips over cotton candy and cast a fond glance in the direction of the big top." Robert Kass

+ Cath World 179:319 Jl '54 350w

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 4 '54 350w

"A fascinating story not only of this master of pantomime, but of the circus itself, with all its romance, adventure, comedy, and tragedy." E. M. Smith

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 1 '54 550w

"It's a book for anyone who loves the sawdust ring."

+ Horn Bk 30:193 Je '54 70w

Kirkus 22:56 Ja 15 '54 150w

"Highly recommended for circus and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:545 Mr 15 '54 110w

Reviewed by John Lardner

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ap 1 '54 470w

"The book has an admirable simplicity, with no more than a few score stock paddings, such as references to the lonely sound of a far-off train whistle, which is, through movie, radio and television usage, becoming something of a joke. It is not a book to go rushing to buy, but is one which, once a person has bought it, he will not regret having." John McNulty

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 4 '54 800w

"This book has laughs and it has tears; the description of the Ringling fire at Hartford is masterly. But the merit of this autobiography transcends the story of one clown's life and of the circus; Kelly has given us, quite unconsciously I am sure, a kind of montage of American life in this century. It is more than circus history; it is social history." T. W. Duncan

+ Sat R 37:13 Ap 3 '54 1400w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 290w

KELLY, MRS REGINA (ZIMMERMAN). Lincoln and Douglas; the years of decision; il. by Clifford Geary. (Landmark bks) 184p $1.50 Random house

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham—Juvenile literature. Douglas, Stephen Arnold—Juvenile literature 54-8115

"Regina Kelly gives a straightforward account of the famous political contest between two patriots—the Tall Giant and the Little Giant of Illinois—which grew out of the slavery issue and ended in 1861 with Lincoln as President." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) There is a school edition titled Abe Lincoln and the birth of the Republican party, published by E. M. Hale and Company, priced at $1.68.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p32 N 14 '54 30w

"An excellent outline profile of a historical situation. . . Stopping short of the Civil War's start, this sets the causes in perspective in an interesting, valuable manner. Recommended."

+ Kirkus 22:447 Jl 15 '54 190w

"Recommended." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 79:2500 D 15 '54 80w

N Y Times p50 N 7 '54 60w

KELLY, WALTER C. Of me I sing. 246p il $3.50 Dial press

B or 92 Actors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 53-12683

An "informal autobiography" of a star of the American vaudeville stage, who died fifteen years ago.

"Why has the autobiography waited so long for publication? Its savor is not in the writing, which is crude; it is in the memories it awakes of one of the merriest and most effective monologuists who ever graced our vaudeville stage." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 3 '54 360w

Reviewed by R. L. Taylor

N Y Times p7 D 6 '53 1050w

KELSEY, MRS ALICE (GEER). Once the Mullah; Persian folk tales retold; il. by Kurt Werth. 137p $2.50 Longmans

398.22 Folklore, Persian 54-8259

A retelling of some of the many hundreds of Persian folk tales which feature the doings of Mullah Nasr-ed-Din, Moslem priest who acts also as teacher and judge.

Booklist 51:68 O 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 14 '54 100w

Commonweal 61:203 N 19 '54 10w

Horn Bk 30:435 D '54 120w

Kirkus 22:382 J1 1 '54 110w

"Wonderful for the story hour." Augusta Baker

+ Library J 79:2254 N 15 '54 80w

"All these stories are short, sharply pointed, crisply written, with just enough detail to suggest the background easily. They are fun to read and fun to tell." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p30 O 3 '54 150w

"Mrs. Kelsey writes about his amusing predicaments with appropriate verve." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:217 N 27 '54 60w

"Story-tellers will welcome these tales just as they did the Hodja stories. Kurt Werth has caught the spirit of mischief and contagious laughter in his black-and-white-drawings." A. B.

+ Sat ■ 37:81 N 13 '54 100w

KELSEY, WILFRED ERIC. Carpentry, joinery and woodcutting machinery. 596p il $10 St Martins

694 Carpentry

"There are many books on carpentry, but few as comprehensive as this one. Beginning with a description of carpenters' hand tools, it covers the whole field including complicated roof trusses, interior woodwork of churches, and even the carpentry of shoring. At the end of the book power woodworking tools are described. Although written for use as a text by British students, it will probably be used more as a reference book in the U.S.A. There are over 600 illustrations and fortunately the index is very detailed." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1405 Ag '54 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:35 My '54

KENDRICK, BAYNARD HARDWICK. Blind allies. 218p $2.75 Morrow

Detective story. 54-6853

Kirkus 22:250 Ap 1 '54 60w

"The Captain has all sorts of aids, animal, human and technological, and this is all sort of interesting, but Mr. Kendrick (who is ordinarily a far neater plotter than this) spends as much space marking as making time by (a) a review of the Captain's history, which if not exhaustive occupies a good many familiar pages, and (b) a prowling through his psychological incertitudes which is embarrassingly uninteresting. The effect, over-all, is tired." James Sandoe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 6 '54 120w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p16 Je 13 '54 20w

"The story—in essence exciting and unusual—is written so that it's nearly impossible to follow." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 18 '54 90w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:32 J1 17 '54 20w

KENNAN, GEORGE FROST. Realities of American foreign policy. 128p $2.75 Princeton univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. World politics 54-9021

"In a series of four lectures delivered at Princeton University in 1954, Mr. Kennan, outstanding career diplomat, presents his personal philosophy of foreign policy. . . Mr. Kennan explores our relations with the non-Soviet world; it is through these rather than a direct military clash that we must work for both containment and liberation. He scores our wooing of small nations and demands a combination of restraint on our part and respect on the part of others for our seriousness of purpose, belief in ourselves, and fundamental reasonableness of approach. Through interior strengthening, tallying and control of resources, municipal planning, through organic growth outward to other nations in terms first of lowering economic and immigration barriers, America can fulfill the responsibility her power requires with dignity and with a view toward further world integration that may affect American life in new ways." Kirkus

"A short volume notable for its sanity, its penetration, and its steadfast recognition of the complexity of issues and the inescapable limits of foreign policy." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:94 N '54 700w

Booklist 51:55 O 1 '54

Reviewed by S. R. Davis

Christian Science Monitor p7 S 23 '54 1000w

Reviewed by G. W. Jaeger

Commonweal 61:18 O 8 '54 1750w

Current Hist 27:263 O '54 200w

Kirkus 22:509 Ag 1 '54 320w

"The discussion of these points is, of course, highly theoretical and abstract, but this is a very valuable presentation for all thinking Americans. Recommended for all libraries." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 79:1830 O 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Nation 179:466 N 27 '54 460w

"How far self-governing peoples can master the problems of world politics; how far, that is, democracy and diplomacy can be reconciled, is the next question. Kennan's answers so far are inconclusive. But this book we can be sure represents an early development in the thought of a keen and sensitive observer of world affairs who has returned to study his own country." Michael Straight

+ — New Repub 131:18 S 27 '54 1550w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 48:542 O 30 '54 180w

Reviewed by C. B. Marshall

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 12 '54 850w

"Offers plenty of food for thought. How far it points toward solution of America's present and grievous problems is another matter; Mr. Kennan would probably answer that resolving current problems was not his intention." A. A. Berle

N Y Times p1 S 12 '54 1450w

New Yorker 30:185 O 9 '54 110w

"There are few Americans wiser about the current diplomatic scene than George F. Kennan. There may have been occasions when he has fretted a bit at the limitations imposed upon the professional in the field of foreign affairs by the nature of the democratic process. But in his new book, 'Realities of American Foreign Policy,' based on four lectures he delivered earlier this year at Princeton, his wisdom, balance, and penetration all show up to the best advantage." Dexter Perkins

+ Sat R 37:41 S 11 '54 800w

Time 64:102 N 1 '54 60w

Reviewed by Herbert Feis

Yale R n s 44:280 winter '55 550w

KENNEDY, LUCY. Moment of the rose. 306p
$3.50 Crown

54-6626

"Two men learn that security is not a purchasable commodity when, believing that ownership of the property they desire on an island should insure the peace of which they have dreamed, they enter into a long and bitter feud over oil and water rights. Discovery that the property is sinking due to a former lease of coal mining rights, and the results of a tragic loss of temper finally bring a shamed realization of inescapable interdependence." Booklist

Booklist 50:342 My 1 '54

"It's an uneven story, in interest, in handling—but it has its moments."

Kirkus 22:75 F 1 '54 210w

"An old formula with some new touches, and a bit of its own unevenness." H. L. Roth
Library J 79:550 Mr 15 '54 100w

"The setting is realistically drawn. Lucy Kennedy writes with a good deal of assurance of subsidence and barrel-a-day oil wells and culm packing. The characters and plot are plausible. The girl's father, especially, with his many little stratagems to bolster his self-respect, carries conviction as a person. 'The Moment of the Rose' should enlarge the audience which Lucy Kennedy won with 'The Sunlit Field.'" Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 18 '54 360w

"Miss Kennedy knows her people and can take them apart to give a true image of human suffering or happiness. There is a down-to-earth reality to her writing. She keeps her story moving without slighting background or color. The characterizations, even those of lesser importance, are defined with sharp touches that bring them to life." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p26 My 16 '54 240w

KENNEDY, TERENCE. Muses three; with il. by Alma K. Lee. 163p $2.75 Roy pubs.

"About three aged ballerinas who were once famous stars and bitter rivals in the Imperial Russian Ballet and who now find themselves trying to keep alive on the small fees they earn teaching young dancers in Paris. Three long flashbacks, ingeniously arranged, tell the stories of these three lives." New Yorker

"A small, entertaining, shamelessly romantic novel."

+ New Yorker 30:219 N 13 '54 30w

"Their story, quickly and lightly sketched in, has a tinsel charm and unabashed sentimentality about it that remind one of those tales which, read aloud uncritically each December, contribute to the haze of amiable mellowness and fuzzy good-will with which we ritually invest the Yule season." Jerome Stone

+ Sat R 37:17 D 11 '54 220w

"The account of their youthful stardom at the Imperial Theatre is lively and entertaining, and the story is adorned with much 'period' detail as well as with the pretty drawings of Alma K. Lee. In using these flashbacks Mr. Kennedy has tried, but failed, to impose a significant design on what he wishes to describe; the pattern of Muses Three has a gem-like symmetry, but it is artificial, and without purpose."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p245 Ap 16 '54 200w

KENNER, HUGH. Wyndham Lewis. (Makers of modern literature) 169p $2.50 New Directions

B or 92 Lewis, Wyndham

54-9869

"This book is not a biography but an account of a career." (Note) The career is that of Wyndham Lewis, best known as writer and painter, in twentieth century England. Bibliography. Index.

Kirkus 22:355 Je 1 '54 180w

"Unfortunately, Kenner's exposition is indirect, diffuse, cluttered, and exceedingly unclear, reflecting mostly the worst aspects of his subject's literary style. Far from either attracting new readers to Lewis or rekindling an interest in those who long ago abandoned that enormously provocative but always overblown figure, this latest volume in the Makers of Modern Literature series will probably tend to discourage even those who might have been willing to try." Louis Barron

— Library J 79:1307 Jl '54 210w

Reviewed by Jacob Korg

Nation 179:217 S 11 '54 20w

"For the present Mr. Kenner is [Lewis'] thoroughly industrious Boswell, and incidentally he has written the best of the volumes in The Makers of Modern Literature series now in print; Mr. Kenner is pleading a good case in an excellent cause." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 22 '54 1700w

KENNY, JOHN B. Ceramic sculpture; with il. by the author. 302p $7.50 Greenberg

738.3 Modeling. Pottery

53-5530

A companion volume to the author's The Complete Book of Pottery Making (Book Review Digest 1949). By the step-by-step pictorial technique, with many illustrations, some in color, and with text explaining the process, the author demonstrates the making of ceramic figures. May be used for high school or older pupils. Index.

"Librarians in their leisure time—if any—will enjoy venturing toward a pleasant hobby and they will recommend these books to clay-dabbling patrons." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:65 Ja 1 '54 80w

"Happily, Mr. Kenny keeps to generally well-designed objects in his many illustrations of the methods and processes of ceramic sculpture. His book is explicit, clear and full of detailed directions for making a wide variety of ornamental objects."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 24 '54 170w

"The book will be of real value to teachers and older students."

+ School Arts 53:55 F '54 200w

KENYON, FRANK WILSON. Royal merry-go-round. 316p $3.50 Crowell

Louis XV, king of France—Fiction 54-5528

A historical novel based on life at the court of Louis XV of France. Emphasis is on the many love affairs of the king.

Booklist 50:193; 297 Ja 15 '54; Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 4 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:39 Ja 15 '54 210w

"The scope of the book is very narrow and the picture it gives of the Court and eighteenth century France cannot be compared to that given by Smythe in his excellent recent biography of Madame de Pompadour. Only for the sophisticated trade." Katherine Shorey

Library J 79:550 Mr 15 '54 90w

"Mr. Kenyon's royal hedonist and his spendthrift court jades stage lively entertainment. If 'Royal Merry-Go-Round' does not strictly accord with the facts and spirit of history, put it down to demands of focus. Through a Versailles keyhole, Toinette's pompadour looms larger than France's loss of vast domains." A. F. Wolfe

N Y Times p23 Mr 14 '54 320w

KENYON, PAUL B. Driftwood captain; il. by Louise Kenyon. 124p $2 Houghton

53-10984

Story of a boy who lived in a New England coast town and liked to "mess around with boats." There is a slight mystery which Peter's interest in salvage helps to solve

KENYON, P. B.—Continued

"'Driftwood Captain' is utterly engaging, rich in laughs and the minor contretemps of family life. It shows the impetus given a boy's growth by a family's understanding. This sunny-sided book is the result of a twenty years' wish on the part of Paul Kenyon and his wife Louise, and her illustrations are as expert and delightful as the text they amplify." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 11 '54 270w

"A genuine 'Head of the Cove' setting and convincing characters are created by one well acquainted with boys' fun on this bit of Massachusetts coast. The author's wife, a block print designer, has made attractive drawings that are more stylized than realistic." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:333 O '54 80w

"Paul B. Kenyon is an established newspaperman and his wife, the illustrator of this book, is a member of the Folly Cove Designers. Together they have made the kind of boy's story, set in their home port of Gloucester, that is swell mystery and enterprise and sand between the toes."

+ Kirkus 22:385 J1 1 '54 110w

"Younger boys with a passion for boats and boat building will welcome this very real story." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p8 S 19 '54 230w

Reviewed by S. C. Gross

N Y Times p32 S 12 '54 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 14 '54 50w

KEOGH, MRS THEODORA. The fascinator; line drawings by Tom Keogh. 250p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

54-5684

The fascinator is a Yugoslavian sculptor with a dash of gypsy blood. Ellen and Sandy Hunter are young Americans whose lives are strangely changed by the impact of the sculptor's fascination upon Ellen.

"Mrs. Keogh writes with a certain feminine intimacy and grace, which still does not bridge the many elements of unbelief here or convey the elements of fascination in a situation which is never more than grotesque."

— + Kirkus 22:127 F 15 '54 190w

"At her best, Mrs Keogh reminds one of Colette. She renders common sensual experience with uncommon vividness. Sights, sounds, smell, tastes, and telling gestures are often given a kind of natural emphasis that connects them immediately with our intimate experience. However, 'The Fascinator' is in its larger designs a somewhat disappointing novel; it does not compare favorably with Mrs. Keogh's earlier work." Gene Baro

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Ap 25 '54 330w

"Mrs. Keogh has the right reasons (but the wrong heroine) as well as the ability to have produced a meaningful novel of modern love. She writes sensitively, even beautifully. She has intuition and feeling, an encompassing tenderness. Above all she has the special faculty of deducing from the momentarily revealed nuance a world of significance, the psychological chain-reactions which precede and follow it. It is not, however, quite enough." John Nerber

+ — N Y Times p22 Mr 14 '54 450w

"Mrs. Keogh has delicacy of touch; she showed it in her earlier novels and she shows it here. The fault in this new novel is that the author's grasp of her theme lacks firmness. . . Perhaps Mrs. Keogh intends [Ellen] as an example of a type unhappily too common in our day of weakened values. If so, she has not made this sufficiently clear. And if Ellen is no symbol, but just herself—well, I'm afraid most readers will not care enough about her to make much difference in spite of the novel's many good qualities." J. H. Jackson

— + San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 1 '54 350w

"An extremely well-written novel, complete in itself, and yet wilfully limited." E. M. Scott

— + Sat R 37:28 Mr 27 '54 400w

"[Miss Keogh's] writing is supple and sensitive, and her observation clear; but her story, the haverings of an idle and empty-headed young woman, has an obsessive quality, and some of us may question its importance." L. A. G. Strong

— + Spec p478 O 15 '54 180w

"It is a little difficult to determine whether Miss Keogh is out to shock or whether she is a detached observer of the vagaries of sex. The question is one of tone rather than of content and the present story contributes little to its solution. Miss Keogh, at any rate, is very far from being another Colette."

Times [London] Lit Sup p669 O 22 '54 180w

KERR, GEOFFREY. Under the influence. 251p $3.50 Lippincott

54-5592

"The hilarious misadventures and romance of an unassuming London bank cashier, ■■ related by the chief persons affected by his occasional gift of mind reading brought on by getting 'tight.'" Bookmark

Booklist 50:260 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:108 F '54 20w

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 7 '54 300w

"A gay evening's entertainment."

+ Kirkus 21:801 D 15 '53 180w

"Recommended for fun." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:382 F 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins

Manchester Guardian p4 S 11 '53 60w

"Completely unpretentious and highly skilled."

Antonia White

+ New Statesman ■ Nation 46:326 ■ 19 '53 180w

"The laughter provoked is quiet, the suspense generated is mild but real. In its offhand, unassuming way, 'Under the Influence' is very good fun." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 28 '54 400w

"Actor, director, play-fixer extraordinary. Geoffrey Kerr has turned his witty appreciation of the delicately understated comic situation to good account in his first novel." John Nerber

+ N Y Times p5 F 28 '54 600w

"This novel's purpose is, in the author's words, 'solely and exclusively to entertain,' and in this it succeeds admirably." L. G. O.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 28 '54 250w

"'Under the influence' may not be one of the weightier contributions to the literature of thought transference, but it is certainly one of the most hilarious." M. L.

Sat R 37:28 Mr 27 '54 210w

"Mr. Kerr makes a number of different people tell the story in turn, and he has handled ■■ airy fantasy with ingeniousness, style and not a little humour."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p577 S 11 '53 50w

KERTESZ, ISTVAN. See Kertesz, S. D.

KERTESZ, STEPHEN D. Diplomacy in a whirlpool; Hungary between Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia. 273p maps $4.75 Univ. of Notre Dame press

327.4391 Hungary—Foreign relations—Germany. Hungary—Foreign relations—Russia 53-7349

"Stephen D. Kertesz, a former official of the Hungarian Foreign Ministry, has written a short, well-documented study of Hungary's struggle for political survival from 1938 to 1946." Sat R

"The story of the international position of Hungary during and after the Second World War is told in a scholarly and restrained manner in this valuable study by a distinguished Hungarian diplomat. Part history and part memoirs, the carefully documented narrative draws heavily on the author's experience as the official in charge of preparing the Hungarian case for peace negotiations and later as secretary-general of his country's delegation to the Paris peace conference in 1946."

C. E. Black

+ Am Hist R 59:625 Ap '54 260w

Am Pol Sci R 48:590 Je '54 60w

Reviewed by Andrew Gyorgy

Ann Am Acad 293:202 My '54 410w

"The book contains extensive notes and a list of important documents which are not easily accessible in the United States and some of which, to the best knowledge of this writer, have not been published in the English language before. Inasmuch as it fills a significant gap in the historiography of a hitherto somewhat neglected phase and area, the book can be read with benefit not only by the historian, area specialist and diplomat but by the general reader as well." Stephen Gorove

+ Current Hist 26:374 Je '54 700w

Foreign Affairs 32:679 Jl '54 30w

Reviewed by Fritz Stern

Sat R 36:42 D 19 '53 230w

"The book will be of interest to historians, students of Soviet Europe, and practitioners in the science and art of international relations."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:22 Mr '54 240w

KESSELRING, ALBERT. Kesselring; a soldier's record; tr. by Lynton Hudson [Eng title: Memoirs]. 381p il $5 Morrow

B or 92 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, German. World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles 54-6795

"Field Marshal Kesselring served his country on virtually every front, certainly every important front, and in various capacities, with air and ground troops and over-all staff, and finally replacing von Rundstedt as Commander-in-Chief in the already collapsing West command. This is a military rather than a personal record, but reveals the frame of mind of a German General, even today completely convinced of the rightness of his role, although acknowledging the weaknesses which contributed to defeat." Kirkus

Booklist 50:398 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:182 My '54 20w

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 13 '54 300w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 20 '54 500w

Current Hist 27:61 Jl '54 200w

Foreign Affairs 32:672 Jl '54 40w

"While one can see the blind spots and criticize the position, one cannot fail to admire the single-mindedness, the conviction of the man himself. . . There's an indefinable fascination to this record, which might well be read today by way of warning."

Kirkus 22:95 F 1 '54 270w

"Kesselring's honesty is beyond doubt; his judgment is often open to severe questioning. The book, to which S. L. A. Marshall, former chief U.S. Army historian in the European Theater, contributed introduction, will be useful in libraries with extensive collections on World War II." F. E. Hirsch

Library J 79:545 Mr 15 '54 210w

Reviewed by F. A. Voigt

Manchester Guardian p4 D 18 '53 420w

Nation 179:264 S 25 '54 300w

"Kesselring's release from prison was no doubt an act of sensible clemency. But it would have been a kindness to others if it had been a condition of release that he should not write his memoirs." A. J. P. Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 47:76 Ja 16 '54 450w

"Albert Kesselring's memoirs lack the literary flair that distinguished 'The Rommel Papers,' and probably will not appeal to as many readers. His writing does not communicate the immanent sense and smell of battle as does Rommel's, and his command habits were less spectacular. Nor has Kesselring attracted prominent admirers and editors, such as Liddell Hart, to praise and magnify his name and fame. Nevertheless, what Kesselring has written here is of wider and probably more lasting historical value than all of Rommel's letters and memoranda." Telford Taylor

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p5 Ap 25 '54 1000w

Reviewed by L. K. Truscott

N Y Times p3 Ap 18 '54 1000w

"The great virtue of Kesselring's account is that, while often critical, it is never bitter. His narrative of operations is a model of objectivity. His comments and interpretations are always illuminating. There is a shrewd insight into the Italians as soldiers, some glimpses (regrettably too few) of Rommel's moodiness and the effect on battle of a commander's subconscious fears, and the best balanced—though again fragmentary—picture of Hitler as a military commander that any German general has drawn." Gordon Harrison

+ Sat R 37:13 Ap 17 '54 900w

"These memoirs were written in prison and are therefore almost entirely undocumented. Kesselring regrets nothing save defeat, generally admires Hitler, and refers to the war years as 'a good piece of German history.' Nevertheless his book contains some interesting passages about the Italian collapse and, later, about the German one. His cool and unenthusiastic appraisal of Rommel both as a man and as a soldier is also of note in view of the somewhat exaggerated adulation which has recently been bestowed upon the Desert General by various British writers." C. F. G.

Spec p162 F 5 '54 250w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p12D Jl 18 '54 500w

"As told in Kesselring's foot-slogging style, much of this story borders on a map-room briefing, but through it shines the quiet pride of a good soldier who believes that a soldier's chief duty is to obey orders."

Time 63:106 Ap 19 '54 1150w

"Throughout his memoirs this self-satisfied and self-righteous Bavarian air field-marshal either points out other people's mistakes and failings or claims that his own tactics would have been better. He has a way, too, of whitewashing his own acts which he repeats so often that in the end it becomes nauseating."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p19 Ja 8 '54 450w

KESSLER, ETHEL, and KESSLER, LEONARD P. Plink, plink. [28p] col il $1.50 Doubleday

54-8916

Simple text and pictures describe a small boy's reactions to water: in the pond; in the sea; in the bathtub; in the garden; and lastly in the sink.

"Combination of writing and drawing will help to make the washing up a joyous occasion." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 14 60w

Kirkus 22:479 Ag 1 '54 60w

"Recommended as an extra picture book." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 79:1661 S 15 '54 50w

"The basic idea here is fine, but the adult who presents it will have to do a large amount of interpreting." B. B. Thorpe

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 14 '54 100w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 15 '54 20w

KETTELKAMP, LARRY. Magic made easy; il. by [the author]. 63p $2 Morrow 793.8 Magic—Juvenile literature 54-5835
A first book of magic for grades four to seven. The tricks are explained in both text and pictures. Contains a few basic rules for all magicians.

Booklist 51:156 D 1 '54

"Will be very popular with young readers. Recommended for all libraries." Phyllis Fennner

+ Library J 79:1665 S 15 '54 70w

KEVE, PAUL W. Prison, probation, or parole? a probation officer reports. 263p $3.75 Univ. of Minn. press

364.6 Probation system 54-10288

A probation officer's account of some of the many problems he has handled during his career. The stories are set forth in an interesting but not sensational style, and without fictionalization except for names.

Booklist 51:55 O 1 '54

"It is the author's over-all successful attempt to make the probationers and parolees live as individual persons that sparks the pages with both gay and somber incidents. Among the latter are chapters on rapes, abortions and sex offenses. These do much to remove the mystery and reveal the nonsense of a 'sweep-it-under-the-rug' approach for such repugnant crimes. They do, however, present a fairly balanced appraisal which could be helpful in countering these evils. And, while the book is devoted primarily to the discussion of specific cases, Mr. Keve does indulge in challenging observations aimed at bringing about a better public understanding of this phase of the crime problem." Stafford Derby

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 11 '54 650w

"These are stories of 'little people with big problems,' people who came to Mr. Keve on assignment but who, as a result of his kindness and understanding often became friends as well as clients. The book demonstrates clearly that a conscientious, sympathetic correction officer can do a great deal to help mend broken lives and return petty criminals to the community of decent citizens. Recommended for public libraries and general collections." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1498 S 1 '54 150w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 O 3 '54 80w

KEW, CLIFTON ENGLISH, and KEW, CLINTON JEREMIAH. You can be healed. 186p $2.95 Prentice-Hall

616.89 Psychotherapy 53-10935

"For more than ten years, Clifton E. Kew, senior psychologist of the Marble Collegiate Church clinic, and his twin brother, Clinton J. Kew, minister on the staff of the Church of the Ascension, New York City, have successfully combined the healing methods of group psychotherapy with those of religious worship, if possible in a church setting. In this story of their work they present a well balanced, sensible and simply written account of the great help afforded by group psychotherapy to those who are too troubled, frightened or ill-adjusted to cope with the problems of everyday life." Library J

Kirkus 21:793 D 15 '53 150w

"Will probably have a wide circulation. Recommended for purchase by public libraries." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:379 F 15 '54 140w

"A very beneficial book. . . Readers interested in the subject will do well to consult this book, for the printed pages are almost as good as a personal talk." S. M. Neal

+ Springfield Republican p9C Mr 21 '54 230w

KEY, THEODORE. So'm I; il. by Frank Owen. 67p $2.50 Dutton

54-8850

The creator of Hazel has produced a picture-story book about a knock-kneed, bow-legged horse who after adventures with a number of masters finally wins the championship in a steeplechase race.

Kirkus 22:480 Ag 1 '54 80w

"Fourth-grade readers (and some a bit older) should find this a steppingstone out of the comic books. This is recommended for libraries needing more steppingstones, more fourth-grade humor or horse stories, or more stories with a slight tolerance angle." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 79:1665 S 15 '54 60w

"Many a small boy not lured by the usual art in children's books will seize upon these bold cartoons with delight, and find he can read the story in them whether he can read the words or not. They are madly, dashing, funny, in the American cartoon-comic style, shown on these big pages so much better than in the smaller strips in daily papers. This style is not usually to our personal taste, but we recognize one of its masters in this utterly silly book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 29 '54 180w

"Here's a humdinger in the Dr. Seuss tradition of fantastic humor. . . This variation on the Ugly Duckling theme, with its wonderful simplicity, its intimacy of direct remark from author to audience and its originality and humor for every age, has unlimited appeal. As writer, the cartoonist creator of 'Hazel' has the support of another crackerjack cartoonist, Frank Owen in a runaway hit." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p26 S 19 '54 180w

KEYES, MRS FRANCES PARKINSON (WHEELER). Royal box. 367p il $3.50 Messner

54-6770

Detective story.

Booklist 50:420 J1 1 '54

"Absorbing, sophisticated story."

+ Bookmark 13:219 Je '54 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:473 S '54 250w

"That Mrs. Keyes is a good storyteller she has proved many times and she has lost none of her cunning in holding readers' interest in 'The Royal Box.' As a mystery writer she has all the skills of keeping the reader absorbed. The examination of suspects by Inspector Kirtland proceeds with fascinating dexterity, calmness, and apparent good will on his part as one after another of them is made increasingly suspect." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 13 '54 600w

Kirkus 22:239 Ap 1 '54 200w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 13 '54 290w

"Since 'The Royal Box' is up to Mrs. Keyes' usual standard, it is undoubtedly headed for the best-seller lists. One key to the Keyes success is, perhaps, the author's ability to tell a story entirely in conversation, however clustered with clichés. . . If Mrs. Keyes' readers seek escape into this dream world where everyone is gracious, beautiful and rich (in that order), and are not misled by the suggestion that 'The Royal Box' is a suspense story, they should enjoy many a blissful hour with this book." N. R. Campion

+ N Y Times p22 Je 13 '54 320w

Reviewed by Martin Levin

Sat R 37:13 J1 17 '54 200w

"A dash of Ouida, a slightly foreign accent and an idiosyncratic interpretation of English high life give a sort of fanciful charm to Mrs. Parkinson Keyes' story which may recommend it to a disrespectful reader as well as to its proper public."

Times [London] Lit Sup p513 Ag 13 '54 120w

KIERAN, JOHN. Introduction to trees; il. by Michael H. Bevans. (Hanover house bk) 77p $2.95 Garden city bks.

582.16 Trees—North America 54-10725

Guidebook to provide "the novice with an elementary guide to a friendly acquaintance" with the common trees of the United States. Contains colored illustrations showing bark, leaves, flowers, and fruit of each tree, with descriptive text. Index.

Booklist 50:413 J1 1 '54

Bookmark 13:217 Je '54 20w

"The format, text, and illustrations of this attractive book are such that it will be wanted for the library of every outdoor fan." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 12 '54 90w

"Plenty of use for this in any kind of a library." V. K. Fitch

+ Library J 79:1409 Ag '54 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 20 '54 20w

"Not only is 'An Introduction to Trees' an authoritative work of reference and a stimulus to further study, but a book to keep close at hand for the sheer pleasure of perusing its contents." D. B. B.

+ Springfield Republican p7C Je 6 '54 270w

KIERAN, MRS MARGARET (FORD), and KIERAN, JOHN. John James Audubon; il. by Christine Price. (Landmark bks) 182p $1.50 Random house

B or 92 Audubon, John James—Juvenile literature 54-6269

Biography of John James Audubon for ages twelve to fifteen. Index. There is a school edition titled Story of John James Audubon, published by E. M. Hale and Company, priced at $1.68.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:98 D '54 30w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p32 N 14 '54 30w

"An authentic portrait of John James Audubon. It is more suitable for younger children than some of the other biographies of this naturalist now on the market." Millicent Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '54 20w

"The Kierans' name should lend impetus to this biography of Audubon, but for reading, the book is disappointingly repetitious and not what we expected from the nature enthusiasts."

Kirkus 22:447 J1 15 '54 90w

"To their life of Audubon, John and Margaret Kieran have brought a sensitive appreciation of the artist's monumental achievements and an understanding of the urge which forced him on to perfection despite failures, poverty and bad luck. They have also done full justice to the charming and long-suffering Lucy Audubon." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p50 N 7 '54 40w

KIFER, LOUISE (MRS ALONZO FRANKLIN MYERS). Music fundamentals through song. 90p spir pa $3.50 Prentice-Hall

781.2 Music—Theory 53-11619

"The purposes of this book are to teach music fundamentals by relating the facts of music theory to songs and to help students to learn to read music." The author is known for her work with youngsters but this teacher's manual, it strikes me, would serve the adult as well. The songs, all carefully chosen, are first to be learned by rote and sung. Learning to read by either syllables or number names follows. Movable-do system. Spiral binding." Library J

"This is an excellent text for parents and teachers who want to know some of the funda-mentals of music. . . A musically untrained adult could use the book without an instructor and hope to achieve these goals with little study." Beatrice Landeck

+ Horn Bk 30:463 D '54 70w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 79:985 My 15 '54 50w

KILLENS, JOHN O. Youngblood. 566p $3.95 Dial press

54-7123

Story of a family of Georgia Negroes during the early years of the twentieth century.

"This first novel is written in language that sounds like Negro speech and the conversation is true. The author uses a few previously unprintable words that will shock some. And though more autobiographical than novelistic in form, this is a powerful work which urges Negroes to stay in the South and fight. Recommended." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:982 My 15 '54 150w

"In spite of its documentariness, its attribution of almost cloying virtue to the Youngbloods and their friends, and its often pat situations, 'Youngblood' is well worth the hours spent on its 566 pages."

+ Nation 179:157 Ag 21 '54 320w

"This is a fine novel, vivid, readable. Even its minor characters . . . are as arresting as its major ones. 'Youngblood' has one serious shortcoming. In order to dramatize the fear, the hate, the terror that accompanies what Hodding Carter called 'this tragic predicament of race,' Mr. Killens has used many scenes of hate-inspired violence, some of them worthy of the Grand Guignol. The repetition of these scenes tends to deaden the sensibilities of the reader." Ann Petry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 J1 11 '54 550w

"Although the novel describes spectacular incidents of cruelty, it is for the most part a record of petty, mean-spirited, wanton discrimination. Rather crudely written, in a vernacular style that is often tiring, and at moments flatly didactic, it has the power of the author's passion. . . The novel of social protest, which survives precariously today, justifies itself when it is as moving as 'Youngblood' and deals with so gross an evil." Granville Hicks

+ N Y Times p24 Je 6 '54 700w

KILLILEA, MRS MARIE (LYONS). Wren; il. by Bob Riger. 118p $3 Dodd

54-9509

"Retold from the material of her adult best-seller, 'Karen,' this is an unusual, true family story, intended for girls under twelve. It is a description of the patience, the faithful work, the love and religion that cured partially a child born with cerebral palsy." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"The volume has a claim on the attention of all sorts of readers, young and old, robust and invalid, religious and worldly. Literally it is difficult to think of any other book quite like this."

+ Cath World 180:vi D '54 100w

"No sermon, but great tenderness, devotion, and courage, as well as a little madness. Fancy a house containing a dozen bunnies, assorted cats, four orphaned wrens, and an Irish setter, all living in perfect amity with four children! That's 'Wren.' And every word true." Marcia Winn

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 N 14 '54 150w

"Such a book is not a wise offering to all children, but it could be a blessing in homes where there is a disabled child. For this baby who could not move arms or legs, at last walks triumphantly (with braces and crutches) at about six. It is very touching when the clever parents 'give' the lovely baby to her older sister Marie, who is as much the heroine of the book as she is. Then when a baby brother comes, he is 'given' to crippled Wren." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p30 N 14 '54 240w

KILMAN, EDWARD W., and WRIGHT, THEON. Hugh Roy Cullen; a story of American opportunity; il. by Nick Eggenhoffer. 376p $4 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Cullen, Hugh Roy 54-8482

"An anecdotal biography of a Texas oil millionaire, journalistic in style, sprinkled with homely and trite incidents from Mr. Cullen's life. The book is a blended exposition of the methods of oil leasing, prospecting and drilling, and his 'political philosophy.'" (Library J) Index.

"Cullen knows how to give as well as how to receive. His story, as told by two newspaper men familiar with him and his career, is not only a testament to American opportunity but an inspiration to generosity." Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 28 '54 300w

"The biography, quite naturally, is written in a completely laudatory tone. It tells the story of its subject's early struggles and later successes in business, his very happy domestic life and his community services and benefactions, and devotes much attention to his continuous campaign of telegrams, letters and conferences against New-Dealism, internationalism and all their associated policies and political exponents. One would look long and vainly for a better example of 'sturdy individualism' at its sturdiest." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:1492 D 8 '54 500w

"An admiring glance at a man of strong action and simple faith, largely for his relatives and retinue."

Kirkus 22:654 S 15 '54 160w

"Not an important book. Single purchase for the public library 'free enterprise' shelf." F. J. Anderson

Library J 79:2207 N 15 '54 120w

"The man is worth an intelligent, critical, full study; this job is too obviously authorized. It omits much . . . which would have made the old boy a better-rounded figure and a little less of a bayou saint. Don't get us wrong: Mr. Cullen is not a bad man, and it is an awful thing to say, as one critic did, that he represents 'ignorance on the march.' . . . The man has something." Stanley Walker

Nation 179:552 D 25 '54 850w

"This biography—written by two newspaper men who have long known Cullen and have not always agreed with him—is totally fascinating. It is the sort of book that is difficult to put down even for dinner." Lewis Nordyke

+ N Y Times p20 D 5 '54 550w

KIMBROUGH, EMILY (MRS JOHN WRENCH). Forty plus and fancy free; drawings by Mircea Vasiliu. 240p $3 Harper

914 Europe—Description and travel 53-11846

Describes the whirlwind trip thru Italy, with stops in Paris and London, which the author took with some of her friends, all of them over forty. In the last chapters the author describes her experiences in broadcasting the Coronation for CBS.

Booklist 50:193; 275 Ja 15 '54; Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:156 Ap '54 30w

Reviewed by Alix de Poy

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 14 '54 320w

"There are inimitable character sketches; and flashes of beauty like the description of the Festival at Gubbio, or a burst of wildflowers on the Palatine Hill. And there is the very funny business of bargaining with an entire Venetian family for a typewriter, in the shadow of San Marco. . . . Spirited drawings by Mircea Vasiliu dramatize the irrepressible Emily Kimbrough's faculty for getting herself and everyone round her into—and out of—hilarious situations." Kathleen Cannell

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 4 '53 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 My '54

"Her audience will not be disappointed, dismayed or depressed at Our Author from Muncie, Indiana and what she saw, felt, did and said."

+ Kirkus 21:811 D 15 '53 230w

"A very good buy for the general library." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:554 Mr 15 '54 120w

"Unfailingly Miss Kimbrough shows herself incomparable at the light and charming and cheering and endlessly quotable kind of writing that most of us would rather read anyway. Forty plus, though she confesses herself, she is still so young and gay that we may confidently look forward to the books of her so-called old age." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Mr 7 '54 700w

"Miss Kimbrough is enough of a raconteuse to make the most of every incident, so that the whole adds up to more than its parts. . . . This is an engaging book which does not knock the reader's ears in with a barrage of facts or deafen them with the sound of grinding axes—entirely suitable for a few hours of very pleasant reading." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 7 '54 400w

Wis Lib Bul 50:68 Mr '54

KIMCHE, JON. Seven fallen pillars; the Middle East, 1945-1952. 439p il maps $4 Praeger
953 East (Near East). Great Britain—Foreign relations 53-5307

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by T. H. V. Motter

Am Hist R 59:716 Ap '54 290w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel

Ann Am Acad 291:163 Ja '54 400w

"Very enlightening book on a very complicated subject." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:1399 N 17 '54 300w

"Mr. Kimche's recital and analysis of the misguided policies that led to the humiliating abandonment of the Palestine mandate and to equally costly blunders in Iran and Egypt is an essential reference work for Americans who hope to avoid similar mistakes now that this country is the paramount power in the Middle East. It must be said, however, that the book uncovers few new facts and that the author is beating a very dead horse in condemning the Middle East department of the Foreign Office for virtually everything that went wrong." Homer Bigart

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 F 21 '54 500w

"The author's chapters on Britain's fumbling in Palestine, the rapid post-war disintegration of the mandate and the rise of the Jewish state are balanced, penetrating and closely reasoned. . . . Mr. Kimche's handling of Soviet relations with the Middle East is as inferior as Dr. Izzeddin's treatment of Britain, and both alike fail to grasp the complex factors that contributed to the apprehensive unfolding of United States policies on the Middle East in the past decade. The authors are also annoyingly slipshod in their citations and references, which often appear to have been composed from memory." J. C. Hurewitz

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:142 Mr '54 210w

KIMPEL, BENJAMIN FRANKLIN. Symbols of religious faith. 198p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

290 Religion 54-11306

"A preface to an understanding of the nature of religion." (Subtitle) The author is professor of philosophy at Drew university.

Reviewed by W. D. Wallis

Ann Am Acad 296:198 N '54 320w

"This well-written and thoroughly documented volume is recommended for university, college, and seminary libraries and all others making subject collection." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 79:1307 Jl '54 200w

KING, MARIAN. Young Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots. 158p $2.50 Lippincott

B or 92 Mary Stuart, queen of Scots—Juvenile literature 54-7298

Somewhat fictionized rendering of the story of Mary, queen of Scots, from the time she left Scotland at the age of five until her return at eighteen after the death of her husband François II, king of France. For teen-age readers.

Booklist 51:21 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:14 O '54 20w

"Appears to be an accurate account of the Queen of Scots from the time she embarked for France at five and one-half years of age to her return at eighteen. Written in an exquisite style, suitable to the period—the middle of the sixteenth century—the words seem woven as a woof on the warp of a Flemish tapestry." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 7 '54 360w

"Straight-forward and unfictionized in treatment, this is the kind of historical writing that is likely to kindle further reading." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:341 O '54 100w

"Searching and well imagined."

+ Kirkus 22:396 J1 1 '54 130w

"Well-written, dramatic biography giving evidence of careful research and flair for characterization." M. K. Walraven

+ Library J 79:1672 S 15 '54 50w

"The complicated historical background is made clear, but our interest is focused on the extraordinary education of Mary Stuart, her rare personality and appeal to the French, her unusual education and childhood marriage. The fêtes, the banquets, the travels, the wedding, are described in colorful detail. It is all rather seriously handled, with no imagined conversations, and much quotation of interesting letters and documents. One feels a bit cheated at the finale when Mary sails home for Scotland, and longs for the rest of the story." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 17 '54 220w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinhead

New Yorker 30:220 N 27 '54 50w

KING, MRS MARION (MORRISON). Books and people; five decades of New York's oldest library. 372p $5 Macmillan (N Y)

027.3 New York Society library. Librarians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-10163

An informal account of the last forty-seven years in the annals of "New York's oldest library," the New York Society Library. The survey begins where Austin Baxter Keep left off in his account of the first one hundred and fifty years of the library, published in 1908. Index.

Booklist 50:410 J1 1 '54

Kirkus 22:277 Ap 15 '54 180w

"The tale is as entrancing as the title of the book is apt. Books and People is the essence of library work."

+ Library J 79:1037 Je 1 '54 750w

"It must be said that the book will be of interest mainly to friends of and subscribers to [the New York Society Library], but the story is told with charm and throws interesting and sometimes humorous light upon the reading habits and foibles of the subscribers and the changing techniques of library management."

+ Nation 178:469 My 29 '54 70w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 23 '54 360w

"In Marion King's book we have a delightful picture of the way it has been run and has served New York's citizens in its fourth half century—or, more exactly, since 1907, when Mrs. King joined the working staff. In effect her narrative is a mirror held up to the entire period. For there is nothing relating either to the flow of books or the procession of people through the library that isn't illuminated by her piquant gift for expression." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p14 Je 6 '54 440w

"A history of the Library covering the years from 1754, when it was set up as the first library on the island of Manhattan, to 1907, and including items about such early borrowers as George Washington, Aaron Burr, and Alexander Hamilton, has already appeared. Mrs. King brings the story up to date, and since she has a solid sense of humor and a lively interest in people, she does so very entertainingly."

+ New Yorker 30:103 Je 19 '54 160w

KING, WALTER S., and SLADE, ALFRED L. Airbrush technique of photographic retouching. 115p 200il spir pa $9.50 Macmillan (N Y)

770.2 Photography—Retouching 54-1265

"A presentation of practical techniques based on the use of the airbrush in retouching photographs. It is intended for craftsmen who are already familiar with the commercial retouching by other methods. Over half of the space is devoted to series of pictures which show step-by-step how typical operations with the pencil airbrush are carried out." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1406 Ag '54 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:44 My '54

"Of special interest to the commercial and retouch artist, this book will be of value in art schools and those high schools where the airbrush is used."

+ School Arts 54:47 O '54 100w

KINGERY, ROBERT ERNEST. How-to-do-it books; a selected guide. 2d ed rev 287p $4.50 Bowker

016 Hobbies—Bibliography. Arts and crafts—Bibliography. Recreation—Bibliography 53-13007

"More than 900 subject classifications and 3,500 books are included in this second edition, probably the most complete compilation on the market. Subjects range from carpentry thru all phases of hobbies, maintenance, upkeep, improvements, games, gardening, cooking, and even to how to prepare a will or adopt a child." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1951.

Booklist 50:402 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by William Yates

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 31 '54 40w

"An excellent guide. . . Many new subjects included in this edition. Useful in any library large, or small." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 79:1228 Je 15 '54 130w

KINNE, WISNER PAYNE. George Pierce Baker and the American theatre. 348p il $6 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Baker, George Pierce. American drama. Theater—U.S. 54-8632

"The life story of a professor (1866-1935) whose courses at Harvard, Radcliffe and Yale helped mold many of the men and women who later molded the American theater. Associated with his name are Eugene O'Neill, Philip Barry, Winthrop Ames, Sidney Howard and Thomas Wolfe. It was 'G. P. B.' who caused the success of the 47 Workshop at Harvard. The Workshop subsequently moved with him to Yale and developed into the Yale graduate school of drama." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:175 D 15 '54

"Highly recommended for drama and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:2338 D 1 '54 50w

"The whole story is here told with full documentation. It is a little too detailed and complete for the average reader perhaps but a real contribution to theatrical history."

+ Nation 179:410 N 6 '54 180w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 21 '54 40w

KINNEY, HARRISON. Last Supper of Leonardo da Vinci; an account of its recreation by Lumen Martin Winter. 108p il $5 Coward-McCann

759.5 Paintings—Conservation and restoration. Leonardo da Vinci. Winter, Lumen Martin 53-8892

"How Lumen Winter made a replica of the DaVinci painting, by visiting the master's birthplace, going through books and documents in the local museum, making notes and sketches and steeping himself in the background of the young Leonardo. The finished copy which now stands in a small museum in Miami, is believed to be the only re-creation of the Last Supper in full size and color ever made." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:165 D 15 '53

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 21 '54 50w

"The text presents the facts of the situation clearly and interestingly. Several chapters are devoted to the life and work of Leonardo, interwoven with an account of Mr. Winter's travels and study. It is unfortunate that da Vinci is given a rather one-sided, demure portrayal, particularly in view of da Vinci's well-known emotional maladjustments." S. R. A.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 7 '54 180w

KIPPS, CLARE, pseud. See Kipps, L. H.

KIPPS, MRS LUCY HELEN MAGDALEN (CLARE KIPPS, pseud). Clarence, the life of a sparrow; with a foreword by Julian Huxley; photographic il. by Kenneth Gamm [Eng title: Sold for a farthing]. 127p $2.50 Putnam 598.2 Sparrows 54-7703

In 1940 ■ middle-aged English widow found ■ tiny sparrow on her doorstep, nursed it thru its infancy, and made it a life-long companion. Clarence lived for twelve years, learned ■ few tricks, two songs, and became a source of entertainment in air-raid shelters.

Booklist 50:373 Je 1 '54

"Interesting to general reader and bird-lover."

+ Bookmark 13:235 Jl '54 20w

Reviewed by John Bayless

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 18 '54 110w

"A beguiling and unusual narrative, to which Julian Huxley contributes an admiring foreword."

+ Kirkus 22:141 F 15 '54 190w

"The direct and unassuming narrative is prefaced by an introduction by Julian Huxley in which he indicates the points which seem particularly significant to him ■ ■ scientist. A book which will intrigue bird lovers, but not an essential purchase." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:545 Mr 15 '54 140w

"This charming story contains points of unusual interest: for example, the bird actually developed a trilling song, which it would warble for over three minutes on end; and there are many details of its ways and habits and power of adapting itself to its infirmities ■ it grew older that will interest the student of animal behaviour as well as the mere lover of birds." A. W. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 13 '53 140w

"Mrs. Kipps has written an appealing, instructive and interesting book which will be read with enjoyment by a host of bird lovers. Julian Huxley, under whose aegis so many popular nature books have appeared within recent years, contributes a thoughtful and interpretative foreword. The photographs too, are convincing and clear." Thomas Foster

+ N Y Times p29 My 16 '54 450w

"Enchanting book, which, fortunately, is written without ■ drop of sentimentality."

+ New Yorker 30:147 My 8 '54 160w

"Mrs. Kipps tells of her dozen happy years with Clarence simply, charmingly, and without pretense. Together they survived the blitz—a bomb-blast once wrecked the bird's cage but failed to ruffle Clarence—and cheered their fellow citizens in shelters, hospitals, and canteens with tricks and songs." J. M. F.

+ Sat R 37:25 Je 26 '54 280w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 100w

"A most unusual and charming little book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p44 Ja 15 '54 400w

Wis Lib Bul 50:173 Jl '54

KIRBY, EDWARD STUART. Introduction to the economic history of China. 202p $4.25 Macmillan (N Y)

330.951 China—Economic conditions [54-1075]

"Professor Kirby, whose exceptional linguistic equipment includes fluent reading knowledge of Chinese and Japanese, sketches the main social and economic characteristics of the principal periods of Chinese history, takes his readers into the almost unknown world of serious Chinese thought during the critical 1930s, and exposes some of the nonsense which results from the crude—and largely propagandistic—application of Marxist categories to a totally different Chinese development." Spec

"This is a valuable book, since it eases the way for much-needed studies by others, any comments below notwithstanding. But this reviewer found the dominant tone of the book to be discordant and disturbing." D. F. Dowd

+ — Am Econ R 44:954 D '54 650w

"The main contribution of the book lies in its summary of a considerable number of Japanese studies on the economic history of China. The extensive references even include Japanese translations from the Chinese and Western languages. The bibliography in these non-Japanese languages, however, is much less comprehensive and not always up-to-date." Lien-sheng Yang

+ — Ann Am Acad 294:160 Jl '54 400w

Foreign Affairs 33:169 O '54 70w

Spec p372 Mr 26 '54 40w

"Professor Kirby's important book breaks new ground for the English reader, and deserves to be studied by all who wish to understand the basic conditions which govern China's economic life. It makes no claim to survey this life in detail; it is strictly, as the title states, an 'introduction.' But within this modest limit of its aim nothing better has ever been written, and its publication is the more timely because of the grave distortions which the present generation of Marxist scholars in China are introducing into their national history."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p246 Ap 16 '54 1250w

KIRBY, GUSTAVUS TOWN. I wonder why? 180p il $3 Coward-McCann

B or 92

54-10148

"The autobiography of the man who has done more than any other person to develop interest in amateur athletics in the U.S. Kirby was one of the organizers of the first American Olympics Committee, 1895, and has been identified with Olympics ever since," Library J

Kirkus 22:422 Jl 1 '54 170w

"Some local interest to Westchester Co., N.Y. where author lives. Of general interest." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1397 Ag '54 150w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 40w

KIRK, JANE. Group activities for church women. 245p il $3 Harper

259 Women in church work 54-8961

"Jane Kirk is a contributor to magazines devoted to religion and education. She has given much advice to women engaged in group entertainments, including those engaged in raising funds. In her book devoted to group activities she gives outlines of many kinds of entertainment, leaving to her readers the task of providing the details and perfecting the organization." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 51:54 O 1 '54

Reviewed by F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 O 24 '54

50w

"To many church women these suggestions will be as superfluous as advice on buying a new hat, but for many program chairmen this book will be a godsend."

+ Kirkus 22:478 J1 15 '54 130w

"Jane Kirk who is the author of Projects that Pay is to be commended for the wide variety of ideas for purposeful activities and for her clear directions for carrying them out. This ought to prove an excellent source book for every women's service group; it will no doubt be useful in inspiring new projects and in improving the effectiveness of existing projects. Recommended for all public libraries and for others making subject collections." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 79:1397 Ag '54 120w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 5 '54 200w

Wis Lib Bul 50:201 O '54

KIRK, JANE. What's cooking? quantity cooking for all occasions. 383p $3.95 Revell

641.57 Cookery for institutions, etc. 54-9683

"An attractively arranged book of recipes for all occasions, to serve from four to 400. Buying guides, index." Bookmark

Booklist 51:146 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:31 N '54 10w

"Included are recipes for suppers, covered-dish affairs, luncheons, salad dressings, sauces and gravies. Large-quantity buying guides and a table of weights and measures are useful features. If the book serves to improve the quality and variety of church dinners it will be a boon to church people."

+ Kirkus 22:647 S 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 79:2452 D 15 '54 40w

KIRK, RUSSELL AMOS. Program for conservatives. 325p $4 Regnery

301.24 [301.153] Conservatism 54-11671

A young American, author of The Conservative Mind (Book Review Digest 1953) describes a plan of action for men and women who believe in the American ideal of liberty under law, and the traditions of the Republic. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:146 D 1 '54

"Mr. Kirk has wide vision. He is steeped in the wisdom of the centuries. He does not merely point out contrasts; he is not content with indicating dangerous trends and drifts. He is accurate not petty, outspoken not opinionated, courageous not brutal." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 180:234 D '54 180w

"That Russell Kirk's 'A Program for Conservatives' is an event as well as a heartening book will be recognized by all who have followed the battle for the mind in this country." R. M. Weaver

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 24 '54

500w

"A book like 'A Program for Conservatives' is a hopeful sign of the times. Conservatism at its best represents the best that is in a country. Too often it has been equated with big business and the Coolidge reaction. Mr. Kirk shows us how worthy is the tradition." Francis Russell

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 29 '54

550w

"The present book is necessary and most welcome. It turns the reflected light of Burke's undying wisdom (and not a little of Burke's emotive style) upon the contemporary scene, illuminated and desiccated too long by the failing rays of materialistic liberal and socialistic doctrines. . . One cannot help feeling that Mr. Kirk is a gloomy and learned diagnostician rather than a physician for our ills, but his diagnosis is one we cannot afford to neglect." Raymond English

+ N Y Times p30 N 21 '54 750w

"A brilliant contribution to the defense of conservatives and to the rejection of liberalism." F. G. Wilson

+ Sat R 37:21 N 6 '54 800w

KIRKPATRICK, RALPH. Domenico Scarlatti. 473p il $10 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Scarlatti, Domenico

53-6387

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"To state the case succinctly: this is the book on Domenico Scarlatti. Regarding its first portion, devoted to biographical matters, this statement may well stand without any qualification whatsoever. . . Nor is wealth of information the only distinction of Mr. Kirkpatrick's presentation, which is equally remarkable and admirable for its high literary quality, for a fluency of thought and grace of style by which the mere assemblage of facts is transformed into an extremely absorbing story of musical life in Italy, Portugal, and Spain during the first half of the eighteenth century." Willi Apel

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:99 D '53 500w

"Ralph Kirkpatrick is the leading American harpsichordist. He is also an extremely keen and hard-headed musicologist, and on top of that he enjoys life. His monograph on Domenico Scarlatti is therefore a book of extraordinary authority, insight and zest." Alfred Frankenstein

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 14 '54

650w

"He would be a bold man who would claim to argue against the main conclusions of Mr. Kirkpatrick's book, and a bolder who undertook to refute him on points of detail. For this is a work of scholarship, written by a trained scholar and practising musician who has devoted a decade of unremitting study and research to his subject. . . The book is excellently printed and produced, with impressive apparatus criticus, a sufficient number of well chosen music-type examples and some attractive reproductions of eighteenth-century drawings and portraits." Martin Cooper

+ Spec p693 Je 4 '54 700w

"Mr. Ralph Kirkpatrick has written the first comprehensive book on Domenico Scarlatti, one of the most original musical geniuses of the eighteenth century and of all time. Mr. Kirkpatrick, who is probably the finest living player of Scarlatti on the harpsichord and is also a considerable musical scholar, has after many years of research succeeded in giving us as complete a study of Scarlatti and his work as can at present be conceived. Not only has he studied every facet of Scarlatti's music, but he has vastly increased our knowledge of the composer himself."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p59 Ja 22 '54

1500w

"The author's exhaustive researches have resulted in this carefully documented book which fills a gap of long standing in the literature of music. In the seven chapters of biography, Scarlatti appears a very real person against a vividly drawn background of eighteenth-century personages and of places in Italy, Portugal, and Spain."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:41 Mr '54 230w

KITAY, WILLIAM. New facts about bursitis [foreword by Hans Waine]. 242p il $3.50 Crowell

616.7 Bursitis

53-8433

"The first book on bursitis addressed to the general public, this emphasizes how little is actually known about this common ailment, and how widely medical opinions differ on its diagnosis and treatment. The author, a freelance writer specializing in medical articles, reports on the uses of surgery, X-ray therapy, physical medicine, diathermy, local heat, massage, exercise, and high frequency sound waves in the treatment of bursitis, according to the form of the disease and the doctor's preference. He also discusses wonder drugs, diseases that ape bursitis, and the patient's home care program." Booklist

KITAY, WILLIAM—Continued

Booklist 50:254 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by Marion Carey
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Mr 7 '54
90w

Kirkus 21:752 N 15 '53 70w

Reviewed by J. M. Scherr
Library J 78:2210 D 15 '53 150w

KJELGAARD, JAMES ARTHUR. Coming of the Mormons; il. by Stephen J. Voorhies. (Landmark bks) 183p il $1.50 Random house
289.3 Mormons and Mormonism—Juvenile literature 53-6257

Sympathetic narrative history of the Mormons written for boys and girls of ten to thirteen. Concludes with the sentence: "The traveler [who stops in Salt Lake City today] will come away . . . with the thought that he has been among a fine and wonderful people."

Booklist 50:225 F 1 '54

"The author has made his account of the Mormons' great trek westward into the Salt Lake Valley an absorbing pioneer story. . . Only briefly are religious beliefs treated, but Mormon character and contributions are emphasized and the early persecution given adequate attention." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:42 F '54 60w

Kirkus 21:537 Ag 15 '53 110w

Reviewed by L. E. Cathon
Library J 78:1939 N 1 '53 50w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p28 F 14 '54 90w

"It is good to have this absorbing and dispassionate account of the Mormons, who too often are remembered only for some of their eccentricities. This is a grandiose epic of displaced persons if there ever was one." C. H. B.

+ Sat R 36:80 N 14 '53 30w

Wis Lib Bul 50:78 Mr '54

KJELGAARD, JAMES ARTHUR. Cracker barrel trouble shooter. 213p $2.50 Dodd 54-5259

This novel for older teen-agers traces the fortunes of young Bill Rawls who, confident of having enough to live on, wakes up to find his only inheritance is a small country store. Bill leaves college and takes over the store and eventually makes ■ success of the venture.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 My 30 '54
130w
Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13 '54
160w

"A slight romance is a surprise from this author. Recommended." R. M. McEvoy
+ Library J 79:1410 Ag '54 70w

"Unfortunately, this work does not compare with the author's previous novels having wilderness settings; the dialogue is poor and there are numerous clichés. Not recommended." Robert Van Benthuyssen

— Library J 79:1410 Ag '54 60w

"A nice girl and a jealous enemy create ■ rather obvious plot. It is not an outstanding book, but it does show a boy facing a queer situation and conquering it through wit, courage and persistence. The reality of the business side of it will appeal to some boys very much." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 25 '54 140w

"At times in the story, contrivance is obvious and so are coming events, but there is enough excitement, humor, mystery and even a little romance to please most boys and many girls."

L. T. Bulman
+ — N Y Times p26 Ap 11 '54 180w

KJELGAARD, JAMES ARTHUR. Haunt fox; drawings by Glen Rounds. 220p $2.50 Holiday
Foxes—Legends and stories 54-9569

This is the story of a six-toed fox, Star—and of the boy and his dog who pitted their wits against his.

Booklist 50:383 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Je 27 '54
170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

"One of Mr. Kjeldgaard's best books." J. D. L.
+ Horn Bk 30:185 Je '54 120w

Kirkus 22:116 F 15 '54 40w

Reviewed by R. M. McEvoy
Library J 79:994 My 15 '54 70w

"One of the best of the Kjeldgaard books, and among the best animal stories this spring for older boys." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 16 '54 240w

"Boy, dog and fox are sharply drawn and endowed with life and individuality." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p33 Je 6 '54 130w

Sat R 37:31 Jl 24 '54 100w

Wis Lib Bul 50:183 Jl '54

KLARE, GEORGE R., and BUCK, BYRON. Know your reader; the scientific approach to readability. (Professional writers library) 192p $2.95 Hermitage

808 Readability (literary style) 54-7550

An introduction to the subjects of readability and reader interest. Appendixes contain demonstrations of readability measures applied to specific passages. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:397 Je 15 '54

"Writing courses, and laboratories, editors, instructors will find this a worthwhile assemblage of recent, and past, work in readability."

+ Kirkus 22:94 F 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by Louis Barron
Library J 79:545 Mr 15 '54 130w

KLEIN, DAVID. Your outboard cruiser. 230p il $3.50 Norton

623.823 Motor boats 53-13550

Handbook on outboard cruisers which considers the questions that owners of small cruisers are likely to ask. Partial contents: What the outboard cruiser is—and what it isn't; Choosing the hull; Choosing the motor; Housing your cruiser—afloat and ashore; Equipment—legal, practical, and otherwise; Safety and seamanship; Planning a cruise; Making a cruise. Index.

Booklist 50:234 F 15 '54

"The chapters on maneuvering, the care of a boat, and factors to consider in buying one are particularly good." Richard Philbrick

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 F 21 '54
20w

KLINE, MORRIS. Mathematics in western culture. 484p il $7.50 Oxford

510.9 Mathematics 53-9187

The purpose of this book is to set forth the claims of mathematics to being a major cultural force in molding Western civilization. The ideas are presented in historical order beginning with ancient Egyptian and Babylonian concepts and bringing the story down to the modern theory of relativity.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 79:559 Mr 15 '54 100w

"An unusually successful attempt to explain to the unmathematical what mathematics is about. . . The book is not for the too casual reader but is quite comprehensible without much preliminary knowledge of mathematical techniques."

+ Nation 177:553 D 19 '53 170w

"A remarkable book on a subject which has hitherto been discussed only in its purely technical aspects. Nobody will become a mathematician by reading 'Mathematics in Western Culture,' but anybody with a good education can learn from it how mathematicians reason and what their cultural influence has been." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p41 N 15 '53 1150w

"At his best, calling our attention to the sound of the primitive Greek bull-roarer behind the Pythagorean music of the spheres, or introducing Einstein with a quotation from Alexander Pope, Professor Kline is able to put the same clear light on both our mangy real world and the sleek, imaginary one of the mathematics."

+ New Yorker 29:115 F 13 '54 160w

"'Mathematics in Western Culture' explores the implications of calculus, the laws of chance, and other fields as well as geometry. It is recommended not only to laymen, but to teachers—especially to those teachers, the majority, who are using textbooks half a century or more out of date. Easily one of the season's most important popularizations of science." J. P.

+ Sat R 37:55 F 13 '54 410w

"The book cannot be recommended as a safe guide to the beginner: but it gives mathematicians the opportunity (in the words of the author, who sometimes lapses into colloquial American) to spoof their own work." Edmund Whittaker

Spec p234 Ag 20 '54 750w

"In spite of obvious defects, the book presents a vivid and stimulating history of mathematical development in its cultural context. The style is lucid and the presentation such that only a casual acquaintance with algebra and geometry is required for understanding."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:263 Je '54 240w

KLUG, HAROLD PHILIP, and ALEXANDER, LEROY ELBERT. X-ray diffraction procedures for polycrystalline and amorphous materials. 716p il $15 Wiley

548.83 Crystallography. X rays 54-8019

"First three chapters are concerned with elementary crystal geometry, production and properties of x-rays, and the interaction of x-rays and crystals. One hundred and fifteen pages are devoted to the Geiger-counter spectrometer." (Chem & Eng N) Indexes.

Chem & Eng N 32:2639 Je 28 '54 30w

"An authoritative, practical manual. Well supplied with literature references and adequately illustrated." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:2218 N 15 '54 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:53 Jl '54

KLUTE, JEANNETTE. Woodland portraits; with a pref. by Ralph M. Evans. [36p] 50 col pl $20 Little; Brown

779 Natural history—Pictorial works. Photographic books 54-5821

"The mood of the forest, with its dim, filtered light, its hushed atmosphere, its soft mosses, its damp, decaying wood—this forms the real subject of Jeannette Klute's gallery of fifty color photographs reproduced in 'Woodland Portraits.'" N Y Times

"With a dozen exceptions, Miss Klute's subjects are wild flowers or ferns. Each subject was photographed in natural light, in its natural setting. True, the photographer used reflectors, and her companion occasionally provided a shadow or bent a branch to admit more light. The portraits are carefully and patiently achieved, but without violence to the subject or faking of the background. . . . The literary passages are chosen with exquisite taste and from a wide range of sources. They are a substantial part of the book, no mere ornaments." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 24 '54 460w

"This beautiful big book of 125 beautifully proportioned pages will be above all a delight to devotees of color photography—but a joy as well to lovers of nature and the deep woods. . . . Altogether a masterly work of its kind." O. D. Hormel

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 30 '54 400w

"A breathtakingly lovely book, which promises to be the luxury trade gift book of the season."

+ Kirkus 22:749 N 1 '54 180w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 24 '54 40w

"The immediate object in focus may be a trillium of a fern or fallen leaves or lady's slippers. But beyond it, as the ultimate and elusive goal of the photographer, is capturing the feeling of the dim aisles of a woodland. At their best, Miss Klute's pictures are mood paintings with a color camera." E. W. Teale

+ N Y Times p37 O 17 '54 400w

"One of the most attractive books [Little, Brown] has offered in more than a century of publishing."

+ Springf'd Republican p9C S 26 '54 160w
Time 64:133 D 6 '54 30w

KNIGHT, SIR HENRY FOLEY. Food administration in India, 1939-47. 323p il maps $7.50 Stanford univ. press

338.1 World war, 1939-1945—Food question. Food supply—India 53-9961

"The fourth work in a series dealing with the complex aspects of food, agriculture, and World War II being prepared for the Food Research Institute, Stanford University. This work treats in detail the problems of food supply in India from the beginning of World War II to the partition of India. During the war years the author was advisor on food and agriculture to the Governor of Bombay and has drawn heavily upon official published documents as well as upon certain unpublished records and statistics. He treats in meticulous detail the efforts of the Government of India to insure adequate stocks of food during critical periods of crop failure, famine, black marketing, rationing, and shortage of transport. For research use." Library J

Foreign Affairs 33:167 O '54 40w

Reviewed by J. W. Rogers

Library J 79:207 F 1 '54 140w

"A former Indian civil servant, has written a valuable study. . . . The book contains many documents and tables useful to refer to." G. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 11 '54 240w

KNIGHT, KATHLEEN MOORE. High rendezvous. 192p $2.75 Doubleday

Mystery story.

54-6245

Kirkus 22:136 F 15 '54 40w

"The most wholly preposterous plot of 1954 to date. . . . But a Swiss funicular railway is an unexpected and effective setting for melodrama, and the tarradiddle is related far more entertainingly than many more likely stories." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p21 My 9 '54 40w

"Fast-moving, but very hard to believe." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 23 '54 90w

"No brain-pusher, but lady's plight holds attention. Average." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:40 My 22 '54 20w

KNIGHT, OLIVER. Fort Worth; output on the Trinity. 302p il maps $3.75 Univ. of Okla. press

976.4 Fort Worth, Texas 53-8817

"Tells the story of the development [of Fort Worth]. Drawing on recollections of early settlers, on Federal, state, county, and city archives, on newspaper stories of the time, he tells of the heroism and determination and optimism and even occasional chicanery with which the citizens built the marketing and industrial city of today." Sat R

KNIGHT, OLIVER—Continued

"Residents and former residents of Fort Worth will undoubtedly enjoy this account of the birth and growth of their city, and of the exploits of their forebears, but its factual and rather pedestrian style is unlikely to attract a much wider audience... Despite its lack of popular appeal, it is one of the better examples of local history writing and deserves a place in all Western history collections." J. E. Brown

Library J 78:1933 N 1 '53 120w

"Western Americana enthusiasts will want this book. So will all proper residents of Fort Worth. And from here on out, researchers and students will arise and call Mr. Knight blessed should their trails cross his collation. The general reader had best save his money for something of more general interest." W. H. Hutchison

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 F 7 '54 240w

Reviewed by Seth Agnew

+ Sat R 36:12 D 26 '53 270w

"Residents of Fort Worth may be expected to appreciate this story about themselves and their forebears. All other people who have an interest in the history of the Southwest will enjoy it, too."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:99 Mr '54 230w

KNIGHT, RUTH ADAMS (YINGLING) (MRS DICKSON JAY HARTWELL). Land beyond; a story of the Children's crusade; il. by Wesley Dennis. (Whittlesey House bk) 218p $2.95 McGraw

54-8814

A story of the Children's Crusade, recounting the experiences of the boy David who joined the young crusaders crossing the Alps but was imprisoned in Genoa and only escaped to go home thru the courage and devotion of his dog, Regis.

Booklist 51:87 O 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 O 24 '54 160w

Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 30w

"With a clear grasp of her material, Mrs. Knight provides an understanding of the movement and livens its story with a combination of romance, joy, and the horror of fatigue, fright, wickedness and disaster. Both boy and girl readers will be held by interest in David and the blind girl Ede; also in Regis, the oriental tiger dog who saves both their lives." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:336 O '54 150w

Kirkus 22:395 J1 1 '54 250w

"In spite of the drama of the crossing of the Alps by these pitiful hordes of children, and the strange big dog from Egypt who figures so bravely in the adventure, this is a rather sad book for any one under twelve, and rather oddly analytic for those over twelve except thoughtful young Catholics. Yet, if any high school history brings in the Crusades, it offers a vivid footnote to that extraordinary pageant with its diverse effects on Europe. And we respect the spiritual analyses given as we did those in 'Halfway to Heaven,' for too little of this religious side of history is made clear in text books." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 3 '54 240w

KNIGHT, RUTH ADAMS (YINGLING) (MRS DICKSON JAY HARTWELL). Top of the mountain. 222p $2.75 Doubleday

Story of the friendship of two boys, one an American, the other Swiss. Jordan Scott is saved from a blizzard in the Alps by Asper, and the American learns to know the real Swiss people from his rescuer. For ages twelve to seventeen.

"Thoughtful and extremely interesting story." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ja 10 '54 150w

Kirkus 21:633 S 15 '53 200w

"A good story and a lot of information, perhaps a little too much for the average reader." R. M. McEvoy

+ Library J 79:77 Ja 1 '54 60w

"Not really good as a 'novel,' or a boys' adventure story, or a sermon, still this tale of youth in Switzerland today will interest and perhaps inspire teenage readers." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 24 '54 150w

KNIPSCHER, JAMES M. W. (JAMES M. FOX, pseud). Dark crusade. 240p $3 Little 54-5105

Story of international intrigue set against a background of Paris, Rotterdam, Cologne and New York.

Kirkus 21:749 N 15 '53 70w

"The essential struggle is, of course, familiar but a good many of Mr. Fox's details as well as his organizational gimmick are fresh, at least to fiction. There's no particular reason why this adventure shouldn't beget a series. Indeed, its conclusion suggests a sequel and the prospect is agreeable." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 14 '54 170w

"Mr. Fox's longest and most serious book, it is also his most loosely organized, never quite making up its mind whether it is a novel or a collection of short stories and falling short of effectiveness in either form." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p25 Ja 24 '54 60w

"Mr. Fox's elliptical plotting may leave readers in bewildered doubt. C plus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p29 F 14 '54 70w

"Superior." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:34 Mr 27 '54 20w

KNOKE, HEINZ. I flew for the Führer; the story of a German fighter pilot; tr. by John Ewing; with an introd. by E. R. Quesada. 213p il $3 Holt

940.544943 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, German. World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations 54-5450

Personal memoirs of a German air force pilot. It describes his youth and the reasons for his becoming a pilot, and his combat missions. No index.

Booklist 50:317 Ap 15 '54

"Captain Knoke, one is forced to conclude, has learned nothing from the war beyond what he had believed beforehand. Unlike the children the Pied Piper lured from Hamelin, he has returned home. But he still lives in Pied Piper Land—and how many others with him? This is the grave question his book raises." E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p9 F 20 '54 700w

"There is no literary merit here, and this is hardly the sort of document to be used as an argument for rearmament."

— Kirkus 22:24 Ja 1 '54 250w

"Typical is the lack of any serious thought about the causes of the war and the right or wrong of it. This is probably the chief reason for publishing this volume since it shows how any young man will come to the defense of his country without questioning the motives and policies underlying its actions. Aside from this thought, there is little of value in the book." Donald Wasson

Library J 79:380 F 15 '54 110w

"If all the author can dream of are the good old war days of glory, Browning could well have the last word: 'Alas, alas for Hamelin.'" Herbert Mitgang

— N Y Times p18 F 21 '54 450w

"Exciting in parts, but monotonous on the whole."

New Yorker 30:118 Mr 6 '54 140w

"A jerky mixture of airman's logbook and autobiography, Knoke's is the first full-dress narrative to appear in the U.S., told by one of the losers, of the great air battles that were fought over Western Europe in World War II. As a professional flyer's scrapbook, it makes gripping, convincing reading, but it is spoiled, perhaps inevitably, by a scum of Nazi notions that nine years' retrospect and the detergent efforts of a British editor have signally failed to remove."

— + Time 63:107 F 22 '54 1200w

KNOX, RONALD ARBUTHNOT. Off the record. 176p $2.50 Sheed

282 Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works 54-6138

In the form of letters answering what purport to be questions asked him Monsignor Knox provides instruction on Catholic teachings, God, the Bible, the Virgin Birth, the end of the world, the papacy, and so on.

"Here, as always, the richly gifted author displays an extraordinary ability to combine playfulness with learning."

+ Cath World 179:320 Jl '54 70w

"Each letter is brief and reveals Knox's facility with words, his ability to simplify complex ideas, his sense of humor and his utter devotion to the Roman Catholic Church. A good book for Catholic readers, but also for non-Catholics interested in the subjects."

+ Kirkus 22:108 F 1 '54 100w

"The novelty of the epistolary form adds to the interest and pungency that one expects from this author." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p17 Ja 31 '54 90w

KOCHER, ALFRED LAWRENCE, and DEAR-STYNE, HOWARD. Shadows in silver; a record of Virginia, 1850-1900, in contemporary photographs taken by George and Huestis Cook, with additions from the Cook collection. 264p $7.50 Scribner

975.5 [917.55] Virginia—Views. Cook, George Smith. Cook, Huestis Pratt 54-5917

"Almost a century's labor is represented in this careful selection from the photographs of Southern life made by George Cook, and his sons, LaGrange and Huestis Cook. George Cook began work long before the Civil War; his sons continued active until late in the 1930's. Photographs taken by other Southern master-photographers between 1845 and 1900—landscapes, portraits, news-shots, architectural studies—were acquired by the Cooks over the years and the whole body of work is known as the 'Cook Collection.' It is the source from which this book derives." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Here are photographs that deserve to stand beside those of Brady, photographs that give a living picture of life in Virginia several generations ago. Unfortunately the editors were not content to leave well enough alone, but chose to embellish the photographs with a running text that adds nothing of value to the book." Walter Harding

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 N 28 '54 220w

Kirkus 22:524 Ag 1 '54 110w

"In spite of the fanciful title, this handsome volume meets the challenge of the subtitle in a fashion which commands ungrudging admiration. . . In the text, the authors have done an excellent job of filling out the backgrounds and creating the perspective. . . It is an interesting story of two remarkable men as the authors tell it, but they do not let it distract attention from their main objective—the recreation of old Virginia in pictures."

H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p42 O 10 '54 450w

KOCHER, PAUL HAROLD. Science and religion in Elizabethan England. 340p $6 Huntington lib.

215 Religion and science

53-9115

"Based on a close scrutiny of primary sources and present-day research, it is a meticulous study of the interplay of science and religion in Elizabethan England. . . For background, the Elizabethan theory of knowledge as it evolved among theologians, scientists, and, so far as one can say, the thinking public at large is ably summarized. Then the means are traced by which an articulate minority of skeptics corroded the traditional orthodoxies that might otherwise have ended the advance of science."

U S Quarterly Bk R

Bookmark 13:44 N '53

"This rigorous work of scholarship is written with wit, sensibility, and charm."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:436 D '53 280w

KOESTLER, ARTHUR. Invisible writing; being the second volume of Arrow in the blue. 431p il $5 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Communism [54-4232]

"The second volume of Arthur Koestler's autobiography, describes his seven years, 1931-1938, as an embattled member of the Communist Party." Atlantic

"It is among the most interesting works of non-fiction that I have read this year. It is free from the hysteria and the rancor which have disgusted me in the memoirs of certain celebrated ex-Communists, whose much-vaunted spiritual transformation has left them with more fanaticism than Christian charity. . . What surprised me was the evidence of a kind of mellowing on Koestler's part. The theatrical bent of his intellect; his fondness for flashy generalizations, and for transferring to other spheres the concepts and jargon of science; all this has played a part in making his work arresting and stimulating; but it has also made him, as an English critic once bluntly observed, a 'dislikable' writer." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:94 O '54 800w

Booklist 51:129 N 15 '54

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 17 '54 450w

"As is customary with Koestler, 'The Invisible Writing' may be said to be one-third fact, one-third psychology, and one-third speculation. Yet the result is a volume that is both interesting and instructive." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 O 21 '54 750w

Reviewed by Maurice Cranston

Manchester Guardian p6 Je 29 '54 550w

"Even the readers who have read all of Koestler's books will not be bored, partly because Koestler is never boring, and partly because the volume presents his experience with Communism in ordered sequence; and the cumulative effect is overwhelming. To say that Koestler is not boring is merely to pay tribute to the vitality of his prose and the fecundity of his imagination. But it does not do justice to the fact that he reveals himself as a man of genuine humanity and charity who traveled through various hells and reveals only a few indications of being scorched by hell-fires." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ New Repub 131:19 O 25 '54 1050w

Reviewed by Marvin Lowenthal

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p4 O 10 '54 1200w

"Adding up the whole sum of his autobiography, we should recognize that it is a very great achievement to have such a typical case history and to insist so violently on retaining an identity that tries his contemporaries to the point of exasperation." Stephen Spender

N Y Times p3 O 10 '54 1350w

Reviewed by Lewis Vogler

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 21 '54 900w

KOESTLER, ARTHUR—Continued

"The emphasis in the present book shifts to his literary apprenticeship and his personal life; though he continued to be involved in the tortuous developments of the European scene. About this scene he remains highly interesting to the end of the present narrative: about himself and his own life he is still, as he was in the first volume of his autobiography, a master of the half-insight." Maxwell Geismar

Sat R 37:18 O 30 '54 800w

"Those expecting a new revelation of Communist methods between the wars will not find it in this book. There have been enough accounts, some genuine, some contrived, from former Communists of their adventures in chasing the devious party line, or in scurrying between the capitals of Europe on enigmatic errands for Kremlin Apparaten and Communist front-organisations, to leave little room for surprise. Where Koestler's book is particularly valuable is in its analysis of the mind and soul of a neurasthenic idealist during a seven years' journey through the closed system of Communist dialectics." Emanuel Litvinoff

Spec p26 J1 2 '54 1700w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Springf'd Republican p9C D 12 '54
200w

Time 64:126 O 11 '54 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p419 J1 2 '54
1250w

KOFFLER, CAMILLA (YLLA, pseud) il. Animals in Africa. See Leakey, L. S. B.

KOFFLER, CAMILLA (YLLA, pseud). Two little bears. [32p] il $2.50; lib ed $3 Harper Bears—Pictures, illustrations, etc. 54-8963

"Ylla, a photographer of distinction, has written and pictured a tale of her own pet bear cubs playing with spontaneous abandon, and looking out on a strange and puzzling world with grave innocence." (Sat R) For ages four to six.

Booklist 51:47 S 15 '54

Reviewed by M. M. Remenih
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 14 '54
40w

"A wonderfully appealing picture-story." O. D. Hormel
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '54
70w

Commonweal 61:204 N 19 '54 10w

Kirkus 22:579 S 1 '54 90w

"Very simple and very charming." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 79:2252 N 15 '54 20w

"Not recommended." L. R. Markey
— Library J 79:2252 N 15 '54 20w

"Ylla has caught her cubs in an extraordinary variety of natural poses, romping, wrestling, chasing each other: they will please ages four to six." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p28 N
14 '54 120w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead
New Yorker 30:201 N 27 '54 50w

"Everyone loves a baby, human or bear, and this book about two bear cubs is one that any little child will love and want for his own. That is, if the adults in his family can tear themselves away from Ylla's large and beautiful photographs long enough to let the child-owner realize that this is his book too." R. L.

+ Sat R 37:67 N 13 '54 180w

KOHLER, JULILLY HOUSE. Crazy as you look! il. by Lee Ames. 120p $2.50 Knopf

54-5302

The lively adventures of Mary Lizbeth Morgan in a small Kentucky town in 1915. Lyssus, her grandmother's hired man, Mary Lizbeth's best friend, tried to keep the lively little girl in line with love and understanding, plus his favorite expression "Crazy as you look." For ages 8 to 12.

"Real as life characters and events described with warmth and humor and detail stem, I'm sure, from the author's own fond memories. There must be a good bit of Mrs. Kohler in Mary Lizbeth and an old and dear friend in Lyssus. At any rate, 8 to 12 year olds will love them both." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 F 21 '54
210w

+ Kirkus 22:62 F 1 '54 80w

"A rather nostalgic but extremely readable story. . . Recommended." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 79:460 Mr 1 '54 80w

"This is a well-written book of most vivid, lively memories, dominated by a remarkable servant who was a wise and loving friend. Though there is no plot, there is plenty of excitement. There are humor and tenderness in the theme about 'Lys' learning to read. The little girl's attitude toward her colored friends carries more of a lesson than do many purposeful books about racial friendship." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 4 '54
220w

Reviewed by S. C. Gross
N Y Times p20 Je 13 '54 120w
Wis Lib Bul 50:142 My '54

KOHN, HANS, ed. German history: some new German views. 224p $4 Beacon press

943 Germany—History 54-10651

"The book gives the views of nine liberal German historians in reconsideration of the dominant concepts of recent German political and cultural history. They review critically not only the rise and rule of National Socialism, but also the strength of authoritarianism and militarism, the weakness of democracy and liberal attitudes in nineteenth century Germany. . . The essays here presented were published in German periodicals and pamphlets between 1945 and 1952. . . The authors include Professor Friedrich Meinecke of Berlin, Professor Franz Schnabel of Munich, and Professor Ludwig Dehio of Marburg." Publisher's note

Reviewed by E. M. Carroll
Am Hist R 60:100 O '54 550w

"The distinguished historian, Hans Kohn, has performed a notable service in collecting and editing these essays written by German historians since 1945. The outcome of two visits Professor Kohn made to Germany in 1951 and 1952, the book includes two of his own introductory essays written in that superb style that has made the author famous as one of our great American historians." L. L. Snyder

+ Ann Am Acad 296:209 N '54 500w

"There is a freshness of approach in all of the contributions. They show the traditional solidity of the German scholar happily combined with a new resistance to the lure of romantic hallucinations. But the book does not tell how these attempts at critical history have been received by the German public and whether its majority does not prefer to listen to those who, as in the past, now are trying again to lead the nation on a mass flight from bitter insight into sweet delusion." E. S. Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 7 '54
500w

"In compiling this interesting, revealing, and often depressing volume Professor Kohn has performed a useful and timely service." A. F. Thompson
+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 11 '54
300w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman
Nation 179:233 S 18 '54 90w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor
New Statesman & Nation 47:416 Mr 27
'54 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p230 Ap 9 '54
850w

KOKKO, YRJO. Way of the four winds; tr. by Naomi Walford. 286p il $5 Putnam

948.95 Lapps

52-13654

Stories, anecdotes, and photographs descriptive of the lives of the Lapps of northern Finland and Scandinavia. Index.

Booklist 50:417 J1 1 '54

"Nearly 50 photographs reinforce the text, but the book is for the inner eye. Yrjo Kokko has erected a noble memorial to a vanished time. He has also shown us individuals of such valor and simple strength that they will salvage a new life from the ruined old. We readers gain too, as one always gains by a renewed confidence in greatness." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 1 '54 800w

"Peter Freuchen predicts that the book will be a standard work, and claims that it is already a classic." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1597 S 15 '54 70w

Manchester Guardian p6 My 21 '54 240w

"This hauntingly beautiful book is like a rich and colorful tapestry, which must be rolled up and viewed a section at a time. Each section is a striking picture." Evelyn Stefansson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 J1 4 '54 800w

"Enthralling book. . . With accuracy of detail and with literary dexterity, Yrjo Kokko provides what amounts to a natural history of nomadism, even while he beguiles us with a tender and moving story of a Lapp child's growth to manhood." Trevor Lloyd

+ N Y Times p3 Je 20 '54 450w

"The result is an episodic portrait, artless but shimmering, that celebrates a wonderfully engaging and by no means unenviable people. For good measure, Mr. Kokko, a photographer as well as a writer, includes a portfolio of pictures that have the distinction of being both excellent and actually illustrative of our journey." Berton Rouché

+ New Yorker 30:183 N 6 '54 500w

"This delightful story about a group of Finnish Lapps brings them to earth and weaves a kind of magic spell of its own. The book was a top best seller in Scandinavia and received the Grand Literary Prize of the Finnish State. It brings to mind the simple wisdom and beauty of Willa Cather's writing. It has a generous portion of her sort of timeless charm." G. A. Barker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 J1 4 '54 750w

"In 'The Way of the Four Winds,' a fictional yet factual narrative, the author has presented a beautiful, sensitive, and moving portrait of [the Lapps]. By keeping himself, as narrator, in the background and allowing his characters to speak for themselves, the pieces of the Lapp racial character fall together into a touching and memorable picture." Raymond Holden

+ Sat ■ 37:19 Ag 14 '54 550w

"Fascinating book. . . The present translation into English by Naomi Walford comes some five years after its original publication. It is in many ways a simple book, a collection of loosely linked episodes, all about a single Lapp village, its handful of people, and a few outlanders. It is a perfect reflection of the country, of its rare people and of the strange spirit that has held them together until now, and may hold them together yet, though, as the book suggests, the forces of disintegration, penetrating from the south, are probably stronger now than ever before. Whatever that spirit is—faith, toughness, harmony with nature, inertia—it has not much to do with happiness." Walter Taplin

+ Spec p789 Je 25 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p5C J1 4 '54 190w

Times [London] Lit Sup p503 Ag 6 '54 450w

KOLARZ, WALTER. Peoples of the Soviet Far East. 193p il maps $4.50 Praeger

323.1 Russia—Colonies, Ethnology—Russia 53-8350

"The story of the Soviet colonization of Russia's far eastern possessions drawn from Soviet journals, newspapers, books and plays. The book describes the Kremlin's colonial policy and furnishes information on the various peoples—Mongols, Yakuts, etc.—who have been sovietized." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Based on necessity almost entirely on Russian sources, this is, nevertheless, an excellent brief report of the ways in which the Soviet government has spread its control over Asian Russia."

+ Am Pol Sci R 48:580 Je '54 80w

"Unlike many writers on Soviet Far Eastern policy, Mr. Kolarz appears to have taken some trouble to familiarize himself with the Far Eastern context of his subject. . . Mr. Kolarz deserves great praise for his treatment of an obscure but important topic." H. C. Hinton

+ Ann Am Acad 294:164 J1 '54 550w

Booklist 50:392 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 9 '54 40w

Foreign Affairs 32:683 J1 '54 30w

"For students, political scientists, historians, but a general reader will be hard to find."

Kirkus 22:141 F 15 '54 180w

"Recommended for larger educational and public libraries; also as reference tool for many other collections such as those used by journalists." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:545 Mr 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by Guy Wint

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 30 '54 420w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 28 '54 30w

"Any serious student of the Pacific area and of the mighty forces working in it will not wish to omit this valuable book from his reading." Harry Schwartz

+ N Y Times p17 Ap 4 '54 700w

"Mr. Kolarz's book enjoys the preeminence of the one-eyed man in the country of the blind. He has collected such references to this region as he has been able to find in Soviet newspapers and periodicals since the war, and has consulted a few books and articles of an earlier period. The result is neither systematic nor satisfying."

Times [London] Lit Sup p339 My 28 '54 370w

KOLLER, LAWRENCE R. Complete book of salt water fishing. 144p il $2.75 Bobbs 799.1 Fishing 54-23079

A popular how to do it book on big game sea and surf fishing. Many illustrations.

"An enthusiastic, knowledgeable handbook profusely illustrated."

+ Bookmark 13:182 My '54 20w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:862 My 1 '54 20w

Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 15 '54 40w

KOMROFF, MANUEL. Napoleon. 189p $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Napoléon I, emperor of the French —Juvenile literature 54-10590

The book "starts with Napoleon's first coup, when as a young officer he fought the Paris mobs for Barras, in 1795, and won promotion to Commander in Chief of the Army of the Interior, at twenty six. Komroff then turns back to Napoleon's Corsican boyhood and the many factors that molded his character; then forward again to the familiar steps of his rise and fall." (Kirkus) Bibliography.

Booklist 51:180 D 15 '54

KOMROFF, MANUEL—Continued

"Makes substantial supplementary reading for teen-age students and an adventurous account for anyone." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:341 O '54 80w

"Excellent, and worthy of Mr. Komroff's versatility and gifts as a writer."

+ Kirkus 22:397 J1 1 '54 150w

"In clear, dramatic style and with an excellent selection of material the author has written a short, highly readable biography of Napoleon... Recommended for teen-agers in all libraries." Margaret McFate

+ Library J 79:2257 N 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:221 N 27 '54 20w

KOMROFF, MANUEL. True adventures of spies; il. by Carl Kidwell. 220p $2.75 Little 364.13 [351.74] Spies—Juvenile literature 54-5120

"[Eleven] true accounts of intrigue and mortal danger which tell of human beings upon whom Intelligence depended in the Revolution, the Civil War, and World Wars I & II." Publisher's note

Kirkus 22:36 Ja 15 '54 90w

"Boys, junior high school age and up, will read with interest these danger-filled adventures of spies, both good and bad." Elenora Alexander

+ Library J 79:1672 S 15 '54 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 2 '54 20w

Reviewed by Iris Vinton

N Y Times p18 Je 27 '54 30w

KONO, KEORA, and MULGRAVE, DOROTHY IRENE. Hidden village; an adventure story of Hawaii; il. by Isami Kashiwagi. 111p $2.50 Longmans 54-6372

"Keo, a sun-browned Hawaiian lad, lives an adventurous life. On almost every page he moves from one experience to another and better one, not believed when he relates his victory in the sea, he must therefore prove his honesty in other ways. While thus doing, he becomes a hero in a true Hawaiian manner." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 51:139 N 15 '54

"The illustrations by Isami Kashiwagi are suitable and authentic." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 7 '54 60w

Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 10w

"A good try, but through contrivances, it falls short of the mark."

Kirkus 22:388 J1 1 '54 110w

"A little contrived in plot, the book has its value for good Hawaiian background, readable text, a glance at a folklore but little known. Because of the scarcity of this kind of material, if for no other reason, this is recommended." S. J. Johnson

+ — Library J 79:2254 N 15 '54 100w

KONOPKA, MRS GISELA. Group work in the institution: a modern challenge; foreword by Fritz Redl. 304p $4.50 Whiteside 361.4 Group work 54-5837

"After her introductory statement on institutions in modern society, and a discussion of social group work as both a science and an art, Dr. Konopka devotes most of her book to social group work with children—in institutions, as juvenile delinquents, in prisons and in handicapped programs. Included are sections on social group work in institutions for the aged, for institutionalized unmarried mothers, and a closing chapter on being dedicated to helping others." (Library J) Index.

"Only a few paragraphs in a concluding chapter are devoted to group work activities in homes for the aged, and nothing is said about the hospital for chronic diseases. Nevertheless, administrators of such institutions and executives and planners in the health and hospital fields who are becoming increasingly concerned with care of the long-term ill, the infirm, and the custodial patient, will find this a valuable source book for a type of social work that is becoming increasingly indispensable for proper treatment of their charges." David Littauer

+ Am J Pub Health 44:1471 N '54 310w
Booklist 50:392 Je 15 '54

"Should be helpful in service training of institutional staffs and largely for such personnel and their boards. For larger college, large public and university libraries." R. P. Bartolini

+ Library J 79:545 Mr 15 '54 100w

KONVITZ, MILTON RIDVAS. Civil rights in immigration. (Cornell studies in civil liberty) 216p $3.50 Cornell univ. press

325.73 U.S.—Emigration and immigration 53-12660

"The author undertakes a critical evaluation of American immigration and naturalization policy, points out what he considers to be the principal inequities in present procedures, and frankly presents his own views. Altogether the book is an argument for more liberal treatment of the alien. The subject is discussed under three headings: first, admission and exclusion policies; second, deportation policies; and third, naturalization. Under each of these topics the author first gives a brief review of the historical background of the present policies and procedures, then points out hardships or inequities that may arise, and ends by giving his own recommendations." Ann Am Acad

"For the political scientist this little volume is a useful addition to the literature of civil rights in the United States. It may not be as objective or neutral as some persons would like, but perhaps, as the author points out in his preface, it may be more desirable to aim at strengthening the reader's power of conviction and his sense of social responsibility." L. V. Howard

+ Am Pol Sci R 48:567 Je '54 500w

"If the author errs, it is perhaps in trying too zealously to make his case against the immigration laws and in presenting a more unfavorable than representative picture of their operation. And it is perhaps assigning too large a role in international affairs to immigration legislation to imply that the abrogation of the Gentleman's Agreement with Japan set us on the path that led to Pearl Harbor (p. 6-7). To cite an example that really proves nothing, relations with China have not been perceptibly improved by the repeal of the Chinese Exclusion Acts ten years ago." E. P. Hutchinson

+ — Ann Am Acad 292:178 Mr '54 380w

Reviewed by J. A. Torres

Ethics 64:245 Ap '54 190w

Foreign Affairs 32:675 J1 '54 30w

Reviewed by David Fellman

Nation 178:310 Ap 10 '54 550w

Reviewed by Felix Cohen

New Repub 130:17 Ja 4 '54 1250w

"It is a rare specialist who can write a short and readable book in the field of his speciality, but Dr. Konvitz has managed to do it."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:86 Mr '54 240w

Reviewed by Oscar Handlin

Yale R n s 43:640 summer '54 90w

KOON, RAY MILTON. Out in the open. 239p il $2.95 Little 54-6861

635 Gardening

"The author, an experienced gardener, writes with a fine sense of humor, and his brief chats on such subjects as the improvements of home grounds, planting and care of trees and shrubs, the value of earthworms, cultivation of annuals, perennials and vegetables, how to discourage dog visitors, and raising of seedlings, will guide and encourage the amateur." Library J

Booklist 50:394 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:232 Jl '54 10w

"Sound gardening advice garnished with earthy, humorous anecdotes, makes this one of the most entertaining and yet practical books we have come across." Art Kozelka

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 2 '54 120w

"There are some suggestive lists—but not enough. There are random bits of advice—but uncoordinated. Definitely a book for slow study and absorption, a bit at a time."

Kirkus 22:98 F 1 '54 240w

"Recommended for all gardening collections."

J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:620 Ap 1 '54 120w

"Ray Koon has the rare blend of horticultural training, long experience and kindly, human understanding and outlook upon which this delightful book is built." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 4 '54 80w

"Matters covered in this timely guide, written clearly, informally, and in the style of direct address, are those which Mr. Koon feels will most benefit the average amateur gardener." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6C Ap 25 '54 200w

KORN, JACOB, ed. Boot and shoe production. 627p il $10 Pitman

685.3 Shoe industry

"A British production [which] describes British methods. More attention is given in it to hand operations than to those done on machines although machine operations are included. The book will be only partially useful to persons employed in highly mechanized American factories, but more of it will be of interest to shoemakers engaged in semi-custom manufacture where the emphasis is on high quality and hand operations. It also contains much information that will be useful to shoe salesmen. The book is a revised and reorganized version of an 8-volume series edited by F. Y. Golding and originally published under the title Boots and Shoes: Their Making, Manufacture and Selling." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:559 Mr 15 '54 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:29 Mr '54

KORNBLUTH, CYRIL M. The Syndic. 233p $2.95 Doubleday

53-9984

A novel of the future in which the legitimate United States government has fled into exile in a barbaric Europe, the region west of the Mississippi is ruled by mobsters, and the states of the East are controlled by a Syndic of racketeers.

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 F 28 '54 110w

Kirkus 21:506 Ag 1 '53 50w

"All the factors are well knit in a complex melodramatic plot full of surprises and liberally laced with satire on contemporary conventions and convictions. Like Kornbluth's fine 'Takeoff' (recently reprinted by Pennant) and 'The Space Merchants' it's a grand blend of excitement and thinking—a thoroughly immoral, subversive, stimulating and delightful book." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 O 25 '53 230w

"All in all this vastly entertaining book is a merry gibe at some of our most stubborn beliefs." J. F. McComas

+ N Y Times p37 N 15 '53 230w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ja 17 '54 60w

KOSTA, VICTOR, pseud. See Simenon, G.

KOUSOULAS, DIMITRIOS G. Price of freedom; Greece in world affairs, 1939-1953. 210p $4 Syracuse univ. press

949.507 Greece, Modern—History. World war, 1939-1945—Greece 53-13420

"In 1941 at the age of 18 Dimitrios Kousoulas joined the underground fight against the Germans in Crete; he later fought against the Communists in the Greek civil war. . . This well-written book—which is more a popular than a scholarly work—unfolds before us a story of twofold interest for the present day. It shows how one of the strategic trouble spots of the world can become the focus of international tensions. At the same time the communist intrigues and maneuvers in Greece between 1940 and 1948 offer a lesson to all those who wish to defend non-totalitarian countries against similar attempts at subversion." N Y Times

Reviewed by L. S. Stavrianos

Am Hist R 59:1017 Jl '54 250w

Am Pol Sci R 48:590 Je '54 40w

Reviewed by T. I. Geshkoff

Ann Am Acad 294:226 Jl '54 850w

Current Hist 26:190 Mr '54 40w

Foreign Affairs 32:680 Jl '54 30w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 17 '54 450w

"This story of gallantry in the midst of misery, generosity, altruism and cooperation is well told by one who was a participant in many of the events described in this book." A. O. Sarkissian

+ Pol Sci Q 69:477 S '54 420w

"'The Price of Freedom' is an enlightening approach to the study of recent history of the Balkans and serves admirably to explain the problems confronting this 'crossroads of the world.'" F. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 7 '54 360w

KRAMER, DALE. Heart of O. Henry. 323p il $4 Rinehart

B or 92 Porter, William Sydney 54-9346

Called a "romantic biography" this is a fictionalized account of the life of William Sydney Porter, from early manhood in Ohio and journey to Texas, to his death in New York City.

Booklist 51:107 N 1 '54

"A positive contribution to the annals of American literature."

+ Kirkus 22:559 Ag 15 '54 310w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:1822 O 1 '54 140w

"Mr. Kramer has made the best possible case for the defense, but the defendant emerges as a pitiable rather than as a tragic figure. With all his fine qualities, with all his genius, Will Porter lacked 'that stalk of carl-hemp in a man,' moral fiber." DeLancey Ferguson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 D 5 '54 750w

"As any critic who has disparaged O. Henry's work knows to his sorrow, the admirers of that work, even today, are passionately loyal. They will not be wholly pleased with Mr. Kramer's biography, for his O. Henry is not flawless, but perhaps they will feel that he has tried to do the man justice. Certainly he has portrayed him as one of the sadder figures in the history of American literature." Granville Hicks

N Y Times p12 O 24 '54 390w

"Perhaps this might also have been done in the shape of a standard biography, but a writer chooses his own methods, and Mr. Kramer has chosen his. This is a warm-hearted, very readable interpretation of the man who brought his Baghdad-on-the-Subway to millions who delighted in the little human dramas he found in New York and turned so adroitly into fiction." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 14 '54 700w

KRAMER, DALE—Continued

"What emerges from 'The Heart of O. Henry'—an unfortunate choice of title as it suggests an anthology—is a vivid portrait of a man self-effacing in the extreme, tortured by a feeling of inadequacy and guilt, who nevertheless was able to make a world in which he could function and even attain eminence. It is in this fresh view of Porter that the importance of this book lies." Warren Bower
+ Sat R 37:22 O 9 '54 750w

KRASNA, NORMAN. Kind sir; a comedy in three acts. 167p $2.75 Dramatists 812

"A sophisticated Broadway comedy on the familiar theme of a determined bachelor's capitulation. An actress and a banker engage in a light-hearted liaison of several months' duration, until the prospect of separation awakens them to the realization that theirs is a true and lasting love. Before she accepts the belated proposal, however, the lady takes her revenge for being included in the ranks of lovelorn women her lover has evaded by pretending that he was already married." Booklist

Booklist 51:36 S 15 '54

"Not recommended." George Freedley
— Library J 79:1596 S 15 '54 30w

KRASNER, WILLIAM. North of Welfare. 306p $3.50 Harper
54-8964

"Describes a quite ordinary, unambitious, good-hearted young man, Mike Volkis, who wants to live unencumbered by creatures and possessions and jobs but knows that he is irresistibly drawn toward people who are essentially and overwhelmingly dependent on him. . . In the end, he capitulates, with good, if rueful grace, to a cold girl who seems exceedingly desirable to him, and he marries her knowing that she will drive him relentlessly into the inmost narrow [way] of respectability, and will repay his devotion only by 'improving' him as fast as possible into the conventional, obedient husband she yearns for. The scene is a street in East Harlem, and the action, for the most part, is violent." New Yorker

Booklist 51:109 N 1 '54

"A dossier, which is a direct transcription and an indirect indictment, undemonstrative but by no means ineffective."

Kirkus 22:454 J1 15 '54 170w

"Substantial novel. . . Can be recommended even to young adults who will not be misled by some rough language." M. L. Barrett
+ Library J 79:1504 S 1 '54 210w

"Like most derivative novels of realism, 'North of Welfare' focuses almost entirely on surface action and appearance; motivation is 'given' to the reader rather than developed through narrative. But even the surface is not sharply depicted. A poor photograph may be better than no picture at all, but William Krasner, touching upon a tremendous new area of human conflict, has obscured the potential value of his work with a montage of unessentials." Stanley Cooperman
— Nation 179:493 D 4 '54 270w

"No preaching accompanies the violence, pathology and murder in 'North of Welfare'—which is all to the author's credit. To his credit, too, he has made an essentially unpleasant story not only palatable but gripping. Here the weak are sometimes aided by the strong instead of victimized." Rex Lardner
+ N Y Times p10 D 19 '54 320w

+ New Yorker 30:138 S 25 '54 160w

"The style is one of pseudo-documentary realism reminiscent of that successfully exploited by the TV program 'Dragnet.' But in striving for an organic interaction between character and environment Mr. Krasner fails; the two often seem only accidentally contiguous. And except for a few vivid individual scenes the book is not noteworthy." J. S.
— + Sat R 37:34 N 27 '54 270w

KRAUS, MICHAEL. Writing of American history. 387p $5.50 Univ. of Okla. press
973.07 U.S.—History—Historiography 53-8815

"This book is a revision and expansion of the author's earlier work, History of American History, which appeared in 1937 [Book Review Digest 1937]. The author analyzes the writers and writings of American history from John Smith to Charles A. Beard. Certain specialized historians are deliberately omitted—constitutional, diplomatic, military, naval and religious—hence the appraisal is not exhaustive. However, even though the evaluations vary in penetration and insight, this volume is a useful contribution to American historiography." Library J

"It must be said that the criticisms made of the first edition of this book apply with equal force to the second. Perhaps inevitably, many of the chapters are disjointed. But Professor Kraus has made his task more difficult by the choice of meaningless and unhelpful categories for organizing his material. . . These rather mechanical juxtapositions are a function of the central weakness of the book, an almost total lack of feeling for historical writing as a part of the history of ideas. . . Intellectual history and intellectual historians are obviously not congenial to Professor Kraus. For his own part he gives what many people will be glad to have, an undemanding account, not from within but from without, of what historians have said about America from colonial times to the present." Donald Fleming
Ann Am Acad 295:153 S '54 550w

"Thoroughly rewritten and, in many places, reorganized, it has been expanded to include the new material that has appeared in recent years. The result is an important piece of work that will be consulted for many years by those who read, write, and teach American history." Clarence Ver Steeg

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 14 '54 50w

"Recommended unqualifiedly for special collections, university and reference libraries. At the same time, the readable style and discussion of many historians who are known rather widely, merits consideration of this book for general adult collections as well." James Heslin
+ Library J 79:144 Ja 15 '54 140w

"No serious student of our national origins and development can afford not to have such an aid as this at his elbow." G. F. Whicher
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ja 31 '54 120w

"The American reader knows a good deal of the general background. But the British reader, as scholar and semi-scholar, as chronicler and partisan get each a mention and a mark, is liable to be confused and would be liable to be fatigued were not Professor Kraus an easy and a cheerful writer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p118 F 19 '54 750w

KRAUSE, HERBERT. Oxcart trail. 507p $3.95 Bobbs
54-6495

Historical novel of pioneer days in the middle west. The hero is a young man who escaped from jail after he had been involved in a killing on the Underground Railway. The main part of the story is concerned with Shawnee's adventures after he joined some frontiersmen bound for the Red River settlements in the 1850's.

Booklist 50:359 My 15 '54

"The Oxcart Trail' is a serious and substantial historical novel in which the carefully researched background is more memorable than the characters." Walter Havighurst
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 4 '54 310w

"Mr. Krause has put together in his long, highly readable book, hundreds of small incidents which reveal what is probably a close approximation of the truth." James Gray
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 4 '54 700w

"Mr. Krause has written a lively yarn. He has a nice ear for frontier idiom and a nice eye for the beauty of the half-tamed wilderness. His characterizations—Shawnie, the uncle, a cynical medico, a crusty female grenadier and Dabau, a throwback to the voyageur days—are full-blown and lusty. His novel may not be important in a literary way but it certainly is fun." V. P. Hass

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 11 '54 320w

Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 1 '54 180w

KRAUSS, RUTH (MRS DAVID JOHNSON LEISK). How to make an earthquake; drawings by Crockett Johnson. 28p $1.75; lib ed $2.25 Harper

54-6341

"Do you know how to make a toe drawing? Can you entertain telephone callers? How much fun do you really know how to have at the post office? And in case you want to balance a peanut on your nose, do you know a good way to do it? And, if you come right down to it, do you really know how to make sitting interesting. . . Miss Krauss knows and tells all about these and many, many other activities." Publisher's note

"Only the author of 'A Hole Is to Dig' could think up such amusing, purely childlike activities for the nursery and kindergarten age. And her husband knew just the best way to illustrate them." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 8 '54 100w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13 '54 250w

"Only someone like Ruth Krauss who is very close to little children could think of such an amusing 'how-to-do-it' book for them. It is full of games, tricks and other activities sure to set the nursery and kindergarten age off into gales of laughter." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:179 Je '54 80w

Kirkus 22:229 Ap 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:704 Ap 15 '54 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 30 '54 230w

"Miss Krauss' close understanding of what tickles young children, of how they like to mix reality with make-believe, makes this a new kind of how-to book—a good one for parents to buy, for the nursery school to add to the teacher's library and for the visitor to bring to young children." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p24 My 23 '54 170w

KRAUSS, RUTH (MRS DAVID JOHNSON LEISK). I'll be you and you be me; pictures by Maurice Sendak. [34p] $1.75; lib ed $2.25 Harper

54-9214

"Like her memorable and widely quoted collection of definitions, 'A Hole Is to Dig,' Ruth Krauss' new book draws its inspiration directly from children. Its theme is love and friendship as experienced and expressed at that age when the dividing line between the two is much thinner than in later life. . . Not all the objects of affection are human. Here is expressed a child's deep affection for a toy or an animal, and there is even a 'poem by a tree for some bugs.'" N Y Times

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 14 '54 120w

"On each page is an idea of friendly play or loving inspiration, delightfully accompanied by the line drawings of an understanding artist, Maurice Sendak. The author must have listened with wide open mind to the many children to whom she has dedicated this entertaining little volume." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 14 '54 100w

Horn Bk 30:427 D '54 120w

"Ruth Krauss' imagination mellows with successive books. A Hole is to Dig left us unconvinced that it was really a child's book, but this collection of odd rhymes and sayings has everything; it tickles the funny bone while making grown-ups sense in a child's turn of phrase more than the surface meaning of the words."

+ Kirkus 22:678 O 1 '54 130w

"What a book! Probably the best combination thus far of the Krauss selective reporting on the talk of small children, with the Sendak genius for carrying out their ideas or carrying them further in hundreds of tiny figures. It is a Krauss-Sendak scrapbook, more or less on the theme of love and friendship as the nursery age expresses it in very brief stories, plays, 'poems,' 'mysteries,' dreams, and many potent exclamations stuck into corners of pages." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt 2 p32 N 14 '54 550w

"Certain of the comments and ideas seem extraneous to the main theme—or else they are oversubtle for a mere adult. Doubtless, though, children will grasp their meaning immediately. And anyone of any age will find the reality of childhood in Maurice Sendak's pictures. Small, delicately drawn, they have a force and an ebullience out of all proportion to their size." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p36 O 31 '54 200w

Reviewed by B. B. Thorpe

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 14 '54 100w

KRAVETZ, NATHAN. Two for a walk; pictures by Garry MacKenzie. [45p] $2.50 Oxford

54-12565

Story of two little boys who went for an unauthorized walk visiting a supermarket, a barber shop, a pet shop and a fire house. When their mothers finally caught up with them better arrangements were made for their entertainment.

"The story is well told in short, easy to read sentences. Small children will like the repetition in phrases and action. It is nicely illustrated by Garry MacKenzie." E. S. D.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 14 '54 100w

Kirkus 22:581 S 1 '54 90w

"Story is sometimes retarded by overemphasis on repetition. Recommended for classroom use in first grade when introducing the unit on the community. Similar in theme to A Walk in the City by Rosemary and Richard Dawson but lacks its warmth of family adventure and discovery." Alice Hager

+ — Library J 79:2252 N 15 '54 70w

"The book has a generous number of illustrations which are appealing and the story is well told. However, in spite of its proper conclusion, parents may have qualms about reading this story to the young children for whom it seems to have been written. They may feel that too much emphasis is given to the pleasures the boys enjoyed in their escapade and not enough to the dangers they might have faced." Lois Palmer

N Y Times pt2 p40 N 14 '54 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 14 '54 70w

KRECH, MRS HILDA SIDNEY (GRUENBERG). To wake in the morning. 342p $3.75 Macmillan (N Y)

54-12705

"This is the story of Josie Colcord, 'a nice girl from a nice family.' During her first years at college she is involved in new friendships and romances, but most important to her are two young men: the charming and elusive Barry and the stronger, more ardent Link Frankel. The attack on Pearl Harbor puts both men in uniform. Through the realities of wartime living Josie slowly matures, and comes at last to a firm and singlehearted choice." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

KRECH, H. S. G.—Continued

"Suggestively autobiographical, these young years have a healthy tone and a sentimental timbre."

+ Kirkus 22:406 J1 1 '54 160w

"The events of Josie's life are typical of the time in which they are laid, and she herself is unexceptional in her reactions to them. 'To Wake in the Morning' is a capable, unassuming study of a girl's growth. The setting and the many characters are recognizable and convincing."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 3 '54 120w

"The story of a young girl's adjustment to her environment, to current history and to sex is usually told patronizingly if not nauseatingly. To handle it as the serious experience it is requires a really civilized writer, and in 'To Wake in the Morning' Hilda Sidney Krech has proved that she is indeed genuinely civilized. She writes well too." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p36 O 10 '54 360w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 25 '54 500w

KREDEL, FRITZ, il. Soldiers of the American army, 1775-1954; drawings by Fritz Kredel; text by Frederick P. Todd. rev ed. $12.50 Regnery

355.14 U.S. Army—Uniforms 54-13348

"32 drawings in full color of the uniforms of the American army from Washington and the colonial rifleman to this year's WAC." Time

Reviewed by Lloyd Wendt

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 D 26 '54 250w

Christian Science Monitor p17 D 2 '54 90w

"While it is very difficult to present in 32 plates a history of American uniforms that will please everyone, the authors have done an excellent job. The plates are magnificent and the accompanying text provides a good general background of information. This reviewer's chief criticism of the work would be that rather than devote plates to the WAC and post World War I uniforms it would have been better to have included more on the unfamiliar dress of the Nineteenth Century." A. N. Chamberlin

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 12 '54 950w

"A beautifully colored pictorial collection of the uniforms of 'Soldiers of the American Army: 1775-1954' . . . which makes the military about as attractive at Christmas time in Christmas colors as they could ever possibly look and contains a good deal of information about the outfits that wore these uniforms as well as about the uniforms themselves." John Haverstick

+ Sat R 37:22 D 4 '54 70w

Time 64:133 D 6 '54 20w

KREITLOW, BURTON WILLIAM. Rural education: community backgrounds. 411p il $4 Harper

379.173 Education—U.S. Sociology, Rural. Rural schools 54-8593

"An important contribution to the field of education, this book stresses the close relationship between rural education and rural sociology. Rural education is interpreted to include many rural oriented educational agencies and organizations, such as the Agricultural Extension Service, rural libraries, churches, and farm organizations. The author teaches classes in rural education at the University of Wisconsin." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 50:412 J1 1 '54

Wis Lib Bul 50:173 J1 '54

KREPS, CLIFTON H., and KREPS, JUANITA MORRIS, eds. Aid, trade, and tariffs. (Reference shelf) 202p $1.75 Wilson, H.W.

337 U.S.—Commercial policy. Tariff—U.S. 53-12777

"This volume presents background information and points of view on major issues in the aid—trade—tariffs debates. Selections are grouped in four sections: The 'Dollar Gap' and the Balance of Payments; Our Present Foreign Trade Policy; Freer Trade or Higher Tariffs?; Dollars Through Aid—or Trade?" Library J

Booklist 50:242 F 15 '54

Library J 79:904 My 15 '54 50w

KRICK, IRVING PARKHURST, and FLEMING, ROSCOE. Sun, sea and sky; weather in our world and in our lives. 248p il $3.95 Lippincott

551.591 Weather 54-11246

A meteorologist, head of the Water Resources development corporation which specializes in cloud seeding, and a newspaperman have combined forces on this study of the weather for the layman. Index.

Booklist 51:166 D 15 '54

Bookmark 14:58 D '54 30w

Reviewed by Fritz Leiber

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 D 26 '54 200w

Kirkus 22:653 S 15 '54 200w

"Recommended for general purchase." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:2324 D 1 '54 140w

"As clearly, entertainingly and simply as the basics of weather are here spelled out (and some of the advanced theories, too), the genius of this particular approach to weather is the breadth and maturity of its concept. Perhaps that is possible because meteorologists only now, at long last, are gaining recognition for what they can contribute to our complex society. These authors are among the most forward and certainly among the most articulate of their ranks." W. R. Connole

+ N Y Times p22 N 14 '54 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 21 '54 180w

KRIGE, UYS. The dream and the desert. 223p $3 Houghton

54-3650

"Eight short stories and a one-act play by a South African, a former war correspondent." (New Yorker) Contents: The dream; Death of the Zulu; The invisible shepherd; Two Daumiers; La miseria; The charcoal burners; The coffin; The Christmas box; All roads lead to Rome (a play).

Booklist 51:16 S 1 '54

"Krige's writing combines an air of urgency with the restraints of intelligence and high technical skill: he is like a good driver who travels far and fast, yet securely." Norman Shrapnel

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 2 '53 40w

"While the sentiment may occasionally seem too fragile and the structure too deliberate, 'The Dream and the Desert' is the work of a sensitive South African writer who draws universal meaning from his material."

+ — Nation 179:312 O 9 '54 270w

"This is an absorbing and rewarding book. Mr. Krige writes a graceful and spare English (some of these pieces are translated by him from his original Afrikaans). His descriptions have a vividness and force; his characterizations are firm and individual." Gene Baro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 S 5 '54 280w

"This volume, Mr. Krige's second to appear in English, is uneven in content—a lack of balance emphasized by inclusion of 'The Dream,' an unnecessarily lengthy, sentimental tale about an Afrikaner boy called Jannie.

Fortunately, this entry has little in common with the other stories. . . . At his best, as in 'The Charcoal Burners,' Mr. Krige is very good, indeed." James Stern
+ — N Y Times p11 S 5 '54 400w

"In a couple of the pieces, Mr. Krige shows a weakness for the scuffed legend, but when he does his own inventing or relies on observation and, possibly, memory, he can make the people he writes about . . . believable and appealing, and their backgrounds (and even their virtues) interesting."
+ — New Yorker 30:76 S 4 '54 100w

Reviewed by Penelope Houston
Spec p609 N 20 '53 110w

"A collection of short stories as good as any current in English."
+ Time 64:76 Ag 23 '54 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p673 O 23 '53 160w

KRIPKE, DOROTHY (KARP). Let's talk about God; pictures by Bobri. unp $1.50 Behrman

231 God—Juvenile literature 53-11529

"A sensitive interpretation of what God means to a child in simple verse and prose. Natural questions of children are answered and related to everyday experiences. Unusual and imaginative illustrations in black-and-blue by the gifted Russian artist Bobri. . . . Ages 5-10." Library J

"Recommended for public libraries serving Jewish children." M. M. Gantt

+ Library J 78:2105 D 1 '53 70w

"Mrs Kripke has the rare knack of translating metaphysics into lively prose or clear-cut jingles." Chad Walsh

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 4 '54 100w

KRISHNAMURTI, JIDDU. First and last freedom; with a foreword by Aldous Huxley. 288p $3.50 Harper

181.4 54-6040

Selections from Krishnamurti's writings and recorded talks. Partial contents: Self-knowledge; Action and idea; Belief; Contradiction; What is the Self? Fear; Simplicity; Awareness; Can thinking solve our problems? The function of the mind; Self-deception.

Reviewed by Chad Walsh

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 12 '54 200w

Kirkus 22:352 Je 1 '54 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 20 '54 20w

"Doubtless to the dualist who regards conflict, actual or dialectic, as an unchangeable condition of human life and truth, Krishnamurti's teaching will seem to offer a delusive short-cut to a vaguely beatific freedom. But there is nothing vague about it. It is precise and penetrating."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p317 Mr 14 '54 850w

KROLL, HARRY HARRISON. Long quest; the story of John Wesley. 192p $2.50 Westminster press

B or 92 Wesley, John 53-8356

Written in semi-fictional form "for older younger people and young adults" this is an "account of the life of John Wesley during the fifteen most important formative years of his career; from his student days at Oxford and the formation of the Holy Club—the fore-runner of Methodism—through his early preaching in England, his journey to Georgia and his return to his homeland in 1738 when his long quest was ended as he found God." (Library J)

"The author has a wide knowledge of the times and creates a vivid background for Wesley, making him come alive in a much more popular sense than has been achieved in previous deeply religious erudite biographies. Highly recommended for all libraries." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 79:380 F 15 '54 90w

"Readable and, I believe, accurate. Recommended." R. M. McEvoy

+ Library J 79:565 Mr 15 '54 80w

"At first the dialogue is a bit stilted, whether because Wesley is difficult to imagine or because some of the talk is taken straight from the letters and journal (no way to write dialogue). But the book gains in pace, and without verifying all the details, the reader is persuaded that this is what Wesley must have been like." Paul Ramsey

N Y Times p7 Mr 14 '54 380w

KRONENBERGER, LOUIS, ed. Best plays of 1952-1953; 1953-1954. See Best plays . . .

KRONENBERGER, LOUIS, ed. Cavalcade of comedy; with introductions. 715p $7.50 Simon & Schuster

822.08 English drama—Collections. American drama—Collections 53-9696

"21 brilliant comedies from Jonson and Wycherley to Thurber and Coward." (Subtitle) The dramatists included are: Ben Jonson; Sir George Etherege; William Wycherley; William Congreve; Sir John Vanbrugh; Oliver Goldsmith; Richard Sheridan; Oscar Wilde; George Bernard Shaw; John Millington Synge; W. Somerset Maugham; George Kelly; Sean O'Casey; Edwin Justus Mayer; Paul Osborn; James Thurber and Elliott Nugent; Noel Coward; John Van Druten.

Booklist 50:201 Ja 15 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ja 10 '54 30w

"Most titles in middle-size libraries and therefore this book is not recommended for general library purchase." George Freedley
Library J 79:148 Ja 15 '54 20w

"The editor contributes an excellent brief general introduction and a foreword to each play. There is nothing unreadable in this convenient compendium." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 F 28 '54 140w

"Perhaps because these days the actual theatre is a slight thing, I find myself getting enthusiastic each time I come upon a book of established, time-tested plays. There are plenty of them around, and some are first-rate. At the top of the list I would unequivocally put Cavalcade of Comedy." Harvey Breit
+ N Y Times p25 Ja 17 '54 150w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R 37:40 Jl 17 '54 110w

KRONENBERGER, LOUIS. Company manners; a cultural inquiry into American life. 229p $3 Bobbs

973 [917.3] U.S.—Intellectual life. National characteristics, American 53-9861

A collection of essays on the cultural state of the present-day United States. Partial contents: America and art; The Broadway blues; TV: a prospectus; The decline of sensibility; A note on privacy; The new new-rich; The American sense of humor.

"If Company Manners is pretty consistently critical, it is because, says Kronenberger, 'as a people we go in for self-congratulation enough.' We could do with more critics who can puncture complacency and pretentiousness as penetratingly and as entertainingly as Mr. Kronenberger." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:85 Ap '54 500w

Booklist 50:276 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:157 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by F. E. Faverty

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 21 '54 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 My '54

Nation 178:285 Ap 3 '54 160w

"His book is a witty, trenchant and partly unanswerable diatribe against our civilization, which he calls the age of publicity and anxiety." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 130:19 My 3 '54 700w

KRONENBERGER, LOUIS—Continued

"Lively and sensible essays. . . Louis Kronenberger's new book, would be a good one to send abroad; it would help destroy the legend of American complacency." Gouveneur Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 28 '54 900w

"Beginning at the end, let me say that I have only two minor complaints with this excellent book. The older I get the more allergic I become to the Berlitz school of writing—books filled with Latin, French, Italian and German expressions. . . I am also inclined to be irritated with books in which the organization seems to me to be purely arbitrary. . . With these two minor complaints off my chest, I found 'Company Manners' one of those rare books which justifies the jacket blurb that it is 'a literary and cultural event of the first order.'" Cleveland Amory

+ — N Y Times p6 F 28 '54 800w

"Since Mr. Kronenberger's equipment includes good sense, good grace, and a good eye for wooden nickels, his analysis of our sorry, if not hopeless, plight can hardly be too highly recommended."

+ New Yorker 30:132 Mr 13 '54 170w

"There isn't a page out of the 230 that won't give you something to think over, chuckle at, feel rueful about, or otherwise react to. In fact, this is the book's great virtue. It's a stimulator, whether you agree with every word of it or whether you don't." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 26 '54 650w

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes
Sat R 37:15 Mr 20 '54 450w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p9C My 2 '54 450w

KRUGER, RAYNE. The spectacle. 222p $3
Macmillan (N Y) 54-8535
Mystery story.

"Mr. Kruger is a scrupulous recorder and his spectacle of the august drama of justice in the courts is a controlled and highly proficient performance."

+ Kirkus 22:80 F 1 '54 160w

"An odd, offbeat item, with some perfunctory sex thrown in. Mr. Kruger's English style sounds acquired, not native, and he has evolved some outlandish names for his characters. . . Not essential." E. F. Walbridge

— Library J 79:550 Mr 15 '54 80w

"The characters of two protagonists are explored with remarkable skill. . . Mr. Kruger, a student of criminal law also turns out to be a master at keeping the reader hanging head down over an abyss." Rex Lardner

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 4 '54 360w

"Good first novel." H. C. Webster

+ Sat R 37:19 Ap 3 '54 400w

"If you can believe and be humanly interested in a young man who shuts his detested boss in a safe, and leaves him to suffocate slowly while he spends the evening with friends, you will greatly enjoy Mr. Kruger's excitingly written story. He has the almost lost art of suspense and climax, up to the donning of the judicial black cap—and can spring a surprise even then." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p398 Mr 27 '53 90w

"The merits of The Spectacle, which though it has nothing whatsoever to do with literature, is an effective example of the kind of novel that is a good substitute for a crossword puzzle, far outweigh its obvious defects."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p201 Mr 27 '53 300w

KRUTCH, JOSEPH WOOD. Measure of man; on freedom, human values, survival and the modern temper. 261p $3.50 Bobbs

190 Civilization, Modern. Philosophy 54-6504

"Discussion of man in a mechanistic age, thoroughly cognizant of philosophies of the past, and calling into focus the statements of leading scientists, psychologists and educators of the present day. Man's ingenuity has quite possibly outrun his intelligence and the problem of his survival looms larger and more terrible than it has in earlier periods of history." Library J

"While I was in sympathy with Krutch's intentions and often in agreement with his judgments, I found his book somewhat disappointing. The trouble, I believe, is that he is caught in a dilemma. He is far too sophisticated a thinker to preach salvation through Regression; at the same time he betrays a considerable distaste for most of the content and procedures of modern thought. The result is that he tends to stop short at voicing his grievances against flagrant pretensions and does not come to grips with the really complex problems." C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 193:78 My '54 440w

Booklist 50:311 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:157 Ap '54 40w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 4 '54 420w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ap 15 '54 390w

"A valuable and thoroughly important book, individual and urgent; recommended for college libraries and all others which can find readers for a provocative and perspective study." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:546 Mr 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by R. B. Perry

Nation 178:359 Ap 24 '54 900w

"No reader who shares Mr. Krutch's attachment to the values of a liberal civilization will hesitate to agree with him that a philosophy of man which ignores the decisive role in human history of value judgments and moral responsibility, or which rejects them as meaningless, is both inadequate to the facts and disastrous in its consequences. . . On the other hand, there are good reasons for doubting whether the small handful of writers he singles out for attention are really representative of current trends in the social sciences. Moreover, it is not even superficially plausible that our present moral inadequacies and social distresses have their origin in the alleged mechanical determinism of current social science." Ernest Nagel

+ — New Repub 130:19 Je 28 '54 1550w

"Though he may quarrel with certain details, the thoughtful reader will find Mr. Krutch's views arresting—and, in these days more than ever, welcome them." Marvin Lowenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ap 4 '54 1050w

"Written by a distinguished teacher and critic, and containing telling strictures against the stupidities of a widely prevalent deterministic orthodoxy in modern culture, this volume would be memorable in any event. It is the more noteworthy because its author wrote another widely read and discussed book a quarter century ago entitled 'The Modern Temper.' In it he was as appreciative of the then current skepticism as he is now critical of the contemporary orthodoxies." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 4 '54 1000w

"A lively, sometimes witty, and more often scary Socratic monologue in which the author is brave enough to ask the question 'What is man?' and wise enough to give no positive answer." Brendan Gill

+ New Yorker 30:130 My 22 '54 1000w

"The Measure of Man' is a book to read slowly, to digest, and to wrestle with. I suppose wrestling with an idea—any idea—is more or less out of fashion excepting for the professional thinker. But Man has got himself into a fairly serious state of confusion, and it begins to look as though his only salvation is to think himself out of it. Mr. Krutch's book is a good one to start the reader practicing to that end." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 14 '54 320w

"Mr. Krutch passionately desires that the common man shall comprehend what his 'leaders' are doing to him. . . And, unfortunately, Mr. Krutch trails off into rhetoric precisely where he should be both specific and firm. He measures contemporary literature by 'Moral Discourse' and finds that literature not only petty but committed to the same false premise as the behavioral sciences. But this is about as far as he gets." H. M. Jones

Sat R 37:21 Je 12 '54 850w

"Admirable and well timed as his defense of individualism is, one cannot help but feel that the author, in making what for him must be an almost complete about-face in dialectics, has cluttered his message with all the ghosts of a socio-scientific vocabulary. Obviously, it never dawned on him that disapprobation of this pressing era of scientific impedimenta is not confined solely to the intelligentsia. This is, indeed, regrettable since a great deal of what he has to say deserves to reach a wider audience." Richard McLaughlin

+ — Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 260w

KRUTCH, JOSEPH WOOD. Modernism in modern drama; a definition and an estimate. 138p $2.75 Cornell univ. press

809.2 Drama—History and criticism 53-12534

Six lectures delivered at Cornell University in 1952. In them the author attempts to put forth his ideas on modern attitudes and their presence in modern plays. Contents: Ibsen and the chasm between past and future; Strindberg and the irreconcilable conflict; Bernard Shaw and the inadequate man; Pirandello and the dissolution of the ego; Synge and the Irish protest; How modern is the modern American drama? Index.

"This little book (131 pages), the reprint of a series of lectures delivered at Cornell University, is at least to one reader the most interesting its author has written on the drama. It is stimulating and illuminating—even if one disagrees with large parts of it—because it frankly has an ax to grind. Most dramatic criticism relates to very little outside the drama—hence its triviality." Harold Clurman

+ — Nation 178:203 Mr 6 '54 360w

Reviewed by William Saroyan

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 31 '54 950w

"His book, written with the intelligence and clarity that have characterized all his previously published books, is not so much a work of dramatic criticism as an expression of one highly civilized man's sense of alienation in a world that has tended to defeat his humanistic values. As a humanist's testament and protest 'Modernism' in Modern Drama' merits respectful consideration even by one who, like myself, is not always completely convinced by the analysis of particular plays or playwrights and would have preferred a less general discussion." John Gassner

+ Sat R 37:28 Ja 9 '54 950w

"Krutch writes with enviable lucidity, and the value of the facility he possesses is perhaps nowhere as evident as in his discourses on the function of 'form' in the expression of 'new' ideas and attitudes. . . And where Krutch's sympathies toward an author, as in the case of Strindberg, are slight, the exceptions one is moved to register concern details which qualify rather than invalidate the argument of the book." John Gassner

+ Theatre Arts 38:95 Ja '54 750w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:47 Mr '54 210w

KRUTCH, JOSEPH WOOD, and others. See Is the common man too common?

KRYPTON, CONSTANTINE, pseud. Northern sea route; its place in Russian economic history before 1917; foreword by Michael M. Karpovich. [proc]. 194p pa $2.25 Res. program on the U.S.S.R., 401 W 118th St, N.Y.C.

998 Northeast passage

"An upsurge of interest in the Northern Sea Route is manifesting itself in a growing number of publications on the technical, historical, and economic aspects of the development of the Northeast Passage. . . This latest publication stresses the economic aspects of the sea route. The author is a former director of the economic section of the Northern Research Institute of the U.S.S.R., and he was therefore able to consult Russian archives before leaving the Soviet Union. He constantly refers to source materials, and only a few pages are without footnotes. The valuable bibliography, almost exclusively references to Russian literature, takes up 33 pages. The present monograph covers the period from the middle of the nineteenth century to the Revolution; it will be followed by a volume dealing with the development of the sea route since the establishment of the Soviet regime." Geog R

"Mr. Constantine Krypton, an émigré scholar from the Soviet Union, has in this useful short volume produced a pioneering study on an important subject." D. W. Treadgold

+ Am Hist R 59:711 Ap '54 200w

Reviewed by Sverre Orvig

Geog R 44:312 Ap '54 850w

"The author has uniquely fitted himself to analyze this record, having studied primary manuscripts and other materials in provincial libraries throughout the regions concerned. An ex-citizen of the Soviet Union, now in this country, he presents an excellent example of thorough, apolitical scholarly research."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:23 Mr '54 200w

KRYTHE, MAYMIE RICHARDSON. All about Christmas. 211p $2.75 Harper

394.26 Christmas 54-8965

"With each chapter named for a carol, this small book describes the origins of Christmas traditions and the development of modern customs connected with the season's observance. Bibliography, index." Bookmark

Bookmark 14:32 N '54 20w

"A book largely for reference, schools and libraries."

+ Kirkus 22:567 Ag 15 '54 120w

"Heartily recommended for all public libraries." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 79:1887 O 15 '54 170w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p40 N 21 '54 30w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:31 D 4 '54 30w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 28 '54 300w

KUBIE, MRS NORA BENJAMIN. See Benjamin, N. G.

KUH, MRS KATHARINE (WOOLF). Léger. 121p il col il $5.75 Univ. of Ill. press

759.4 Léger, Fernand 53-13208

"The first comprehensive showing of the work of Fernand Léger to be held in the United States was recently organized by the Art Institute of Chicago in collaboration with the San Francisco Museum of Art and the Museum of Modern Art. Drawn from the catalog of the exhibition, the first half of this book consists of 'an illustrated survey' of Léger's painting. The second half of the volume includes a critique of the artist's accomplishment and a bibliography, prepared by Hannah B. Muller, of his writings, of the important literature about him, and of the books he has illustrated." U S Quarterly Bk R

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ja 31 '54 120w

"Katharine Kuh's art interpretation is always a boon to the layman. . . Better suited to libraries than the Cooper book—if one must choose." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:456 Mr 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by Robert Richman

New Repub 129:21 D 21 '53 50w

Reviewed by Aline Louchheim

N Y Times p4 D 6 '53 50w

KUH, K. W.—Continued

"For all its apparent earnestness, this is an essay which avoids the issues of why Léger is a great painter, of why he paints as he does and of what he has contributed to our twentieth-century vision of the world."

Times [London] Lit Sup p164 Mr 12 '54 700w

"More than seventy-five carefully chosen illustrations, four of them in full color, form the basis of the author's expository and critical review of the art of Léger and of his theories. Mrs. Kuh adroitly incorporates many direct quotations from the artist, and shows how his ideas have developed progressively into a unique mode of expression, one more completely a product of the modern age, perhaps, than that of any other contemporary master."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:413 D '53 280w

KUMLIEN, LAWRENCE L. Evergreens. (Rinehart's garden lib) 91p il $1.50 Rinehart

635.977 Evergreen 54-5327

A "condensed do-it-yourself homeowner's book" on the subject of evergreens. Considers what evergreens to use for various types of houses, discusses each type, and gives cultural suggestions.

Booklist 50:281 Mr 15 '54

Kirkus 21:781 D 1 '53 60w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

Library J 79:207 F 1 '54 30w

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p9 Ag 15 '54 20w

KUNCEWICZOWA, MARIA (SZCZEPANSKA). The forester [tr. by Harry C. Stevens]. 208p $3 Roy pubs.

54-8162

"Novel of Russian-dominated Poland in the 1860's. . . The story itself concerns a rural forester, a Pole by birth, and his grandson, Casimir, who renounces his revolutionary ambitions to come back to his well-loved forest and assume his grandfather's job, after his murder. Though the novel is largely about Casimir's boyhood and young manhood, it is overshadowed by his father's romance with a mad Countess." Kirkus

Booklist 51:41 S 15 '54

"A far country, and another era, recorded with vitality and validity through the thoughts and feelings of those who lived there, then, but for a limited audience at best."

+ Kirkus 22:404 Jl 1 '54 130w

"The author is at her best when depicting through Casimir's eyes Warsaw schools and the confused, tangled lives of Warsaw society. . . There is a spirit and fire in 'The Forester' that does not quite come through. This is due in part to the way the author tells about her people, instead of letting them speak, think and act for themselves." Anzia Yezierska

+ — N Y Times p31 S 12 '54 190w

"A slightly depressing tale, whose moral seems to be that nothing is worth fighting for; but an excellent picture of life, not quickly forgotten."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p69 Ja 29 '54 250w

KUTTNER, HENRY (LEWIS PADGETT, pseud). Mutant. 210p $2.75 Gnome press

53-12601

Science fiction.

Booklist 50:205 Ja 15 '54

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson

New Statesman & Nation 48:554 O 30 '54 120w

"There's occasional good writing throughout, but the cumulative effect of the book is hardly up to its promising beginning." H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p11 Ja 17 '54 130w

"First published in the magazines of 1945, Lewis Padgett's famed series of 'Baldy' stories rank today as the classic exploration of all the ramifications of that inevitable conflict between man and—not superman, but psi-man. Those tales of the hairless telepaths are now gathered together and published as a novel. . . When read in sequence they add up to such a brilliant total that the connecting device added in the present volume seems an awkward, distracting appendage." J. F. McComas

+ N Y Times p17 D 20 '53 300w

"Fine story." Don Fabun

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 27 '53 140w

KYLE, ELISABETH, pseud. See Dunlop, A. M. R.

L

LA CAPRIA, RAFFAELE. Day of impatience; tr. by William Fense Weaver. 207p $3 Farrar, Straus

54-7308

The account of one day in the life of a middle-class adolescent, living in post-war Naples. Experiments with sex occupy most of the story.

Kirkus 22:208 Mr 15 '54 180w

"A mildly entertaining novel. . . Mira, the leading female character, is drawn with considerable care and ability." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:771 Ap 15 '54 60w

"Though serious in intent, 'A Day of Impatience' never really comes to grips with the problems of youth it sets out to explore." Frances Keene

— N Y Times p15 Ag 8 '54 360w

"This is not a book lightly and casually undertaken, though its subject-matter is sensationalist. But within the structure of psychological revelation the termites of impersonalization are at work, and one's feeling is that of being treated to the cold, special accuracy of a clinical report (the protagonist is never named and might well be labeled 'Case 147'), rather than the dynamic, effulgent, often self-contradictory truths of human experience which the novel can give us better than any other literary form." Jerome Stone

Sat H 37:41 Je 19 '54 180w

LADIES HOME JOURNAL. Book of interior decoration, by Elizabeth T. Halsey, with the co-operation of Henrietta Murdock [and] Richard Pratt; contributing ed: Gladys Taber, and designer-contributor H. T. Williams. 237p il $6.95 Curtis; Doubleday

747 House decoration. Furniture 53-10654

"Includes a brief but comprehensive review of period styles in furniture and interior decoration, a section of suggestions for planning and working out a decorating scheme, and a series of photographs intended to stimulate the amateur decorator's choice of color, furniture arrangement, and other details. A practical book for the lower and moderate income groups as well as the antique collector. Includes instructions on the care and cleaning of furniture and accessories." Booklist

Booklist 51:147 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:57 D '54 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p35 D '54

"A superb piece of merchandise as well as a book that should have wide appeal for public libraries in the home decorating departments."

+ Kirkus 22:717 O 15 '54 210w

"[This] has a penchant for Victorian and Modern furniture, which Mr. Nutting's book does not, but it also tells you what to do with them in your room, which Mr. Nutting's book also does not." John Haverstick
Sat R 37:23 D 4 '54 20w

LA FARGE, JOHN. Manner is ordinary. 408p $4.75 Harcourt

B or 92 Clergy—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-5250

Autobiography of one of the sons of the American artist, John LaFarge. The younger John LaFarge became a Jesuit priest and this book is about equally divided between the account of his life as a member of a famous family and of his work as a priest whose interests lay in interracial and underprivileged missions.

Booklist 50:238 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:129 Mr '54 30w

Reviewed by J. M. Gillis

+ Cath World 179:76 Ap '54 410w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 14 '54 370w

Reviewed by C. H. Moehلمان

Christian Century 71:430 Ap 7 '54 750w

Kirkus 21:780 D 1 '53 210w; 22:32 Ja 1 '54 360w

"The book is not only an important Catholic autobiography by a great American; it should be read and treasured by Americans of all faiths. Highly recommended." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:201 F 1 '54 140w

"Father LaFarge is no Jean-Jacques, and what he says about himself would fit snugly into one chapter. But the book is delightfully crammed with other people, seen wisely, realistically and affectionately, even when the author is their critic. They range all the way from humble Negroes in southern Maryland, who would no doubt have gasped with amazement had somebody told them they were to have their names in a book, to sons and daughters of first families, authors, scholars and dignitaries of Church and State." G. N. Shuster

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 14 '54 1050w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun

N Y Times p1 F 14 '54 1700w

Reviewed by Brendan Gill

New Yorker 30:125 Mr 27 '54 480w

"This is not a 'pious' book in the sense in which the word is so often used. It is not a hortatory book, the author is not trying to argue the reader into anything, even goodness. He is simply recording his own life, his world, his duties and how he performed them. But the truth is that you cannot come into close contact with a man of his quality—quite greatness is not too large a term—without having at least some of what he is rub off on you." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 10 '54 500w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

+ Sat R 37:40 Mr 6 '54 800w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:156 Je '54 250w

Wis Lib Bul 50:70 Mr '54

LA FARGE, OLIVER. Mother ditch; il. by Karl Larsson. 50p $2.25 Houghton

631.7 Irrigation farming—Juvenile literature. Farm life—New Mexico 53-10990

"It is actually a geography book, introducing its readers to the deserts of the Southwest. We learn the contributions of the Spanish, get glimpses of the Indian culture, and meet the Romeros, Spanish Americans whose ancestor founded the town of Cerrito. Through their daily life, especially that of their son, José, we see how farming and fruit raising is done, and learn the importance of 'the mother ditch' from which each family's water comes." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:327 Ap 15 '54

"In its simplicity, beauty and veracity it is an admirable piece of Americana." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 190w

"A finely descriptive and simply written text." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:188 Je '54 130w

+ Kirkus 22:113 F 15 '54 150w

"Less restrained style of writing and larger print would have made the book more appealing to the general reader. Author is eminently fitted to write authoritatively, and the book will be useful where material on the subject is needed." A. B. Martin

+ Library J 79:563 Mr 15 '54 80w

"It is an unusual book to supplement any study of America that goes on in grades five to eight." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 2 '54 170w

"The prose is frequently evocative, the information is plentiful but the narrative as a whole lacks the feeling of immediacy which makes a book memorable." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p28 My 9 '54 90w

Sat R 37:60 My 15 '54 230w

Time 64:88 Ag 9 '54 30w

LA FOLLETTE, MRS BELLE (CASE), and LA FOLLETTE, FOLA. Robert M. La Follette. 2v 1305p il $15 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 La Follette, Robert Marion, 1855-1925 53-13106

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by J. D. Hicks

Am Hist R 59:652 Ap '54 1050w

"While not the definitive biography, this voluminous contribution to recent Americana will be welcomed as a rich source of information about the life of this courageous American." G. C. Osborn

+ Ann Am Acad 292:163 Mr '54 350w

"Biographers are notably prone to make heroes of their subjects and no one could accuse these authors of being unbiased. But they have tried to be objective and have shown real restraint in handling men who unfairly attacked their husband and father. Any student of American political history in the period they cover will have to give careful attention to their account." D. M. Richardson

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 14 '54 550w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 26:122 F '54 900w

Foreign Affairs 32:508 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by M. L. Fausold

Social Educ 18:235 My '54 850w

"Warmly written and extremely detailed biography."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:157 Je '54 370w

Wis Lib Bul 50:28 Ja '54

"This biography of La Follette, the first part by his modest and percipient wife, the rest by his equally percipient and modest daughter, does not wholly satisfy men. La Follette was a greater figure than appeared over the domestic tea table. . . . The biography is too long, too detailed. We ought to have a Plutarch's Life of La Follette, fifty meaningful pages, for youth and the hopes of youth. But in the meantime, my homage to the authors of a work which brings to me vividly the greatest American of my time." Alvin Johnson

+ Yale R n s 43:447 spring '54 600w

LA FONTAINE, JEAN DE. Fables; tr. by Marianne Moore. 342p $5 Viking 841 Fables

54-6427

A new translation of the La Fontaine fables by the American poet, Marianne Moore. All 241 fables have been translated in this work which was begun in 1945. Index of titles and first lines in English.

Booklist 50:415 Jl 1 '54

LA FONTAINE, JEAN DE—Continued

Reviewed by Nicholas Joost

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 6 '54
240w

Reviewed by Kathleen Cannell

Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 1 '54
650w

"Frequent and loud though the announcements of its publication have sounded these past few years, Miss Moore's translation of La Fontaine's Fables proves no disappointment, but rather the exciting and important literary work we had hoped for." Nicholas Joost

+ Commonweal 60:395 Jl 23 '54 1250w

"Though not listed in the juvenile catalog, this is a book which should be in every American household, so children might grow up with it as they do with Shakespeare. This is one of humanity's treasures of wisdom. In spite of difficult words or turns of sentences, it can be readily assimilated by young children."

+ Commonweal 61:200 N 19 '54 100w

"In ministering for a delightful predecessor of wily, penetrating wit, Miss Moore, high poetic priestess that she is, infuses the fables with the complex and concentrated flavor of her own style and candid humanism. Yet she is entirely faithful to La Fontaine, and in her moments of effacement we come to admire Miss Moore more than ever."

+ Kirkus 22:149 F 15 '54 180w

"This work has been in the mill since 1945 and the few pieces which have been published in periodicals or heard in Miss Moore's public readings have already given us something to look forward to, for here was the modern poet whose temperament and literary art made her the perfect choice as the modern spokesman for these ingenious studies in human behavior." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 79:1232 Je 15 '54 120w

"It is the general rightness of the tone that makes Miss Moore's rendition remarkable. Her own witty pedantry, dry precision, and passionate sense of form are so nearly identical with La Fontaine's that they go far toward overcoming all objection. Nevertheless, one is too often conscious of what a hard time Miss Moore is having with her details, which, like her language, are constantly being buffeted about by the overbearing demands of the rhyme. Hardly a poem is free of rhyme-forced breaks in word order and idiom, or of rhyme-forced paddlings and tautologies. Nor is the rhyme itself always happy." John Ciardi

+ Nation 178:525 Je 19 '54 300w

"Marianne Moore's translation of La Fontaine's 'Fables' has been in preparation for eight years. Excerpts from it have appeared in a dozen periodicals and had mixed reception. Reading the book in its entirety, one finds oneself confronted with two questions. Does it add to Miss Moore's stature? Does it make one of the greatest of French poets accessible to the English reader? The answer to both these questions is a qualified yes." Ramon Guthrie

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 4 '54
750w

"These translations are neither La Fontaine, since the language is not his, nor Marianne Moore in the full poetic sense. They remain translations, performed with exceptional fidelity to the original text. The free verse form, with its mixed meters and the prevalent twelve and eight syllable lines, is maintained scrupulously in the English. In the length of line and in order of lines, Miss Moore patterns hers as closely as possible on the French. Yet the outstanding technical achievement of these translations is the recasting of the complex interplay of rhymes." Wallace Fowlie

+ N Y Times p1 My 16 '54 1250w

"Because of Miss Moore's gifts of serious, yet witty, precision, we now have La Fontaine in a modern English idiom, and we may well apply ourselves to the lessons he has to teach." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 30:75 S 4 '54 550w

"Miss Moore's solid achievement is to have brought over a number of the 241 poems virtually intact, and (by dint of persevering with the least tractable) to have discovered the principles of a badly needed idiom, urbane without slickness and brisk without imprecision." Hugh Kenner

+ Poetry 84:356 S '54 2700w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 18 '54
430w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum

Sat R 37:16 Jl 24 '54 1100w

"Admittedly, most La Fontaine precepts are as sound as Ben Franklin's. . . The fables he borrowed from Aesop in La Fontaine's hands became tart and graceful satires on society, with neat plots and sharp blackout punch lines. But whether they lend themselves to English translation is another matter. Marianne Moore is the only first-rate poet who has ever undertaken to do the whole job. How much better she has done than the standard translators becomes quickly apparent."

+ Time 63:108 My 24 '54 750w

LAGERKVIST, PAR FABIAN. Eternal smile, and other stories; tr. by Alan Blair, and others. 389p $4.50 Random house

53-5017

A collection of the shorter prose works of the author of Barabbas (Book Review Digest 1952), winner of the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1951.

"With the exception of several of the shorter pieces, which seemed to me unimpressive, this is a striking collection. It unfolds to us a fictional world powerfully charged with the terror, the mystery, and the anguish of man's fate; but powerfully charged, too, with a belief in the supreme value of life for its own sake." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:85 Ag '54 650w

Booklist 50:451 Jl 15 '54

"At the risk of sounding merely captious, this reviewer would say that the long stories could profit from considerable pruning and the short tales are far too brief for full impact. One has a sense, too, of how far from the current of European literature the author is in use of theme and structure." Riley Hughes

Cath World 180:73 O '54 250w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 20 '54
340w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag ■ '54
120w

"In general, I would warn readers who do not take kindly to the Scandinavian twilight against most of the longer pieces in this volume—especially 'The Hangman' and 'The Masquerade of Souls.' As 'The Eternal Smile' contains a surprise or two near the end and may be considered Lagerkvist's most interesting foray into pseudo-theology, perhaps these impatient readers should struggle through it anyway. To my mind, Lagerkvist's symbolism is most effective when rooted in explicit realism." Vivian Mercier

+ Commonweal 60:346 Jl 9 '54 1000w

Kirkus 22:294 My 1 '54 200w

"Whether these stories deal with the inner meaning of life, or the constant battle between good and evil, whether they treat of totalitarianism, or take a backward glance at childhood, they have a soberness, a mysticism, and a spiritual awareness which is not common to our own fiction. They have a strong moral tone, but they are not preachy, or full of platitudes. Unfortunately, they will lack general appeal, but they will add greatly to the author's reputation in this country. Highly recommended for all public libraries collecting serious fiction." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1225 Je 15 '54 130w

"Lagerkvist's work may not always be fiction as the technician would have it, morality as the moralist would have it, or theology as the theologian would have it. But it is a grand and towering landscape of the human soul, challenging as thought and memorable art." Stanley Cooperman

+ Nation 179:94 Jl 31 '54 500w

"A distinguished artist, Lagerkvist is here in his strength and in his weakness. Since that strength is in an area seldom explored now, it is doubly valuable." Tom Fitzsimmons
+ New Repub 131:18 Jl 12 '54 1150w

"This magnificent quality of direct observation and quiet narrative, this imminent kindness and love, are in all Pär Lagerkvist's stories. But there is something else, which in some of his writing, in the title story particularly, is disturbing. It is a kind of extraordinary, overblown and deliberate metaphysical confusion about the meaning and the desperate unhappiness of the human condition. . . But none of the few unsatisfactory tales in 'The Eternal Smile and Other Stories' lacks great passages of the deep love and insight into human nature which are the luminous qualities of this serious writer." Gouverneur Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 13 '54 950w

Reviewed by Mark Schorer

N Y Times p4 Je 13 '54 1050w

New Yorker 30:99 Je 19 '54 80w

"It is impossible to do Lagerkvist justice in a brief commentary. Regardless of subject and method, his stories bear the unmistakable authenticity that we associate only with the great. And in spite of their preoccupation with the dark, the violent, the sinister, and the terrible, these stories are an affirmation rather than a denial of man's dignity and goodness, his need for love, his striving for a meaning and a justification." William Peden

+ Sat R 37:13 Jl 10 '54 550w

Time 63:92 Je 28 '54 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 50:210 O '54

LAILDLER, KEITH JAMES. Introduction to the chemistry of enzymes. 208p $5 McGraw

612.015 Enzymes 53-11479

"Written particularly for biochemistry students at undergraduate level. Includes kinetics and mechanism of enzyme action and structure of the enzymes in their active and denatured forms." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

Chem & Eng N 32:1507 Ap 12 '54 20w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:990 My 15 '54 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:41 My '54

LAIR, JOHN. Songs Lincoln loved; with an introd. by William H. Townsend. 85p $3.75 Duell

784.8 Lincoln, Abraham. Songs 54-6876

"A collection of Lincoln's favorite songs, arranged and edited by a Kentucky folk singer. Lincoln, whose own vocal talents were meager, loved songs of the type that coaxed tears from nineteenth-century Americans. Here are Negro minstrel songs, love ballads, hymns, spirituals, and play party songs, arranged within a short biography of Lincoln, and illustrated with reproductions of the covers of the original sheet music. The small musical notation and the frequent lack of piano scores make this an album for study rather than playing of group singing." Booklist

Booklist 50:414 Jl 1 '54

Reviewed by Helen Henley

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 26 '54 270w

"An appealing theme and presentation for family music-making and for Lincolniana-Americana collectors."

+ Kirkus 22:181 Mr 1 '54 110w

"Will be useful in libraries for questions bearing on the times (e.g. music appropriate to plays, parties, etc.) as well as on Lincoln." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:1592 S 15 '54 60w

"None of this is surprising, of course, in the Lincoln who is so familiar and so much loved, but it is a most interesting and hitherto unexplored facet of his character. . . All you need is a piano and a few willing voices to spend an hour or so with history." R. F. H.

+ Springfd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 250w

LAKE, ALEXANDER. Hunter's choice; true stories of African adventure. 254p il $3.50 Doubleday

799.2 Hunting—Africa 54-7319

True stories of the author's own experiences in Africa. Some are humorous, others more serious. Emphasis is on the hunter rather than on the hunted. No index.

Booklist 51:9 S 1 '54

Bookmark 13:235 Jl '54 30w

Reviewed by Bob Becker

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 3 '54 200w

Kirkus 22:301 My 1 '54 200w

"Highly recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:2106 N 1 '54 50w

"One of the best aspects of Mr. Lake's book is the emphasis he puts on human characterization. An experienced raconteur he may be forgiven if he remembers just a few too many details of so many episodes."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 29 '54 140w

"When this reviewer read 'Killers in Africa,' by the same author, he considered it one of the finest books ever written on African hunting. The present book proves that Mr. Lake can surpass himself." R. R. Camp

+ N Y Times p7 Je 20 '54 750w

"In the main this is a fat package of true stories of hunting adventure, and the reader will find Mr. Lake a highly skilled teller of tales. Unexpectedly, he is a culinary expert on top of the rest." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 26 '54 550w

"Completely unique—within the range of this reader, at least—is the portion of 'Hunter's Choice' that describes African birdlife. . . For his money, Mr. Lake would hunt birds in preference to anything else. His description of how to shoot the huge bustard is graphic. His directions on how to stuff and cook it are priceless. That is one particularly likable feature of Mr. Lake's tome. He covers the end-product of hunting, which other hunters leave disdainfully alone, namely, how to prepare the game for the table." H. C. Adamson

+ Sat R 37:12 Jl 10 '54 450w

Wis Lib Bul 50:178 Jl '54

LAMB, HAROLD. Charlemagne; the legend and the man. 320p $4.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Charlemagne 54-5368

"A reconsideration, based on contemporary sources, later studies and to some extent on sympathetic imagination. The author's expressed intent is to portray the real Charlemagne as distinguished from the more chivalrous and miraculously-endowed creature of legend." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 50:319 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 28 '54 260w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 8 '54 500w

Kirkus 22:54 Ja 15 '54 240w

"A lively and readable biography against a convincing background. . . Will be enjoyed by the author's large following and should help students as well. Public and college libraries." Dorothy Sinclair

+ Library J 79:546 Mr 15 '54 140w

"Harold Lamb has cultivated to a rare degree the talents required for this type of interpretation. He knows how to go backward in time to lands where time was backward and move within the contracted horizon of alien, half-barbaric minds. He makes his readers feel the darkness and despair of the eighth century." Geoffrey Brunn

LAMB, HAROLD—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Mr 28 '54 550w

"While Mr. Lamb has succeeded in skilfully assembling and using a rich material, this very material sometimes threatens to gain the upper hand. It might well be that a somewhat more thorough psychological approach would have brought Charlemagne closer to the general reader. Thus the chief merit of this book is not so much that it renders a final picture and verdict but rather that it stimulates interest in Charlemagne and his time." Rene Fuellep-Miller

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 28 '54 850w

"Mr. Lamb makes a credible person out of one of history's most incredible figures. At the same time he deftly and colorfully paints in the background." G. A. Barker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 11 '54 600w

"His story makes, by all odds, Mr. Lamb's best book. I cannot guarantee its detailed accuracy. The Frank king was born more than 1,100 years ago, and any attempt to reach deeply into his interior must be in good part guesswork, however well it is documented. But Mr. Lamb's guesswork is certainly convincing." T. C. Chubb

+ Sat R 37:9 Mr 27 '54 1050w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 210w

Wis Lib Bul 50:133 My '54

LAMB, HAROLD. Genghis Khan and the Mongol horde; il. by Elton Fax. (Landmark bk) 182p $1.50 Random house

B or 92 Jenghis Khan—Juvenile literature 54-5164

"From his boyhood on the barren plains of the Yakka Mongols to his old age and death, Genghis Khan was one of the world's most successful military leaders. Harold Lamb's story of his life is set against the strange and colorful backdrop of Asiatic life more than seven centuries ago." N Y Times

Chicago Sunday Tribune p32 N 14 '54 30w

"Harold Lamb has rewritten for young people, in his usual vivid panoramic style, his earlier account of the Mongol leader, Genghis Khan. It takes real skill to depict an epoch of so different a region and time in this gripping way. He does not romanticize, but the drama of the events carries the reader swiftly along." Millicent Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:492 Ag 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

N Y Times pt2 p20 N 14 '54 60w

LAMB, LAWRENCE (LELAND W. LAWRENCE, pseud.) ed. Family book of best loved short stories. (Hanover House bk) 498p $2.95 Garden City bks.

Short stories—Collections 54-5421

Contents: The gold-bug, by E. A. Poe; Rapaccini's daughter, by Nathaniel Hawthorne; A Christmas carol, by Charles Dickens; Rip Van Winkle, by Washington Irving; The outcasts of Poker flat, by Bret Harte; The celebrated jumping frog of Calaveras county, by Mark Twain; The real thing, by Henry James; The gift of the Magi, by O. Henry; Marjorie Daw, by T. B. Aldrich; The lady or the tiger? by F. R. Stockton; In the fog, by R. H. Davis; A lodging for the night, by R. L. Stevenson; The man who would be king, by Rudyard Kipling; The necklace, by Guy de Maupassant; A passion in the desert, by Honoré de Balzac; Verotchka, by Anton Chekhov; Our lady's juggler, by Anatole France; The adventure of the speckled band, by A. C. Doyle; The doll's house, by Katherine Mansfield; A gray sleeve, by Stephen Crane; The secret sharer, by Joseph Conrad; Plum pudding and mince pie, by A. D. Miller; Land, by Sinclair Lewis; The killers, by Ernest Hemingway; The leader of the people, by John Steinbeck.

Booklist 50:240 F 15 '54

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 14 '54 50w

"An estimable collection. . . As for their appeal to the whole family, the members who are only casually interested may find it difficult to get the volume away from the bookworm member who demands quality and readability." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6C F 28 '54 250w

LAMB, LYNTON. Preparation for painting; the purpose and materials of the artist. 166p il $4.25 Oxford

751 Painting—Technique 54-11993

"The nine chapters deal with prospects, training, subject matter, color, drawing, painting from drawings, direct painting, equipment, and materials. The author has written well on the subjects of training, color, and is particularly informative. His chapter on subjects is 'must' reading for the beginner." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 51:57 O 1 '54

"A well written, informative book. Mr. Lamb is correct when he states in the introduction that his book 'is a reading book rather than a handbook of recipes.' There are no recipes for success in art. It is observation and practice, and more practice." K. C. Parris

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 23 '54 270w

Manchester Guardian p4 S 10 '54 60w

"There is ample discussion here of purpose and method, also of the artist's materials with special reference to oil painting. Like most textbooks on art, we expect, this volume is offered by the author as 'the book he himself has always needed.' There is much about the book that does have that sense of extreme individuality. And happily, when Lamb compiles a glossary of artist's terms, he confines them to those used in his own book and makes them doubly useful. In art, Lamb makes clear, individuality is all. 'The artist invents for himself the skill he needs.'" D. A. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 10 '54 350w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p620 O 1 '54 230w

LAMBERT, ELISABETH. Father couldn't juggle. 184p $3 Coward-McCann

B or 92 54-6536

Reminiscences of an English girl whose father was a salvage master in Kingston, Jamaica. The anecdotes of her childhood are flavored with quiet humor.

Kirkus 22:98 F 1 '54 120w

"Some incidents are amusing, descriptions of native servants and customs are colorful, but the writing seems self-consciously effervescent and the humor is often too obviously forced. Recommended only for popular libraries where light reading is needed." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 79:620 Ap 1 '54 90w

"Miss Lambert has drawn a highly engaging portrait of a family, each member of which has his own accent of individuality. Her writing, smooth and polished, carries the mood of a tenderly remembered childhood." Carol Field

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 20 '54 410w

LAMBERT, JANET. Cinda. 190p $2.75 Dutton

54-6823

Story for ages ten to fourteen, about Cinda, a friendly fourteen-year-old. During a summer spent on the New Jersey coast Cinda manages to bring her cousin Linda into the family group, which is quite an achievement.

Kirkus 22:201 Mr 15 '54 180w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:704 Ap 15 '54 30w

"There's plenty of long-sweetening in this concoction, but it is offset by some lively dialogue and amusing family scenes." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p30 Ap 25 '54 150w

"A refreshing story of family life." S. M. Neal

+ Springf'd Republican p5C S 5 '54 80w

LAMBOURNE, NORAH. Dressing the play [pref. by Dorothy L. Sayers]. (How to do it ser) 96p il $4.50 Studio

792.92 Costume. Theaters—Stage setting and scenery 54-8909

Practical discussion of costuming and setting a play, amateur or professional. Contents: The producer, the designer and the use of colour; The importance of shape in costume; The wardrobe of adaptable garments; Fabrics and surface decorations; Stage jewellery, masks and costume accessories; Costume accessories; Dress rehearsals and costuming the modern play; Costume from contemporary painting. The author is at present staff tutor with the British Drama League. Bibliography.

Booklist 50:454 Jl 15 '54

"Highly recommended for costume, art and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:985 My 15 '54 20w

"The British author has had considerable experience in costuming both professional and amateur plays and shares her findings in simple language."

+ School Arts 54:51 S '54 150w

LAMBURN, JOHN BATTERSBY CROMPTON (JOHN CROMPTON, pseud). Ways of the ant; with 8 drawings by J. Yunge-Bateman. 242p $3.50 Houghton

595.796 Ants

54-9507

"John Crompton, the Englishman whose excellent 'The Life of the Spider' appeared in the United States three years ago, has brought together many of the discoveries of this continuing study in 'Ways of the Ant.' To them he has added his own observations in England, Africa and the Orient. . . It is, in the main, up to date, although research is moving rapidly, and such an exciting discovery as the fact that some ants, like Von Frisch's honey-bees, are able to orient themselves by means of polarized light is too recent to be included." N Y Times

Booklist 51:34 S 15 '54

"With wit, power of description, and the charm of a cultured mind, Mr. Crompton, opens for the reader a world beneath one's nose, so to speak; an insect world almost as complex and at least as efficiently organized as that in which human beings dwell, largely ignorant of the ants beneath their feet." H. B. Ellis

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 13 '54 500w

"The author of The Life of the Spider (1951) has written an even more fascinating book on ants. . . Recommended for public libraries."

E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:1507 S 1 '54 90w

"Unlike some professional scientists, Mr. Crompton does not pretend to know the unknowable, and that is one of the merits of his book. . . He is an exceptionally well informed layman and can meet the lay reader on a common ground." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Ag 15 '54 750w

"Aside from an addiction to emphasis by italics the author's style is relaxed and easy. He proves himself a pleasant companion, thoughtful, tolerant, widely read and widely traveled. An unobtrusive sense of humor runs through the book, but it is never witty at the expense of balance or truth. 'Ways of the Ant' is a serious work written with a light touch. For the general reader it is one of the very best of the many introductions to the life of a creature that, with the single exception of the honeybee, is the most written about of all insects." E. W. Teale

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 8 '54 550w

New Yorker 30:68 Jl 31 '54 120w

"As light entertainment this book will doubtless prove popular if only because of its vigorous, rollicking style. The drawings by Yunge-Bateman are of an unusually high standard and have a dynamic quality that makes them worthy of a less disappointing text."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p157 Mr 5 '54 450w

"Not for reference use, but for general reading."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:204 O '54

LAMKIN, SPEED. Easter egg hunt. 312p $3.50 Houghton

53-7078

"A Hollywood story. The narrator, who tells it in the first person, is a magazine writer, and it deals with the troubles of an assistant producer whose wife is unfaithful and a young woman alcoholic whose elderly millionaire husband wants her to become a star." New Yorker

"As a whole, Mr. Lamkin's novel is not quite as impressive as its cast or elaborate inner machinery. The reason for this lies in the fact that for all of its detailed feeling for social life in the movie colony, and the brilliance of some of its scenes, the book doesn't contain any new insights of why such people waste themselves or run amok." Seymour Krim

Commonweal 59:607 Mr 19 '54 700w

Kirkus 21:720 N 1 '53 180w

"Mr. Lamkin writes an easy prose that does give it freshness, and makes the whole outlandish story highly entertaining. Recommended for large fiction collections." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 78:2212 D 15 '53 140w

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson

New Statesman & Nation 48:590 N 6 '54 100w

"Mr. Speed Lamkin's 'The Easter Egg Hunt' is a James-M.-Cainish novel about the seamier side of Hollywood, called for purposes of geography 'the tense, glittering, eager world of Beverly Hills.' Those who have lived in Beverly Hills without finding it tense, glittering, eager or even a world, will read Mr. Lamkin's story with no more incredulity than one about Peoria or Park Avenue. . . Mr. Lamkin writes as if he had no time to lose, and handles both plot and character with a good deal of skill." James Hilton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 28 '54 700w

"A disappointing performance. Essentially a gay and even frivolous account of life in Beverly Hills and told by a smug person who is attached to the Hollywood bureau of Life magazine, the novel has all the glitter, and none of the depth, of a sugared meringue." J. N.

— N Y Times p25 Mr 7 '54 350w

New Yorker 30:116 F 27 '54 40w

"Although the overtones from Fitzgerald and Philip Barry are uncomfortably insistent, Mr. Lamkin's attempt at a forced entry into their hallowed and well-heeled demesnes should not be altogether derided." Nicolas Monjo

Sat R 37:18 Mr 6 '54 320w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong

Spec p562 N 5 '54 180w

"This is on the whole a solemn book, with occasional flashes of humour which make one suspect that Mr. Barrett could be very funny in another vein."

Times [London] Lit Sup p725 N 12 '54 300w

LAMOTT, KENNETH CHURCH. White sand of Shirahama. 223p $3 Little

54-8282

"Tells of the explosive effect on a colony of vacationing missionaries at a Japanese seaside resort of a couple of gin-and-tonic hounds, Sam and Kate Kirby. The Kirbys are trying through a violent change of setting to salvage their shaky marriage. Another outsider in the tight missionary group is Paul Thatcher, who becomes something more than merely an interested observer as he finds himself dabbling in adultery with lovely Ellen Marlowe." Sat R

Kirkus 22:274 Ap 15 '54 120w

"Most of us will go along with the Robin Hoods who rob the rich to give to the poor, etc., etc., but few will buy the theme of this story—that adultery is o.k. provided the cuckold is wacky or a nincompoop. . . The story is well-told and the scene as accurate as a Hiroshige print; Lamott knows Japan and he knows missionaries. Libraries with comprehensive fiction collections will not want to miss this novel." R. H. Dillon

Library J 79:1052 Je 1 '54 150w

"All of this could be high comedy, which it rarely is except for the scenes centered on Fujii, the coldly objective young Japanese who observes the antics of the foreigners; or it could move on other levels of conviction, but it fails to do this, for Mr. Lamott has never made his characters more than two-dimensional. Luckily, one group of persons, Stevie and his friends Bettie Watson and Fred Fechner, move through the events with a complete sense of reality." J. J. Espey

— + N Y Times p4 Jl 18 '54 550w

"Because Mr. Lamott writes about people with insight, with pity, and with remarkable vigor and freshness, this novel will take you out of yourself for a little while. Perhaps it will also leave you with some new understanding of what life is about. The reader of honestly written fiction can hardly ask for more than that." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 14 '54 500w

"The author, born in Japan of missionary parents, has written a startling expose of missionary mentality and motives. . . The book maintains a comfortable philosophical undertone throughout. . . There is freshness of phrasing without literary affectation. The reader is spared the sprinkling of Japanese words and expressions that would have been irresistible to another author. One may or may not agree with Mr. Lamott's views on missionaries and their work, but his own background makes it impossible for dissenters to claim that he does not know what he is writing about." L. H. Crockett

+ Sat R 37:12 Jl 24 '54 800w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 8 '54 320w

LAMOTT, WILLIS CHURCH. Revolution in missions; from foreign missions to the world mission of the church. 228p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

266 Missions

54-12118

"This book by a former missionary in Japan outlines the transition which is taking place within our churches: the growth from 'foreign missions' to 'world missions' within the church. While the 'foreign' aspects of the missionary movement are treated in detail, the author states that the 'underlying assumption is that nothing is foreign that concerns our mission to take Christ to our disordered world.' Dr. Lamott discusses the changing forms of missionary work, the life of the Younger Churches, and the Younger Churches and the World Church." Library J

Booklist 51:54 O 1 '54

"Recommended for all libraries with readers interested in the subject." E. H. Weeks

+ Library J 79:1498 S 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p39 S 26 '54 10w

LAMPMAN, MRS EVELYN (SIBLEY). The runaway, by Lynn Bronson [pseud]. 209p $2.75 Lippincott

53-8907

"When fifteen-year-old Zack deserts his father's Oregon farm in 1848 to join the Army at Fort Columbia, he attains, instead of independence and glory, kitchen detail in Captain Ulysses S. Grant's quarters. Later, as Grant's orderly, he is no nearer fame, and when it is learned that he is underage, he gladly returns home, filled with new self-respect and self-discipline." New Yorker

Booklist 50:262 Mr 1 '54

Kirkus 21:432 Jl 15 '53 90w

"Good background of early Oregon when the Hudson Bay Company's influence was waning and Indian trouble still threatened. Usable for most collections for boys 11-14." F. K. Jones

+ Library J 79:72 Ja 1 '54 70w

"Although Zack's career is so different from that of the traditional swashbuckler, the perceptive reader will find his story consistently diverting, realistic and a refreshing change from the average pioneer story." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 31 '54 220w

"Boys of eleven and over will enjoy the wry humor of this vigorous story, with its unusual perspective on the gold-rush days and famous figures of the old Northwest." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 29:192 N 28 '53 90w

LAMPMAN, MRS EVELYN SIBLEY. Witch doctor's son; il. by Richard Bennett. 249p $2.75 Doubleday

54-10765

Story of a young Rogue River Indian boy, captured by an enemy tribe and sold as a slave. The boy's only friends were a white boy and the men sent by the Government to establish an Indian reservation. Tom's great achievement was his attempt to bridge the gap between the Indians and the white men.

Booklist 51:156 D 1 '54

Kirkus 22:486 Ag 1 '54 130w

"Very well written, with a background of Indian wars and agency work which doubtless is based on fact. Richard Bennett's decorations add much to the bookmaking." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p26 N 14 '54 20w

"This is an excellent story of the Rogue River people."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 28 '54 90w

"Many of the characters are drawn from history, and the story is full of exciting incidents which were a real part of the settlement of the West. Mrs. Lampman's unusual perception has brought to this story overtones and a sensitiveness of treatment which, with the good story-telling should make it of interest to a wide age range of young people." R. H. V.

+ Sat R 37:92 N 13 '54 220w

LANDAU, ROM. Among the Americans. 219p il $4.50 British bk. centre

973 [917.3] U.S.—Description and travel.
National characteristics, American

[54-24912]

"Rom Landau is a cultivated and well-traveled English gentleman, a leading authority on Moroccan affairs. . . During the winter of 1952-1953 he revisited the U.S. in order to attend the United Nations Moroccan debates and to teach for a term at the American Academy of Asian Studies in San Francisco. He also lectured all over the land, met and talked to hundreds of Americans of varied ages and interests. The result had to be a book about America." (Sat R) Index.

"What he has to say about Morocco, and about American reactions to the problems of imperialism, is of some interest. . . When Mr Landau leaves the question of Morocco to describe the United States itself his book becomes banal to a quite astonishing degree." D. W. Brogan

— + Manchester Guardian p4 F 26 '54 490w

"'Among the Americans' is an entertaining book, but like most of his predecessors Mr. Landau occasionally trips." W. M.
+ — Sat R 37:49 Ap 17 '54 240w

LANDIS, PAUL HENRY. So this is college.
205p $3.75 McGraw

371.422 Students, Colleges and universities
53-10618

"An introduction to the common problems of social and personal adjustment on the college campus, directed to the younger college student and the teen-ager. Quoting liberally from the autobiographies that students have submitted to him in the classroom, the author shows how typical students have overcome problems of moral, economic, and sexual adjustment during their early years in college." Booklist

"Despite the tendency of many academicians to dislike and often ignore the fact, it still remains that one of the functions of a modern college and university is custodial rather than educational. In its role of parent surrogate the institution of higher learning needs, perforce, to perform for some students the kinds of service for which this book is intended. In the hands of the needful student—but clearly not of all students—the book may well turn out to be exceedingly useful in a number of ways." J. F. Cuber

Am Soc R 19:640 O '54 480w

Booklist 50:291 Ap 1 '54

LANDIS, PAUL HENRY. Your dating days; looking forward to happy marriage; foreword by Helen Judy Bond. (Whittlesey house publication) 155p il $2.50 McGraw

301.42 [392.5] Courtship. Marriage. Family
54-8100

A professor of sociology at the State college of Washington presents the problems of dating and marriage for teen-aged readers. Partial contents: Personality needs and dating; Understanding the other sex; When should I marry? Marriage plans and military service; Guides in choosing a mate; Selecting a "One and Only"; Making marriage work; Getting together on money matters. Index.

Booklist 51:44 S 15 '54

"Open-minded approach to personality, understanding the other sex, choosing a mate, when to marry, how to make it work, sound handling here. . . Though the book will do good for both sexes, implicitly it lends itself to women, for with their changing roles the problems still seem mostly theirs. . . A solid guide book."

+ Kirkus 22:314 My 15 '54 210w

"Thoughtful, well-integrated, and realistic." R. H. Urban

+ Library J 79:1674 S 15 '54 70w

"Based on the author's earlier textbook, 'Your Marriage and Family Living,' this book is neither preachy nor stuffy. Loaded with good, sound, quotable common sense, it might well be required reading for every high school boy and girl." L. T. Bulman

+ N Y Times p34 S 26 '54 220w

"This book, practical and sound, should leave young people with the idea that a happy marriage is not a romantic accident, but comes from a sharing of responsibilities and a desire to make it a success." Norma Rathbun

+ Sat R 37:26 D 25 '54 150w

Reviewed by D. W. Hamilton
Social Educ 18:380 D '54 250w

LANDON, CHRISTOPHER. Flag in the city.
216p $3 Macmillan (N Y)

54-13166

Tale of adventure and international intrigue in Persia during World war II.

Booklist 51:152 D 1 '54

"Plenty of surface action in this one-man-hurricane narrative."

Kirkus 22:643 S 15 '54 150w

"A well written, entertaining novel. . . A wealth of historical, geographical and social detail carefully introduced, form a vivid Persian background. Recommended." C. R. Gough
+ Library J 79:1890 O 15 '54 120w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p42 N 28 '54 130w

"A fast, romantic, excellently plotted adventure story."

+ New Yorker 30:234 D 4 '54 40w

"This is a straight-forward adventure story with a bold hero, a sympathetic Intelligence colonel, a lovely lady and an elusive villain. It is competently written and the war-time Persia of hills and plains and desert is well observed. An intriguing system of clues unites the plot, and when all is discovered and apparently lost the excitement rises to a climax on the precipitous railway. There should be more adventures to follow, for Mr. Landon is certainly a talented writer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p341 My 28 '54 200w

LANDSBERG, PAUL LUDWIG. Experience of death [and] The moral problem of suicide; tr. by Cynthia Rowland; foreword by Martin Jarrett-Kerr. 102p $2.50 Philosophical lib.

218 Death. Suicide 53-13404

"The author, though of an old Jewish family, was brought by his parents to be baptised by a Protestant pastor. Had he not died, aged 43, in a German concentration camp, there seems little doubt that he would have sought admission to the Roman Catholic communion." Manchester Guardian

"I found the first essay profoundly interesting. Fr Jarrett-Kerr is rather doubtful in his attitude to the essay on suicide. I read it with pleasure. Whatever our final conclusions may be it is surely our duty nowadays to face the problem of euthanasia."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 30 '53 250w

"In these essays there is nothing profound. Some of the treatment is unnecessarily heavy: occasional sentences are too lengthy, their phrasing awkward. There is an absence of simplicity and lucidity in Landsberg's style, whatever be the language. But the papers are unusually impressive by reason of the author's integrity of mind and of his desire to consider any argument, from whatsoever source, without trace of wilfulness or pride of intellect. As Frenchman observed, 'his [Landsberg's] was measured intelligence.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p821 D 18 '53 950w

LANE, CAROL. Traveling by car; a family planning guide to better vacations. 238p il pa $1 Simon & Schuster

910.2 Automobile touring. Travel. U.S.—
Description and travel 54-5819

Partial contents: Planning the trip; Vacation wardrobes; All-weather driving; Roadside repairs; The touring infant; Traveling with pets; Camping; Remembering your trip. More than a score of appendices listing information about such matters as zoos and aquariums; major rodeos; National parks, etc.

Reviewed by Hal Foust

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1597 S 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p32 My 1 '54 50w

"Every last notion ever handed a front-seat driver has been gathered in 'Traveling by Car,' a paperback guide to automotive travel. Miss Lane is the house name bestowed on its women's travel director by the Shell Oil Co. She, or they, write a weekly tips-for-touring column which is given free to newspapers all over the country. While there are no bald plugs for Shell, the overall idea is to make automotive traveling a more desirable activity." H. A. S.

Sat 37:33 Ag 21 '54 190w

LANE, FERDINAND COLE. All about the insect world; il. by Matthew Kalmenoff. 141p $1.95 Random house

595.7 Insects—Juvenile literature 54-7000

Partial contents: What is an insect? An insect's curious life cycle; Butterflies of many colors; Beetles—big and little; The praying mantis; Queer sticks that walk; Our friends the bees; The wasps and their queer ways; Those wonder workers the ants; Swat that fly! When insects roamed with dinosaurs.

Reviewed by John Lewellen

Chicago Sunday Tribune p30 N 14 '54 50w

Kirkus 22:446 J1 15 '54 130w

"All About the Insect World is brief, its style is lively, and its colorful jacket and large size will appeal on the counter." L. S. Bechtel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt 2 p28 N 14 '54 40w

LANE, FRANK WALTER. Nature parade. 333p il $5 Sheridan

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of. Animal locomotion 53-12496

Collection of facts and observations concerning the habits of animals, set down in popular style. Materials are divided into "private lives" dealing with food, toilet making, sleep, etc; "speed and locomotion" of mammals, fish, birds, insects; and "mysteries."

Booklist 50:373 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:217 Je '54 20w

Reviewed by Bob Becker

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 4 '54 150w

"A storehouse of valuable statistics, entertainingly written and easily understandable to readers of all ages." B. F. K.

+ Springfield Republican p8C J1 25 '54 120w

LANE, FREDERICK A. Flag for Lafitte (story of the battle of New Orleans); il. by Leonard Vosburgh. (American heritage ser) 191p $1.75 Aladdin

54-6150

"The Creole youth Philip Duvall may be said to symbolize the conflicts in the hearts of the national groups—French, French-Acadian, Negro, Spanish, Anglo-Saxon—in the New Orleans area in 1814. Philip's antipathy to the new American Government is shaken by the generous patriotism of the French-born pirate Lafitte; it is swept away entirely by the personality of Andrew Jackson. The boy willingly takes his part in the defense of his city—for the United States." N Y Times

"This lively book must be one of the best in the American Heritage Series." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '54 90w

Kirkus 22:438 J1 15 '54 130w

"Mr. Lane does a masterly job with the Battle of New Orleans." Eithna Sheehan
+ N Y Times pt2 p26 N 14 '54 90w

"Frederick Lane is a San Franciscan who knows his sea and has a nice way of sketching history. How authentic his supposition that Lafitte was born in France or that it was Jackson's decision to accept Lafitte's help at New Orleans that made victory possible, is not important. The elements in Lane's capable hands make a good story with very real history at its base."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 14 '54 200w

LANE, FREDERICK A. Greatest adventure; a story of Jack London; il. by Sidney Quinn. (American heritage ser) 192p $1.75 Aladdin

B or 92 London, Jack—Juvenile literature 54-6151

A biography of Jack London from his school days to the time when he sold his first story. For young readers.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p28 N 14 '54 20w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '54 120w

"Melodramatically told, but definitely the kind of book that beckons to The Call of the Wild rather than the call of the comics."

Kirkus 22:438 J1 15 '54 110w

"He is superb when he writes of the young Jack London in 'The Greatest Adventure.' . . Adults will advance this criticism: While Jack London is not perfect in the story, there is no suggestion of the serious personal shortcomings that marred his short life." Eithna Sheehan
+ — N Y Times pt 2 p26 N 14 '54 70w

"Boys and girls of high school age who have aspirations to write, or who have a yen for an adventure story that takes the hero across the country riding the rails, whaling in the Pacific, and gold mining in Alaska, cannot fail to enjoy this skillfully written biography of one of California's greatest authors."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 14 '54 50w

LANG, DANIEL. Man in the thick lead suit. 207p $3.50 Oxford

539.76 Atomic energy 54-10001

A group of articles reprinted from the New Yorker. They are portraits of some of the men connected with atomic development, and observations on their work.

Booklist 51:1; 7 S 1 '54

Chem & Eng N 32:4417 N 1 '54 20w

Reviewed by Fritz Leiber

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 12 '54 500w

"This book is an absorbing series of essays, written cleanly and quietly. . . There are ten brilliant pieces, preceded by a short, superb introduction by Eric Sevareid, himself one of the great idea-realists of this brooding era." T. E. Cassidy

+ Commonweal 60:614 S 24 '54 420w

Kirkus 22:508 Ag 1 '54 180w

"Required reading, for every library." E. M. Obler

+ Library J 79:1498 S 1 '54 140w

"Mr. Lang is a master of a certain kind of reporting, and the thing that gives his book such homogeneity as it does have is the honest 'New Yorker' reporter's tone—even, constrained, lucid, with a faintly class-conscious disassociation of the writer from his subject matter." John Lardner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 12 '54 650w

"This book is the product of a skilled interviewer who knows what questions to ask and how to ask them. It should provide an excellent reference for future historians interested in authentic observations on the confused state of philosophy and ethics in the middle of the twentieth century." John Pfeiffer

+ N Y Times p7 S 12 '54 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 14 '54 550w

"Applying a light touch to things atomic is Daniel Lang's specialty. 'The Man in the Thick Lead Suit,' his latest contribution to the nuclear folklore, is a potpourri concocted of New Yorker magazine ingredients, slightly warmed over. Just as a skilful chef blends improbable and diverse viands into palatable fare, Lang crams shepherders, nuclear physicists, and Las Vegas gamblers between the covers of a single book. The result is appetizing reading." R. E. Lapp

+ Sat R 37:33 O 2 '54 850w

"In an age dominated by the applications of science, the rare gifts of Daniel Lang in understanding science, understanding the scientist, and in sympathetically describing what technology can do to an individual or a community are valuable indeed." J. H. Wolfenden

+ Yale R n s 44:295 winter '55 380w

LANG, THEO. originally THEO LANGBEHN (PETER PIPER, pseud). Corpse that came back [Eng title: Death in the Canongate]. 248p $2.75 Random house

54-9031

Detective story.

"Original and colorful." Drexel Drake
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 29 '54
50w

Kirkus 22:372 Je 15 '54 80w

"Mr. Piper, a debutant with some extra-curricular experience, a taste for sustained sentences and a meticulous affection for the City of Edinburgh is decidedly agreeable. He sets up one of those self-solving mysteries from this astonishing gambit and takes his time about it. What emerges is placid excitement rather toothsomely decked out in an affectionate set of notes about Edinburgh." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 29 '54 160w

"At once a charmingly written light novel and a love song to the city unsurpassed outside of the writings of William Roughhead. If you enjoy the musical-humorous-human detective stories of Edmund Crispin or L. A. G. Strong you should reckon Peter Piper as one of 1954's brightest discoveries." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 29 '54 90w

"High good humor, deft characterization, fast pace, fine travelogue." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 37:37 S 18 '54 20w

LANGER, WILLIAM LEONARD, and GLEASON, SARELL EVERETT. Undeclared war, 1940-1941; pub. for the Council on foreign relations. (World crisis and American foreign policy) 963p $10 Harper

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. World war, 1939-1945—Diplomatic history 53-7738

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"The book makes contributions appealing to each reader. This one found particularly fresh the account of the successive dilemmas confronting Hitler, the picture of wartime Russia, staring defeat in the face but still graspingly demanding far-reaching political agreements as a necessary prelude to military cooperation in saving her own existence, the convolutions of Japanese-American negotiations in the last days, and the portrait of a far-from-all-wise American chief executive. The writing is always lucid but seldom lively. The successful attempt to be encyclopedic at times leads to long discussions of important but peripheral areas and problems and detracts from the total impact of the work. At the risk of asking for something which the authors may have deliberately avoided, this reader at least would have profited by a chapter of conclusions and some comment on the sources." L. E. Ellis

+ — Am Hist R 59:960 Jl '54 480w

Reviewed by M. B. Travis

Ann Am Acad 293:164 My '54 400w

"The second volume of this magistral history of American foreign policy prior to Pearl Harbor deals with the period following the Destroyer-for-Bases Deal of September 1940. As in the preceding volume, American policy is put in its global setting with much skill and insight."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:331 Ja '54 50w

"One suspects that the book's impact on European readers will be different from the impact it may have had at home. For Americans the most important thing will be, perhaps, that it disposes of the legend that President Roosevelt deliberately provoked the Pearl Harbor attack in order to drag an unwilling country into war. For Europeans, the interest may lie rather in the evidence it provides of the extreme unwillingness of Roosevelt to take decisions which meant another step nearer war." Max Beloff

+ Spec p77 Ja 15 '54 700w

"The Undeclared War has all the qualities which made The Challenge to Isolation required reading for all historians and students of the war period. The two authors (the method of their collaboration is not disclosed, but the work reads smoothly and uniformly throughout) have had apparently untrammelled access to the records of the State Department, and much—indeed, most—of their narrative is based on hitherto unpublished material."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p68 Ja 29 '54
600w

"Specific aspects of these developments in American diplomatic history have been written about before, but there is no comparable authoritative account. Anyone who seeks an understanding of American policy during this period simply must read this volume because of its comprehensiveness, its balance, and its objectivity. Based on unpublished and published sources, the work is thoroughly documented, and it is very well written."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:30 Mr '54 240w

LANHAM, EDWIN MOULTRIE. Iron maiden. 376p $3.95 Harcourt

54-6387

Novel of the newspaper world in which Carolyn Brown, a small town girl on the make, is the central character. The scene is New York city.

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 S 5 '54
300w

"A tense drama of a small town girl with cosmic ambitions, of the power, and politics, of sex, this is entertainment, experienced rather than exclusive, and with a strong popular potential."

Kirkus 22:367 Je 15 '54 180w

"It seems hard to find so few virtues in so many pages; but slick competence (if you can call that a virtue) seems to be about the only one." Isabel Quigley

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 21 '54 90w

Reviewed by Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 22 '54
410w

"With Edwin Lanham, who has been writing novels since the mid-Thirties, the reader is in the hands of a pro. Although there is a certain amount of corn to keep the story moving, and a somewhat embittered ending, all the characters get the full treatment. The author's Freudian flensing knife strips his cast, sometimes a little too cleanly, to reveal various parental and sibling dominations, loves and hatreds." Herbert Mitgang

+ N Y Times p21 Ag 22 '54 400w

New Yorker 30:139 S 25 '54 120w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

Sat R 37:16 Ag 21 '54 900w

Reviewed by John Metcalf

Spec p418 O 1 '54 250w

"How Carolyn Brown used the power she acquired through marriage comprises a tale of journalistic adventure which contains the true essence of printers' ink. The background is starkly authentic and it has excitement and wholesome interest." B. F. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54
80w

LANSING, MRS ELISABETH CARLETON (HUBBARD). Jubilant for sure; il. by Ezra Jack Keats. 148p $2.50 Crowell

Dogs—Legends and stories

54-5539

A sequel to Shoot for a Mule (Book Review Digest 1951). Jeb, who lives with his grandmother and his Uncle Raff, has two great desires: to own a dog, and to have an animal hospital in Granny's woodshed. After some disappointments he gets both. For grades four to six.

Booklist 50:383 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 29 '54
90w

Kirkus 22:112 F 15 '54 120w

LANSING, E. C. H.—Continued

Reviewed by Averil Randall

Library J 79:1237 Je 15 '54 50w

"The characters, with the exception of the villainous Tom (who reforms for purposes of ending the story) are real and convincing. I do hope, though, that Jeb's animal hospital doesn't give young readers any ideas, as they used to say. . . The illustrations are uncluttered, and have humor and warmth." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 25 '54 120w

LANSING, MRS. ELISABETH CARLETON (HUBBARD). Lulu's window; il. by Grace Paull. 148p $2.50 Crowell

54-9149

When Libby Barnes moved with her family into the parsonage in Danford, she was uneasily aware from the start of the lingering personality of Lulu, the girl who had had her room previously, who still controlled the actions of the neighbor girls, who was called "that remarkable child" by all who had known her. How Libby, unhappy and lonesome, remains true to her own ideals and finally wins a place for herself is told in this story for early teenagers.

Booklist 51:156 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:13 O '54 10w

"Observant, perceptive and funny."

+ Kirkus 22:384 Jl 1 '54 100w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 7 '54 220w

"'Lulu's Window' combines a brisk story of family fun, mishaps, loyalties and squabbles with a mystery that unravels to a satisfactory conclusion. Sharp contrasts in the personalities of the four girls make this an excellent character study for young readers." Rose Friedman

+ N Y Times p50 N 7 '54 120w

"The author has written the book for readers under twelve, but also those in their early teens will find it good reading. Humor, suspense, pathos, and realism are woven into the story in generous portion." L. W. Raley

+ Sat R 37:76 N 13 '54 130w

LANSING, MARION FLORENCE. When Washington traveled; il. by Corydon Bell. 224p $2.75 Doubleday

B or 92 Washington, George—Juvenile literature 54-5176

A biography of Washington for junior high school readers, which weaves the life story on the thread of Washington's travels—"as a pioneer, a statesman and a private gentleman."

Horn Bk 30:106 Ap '54 100w

Kirkus 21:761 D 1 '53 70w

"The book shows evidence of much research and thought and will be an excellent supplement to the Eaton and Foster biographies. Corydon Bell's illustrations are clever and descriptive; the style of writing is clear and vocabulary well chosen." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 79:389 F 15 '54 80w

"Inevitably we connect it with Mt. Vernon, and it would be a fine book to precede or follow a twelve-year-old's visit to that stirring place." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 21 '54 40w

"While the switch from travel to career is distracting and abrupt at times, the book is still a rewarding experience." G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times p28 F 14 '54 100w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 14 '54 130w

LAPOLLA, GARIBALDI MARTO. Mushroom cook book. 128p il $2.95 Funk

641.5 Cookery (mushrooms)

53-10387

"Besides more than 100 different recipes using mushrooms, there is a discussion on the buying, handling, and the preparation of the cultivated mushrooms available in American markets. Information on the use of imported and domestic dried mushrooms and the canned variety is also included." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by Madeline Holland

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 F 7 '54 60w

"Even the lovers of mushrooms will be surprised at their versatility, and if you once look at this book—well, try it, and see." G. P. Lancaster

+ Christian Science Monitor D 3 '53 150w

"Fine little book of recipes. . . The essay on the mushroom that precedes its uses is most valuable." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 78:2217 D 15 '53 60w

Reviewed by Lawton Mackall

Sat R 37:38 F 13 '54 40w

LARGE, JOHN ELLIS. Think on these things. 127p $1.75 Harper

241 Christianity

53-10972

Lenten reading, in which the rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, New York city, discusses the tendency to "care too much for the wrong things," and suggests ways to acquire a new sense of Christian values.

Booklist 50:231 F 15 '54

"Succinct, understanding little book."

+ Bookmark 13:104 F '54 40w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p17 Ja 31 '54 20w

Wis Lib Bul 50:62 Mr '54

LARIAR, LAWRENCE. Fish and be damned; or, The night crawler's companion [by Adam Knight, pseud; il. by the author]. 128p $2.95 Prentice-Hall

817 Fishing—Anecdotes, facetiae, satire, etc. 53-11911

Humorous aspects of the art of fishing served up in prose and cartoons.

Booklist 50:235 F 15 '54

"This is the funniest book one could present to a rod and reel fan. The illustrations are just as amusing as the text." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p42 D 1 '53 30w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1060 Je 1 '54 50w

Reviewed by G. G. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 31 '54 50w

LARKIN, OLIVER WATERMAN. Samuel F. B. Morse and American democratic art. 215p $3 Little

B or 92 Morse, Samuel Finley Breese

54-8284

During the first half of his career Samuel F. B. Morse was known as a painter, specializing in portraits. This biography stresses that part of Morse's life. Index.

Booklist 51:39 S 15 '54

Bookmark 13:233 Jl '54 20w

"Scholarly."

+ Kirkus 22:284 Ap 15 '54 150w

"The book is not well written; it sounds like an inadequate summary or abstract of a much longer work. Not recommended for library purchase." J. R. Willingham

— Library J 79:1222 Je 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by Carl Bridenbaugh

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Jl 25 '54 550w

"The narrative is lean but not too spare to fit its subject clearly and convincingly in its historical context. The book, which gives a balanced account of Morse, is pleasant to read and, with its notes and index, convenient and helpful to use as a reference." Marshall Davidson

+ N Y Times p6 Je 27 '54 800w
New Yorker 30:75 Jl 10 '54 190w

"Professor Larkin writes about Morse with the same authority, penetration and brilliance of style that brought him the Pulitzer Prize for his 'Art and Life in America'." Alfred Frankenstein

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 28 '54 600w

"Of necessity, in such a volume biography must be the keynote, and Professor Larkin gives much more space to life than works. As a biographer, he writes graciously, but does not cut deep." J. T. Flexner

Sat R 37:19 Jl 10 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 1 '54 220w

LARSEN, EGON. American in Europe; the life of Benjamin Thompson, Count Rumford. 224p il $4.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Rumford, Sir Benjamin Thompson, count 53-13519

Biography of Benjamin Thompson, Count Rumford, the son of a Massachusetts farmer, who gained his fame in England, Bavaria, and France. Among his many activities Count Rumford (1753-1814) was a pioneer in domestic science; the creator of the modern theory of heat; the inventor of soup kitchens and the kitchen range; the first nutrition expert; and the discoverer of Humphry Davy. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Michael Kraus

Am Hist R 59:972 Jl '54 240w

Booklist 50:238 F 15 '54

"The book is noteworthy as being written in a more popular style than its predecessors and in painting a fuller picture of Rumford's complex personality and private life. . . Writing the biography of such a man has inherent difficulties, for his immense versatility demands an unusual catholicity of interest in the reader, but the balance has been admirably preserved." T. J. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 14 '53 300w

"Brisk, businesslike, and wonderfully entertaining study."

+ New Yorker 29:108 F 15 '54 320w

"A short, neat biography." Whitney Balliett

+ Sat 37:32 Ap 17 '54 250w

"The career of Count Rumford overflows with material for a biographer. Mr. Larsen has contrived a useful reconstruction of this strange man's character, though his book would have gained by amplification of detail and a greater subtlety of treatment."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p302 My 11 '53 850w

LARSEN, EGON. Men who shaped the future; stories of invention and discovery. 223p il $3.50 Roy pubs.

926 Inventors. Inventions 54-6925

These "stories of invention and discovery" include sketches of the lives and works of Eli Whitney, Samuel Morse, Henry Bessemer, Lord Kelvin, Alfred Nobel, Igor Sikorsky, and others.

Booklist 50:455 Jl 15 '54

Kirkus 22:122 F 15 '54 60w

"Useful collective biography title for all libraries and good collateral material for junior-senior high history and science." F. K. Jones

+ Library J 79:1327 J1 '54 90w

"Although the style suggests the popular magazine article, and the subjects are sometimes 'boosted' in rather a transatlantic manner, the thrills, set-backs and successes of discovery are graphically conveyed. In the school library it should prove a useful quarry of facts for the enforced essayist; perhaps it may also have the additional merit of discouraging others from devoting further works to its subjects."

Times [London] Lit Sup pvii My 28 '54 150w

LA SAUDEE, JACQUES de BIVORT de. See Bivort de la Saudée, J. de

LASKI, MARGHANITA. Victorian chaise longue. 119p $2.75 Houghton

54-5695

Melanie, the young wife of a London barrister, purchased a Victorian chaise longue in an antique shop. Then one spring afternoon Melanie, who was convalescing from tuberculosis, decided to take a nap on her recent purchase. In a nightmare she was transferred back to 1864, and thought herself one Milly Baines, dying of consumption. With Milly's death Melaine was released.

Booklist 50:420 Jl 1 '54

Bookmark 13:237 Jl '54 30w

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 27 '54 140w

"For Melly, this long sleep is indeed a tortured time, but for the reader, presumably feminine, it is at best a catnap—and a tour de force of more skill than substance."

Kirkus 22:249 Ap 1 '54 160w

"A dangerous theme, and dangerous treatment that might easily have tipped into the absurd; but Marghanita Laski is masterly at handling uncertain material, and this strange, short novel shows with quiet but almost ferocious power the minutely observed distortions of nightmare. Here is anything but a repetitive novelist." Isabel Quigly

Manchester Guardian p4 O 23 '53 100w

Nation 179:158 Ag 21 '54 240w

"Mélanie's frantic efforts to force herself back to the present, her confused identity, the sharp physical reminders that what she is experiencing appears to be real, give one a genuine feeling of nightmare. Unfortunately, though the dream or the experience are vividly conveyed, the characters in the Milly sequence are hardly more than conventional Victorian dummies." Antonia White

New Statesman & Nation 46:739 D 5 '53 140w

"Miss Laski's writing is polished and persuasive; her idea is an interesting one, but there is something that she is trying to say which eludes the reader. Highly successful in creating a mood of mystery, she leaves the mystery unsolved." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 13 '54 460w

"In telling the story of Melanie-Mildred the English author of 'The Village' and 'Little Boy Lost' conducts the reader through a subdued, evenly paced nightmare." Kenneth Fearing

N Y Times p22 Je 13 '54 430w

"If ever there was a tour-de-force of its kind, this is one. It's a little jewel of horror, and not to be missed." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 16 '54 700w

"Despite shaky foundations Miss Laski's story holds up to the end because she has succeeded in creating a mood of somber despair." Robert Minton

+ Sat R 37:40 Ag 14 '54 150w

Time 63:118 Je 14 '54 440w

"It is not a very original story, and the tedium of its telling is only relieved by the extremely disagreeable details about a consumptive's death with which Miss Laski has furnished it."

Times [London] Lit Sup p705 N 11 '53 70w

Wis Lib Bul 50:181 Jl '54

LASKY, VICTOR, ed. American legion reader.
See American legion magazine

LATHROP, DOROTHY PULIS. Puffy and the seven leaf clover [il. by the author]. 34p
$2.50 Macmillan (N Y)

54-8881

Picture story book about a Pekingese puppy who stumbled over a dandelion puff and bumped his nose on a seven leaf clover. After that Puffy could see countless things his little mistress could not see, to her amazement. For pages 5 to 8.

Booklist 50:346 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:162 Ap '54 10w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 15 '54
60w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 13
'54 40w

"To be thoroughly appreciated the story needs to be read aloud with an adult and a child looking at the book together. The ten full-page illustrations and the many smaller drawings are all so exquisite that in each one every tiny detail as well as the effect of the whole is perfect." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:171 Je '54 120w

"If read aloud, will appeal to highly imaginative children in grades 3-5." M. M. Gantt
+ Library J 79:786 Ap 15 '54 90w

"This beautifully told gentle little tale will delight small girls with precious puppies of their own. When it is read aloud to them, at about four to six or seven, they will gather a happy sense of looking closely at out-of-door things, which are shown so perfectly in the many pictures, as a background for the various two-color portraits of the lovable, characterful puppy." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 16 '54
110w

Reviewed by C. E. Van Norman

N Y Times p20 Je 13 '54 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 16
'54 60w

Wis Lib Bul 50:215 O '54

LATOURETTE, KENNETH SCOTT. Christian world mission in our day. 192p $2.50 Harper 270.8 Missions. Church history—20th century 54-5852

"Dr. Latourette, a missionary of many years' experience and a Christian teacher with many academic honors, draws a picture of world missions. With most of the unchristianized world either closed or menaced by communism, what is left? Much, replies this veteran of field and classroom: Work in our own corner, be patient, be prepared, seek the entering wedge, and God will give the fields if we give the workers." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 50:390 Je 15 '54

"Latourette is a well known writer in Protestant circles and the urgency of the subject gives this book special appeal."

+ Kirkus 22:189 Mr 15 '54 130w

"Challenging and optimistic."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:126 My '54

LATTIMORE, ELEANOR FRANCES. Holly in the snow; il. by [the author]. 125p $2.25
Morrow

54-5002

Story of a Christmas vacation on a farm in New England where little Holly goes to visit her grandparents and where the family is marooned for several days by a blizzard.

Booklist 50:302 Ap 1 '54

Kirkus 22:33 Ja 15 '54 60w

"Capable second-graders can read this well-written story which should be of interest to children in grades 1-5. Author's characteristic black-and-white illustrations add charm to the story. . . Recommended." H. E. Walker

+ Library J 79:562 Mr 15 '54 80w

"Once again Miss Lattimore has given us a delightful, gentle story for little children. . . Although the lack of urgency in the story does not spoil its charm, a greater sense of climax and of family feeling might have been established had Holly been worried that the blizzard could prevent her parents—rather than just a new sled—from arriving on Christmas Day." Jeanne Massey

+ N Y Times p14 My 30 '54 140w

LAURITZEN, JONREED. Ordeal of the young hunter; with il. by Hoke Denetsosie. 246p
$2.75 Little

54-8313

"The boy Jadhik thinks much about the need to conquer an evil cougar, Old Two-Toes, who has killed too many sheep; and he considers carefully the pros and cons of performing at the All-Indian Intertribal Powwow at Flagstaff. Each deed could bring him glory; each would take courage. How he accomplishes both, not too quickly nor too easily, makes a story that grows in power." Horn Bk

Booklist 51:90 O 15 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p28 N 14 '54
150w

"A fine introduction to the conflict between old and new ideas and to the situation of the Indian today. Most of all, a sensitive portrait of a growing boy." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:333 O '54 130w

Kirkus 22:312 My 15 '54 100w

"Mr. Lauritzen, a native of this part of the West, hitherto has written only adult fiction. Mr. Denetsosie, his friend, has illustrated only two other books, the primers for Navajo children by Anne Nolan Clark. Together they give us the best Indian book of the year, or of several years, for younger boys and girls."

L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p3 N
14 '54 430w

LAWRENCE, DAVID HERBERT. Sex literature and censorship; essays, ed. by Harry T. Moore. 122p $3 Twayne

824 Sex in literature

53-13129

"Mr. Moore has assembled eight Lawrence essays, reportedly out of print, and launched them as 'the Areopagitica' for the literature of love." They range from the earnest but lightly handled Making Love to Music to the impassioned Pornography and Obscenity, in which Lawrence charges his censors with responsibility for 'hole-and corner' and 'smoking-room' obscenity. Moore's introduction gives an incisive account of Lawrence's collisions with self-designated but government-supported censors and brief notes on the time and circumstances of each essay." Nation

Reviewed by Mary Freeman

Nation 178:506 Je 12 '54 320w

"To one already familiar with the essays that Harry T. Moore has so usefully brought together in this volume, the most immediately impressive matter is contained in Mr. Moore's introduction, which is concerned not so much with the essays themselves as with the occasions of the essays. . . We have never needed these essays more than now. Lawrence was not primarily concerned with political censorship, but attitudes toward politics and attitudes toward sex are by no means discrete. The relationship is profoundly implied in the quotation with which Mr. Moore begins his introduction." Mark Schorer

+ New Repub 130:21 Ja 18 '54 750w

LAWRENCE, LELAND W., pseud. See Lamb, L.

LAWRENCE, MRS MILDRED (ELWOOD).
Dreamboats for Trudy; il. by Robert Frankenberg. 183p $2.75 Harcourt

54-8573

Fifteen-year-old Trudy goes to Europe with her mother, her mother's new husband, and the latter's two children. The adventures of the trip and Trudy's relations with her new family combine to make a longed-for transformation in Trudy's own character and personality.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 S 19 '54
50w

Kirkus 22:341 Je 1 '54 150w

"Though not one of the author's best works, it is fast moving and offers general information about famous places in Europe, art galleries, little restaurants with their interesting foods and colorful markets and small stores where one could try out a few foreign phrases. Recommended." I. E. Stafford

+ Library J 79:2257 N 15 '54 70w

"A gay bit of hammock reading for junior high girls." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 29 '54
100w

"The travel background and the continual disappearance and reappearance of two boys met on shipboard with other puzzling happenings add zest to a story of genuine appeal." R. G.

+ Sat R 37:90 N 13 '54 180w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 40w

LAWRENCE, THOMAS EDWARD, later
THOMAS EDWARD SHAW. Home letters of
T. E. Lawrence and his brothers. 731p il $10
Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92

[54-3590]

"These are the letters written home by the famous author of 'The Seven Pillars of Wisdom,' and by his brothers Will and Frank, both killed in France in 1915. T. E. Lawrence died in 1935. His letters, covering the years 1905 through 1934, were in part published by Doubleday in 1938, edited by David Garnett. This is the first full text; accompanying it are 41 photographs taken by Lawrence, and the sketches and drawings which appeared in the letters." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:96 O '54 700w

Reviewed by Frederic Faverty

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 24 '54
320w

"The book is in a sense a document of record, supplementary reading to the 'Seven Pillars' itself and to other works on Lawrence and the revolt in which he played his part. Its appeal is specialized. It will find a ready audience among students and historians of Arab affairs, and less so among readers whose interest would lead them to a more general survey of those years so momentous to the Arabs and their lands." H. B. Ellis

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 6 '54
800w

"His letters, for which the Prime Minister has written a glowing introduction, continue until just before his death in 1935. . . The later ones are of outstanding interest to the T. E. Lawrence student, but he would himself have regarded their inclusion as inartistic, since Will and Frank had both died young and undefeated." Robert Graves

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:105 J1 24
'54 1650w

"To this reader the most interesting and revealing letters in the whole collection are those of the final period, in which Lawrence attempted to hide from his own incredible fame by taking service as an aircraftman under the name of Shaw. They disengage a great sadness; they have the air of coming from a broken man. 'I have the queer sense that it is all over,' he says in one of the final ones, not long before the motorcycle accident that ended his extraordinary life." Vincent Sheean

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 29
'54 1000w

"In so far as it may help to explain the enigmatic author of 'The Seven Pillars of Wisdom,' this is a collection that was well worth making. . . In addition, however, to their psychological interest, among T. E. Lawrence's letters are to be found numerous passages of excellent descriptive writing." Peter Quennell
N Y Times p1 Ag 29 '54 1050w

New Yorker 30:162 O 16 '54 200w

"Tempting as it is to find in Lawrence a prophetic symbol—the spiritual adventurer recoiling from the military achievement he has found morally indefensible, seeking to lower himself to the tinkering anonymity of the herd—it is still not easy. He was indeed an 'exasperatingly complex personality,' and a most exceptional man. It is difficult to read even a few of these letters without an awareness of his sharpness of spirit, without taking in some of the air of the altitudes at which he lived. Whatever may be made of his other achievements, he was, as a writer, almost incapable of dullness—even in his letters home." Lewis Vogler

+ Sat R 37:21 S 16 '54 1000w

"Inevitably, Ned's letters dominate the book, covering 390 out of 722 pages. A great part is detailed archaeology, mostly of French castles and churches until his departure for the East in 1910. The text is crammed with measurements and with technical comments on masonry, craftsmanship and fortification, and liberally strewn with plans, sketches, and photographs. He is crisp with facts of all kinds, not only those of his already professional subject; with bicycles, cameras, travelling arrangements, money, reading programmes, his family's health, his brother's prospective exams he shows the same quality." H. M. Champness

+ Spec p30 J1 2 '54 1200w

Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 1 '54 170w

Time 64:80 Ag 30 '54 1250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p516 Ag 13
'54 1350w

LAWSON, ARTHUR, and BREEN, MARY J.
Fun in the back yard; il. by Walter Frame.
169p $2.75 McKay

796 Games. Playgrounds 54-10348

Information for backyard recreations and equipment for the family with limited budgets and limited space. Partial contents: The children's playground; Target games; Bowling games; Croquet; Quiet games; Outdoor meals; The outdoor kitchen.

Booklist 50:414 J1 1 '54

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 19 '54
30w

Reviewed by W. C. Harvey

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13
'54 190w

"With summer a-coming in and families a-going out, this will be a timely household addition."

+ Kirkus 22:256 Ap 1 '54 80w

"Useful as sources of ideas rather than for detailed building instructions." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:1227 Je 15 '54 60w

Wis Lib Bul 50:175 J1 '54

LAWSON, JOAN. European folk dance; its national and musical characteristics; pub. under the auspices of the Imperial soc. of teachers of dancing, inc; with il. by Iris Brooke. 244p maps $8.50 Pitman 793.31 Dancing—Folk and national dances.

Folk music 53-13423

"This survey traces the development of all aspects of Folk dancing from the earliest to comparatively modern times, and will help readers to understand how dances interpret a people's origin, character, lives, customs, and traditions. The dances of the various countries are dealt with in detail and historical reasons are given for their similarity or difference. Special attention is paid to the relationship between the dances and their music

LAWSON, JOAN—Continued

... and many examples of steps and dances with their music are included for the practical guidance of the dancer. The author is the critic of The Dancing Times, a lecturer for the Sadler's Wells School and the Dalcroze Society Inc., and a member of the International Folk Music Council." Publisher's note

Booklist 50:218 F 1 '54

"An important reference work. . . The author would probably be the first to admit that her material runs a bit thin in spots, but that is inevitable in a book that attempts to cover ground which is as yet in part uncharted."

C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:147 Ja 16 '54 200w

LAWSON, ROBERT. Tough winter [story and drawings]. 128p $3 Viking

54-4416

Continues the adventures of the wild animals begun in Rabbit Hill (Book Review Digest 1944). This tale focuses on the Rabbit family, especially crotchety Uncle Analdas, Father, and Little Georgie. For ages eight to twelve.

Booklist 51:116 N 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 14 '54 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

"The pictures are magnificent, and the make-up of the book outstanding."

+ Commonweal 61:206 N 19 '54 40w

"A delightful book." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:343 O '54 160w

"Mr. Lawson's latest animal story takes the characters on The Hill through a humorous if hard three months and still proves he can personalize his animals without being in the least sentimental. . . And the reader's reward is Mr. Lawson's matchless description of incident, in words and pictures."

+ Kirkus 22:383 J1 1 '54 130w

"The many pictures are from Mr. Lawson in top form, giving us the animals with realism plus his own superb action and humor, and the country scene with striking beauty. The friendliness and courtesy of the familiar creatures and their trust in their Folks and need for them gives younger boys and girls that same sense of kindness and of a special animal world that pervaded 'Rabbit Hill.'" L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p4 N 14 '54 300w

"There is gentle humor in the book's sensitive, beautiful drawings. The prose reflects a love of nature and a feeling of respect for all small beings, in many of whom we can recognize traits of our closest human friends."

C. E. Van Norman

+ N Y Times pt2 p32 N 14 '54 180w

"Children who enjoyed 'Rabbit Hill' will be delighted with this story." N. J. Day

+ Sat R 37:74 N 13 '54 150w

LAYE, CAMARA. Dark child [autobiography of an African boy] with an introduction by Philippe Thoby-Marcelin; tr. by James Kirkup and others. 188p $2.75 Noonday

B or 92

54-11726

A brief autobiography of a young African from French Guinea, now studying in Paris. He gives a picture of his childhood in Kouroussa, a town in the interior, where his father was headman, and famous as a blacksmith and goldsmith. When the boy outgrew the home schools he was sent to France, over the protests of his possessive mother.

"Camara Laye has much to learn as a writer, but his warm memoir of childhood is notable for its freshness and charm. It brings to us a singular picture of a primitive society on which the values of the Western world are beginning to impinge." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 195:85 Ja '55 200w

Booklist 51:175 D 15 '54

"The customs, habits, superstitions and beliefs of these Africans are told in a thoroughly captivating way, and it is a matter of no surprise or no patronizing that the reader goes right along enjoying and loving this way of life as it is recorded." T. E. Cassidy

+ Commonweal 61:340 D 24 '54 700w

Kirkus 22:717 O 15 '54 170w

"As haunting as it is perceptive. . . A mood piece to be imbibed in one sitting, this is essential for all popular collections—adult and YP." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:2098 N 1 '54 50w

"The love and the morality of Camara Laye are far too convincing to be ascribed to anything as acquired as literary skill. The book grows. In the early chapters a want of literary skill gives the narrative a lack of pace and a vagueness that are disturbing. But gradually, as the narrator's sincerity begins to take hold of us, he warms to his subject and the description of the death of his friend Check Omar is told with such a piercing pity as to assure us of Camara Laye's future. The story of his return to Africa should be something worth waiting for." Selden Rodman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 21 '54 650w

"One of the weaknesses of this good and very interesting autobiography is that the author fails to make people come alive on his pages. One feels that they are alive because he says so and because he so obviously loves them, but they are themselves never sufficiently clear for one to get involved personally in their problems. His mother deserves to be a great tragic figure. Yet there is dignity here, and a clean sincerity that is heart-warming." Peter Abrahams

+ N Y Times p6 N 7 '54 700w

"The brilliant and sensitive child in Kouroussa turns out to be very like his counterparts elsewhere, and it is the unfamiliarity of Mr. Laye's setting rather than his response to it that makes his account a haunting one."

New Yorker 30:220 N 13 '54 200w

"Few books have come from the pen of literate Africans—that is, the African black born and reared in the tribal ways and able to portray this background with meaning for the outsider. Camara Laye, a native of French Guinea, has superbly filled this gap with his sensitive autobiography, 'The Dark Child,' which contains a valuable introduction by Philippe Thoby-Marcelin. His is the story of everyday life, written with delicate and knowing artistry and unashamed nostalgia." Roi Ottley

+ Sat R 37:42 N 20 '54 650w

Time 64:120 N 15 '54 220w

LEACH, EDMUND RONALD. Political systems of highland Burma; a study of Kachin social structure; with a foreword by Raymond Firth. (London school of economics and political science) 324p $7 Harvard univ. press

572.9591 Kachin tribes. Ethnology—Burma

A54-8852

"This book deals with the tribal politics of north-west Burma. Mr. Leach went to live among the peoples of these highlands as an anthropologist. Soon after his arrival the war broke out and he spent the next five years as a soldier often commanding troops recruited in the area itself." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Professor Leach has written an important book based on his contacts with the Kachin peoples of northern Burma from 1939 to the end of World War II." J. F. Cady

+ Ann Am Acad 294:170 J1 '54 650w

Foreign Affairs 33:168 O '54 40w

"Dr. Leach's book, rather surprisingly, since it certainly stands in the van of anthropological theory, calls on Frazer twice, but this may be one tiny index of the contrariness which runs through the most brilliant monograph to appear in recent years. . . Some ethnographers have the gift of putting life into the people they discuss, but Dr. Leach, contemptuous of description and wedded to principles, enjoys the no less respectable talent of coming alive himself as he writes." Maurice Freedman

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:336 Mr 13 '54 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p462 J1 16 '54 700w

LEACH, MARIA. Soup stone [the magic of familiar things] decorations by Mamie Harmon. 160p $2.75 Funk

398.3 Folklore. Superstition 53-10791

Brief articles on a large variety of more or less common things or sayings—units of measure, forks, bedsteads, the handshake, remedies for headache, responses to sneezes, etc. Gives something of origin, folklore, historical development, modern usage.

Booklist 50:302 Ap 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 7 '54 150w

Kirkus 21:740 N 15 '53 150w

"The book has reference value but will also be entertaining reading for those with an interest in unusual facts and origins." Lillian Morrison

+ Library J 79:566 Mr 15 '54 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ja 31 '54 30w

"It's an informal book—one jumps from the history of bedsteads and forks to esoteric beliefs about jars and fingernails, and again to old cures for hiccups. The underlying theme, however, is always clear: to the imaginative and to the knowledgeable nothing is ever really commonplace." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 31 '54 200w

Sat R 37:28 Ap 17 '54 100w

LEADERS in American Science; an illustrated biographical directory of eminent leaders in research, industrial, governmental, and educational scientific fields in the United States and Canada; Robert C. Cook, editor. 703p cloth $12; to libraries, 10 per cent discount Who's who in American education, inc.

925 Scientists 54-724

"This is a new, biennial, biographical work in the field of science prepared by the publishers of Who's Who in American Education and Presidents of American Colleges and Universities. The publishers state that it contains 13,500 biographies and over 1200 portraits. The editor, Dr. Robert C. Cook, is president of Mississippi Southern College. The work is divided into two parts. A classified list of 1300 'Distinguished American Scientists' gives under specialized fields of pure and applied science names of individuals nominated as the outstanding authorities in their respective fields by a poll of 50,000 scientists. The editors sent out questionnaires to 'every conceivable kind of scientist' and nominations received were submitted to hundreds of scientists for criticisms and suggestions. In most instances the list gives only name and address, and in some cases, name only. A number of names in the list do not appear in the biographical portion of the book. The second section of the book contains the alphabetical biographical directory." Subscription Bks Bul

"As a new selective biographical directory, Leaders in American Science provides an additional source of information about scientists. It may be the only source of published information about some persons, and for others it may contain information which is more up to date than that in other sources. . . Leaders in American Science is recommended only as a supplementary source of information about scientists."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 25:52 O '54 1000w

LEAKEY, LOUIS SEYMOUR BAZETT. Animals in Africa; photographed by Ylla. 144p $7.50 Harper

591.96 Zoology—Africa. Animal pictures 53-7753

A volume of many photographs, in black and white and in color, with brief captions by the animal photographer, Ylla. There is also accompanying text, describing the various animals pictured with comment on their habits and private life. The author of the text is Director of the Corydon Museum in Nairobi, Kenya. "Nearly all the photographs in this book were taken either in national parks or in game reserves of East Africa." (p8)

Booklist 50:161 D 15 '53

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor D 3 '53 650w

"A fine record, showing animals as they are."

+ Kirkus 21:758 N 15 '53 150w

"A luxury volume for lovers of animals. . . The photographs are superb and I found myself very disappointed that there weren't many more of them. The text by Mr. Leakey, while unsensationalized and to the point, seemed rather sketchy and inadequate to me. Mr. Leakey obviously knows a great deal more about animals than he has been allowed to tell in the limited space available to him. But if I sound slightly disappointed it's only because there wasn't enough of a very good thing." William Murray

+ Sat R 36:68 D 5 '53 100w

LEAKEY, LOUIS SEYMOUR BAZETT. Mau Mau and the Kikuyu. 114p $2.50 Day

572.96762 Kikuyu tribe. Mau Mau 54-6262

"In the chapters that follow I shall first of all give a summary of some of the more important customs and beliefs of the Kikuyu tribe, as they were before the white man came and until about the time of the outbreak of the First World War. . . In Part II, I shall try to show how the break-down of Kikuyu law, custom, religious beliefs, and training of the young people, and the substitution either of modifications or new ideas has led to a state of affairs in which Mau Mau could operate. I shall also try to show why it is that 'Land' is the rallying cry used by the Mau Mau to win adherents." (Introd) Index.

Reviewed by W. E. Diez

Ann Am Acad 295:192 S '54 360w

Booklist 50:394 Je 15 '54

Cath World 180:80 O '54 200w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 4 '54 170w

"A most valuable little study."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:346 Ja '54 30w

"Highly recommended for any library attempting to cover Africa and current happenings." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 79:1054 Je 1 '54 100w

"Dr. Leakey's little book on the Mau Mau is to be recommended for the background it provides to recent events in the unhappy colony of Kenya and, on the whole, for the balance of its presentation. . . His book might be called the best documented and reasoned expression of the liberal white Kenyan point of view that has yet appeared." M. J. Herskovits

+ Nation 178:486 Je 5 '54 200w

"Behind the savage Mau Mau movement in East Africa lies a history of ever-growing land hunger, racial frustration and social upheaval among the populous Kikuyu tribe. And no white man is better qualified to describe the sordid background than the author of this compact and illuminating little volume." A. T. Steele

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 15 '54 320w

New Yorker 30:148 S 18 '54 170w

"No one is better qualified to explain the background of the Mau Mau movement, as he has done in this opportune and intensely illu-

LEAKEY, L. S. B.—Continued
minating book. Its chief characteristics are clarity and fairmindedness." Wilson Harris
+ Spec p819 D 12 '52 750w

"Dr. Leakey, apart from a mind disciplined by the study of archaeology, has other equipment no less valuable for the purposes of his excellent book on Mau Mau and the Kikuyu. Thus, in addition to having lived in Kenya for many years, he speaks the Kikuyu language 'as well as, if not better than, English'; is an elder of the tribe; and is able to describe himself as 'in so many ways a Kikuyu myself.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p850 D 26 '52 400w

LEAR, EDWARD. Teapots and quails; and other new nonsenses; ed. and introduced by Angus Davidson and Philip Hofer. 63p il $3.50 Harvard univ. press

827 53-13345

A brief collection of hitherto unknown rhymes and drawings by Edward Lear.

"The excellent book-making and the well-reproduced drawings—in Mr. Lear's best style—make this a collector's item, but one that children, too, will treasure." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:189 Je '54 90w

"Most of Edward Lear's 'nonsenses' have had time to endure themselves increasingly to three generations of devotees. The presentation of these unpublished ones is an event." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 27 '53 200w

"What there is of this book is excellent."
+ New Yorker 30:150 Ap 10 '54 320w

"Lear enthusiasts will want it. Others, maybe those who would like to elaborate theories about a relationship between Lear and James Thurber's art-styles, will like it. And 'The Schroobious Pip' is right up there with, 'The Yonghy-Bonghy-Bo' and 'The Dong With the Luminous Nose.' (Yes, it's 'Dong' and not 'Dog' as you'll know if you were ever a Lear fan)." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 D 29 '53 600w

"This is notable to lovers of nonsense because it introduces us to what amounts to a new art-form. Edward Lear, had, as we all know, an extraordinary command of metre, often composing in elaborate Persian forms such as 'The Pearl.' Here, what is new is not elaborate, indeed it has the simplicity of genius, but it is rich and, for the nursery, has the inestimable advantage of being easily imitated." A. W.-E.

+ Spec p682 D 4 '53 300w

LEARSI, RUFUS, pseud. See Goldberg, I.

LEATHERMAN, LEROY. Other side of the tree. 183p $3 Harcourt

54-6395

Love stories of two generations are told in this account of the marriage of Miss Ida and Joe Wainwright in 1899 as told to a seventeen-year-old boy visiting his family's summer home many years later. The scene is the back country of Louisiana.

Booklist 51:63 O 1 '54

"Here is a young Southerner who writes as if he had never heard all the talk about the art of the novel, its norms, the logistics of plot, and all the critical folderol that often manages to obscure the unique qualities a novel may possess. His writing has the natural self-forgetfulness of a young child talking to himself; his story flows so effortlessly from the invisible crevices of motive and compulsion that the armature of construction is often lost to the reader. The writer's literary relatives (of the Southern school) bear him a close family resemblance, and his friends in the same tradition (Capote, Welty, Williams) will recognize his allegiance, but in his best moments he stands aside from them, and is something different, unique, alone." Doris Grumbach

+ Commonweal 60:420 Jl 30 '54 500w

Kirkus 22:402 Jl 1 '54 180w

Reviewed by H. L. Leet

Library J 79:1309 Jl '54 100w

"The Other Side of the Tree' may not be for every reader, but its subtlety and poignancy will win it a special place in the affection of many." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Jl 25 '54 500w

"This evocative story is told with skill and perception. It is the author's second novel (his first was 'The Caged Birds'), and with it, he firmly secures his place in the front ranks of contemporary Southern writers." Charlotte Capers

+ N Y Times p18 Jl 25 '54 300w

New Yorker 30:86 Ag 21 '54 20w

"It is good to report that Mr. Leatherman has completely fulfilled the promise of his earlier novel." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 11 '54 650w

Sat ■ 37:40 Ag 14 '54 270w

"A wispy sort of novel about boy-girl love in Louisiana. The story, and the writing, have a certain charm, but both are almost hopelessly lost among a bunch of flashbacks as entangling as the swamps of the bayou country." R. M. F.

Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54 50w

"Not a masterpiece, certainly, not even a minor one, but one which will make entertaining reading."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:210 O '54

LEAVITT, ROBERT KEITH. Chip on grand-ma's shoulder. 255p $3.75 Lippincott

818 Massachusetts—Social life and customs 54-5593

"This account of small-town life at the turn of the century is related by one who recalls with fondness and amusement the joys of boyhood in a New England village. The author emphatically states that he has mixed facts and personalities thereby rendering the volume unreliable as a memoir. However, to all who recall Sunday school picnics, penny candy in a pink and purple sack, church suppers and other pleasant small-town events there will be an unmistakable ring of authenticity." Library J

Booklist 50:256 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:157 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 14 '54 410w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 My '54

Kirkus 21:813 D 15 '53 160w

"The humor is fresh and delightful. Not only is this good armchair recreation but enchanting social history. Recommended." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 79:454 Mr 1 '54 100w

"Although Mr. Leavitt writes with spirit and humor, his material seems unexceptional and his detail too exhaustive."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ap 11 '54 180w

"The Leavitt pages glow with vivid characters of contrasting strengths and frailties. . . Maybe around 1990, A.D., some youngster of today will, if TV has not destroyed his literacy, set down recollection of the world in which he grew up. But he couldn't have had as much fun as the short pants and pigtail set of the days of Roosevelt I, so rollickingly described by Mr. Leavitt." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p15 Mr 14 '54 700w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 22 '54 450w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p18D My 16 '54 220w

Wis Lib Bul 50:206 O '54

LE BOURDAIS, DONAT MARC. Nation of the North; Canada since confederation. 270p il maps $5 Praeger

971.05 Canada—History 53-11796

"This is a popular history of Canada since its confederation as a nation in 1867. There is a prelude of chapters that give the general reader a necessary background. The author has divided his book into the three parts, imaginatively and properly into three periods of Canadian history: the MacDonald period, the Laurier period and the MacKenzie King period. Never has a nation been so well served for such long periods as Canada has been served by these three statesmen whose parliamentary power extends from 1867 down to 1950." Library J

"Mr. Le Bourdais, journalist rather than trained historian, presents a compact, yet comprehensive and readable narrative. It includes many shrewd appreciations of the dramatis personae of Canadian life. The author has his likes and dislikes. . . The proportions are good, though slightly distorted by interest in boundary disputes and distaste for problems of constitutional law. . . Omissions are inevitable, yet some are curious." H. F. Angus

+ Ann Am Acad 294:215 J1 '54 550w

Booklist 50:257 Mr 1 '54

"The present work is different from others we have read on the period in question. There is the same scrupulous adherence to the facts as in standard histories, but there are many little things that interest a newspaperman that would seem trivial to the professor. Consequently this book is one to be highly recommended. Few who read it will not find enlightenment. Nobody, we think, will fail to be reminded of events that have faded from his memory. That at least was the pleasant experience of this reviewer." J. V. McAree

+ Canadian Forum 34:144 S '54 150w

"Despite occasional run-on sentences and an addiction to such phrases as 'in respect of,' the book's style is lively and interesting. In places it will evoke nostalgic memories of half-forgotten incidents which once dominated the newspaper headlines. Unencumbered as it is by legal and constitutional 'deadweight' or by analysis or philosophizing, the book should commend itself to uninformed general readers as being 'a good story.' But, when all is said and done, Nation of the North can rate only as a disappointment to the serious student of Canadian history." Morris Zaslow

Canadian Hist R 35:252 S '54 850w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Mr 14 '54 40w

Christian Science Monitor 71:612 My 19 '54 90w

Current Hist 26:255 Ap '54 150w

Foreign Affairs 33:166 O '54 30w

"The book is full of a proper Canadianism, it has something of the stuffy attitude that afflicts so many Canadian writers, but it is well worth reading and should be regarded as a necessary book by all public and high school libraries." W. B. Ready

+ Library J 79:554 Mr 15 '54 110w

Reviewed by René Cutforth

New Statesman & Nation 46:766 D 12 '53 250w

LECLER, RENE. Sahara. (Hanover House bk) 280p il $3.95 Garden City bks.

966.1 Sahara 54-8913

A popular history of the explorations and colonization of the Sahara by Europeans since the nineteenth century. The author is a French free-lance writer who was in the French Foreign Legion during World War II.

Booklist 51:128 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:58 D '54 30w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1598 S 15 '54 50w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 22 '54 30w

"These true tales of desert adventure have been deftly assembled as a 'popular history' of the opening of the Sahara to the Western world. Hammock voyagers who have caught their breath after crossing the Pacific by raft or climbing the higher Himalayas will eagerly face these even more perilous expeditions." Farnsworth Fowle

+ N Y Times p3 S 5 '54 410w

"An unabashed adventure story, and an unusually good one."

+ New Yorker 30:172 O 23 '54 180w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 5 '54 200w

LEDERER, EDGAR, and LEDERER, MICHAEL. Chromatography; a review of principles and applications [the greater part of divisions 1 and 4 has been tr. by A. T. James]. 460p il $9.25 Elsevier

544 Chromatographic analysis 52-5654

"The whole field is surveyed and the useful information in the literature is compactly presented. All important statements in the text and all tables are reference numbered to the bibliography of approximately 2,000 literature citations. Generally speaking the information presented . . . is full enough to enable the working chemist to use the book without reference to the source articles, but resort to original sources is necessary for full descriptions of refined and specialized procedures. An essential reference book for graduate chemists already using some chromatographic method of analysis as well as for chemists interested in learning about chromatographic techniques and their applications." N Y New Tech Bks

"Lederer and Lederer's monograph is well printed and excellently illustrated by means of 88 comprehensive figures and a colored plate. Its use is recommended to everybody interested in the manifold laboratory methods based on fractional adsorption and in the influence of chromatographic techniques of the development of various branches of pure and applied chemistry." L. Zechmeister

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:2600 My 5 '54 420w

"At present, the most complete survey of this important technique in analytical chemistry."

+ Library J 79:915 My 15 '54 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:4 Ja '54

LEDERER, WILLIAM JULIUS. Spare-time article writing for money. 268p $3.75 Norton

808.06 Authorship—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 54-6715

Practical information on writing articles for publication, addressed to "busy men and women who want to write for publication and be paid for it." The book is based on the author's own experiences. Index.

Booklist 50:219 F 1 '54

"Here, at last, is a book on article writing that dispenses facts not theories. Drawing on his own considerable experience as a successful free lance writer, Bill Lederer has produced a concise, practical, and authoritative volume that should help dam the flood of amateurish drivel into magazine offices." Ben Kartman

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 F 7 '54 290w

Kirkus 21:756 N 15 '53 240w

"Writing as a spare or full time activity has tempted many of us at one time or another. There are hundreds of books containing advice on the subject, but Commander Lederer's book is the most sensible, practical and up-to-date manual now available." H. C. Cahoon

+ Library J 79:384 F 15 '54 90w

"The unseasoned article writer will, without question, find helpful suggestions."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ja 24 '54 40w

"Close study of this detailed and itemized handbook should help get results in a specialized field, provided the aspirant has talent, imagination and perseverance to begin with."

D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p10D Ja 17 '54 300w

Wis Lib Bul 50:67 Mr '54

LEDNICKI, WACLAW. Russia, Poland, and the West; essays in literary and cultural history. 419p il $5 Roy pubs.

327.47 Poland—Relations (general) with Russia. Russia—Relations (general) with Europe. Russia—Relations (general) with Poland 54-6541

"Through Poland, rendered by incessant conflict more western than the West, and particularly through her great epic poet Adam Mickiewicz, Professor Lednicki interprets the literary and cultural relationships of the Russia of the Czars and of the Europe beyond her borders during the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Among the topics which he examines are the influence of Peter Chaadaev; the Decembrist rising of 1825 and the attitude of Pushkin, Tyutchev, and Mickiewicz; the growth of Dostoevsky's antipathy to Poland and the ideology of the West; and the provenance of Alexander Blok's poem 'Retribution.'" Publisher's note

Reviewed by Donald Davie

New Statesman & Nation 48:83 Jl 17 '54 900w

"For the general reader the significance of this scholarly study lies in its more comprehensive verdicts, its historical judgments. It emphasizes the fact that 'during her thousand years of life Russia never succeeded in establishing any institution that was able to defend the rights of the individual or of the community against the overwhelming power of autocracy' and that 'this continuity of the Russian autocratic system' is an essential clue to the Russian character and Russian culture, past and present." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 25 '54 900w

"Altogether this survey of the literary aspects and repercussions of Russian-Polish and Russian-European relations throws light into many places still dark to the western mind, and proves to the hilt Blok's contention of 'the indivisibility and immiscibility of art, life and politics.' The idealism and inspiring patriotism of the author, combined with his deep and intimate knowledge of the works and personalities concerned, have produced a work which has an absolute value of its own, quite apart from the relative value justly claimed for it by the publishers of 'throwing light on the development of the situation today.'" + Times [London] Lit Sup p396 Je 18 '54 1000w

LEE, ERNEST GEORGE (EDWARD DODGE, pseud.). Christianity and the new situation. 157p $3 Beacon press

230 Christianity. Secularism 54-7698

"This 'new situation' according to the author is a two-fold present day state of affairs: first, western Christians and non-Christians (he excludes Communists here) live side-by-side in neighborliness, both groups having standards and practices on the whole not differing greatly; second, even the Christians have completely lost that belief in the supreme worth of the individual for whom society really exists." (Library J) Index.

"More adept at raising issues and problems than at solving them, this is an interesting book even though not a particularly satisfying one." E. L. Long

Ann Am Acad 294:213 Jl '54 600w

"It is the inner vision of man in contact with reality that remains the foundation of true creativeness, and this book makes its appeal to the mind and conscience of the person. Touching on the nature of God and the function of man; on culture and reality and freedom, its value is in its complete integrity. All who would be inclined to bear the yoke of Christian witness will be conscious that in these pages a mind attuned alike to the glory of the past and the demands of the present has set out to tread that path which may lead on to a recovery of faith, to a closing of the gap between the Christian and non-Christian societies." E. W. Martin + Hibbert J 52:301 Ap '54 700w

"The scholarly author though a layman knows his theology and philosophy. He is editor of the London Inquirer and a frequent contributor to such periodicals as the Hibbert Journal. His vocabulary is diversified and exact, his presentation persuasive, his style flowing. Recommended for all thinking readers." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 79:454 Mr 1 '54 240w

LEE, JOHN F. Theory and design of steam and gas turbines. 502p il $9 McGraw

621 Gas turbines. Steam turbines 53-8008

"An engineering college textbook. It will be useful also in many library collections because of its combined treatment of steam and gas turbines and because it is more up-to-date than other standard treatments of the steam turbine. A fair amount of descriptive material is included, but the main emphasis is appropriately on theoretical and design aspects. Selected bibliographies are included." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:778 Ap 15 '54 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:32 Mr '54

LEE, VERNON, pseud. See Paget, V.

LEEMING, JOSEPH. Fun with beads; il. by Jessie Robinson. 96p $3 Lippincott

746 Beadwork 54-5585

"Directions and diagrams show how to weave, embroider and sew with beads to make or decorate dozens of articles, including necklaces, handbags, lapel gadgets, mosaics and greeting cards." Publisher's note

Booklist 50:283 Mr 15 '54

"The jacket describes the book as for 'age 9 and up,' and while the appeal is primarily for the child, Leeming's designs are often interesting enough to be adapted for adult use." M. M. Remenih

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 F 28 '54 90w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13 '54 150w

Kirkus 21:788 D 15 '53 90w

"Older girls will enjoy following the directions. Leaders of groups of little girls will find this most helpful. Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 79:389 F 15 '54 50w

School Arts 54:51 S '54 150w

LEEMING, JOSEPH. Real book of science experiments; il. by Bette J. Davis, de luxe ed 222p $1.50 Garden City bks.

507.2 Science—Juvenile literature 54-5473

This book demonstrates some of the qualities of such natural forces as air, water, electricity, heat and cold, light and sound waves. There are 115 experiments in this book with many pictures and diagrams. Each of them illustrates a basic scientific principle.

Booklist 50:383 Je 1 '54

"Leeming, popular author of many juvenile handcraft books, has compiled 115 interesting experiments which can be done safely by the average child without special equipment. Directions are clear and the experiments solve questions such as why the sky is blue and how an airplane flies."

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p34 N 14 '54 110w

"Generally, the book seems well grounded. We did notice one or two rather vague measurements for experiments, but elsewhere it seems a good home workbook that goes quite far, if not all the way, into casual relationships."

+ Kirkus 22:157 Mr 1 '54 120w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 15 '54 110w

LEFLER, HUGH TALMAGE, and NEWSOME, ALBERT RAY. North Carolina; the history of a southern state. 676p maps $7.50 Univ. of N.C. press

975.6 North Carolina—History 54-7904

A history of North Carolina from Raleigh's first colony to the last gubernatorial election. Maps on endpapers. Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"In general the text has successfully avoided the filiopietistic for the more critical approach. In certain minor respects, however, the inevitable pressures of state patriotism have manifested themselves. . . . These are, however, but minor reservations. The book is, on the whole, a comprehensive and balanced treatment within the limits of available space." G. B. Tindall
+ Ann Am Acad 295:158 S '54 430w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ag 8 '54 80w

"It is surprisingly readable and commendably detached in its viewpoint. There has been no attempt either to 'debunk' history or to view it through rose-colored glasses. The authors have done their state a valuable service. It is too bad there are no illustrations of any kind." W. M.

+ Sat R 37:48 Ap 17 '54 70w

LE GRAND, pseud. See Henderson, L.

LEHMAN, HARVEY CHRISTIAN. Age and achievement; published for the American philosophical society. 358p $7.50 Princeton univ. press

155 Creation (literary, artistic, etc) 52-13159

"The author of this book has attempted to discover at what ages men are likely to do their best work. Through the biographical data of literature, science, politics, and other aspects of Western civilization, Dr. Lehman has pursued his subject, keeping ever at hand the methodological cautions and statistical techniques of modern psychology. A multitude of graphs and tables answer the question, so far as the available data permit, for various types of achievement." U S Quarterly Bk R

"This is a definitive piece of work presented with neatness and thoroughness. Its significance is great for social policy-making, for employers, and for ambitious youth. The conclusion most interesting to most readers is the relatively young age at which most contributions and those of highest quality are made." W. F. Ogburn

+ Am J Soc 59:400 Ja '54 900w

"Mr. Lehman's study is interesting and should stimulate interest in what is a fascinating subject. His conclusions may well be substantiated by his successors: but on the evidence which he has produced they still seem some way from scientific certainty."

Times [London] Lit Sup p134 F 26 '54 1400w

"Most of the findings presented here have been previously published by the author in technical journals, but he does a distinct service in bringing them together in book form. It may be regretted that he does not allow himself more freedom to speculate about factors influencing age of achievement; but this lack of conjecture is perhaps an outgrowth of the same cautious approach which makes his factual conclusions so thoroughly convincing."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:96 Mr '54 200w

LEHMAN, MAXWELL, and YARMON, MOR-TON. Jobs after retirement. 241p $2.95 Holt 371.425 Occupations. Retirement (from work) 54-5453

"Uses a variety of case histories to show how to employ spare hours or the full working day to earn an income and increase satisfaction." (Bookmark) Index.

Booklist 50:312 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:127 Mr '54 20w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 My '54

"A good volume to have around for anyone who is approaching retirement and not yet 'fancy free' enough to be dispensable."
+ Kirkus 22:24 Ja 1 '54 130w

LEHMANN-HAUPT, HELLMUT. Art under a dictatorship. 277p il $5.50 Oxford

709.43 Art and state. Art, German, Art, Russian 54-5292

"[This book] is the culmination of an artistic youth spent in Germany, a tour of duty as a Civil Art Administration Officer for the United States Military Government in Berlin, and two years spent in study under a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation. Perhaps its main value is that its focus is spread far beyond Nazism. The author's purpose is much broader and deeper—to isolate and synthesize the relation between art and the state in all dictatorial governments—and in pursuing it he ranges all the way from the French Revolution, through the German, Italian, and Russian varieties, to certain embryonic manifestations he finds in our contemporary American society." (New Yorker) Index.

"This very courageous and scholarly book might well be considered a key to an understanding of the history of the visual arts under the dictatorships of the twentieth century. . . . The peculiarly well-qualified Dr. Lehmann-Haupt views the whole problem with the detachment of a political scientist and the understanding of a creative artist." G. W. Gilkey
+ Am Hist R 60:178 O '54 450w

Reviewed by J. H. Mueller

Am Soc R 19:811 D '54 330w

Booklist 50:414 Jl 1 '54

Reviewed by F. A. Sweet

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Jl 4 '54 400w

Christian Century 71:1271 O 20 '54 150w

Reviewed by Michael Harrington

+ Commonweal 60:204 My 28 '54 700w

"The book is well illustrated and documented. Recommended for general purchase." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1054 Je 1 '54 200w

"Immensely sober and thoughtful book. . . . The book is far from being definitive in the scholarly sense, but it is not 'popular,' either."
+ New Yorker 30:103 My 29 '54 230w

"Almost everyone is aware that the Soviets and Nazis exercised an absolute dictatorship over the arts. But—as Hellmut Lehmann-Haupt points out in this book—few people know how deeply that dictatorship penetrated into the entire fabric of German and Russian life. The historical evidence of the past is in this book, and an estimate of the continuing controls in force in Russia today. These facts are set forth with a completeness not previously available in published records." Alfred Frankfurter

+ N Y Times p23 Je 6 '54 700w

"From an historical point of view this account of cultural regimentation is interesting. But it must be stated—with much regret for the value of so diligent a work—that the larger contexts of the historical and psychological explanations Mr. Lehmann-Haupt offers can be challenged at every turn." Sibyl Moholy-Nagy

+ — Sat R 37:24 Je 19 '54 1000w

LEIBER, FRITZ. Green millennium. 256p $2.75 Abelard-Schuman

53-10637

Science fiction.

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 31 '54 350w

Kirkus 21:598 S 1 '53 50w

LEIBER, FRITZ—Continued

"You may read this as an extraordinarily good suspense-thriller, or as the Writing on the Wall of a fun-house." H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p14 N 15 '53 210w

"In this novel, Fritz Leiber blends the fields of fantasy and science-fiction into a whacky, fast-moving, ironic and altogether delightful story." V. G.

+ N Y Times p34 N 22 '53 100w

LEIGH, ROBERT DEVORE, ed. Major problems in the education of librarians; contributors: Lauretta G. McCusker [and others]. 116p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

020.7 Library schools and training 54-6913

"This book is the unpremeditated product of the reports and discussions of the 1952-53 seminar in Education for Librarianship at the School of Library Service, Columbia University." (Foreword) Partial contents: Clinical experience and theory; Education of special librarians; Training of village librarians; Education of school and children's librarians; Suggested calendars for the two-year work and study plan; Bibliographic notes.

Booklist 50:410 J1 1 '54

"There will not be perfect accord among readers of this volume as to solutions proposed for these major problems confronting library education, but at least it should evoke wide discussion. It is highly recommended not only for library school personnel and professional librarians, but also for administrators of both colleges and public schools, the various accrediting agencies, state certification officials, and those in other fields who are interested in problems of professional education."

Laura Vroman

+ Library J 79:2085 N 1 '54 750w

Special Libraries 45:354 O '54 20w

LEIGHTON, CLARE VERONICA HOPE. Where land meets sea; the tide line of Cape Cod; engraved by [the author]. 202p $4 Rinehart

974.49 [917.449] Cape Cod 54-7922

Personal impressions of life on Cape Cod where the author has lived for ten years. Illustrated with engravings.

Booklist 50:442; 51:37 J1 15 '54; S 15 '54

Reviewed by Walter Harding

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 22 '54 160w

+ Kirkus 22:358 Je 1 '54 180w

"Superb, perceptive writing. . . Highly recommended." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1398 Ag '54 100w

"Equally skillful with lyric words and burin, Clare Leighton has written and vigorously illustrated a superb book on the authentic flavor of Cape Cod. . . There is such an abundance of books on Cape Cod that Miss Leighton was advised not to write another, but she defied fate and out of sheer love for the place produced a classic which for me stands alongside Thoreau's account of his pilgrimage a century ago and Henry Beston's 'Outermost House.'" Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ag 15 '54 430w

"She is not nearly so precise in naming and functionally understanding the flora and fauna of the Cape as she is in her chromatic reactions. But then, the book is a tone poem, a hymn of praise, and is so intended. And in this regard it fulfills its intention, every line." E. B. Gar-side

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 15 '54 550w

"The book is full of sharp observations, and there is an excellent chapter on surf-casting and the strange and driven fanatics who spend three hundred dollars for equipment to land perhaps two or three fish that aren't worth eating. Illustrated—or, rather, decorated—with Miss Leighton's woodcuts and engravings, which are good in their way, though the mediums are somewhat sterile.

+ New Yorker 30:77 S 4 '54 140w

"A sensitive, informal interpretation of the tide line of Cape Cod, its natural beauties, its people, and the feel of land and sea. The author does not write as a historian or even as an authority in any field. She herself calls her book a gathering of her personal impressions, and she is happy to leave it at that." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 10 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 5 '54 260w

LEIGHTON, MRS MARGARET (CARVER). Story of General Custer; il. by Nicholas Egggenhofer. (Signature bks) 179p $1.50 Gros-set

B or 92 Custer, George Armstrong—Juvenile literature 54-5858

"George Armstrong Custer wanted to fight Indians before he was 5. Miss Leighton writes with understanding about his ambition to enter West Point and how it is realized. After fighting Jeb Stuart's Rebel Riders in the Civil war, Custer becomes 'the boy general' and a great cavalry leader. His last encounter is with Sitting Bull's warriors led by Crazy Horse." San Francisco Chronicle

"Recommended, especially for remedial reading." Harriet Morrison

+ Library J 79:864 My 1 '54 40w

"A lively, expertly constructed account of one of America's most colorful fighters." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p16 Je 20 '54 70w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 16 '54 50w

LEIPER, MARIA, and SIMON, HENRY WILLIAM, eds. Treasury of hymns; historical notes by Wallace Brockway; decorations by Frank Lieberman. 375p $6 Simon & Schuster 783.9 Hymns M53-553

"Our purpose in making this book is very simply stated. We wanted to collect as many hymns as possible to appeal to as many persons as possible, and to arrange them so that they could be sung as easily as possible." (Editor's pref) It contains hymns, carols, anthems, children's hymns, and gospel songs used in America. Includes words, some in foreign languages, and music, and notes and comments on each hymn. Index of titles, first lines and familiar refrains.

Booklist 50:200 Ja 15 '54

Bookmark 13:105 F '53 20w

Reviewed by F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 7 '54 120w

"Of course, certain of the settings will not be the ones known by any given person. Library users, from readers to reference librarians, set great store by annotations such as those that appear with each hymn. The print is quite large and the words of all the stanzas underlie the notes. This appraiser, a hymn-singer from way back and accustomed to a chaste black-on-white page, finds that the good-looking but bold decorations offer considerable competition to the music." C. K. Miller

Library J 79:147 Ja 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by Robert Evett

New Repub 129:20 D 21 '53 30w

"A compilation so important seldom announces so clearly, in so few words on its first page, just why it was undertaken and how it was carried out. . . Every one of these 276 hymns has its words and music so reproduced as to be read with ease by a group around the piano. Every song that has been collected with such care will be recognized by some one in the reader-audience with the sudden quickening of the heart that comes when words and tune bring back not only a spiritual song but the circumstances, the occasion, in which it has been sung." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 D 20 '53 550w

"The editors have done their best to make this a collection of favorite hymns. Quite a few would never be included among the best hymns, but most of them are well and widely known and greatly beloved. The hymns for special times and seasons include a fine selection of Christmas carols. Among the hymns of worship and praise, prayer and supplication are most of the hymns church people know and love." K. D. Miller

+ Sat R 37:41 Mr 20 '54 350w

LEITES, NATHAN C. Study of bolshevism. 639p $6.50 Free press

335.4 Communism—Russia 53-7396

"Leites tries to 'portray the spirit of the Bolshevik elite' by discovering the basic rules of operation as expressed in the writings of Lenin and Stalin. He is not concerned with the content of the Bolshevik doctrine (its views on democracy, imperialism, the dictatorship of the proletariat, and so on). Rather he devotes his attention to the fundamental attitudes, which, he believes, determine the behavior towards non-Bolsheviks or, particularly under Stalin, the behavior of the party leadership towards the average party members." Yale R

Reviewed by R. H. Fisher
Am Hist R 60:108 O '54 240w

Reviewed by N. S. Timasheff
Am Soc R 19:791 D '54 550w

"Four years ago Dr. Nathan Leites of the Rand Corporation published a slim volume entitled The Operational Code of the Politburo, as part of a study undertaken for the United States Air Force. . . In the present volume, compiled with gargantuan labor and suffocating documentation, he has expanded his earlier effort into a mountain which brings forth not even a mouse. . . The result, alas, is wholly unreadable, uninformative, and stupifying." F. L. Schuman

— Ann Am Acad 294:224 Jl '54 550w

Reviewed by N. D. Roodkowsky
Cath World 180:76 O '54 500w
Foreign Affairs 32:513 Ap '54 70w

"Written with detachment and fortified by a massive documentation, 'A Study of Bolshevism' is a most illuminating exposition of Bolshevik ideology. It not only has theoretical importance. It has a direct bearing on a realistic appraisal of current Soviet policy toward the West. It would hardly be an exaggeration to say that our future partly depends on how seriously the conclusions of this analysis are taken by statesmen of the Western world." Sidney Hook

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 28 '54 1900w
U S Quarterly Bk R 10:222 Je 240w

"The book is valuable for its systematically organized collection of quotations from Lenin and Stalin, which reveal the differences and agreements between these two Bolshevik authorities. But Leites' method and approach make Bolshevism appear to be not an historical-social movement in a changing world, but a fundamental, almost extra-temporal attitude." Waldemar Gurian

+ — Yale R n s 43:463 spring '54 370w

LE MAY, ALAN. The searchers. 272p $3 Harper

54-10711

Novel of the Texas frontier just after the Civil war. Amos Edwards and young Martin Pauley conduct a long, harrowing search for Debbie, the only survivor of Amos' brother's family after an Indian massacre. Debbie was ten when she was taken prisoner; it was five years before the search ended.

Booklist 51:109 N 1 '54

"Le May's historical novel is written with authority and skill." Walter Havighurst
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 21 '54 200w

"A drama of stubborn courage and gaunt endurance to which the prose lends a matching stature."

+ Kirkus 22:597 S 1 '54 200w

"The excitement and the suspense, the compact plot, of a 'Western' are here: Indian treachery—and white; ambushes and battles and escapes; the captive who seems after a half dozen years more Comanche than not. But to this is added a depth of characterization, a concern with motivation, which set the story apart." Coleman Rosenberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p1 N 14 '54 290w

Reviewed by Hoffman Birney
N Y Times p3 D 5 '54 90w

"A superior Western, good lively reading." Oliver LaFarge

+ Sat R 37:30 D 4 '54 380w

"An excellent story about frontier conditions in Texas just after the Civil War. . . Mr. Le May . . . is a first-rate craftsman and, like his earlier ones, his most recent work is more than ordinarily readable." H. B. H.

+ Springfield Republican p9C N 21 '54 140w

LE MAY, REGINALD STUART. Culture of south-east Asia: the heritage of India; foreword by R. A. Butler. 218p $9.50 Macmillan (N Y)

959 [915.9] Asia, Southeastern [54-1347]

"Dr Reginald Le May, a former economic adviser to the Siamese Government, has written the first comprehensive study of the relation of the art and history of South-east Asia. His chief interest is in Siam and Indo-China, or at least that part of Indo-China which lies west of the mountains of Annam." Manchester Guardian

"Dr Le May's own devotion is to the art which springs from Indian influence. His book is especially useful for its discussion of the redating of the temples at Angkor and in the neighbourhood. . . The book contains more than two hundred photographs which are useful for the study of the parts of the region in which Dr Le May specialises. He does not always say where the various objects photographed are now located. A few very fine pieces are from the author's own collection." Guy Wint

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 26 '54 300w

"This timely book should appeal to that wide group of intelligent laymen who are already somewhat familiar with Southeast Asia. Dr. Le May's comprehensive account of art finds in the area is the first such compendium in any language. . . His scholarly description of the Angkor ruins could be profitably read as a guidebook. In fact, anyone traveling to South-east Asia or stay-at-homes charged with interpreting the area to others would do well to read this book. Although concerned with the past, it may help to dispel some modern misconceptions, thereby assisting in the understanding of the future." R. J. Coughlin

+ Sat R 37:15 Jl 24 '54 850w

"For the student of history, as contrasted with the student of art, the main importance of this book lies in the evidence, iconographical and cultural, which Dr. Le May has mustered in support of his identification of the stages by which Indian culture was carried throughout south-east Asia."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p474 Jl 23 '54 300w

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). Corn-farm boy [il. by the author]. 179p $3 Lippincott

54-8485

Story of a gentle eleven-year-old boy, growing up on an Iowa farm. Dick, a victim of rheumatic fever, loves all animals and outdoor life, but must curb his activities. His understanding mother helps him when help is most needed. For grades 4 to 7.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran
Atlantic 194:96 D '54 70w

Booklist 51:116 N 1 '54

"The story is warm and vital. We watch the corn grow and the hogs fatten for market and share in all the work and worry—and fun—that belongs on a farm. Best of all, we meet a fine, gentle boy who loves to care for animals, domestic or wild." Polly Goodwin

LENSKI, LOIS—Continued

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 O 31 '54 70w

"A moving story that reaches to the 12 and 13 year old age levels."
+ Kirkus 22:434 J1 15 '54 170w

"Rural and city children both will find this entertaining and enlightening." Alice Hager
+ Library J 79:2254 N 15 '54 60w

LENT, HENRY BOLLES. Here come the trucks; il. by Renée George. 95p $2.50 Macmillan (N Y)

629.22 Motor trucks—Juvenile literature 54-10997

Descriptions of twelve kinds of trucks; among them the wrecker, milk truck, dump truck, etc. Includes a chapter "roadeos" in which truck drivers try tricks of maneuvering their huge trailers. For ages eight to twelve.

Booklist 51:21 S 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag ■ '54 60w

Kirkus 22:155 Mr 1 '54 60w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin
Library J 79:1325 J1 '54 70w

"Almost everyone will learn a great deal here—but the legions of truck-crazy little boys will be especially pleased." Phyllis Fenner
+ N Y Times p19 Je 27 '54 90w

LEON, HENRY CECIL. See Cecil, H.

LEONARD, BURGESS. Rookie fights back. 192p $2.50 Lippincott

54-5583

Baseball story for boys of twelve to sixteen.

Booklist 50:382 Je 1 '54

"A fast-moving, humorous story with plenty of good baseball. Recommended for boys of 12-16." Robert Van Benthuyssen
+ Library J 79:790 Ap 15 '54 70w

"This is straight baseball, for 11 to 17 year olds, knowledgeably written with a flair for active verbs and directed at boys whose interests are graduating to big league play." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p16 J1 18 '54 70w

LEONARD, ELMORE. Bounty hunters. 180p $2 Houghton; pa 35c Ballantine

54-5563

"This is a cavalry and Indian story about a time when an Apache scalp would bring 500 pesos in Mexico. It is also a chase story, complicated by intrigue, which tells how a war-like Apache chief escaped across the border from a government reservation and how a green Army officer, and an experienced scout tried to get him back." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:322 Ap 15 '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 7 '54 50w

"A first novel and a good one." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p33 Ap 11 '54 60w

LEONARDO DA VINCI. Deluge. See Payne, P. S. R.

LEOPOLD, LUNA BERGERE, and MADDOCK, THOMAS. Flood control controversy; big dams, little dams, and land management; sponsored by the Conservation foundation. 278p $5 Ronald

627.4 Flood control

54-7646

"An examination of the technical problems involved in flood control, and an evaluation of the effectiveness of the upstream and downstream programs advocated by the Department of Agriculture and the Corps of Engineers. The authors show the possibilities and limitations of both engineering structures and land management, maintaining that flooding can never be completely eliminated from a river system." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:413 J1 1 '54

"All those who are interested in seeing a sound federal flood-control policy developed will find much of interest in this book. The authors' purpose is to give the public a better understanding of the techniques that are involved in the controlling of floods and a greater appreciation of the issues that have arisen since the federal government began to share in the cost of this type of work."

+ Eng N 152:61 Je 10 '54 600w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 30 '54 60w

LEOPOLD, RICHARD WILLIAM. Elihu Root and the conservative tradition. (Library of American biography) 222p $3 Little

B or 92 Root, Elihu

54-6870

During the first two decades of the twentieth century, Elihu Root served his country in a number of capacities, as Secretary of War, Secretary of State, and United States senator from New York. This volume, by the professor of history at Northwestern University, is not a biography but chiefly a study of Root's career, as lawyer, politician, and statesman.

"This is a well-organized, well-written, and scholarly book. Scholars, in the reviewer's opinion, would be better pleased with it if the editor of the series had permitted occasional footnotes. . . . Aside from a few such minor points as these, it is difficult to find fault with Professor Leopold's performance." J. W. Pratt

+ Am Hist R 60:135 O '54 550w

"Superb two-volume biography. The author achieves objectivity and readability in weaving his way through the many turbulent issues and events with which Root was intimately associated and on which he left his imprint. The book is well organized and contains a good discussion of the many sources used." K. W. Hechler

+ Ann Am Acad 296:175 N '54 500w

Booklist 50:398 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:233 J1 '54 100w

Reviewed by A. S. Henning

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 J1 25 '54 450w

"Dr. Leopold is an artist at concise description, and the student will find here in a nutshell the main points at issue in which Root figured, viewed in the perspective of modern experience. For the complete record he already has Philip C. Jessup's massive two-volume biography." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 1 '54 400w

"This work on Root does an excellent job of defining the difficult position of conservatism in this country, of examining the beliefs of Root as they were a product of his background and as they affected his public actions, and evaluating the permanent achievements of Root in the country's development."

+ Current Hist 27:62 J1 '54 120w

Foreign Affairs 33:161 O '54 50w

Kirkus 22:178 Mr 1 '54 210w

"Recommended for special collections only."
James Heslin

Library J 79:980 My 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by J. P. Mallan

New Repub 131:17 J1 12 '54 1100w

"It is, essentially, an essay—perceptive, scholarly, and readable—in evaluation of Root's public service. Thus the first fifty-five years of Root's life—when he made his reputation and his fortune as a lawyer—are covered in Professor Leopold's first twenty-five pages. For all its brevity this introductory chapter entitled 'Acquisitive America: The Making of a Conservative,' is excellent, introducing the reader at once to the mature Root and his times—and to the author's method and his ability to present much in little space." H. M. Kilgore

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 1 '54 950w

"This is high-level history, written with lucidity, a sure knowledge of the sources and a warming sense of the historian's responsibility to the present." Eric Goldman

+ N Y Times p22 Je 6 '54 400w

"This book does not purport to be a full-length biographical portrait of Elihu Root or a complete study of conservatism in American history. It is a skillful and very readable blend of distillations of the two subjects." P. C. Jessup

+ Pol Sci Q 69:459 S '54 950w

"This [is a] well-balanced and lucidly written volume. And [the author] has done it within the limited scope of a little book of hardly two hundred pages of text. His work is a most useful contribution to the history of the period, and to an understanding of American conservatism." Dexter Perkins

+ Sat R 37:10 J1 3 '54 750w

"Intelligent and sympathetic analysis of the public service of an outstanding American." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C My 2 '54 250w
Wis Lib Bul 50:134 My '54

LESLIE, ANITA. Remarkable Mr. Jerome; il. with photographs. 312p $4 Holt

B or 92 Jerome, Leonard 54-10523

The story of the life and times of Leonard Jerome, the millionaire sportsman who was Sir Winston Churchill's American grandfather. It gives an intimate picture of life in upper class and aristocratic circles in England during the later half of the nineteenth century. Sir Winston's beautiful mother might be called the heroine of the story, with plenty of attention to her two sisters, one of whom was the author's grandmother. No index.

Booklist 51:82 O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:5 O '54 40w

"Anita Leslie is a great-granddaughter of Leonard Jerome and she obviously admires the old boy. She starts out bravely to tell you about him but midway in her account she comes upon these other kinfolk and she admires them even more and pretty soon you're reduced to occasional glimpses of Jerome until at the end he just becomes part of the background for his brilliant daughters and the brilliant men they married. . . Still, for what you do get of him, this account of Winston's grandpa will do until somebody does something better for him. He is worth a major effort." V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 S 26 '54 350w

"Mrs. Leslie assumed the task of assembling and preparing these family memoirs with two major ends in view. One was to increase the popular understanding of Lady Randolph, whose career (in the eyes of her great-niece at least) equaled that of Sir Winston's father, Lord Randolph of parliamentary fame. In this she is notably successful. The problems which beset this beauteous and brilliant bride in the rather stolid atmosphere of Victorian England and how they were met makes interesting reading." Stafford Derby

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 23 '54 450w

"Since there is a grand story in the millions and the matches of the Jeromes, and since Miss Leslie is a first-rate gossip, it is really too bad that she did not read over the galleys more than once. Her French—she is dreadfully fond of dropping a French phrase here and there—is no advertisement for her governess. And although it would be unfair to say that there is a factual error on every page of the book, it is obvious that the author was rather bored by the bare facts of American history and her great-grandfather's career." Wayne Andrews

Commonweal 61:229 N 26 '54 600w

"This should have the sure-fire appeal of The Glitter and the Gold for a heavy feminine market."

+ Kirkus 22:512 Ag 1 '54 300w

"Enthusiastically recommended for all libraries." H. F. Burdick

+ Library J 79:1499 S 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 179:495 D 4 '54 100w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 48:704 N 27 '54 220w

"Wrong as it may sound to call so gay and personal a book social history, of course this certainly is. Writing it, Miss Leslie shows how large a measure of that Jerome verve and talent she herself inherited. The sound of her only previous work, 'Love in a Nutshell,' prepares the reader insufficiently for the complete charm and ease and candor of this biography. In any case they would be noteworthy; in family biography the combination is rarity itself. This one cannot be too highly recommended. Sir Winston Churchill's connection makes it an important and timely book; Miss Leslie and Leonard Jerome make it delightful." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p 1 S 26 '54 1100w

"This book is, on the one hand, neither so intra-familial that it might be said to be privately printed at public expense, nor, on the other, is it so extra-familial that it might be said to be publicly printed at private expense. It is, indeed, a grand biography in the grand manner, and from the very first page of the prologue the author is successful in interesting the general reader in her subject. . . The prologue is fascinating." Cleveland Amory

+ N Y Times p6 S 26 '54 1150w

"Since the author has had all kinds of new material on her subject—whole trunks filled with letters and family documents—you would expect a thoroughly interesting account. As a matter of fact, you get that and a great deal more. This turns out to be a vivid evocation of both a man and a period, written with unusual skill." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 28 '54 550w

Reviewed by Allen Churchill

Sat M 37:27 O 23 '54 300w

LESLIE, DESMOND, and ADAMSKI, GEORGE. Flying saucers have landed. 232p il $3.50 British bk. centre

629.13 Flying saucers 53-12621

"The authors provide affidavits and photographs of flying saucers which have been observed recently. It is their contention that flying saucers were seen in ancient times." Cleveland Open Shelf

Reviewed by Fritz Leiber

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 N 8 '53 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p31 S '53

"The only suitable place for the entire edition is in Mr. Cleator's first space ship, as ballast to be released in the frozen darkness of interplanetary space." A. C. B. Lovell

— New Statesman & Nation 46:568 N 7 '53 120w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 21 '54 70w

LESLIE, MARGUERITE. Family book of dogs; with 120 drawings by Lumen Martin Winter. [60p] $3.50 Coward-McCann

636.7 Dogs

54-11361

Drawings and brief informative text describe about sixty breeds of dogs. The arrangement is alphabetical. Grades four to eight.

Booklist 51:90 O 15 '54

"This is such a substantial, well written and fascinating book that it is bound to appeal not only to young readers but to the whole family." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p46 N 14 '54 80w

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 11 '54 120w

Kirkus 22:436 J1 15 '54 90w

"Recommended for general purchase." Mary Strang

+ Library J 79:1665 S 15 '54 20w

"If it is possible that you know a dog-loving family still without a reference book on all sorts of dogs, here is a handsome gift for them, especially if they have children under twelve."

L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 31 '54 120w

"The alphabetical arrangement of the breeds of dogs makes the book a ready reference tool. It will afford interesting reading on a beloved subject for children in the upper elementary grades, for those of the teen-age group, and for their parents." L. W. R.

+ Sat R 37:82 N 13 '54 150w

LESLIE, SIR SHANE, 3d bart. Cardinal Gasquet; a memoir. 273p $3.50 Kenedy

B or 92 Gasquet, Francis Aidan, cardinal 53-11512

"Francis Aidan Gasquet (1846-1927), the English Benedictine descended from French Royalists, was one of the most notable Roman Catholic historians of modern times, and in a long life as teacher, scholar and ecclesiastic, he did much to strengthen the Roman Catholic position in England. Among the well known persons who figure in this lively biography are Cardinals Newman, Manning, Gibbons, Ireland; Lords Acton and Halifax, Baron von Hügel, Abbé Portal and Prime Minister Gladstone. Among other matters, the author gives in some detail Cardinal Gasquet's important role in the controversy over Anglican orders at the turn of the century." N Y Times

"The story of Gasquet's life might well have been treated in a much larger and more thorough work than this rather hastily constructed volume. Yet perhaps these short chapters, so easy to read, will please a multitude of readers who desire to get an outline of the distinguished churchman's life but are not particularly interested in background, documentation, or adequate Index."

Cath World 179:160 My '54 200w

"An unusually interesting and brilliantly written life of the scholarly Benedictine, Cardinal Gasquet." J. A. O'Brien

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 28 '54 350w

"The book which Shane Leslie has compiled reads a trifle scrappily. Yet perhaps that is how it ought to read. Gasquet's life was a long one; he talked to witnesses of the French Revolution, and died during the Hoover administration. In such a span it was only natural that there should be starts and stops, gallant undertakings and imperfect achievements, fluctuations in health, changes in the demands of superiors. Because of certain sins of omission, we cannot set Gasquet as high as we should like. But it is good to be assured that we can set him high." Geoffrey Ashe

Commonweal 60:77 Ap 23 '54 1000w

"Interesting, well-written and well-documented. . . Recommended for university libraries and pertinent special collections." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 79:454 Mr 1 '54 220w

"It is a pleasure to read a biography of an eminent ecclesiastic that does not claim that he was in some esoteric manner a saint. Cardinal Gasquet was an able administrator, a scholarly propagandist, and a hard-headed politician, and he succeeded in all three vocations. True, he failed in his major ambition to become Archbishop of Westminster, and his letters reveal that not only did he hope for the see but thought that he ought to get it. Such candour, such perfunctory expressions of unworthiness are refreshing." Noel Annan

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 29 '54 360w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p26 F 28 '54 100w

Spec p664 My 28 '54 140w

"Sir Shane Leslie succeeds in drawing an attractive, interesting man, whose story—and this is not always the case with biographies—is illuminated by the forthright English face of the portrait, the source of which should, perhaps in a further edition, somewhere be acknowledged."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p77 Ja 29 '54 1450w

LESSER, MILTON A., ed. Looking forward. 400p $4.95 Beechurst press

Short stories—Collections

53-11680

An anthology of science fiction.

Reviewed by H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 31 '54 150w

"Any way you look at it, this is no bargain." J. F. M.

— N Y Times p17 D 20 '53 140w

"One of the best of recent collections of science fiction." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C D 6 '53 100w

LE SUEUR, MERIDEL. River road: a story of Abraham Lincoln; il. by Aldren A. Watson. 175p $2.50 Knopf

Lincoln, Abraham—Juvenile literature

53-7634

The story of one incident in the life of Abraham Lincoln—the 1828 trip by raft down the Ohio and the Mississippi river road to New Orleans. For grades 5 to 8.

Booklist 50:403 Je 15 '54

"This account of seventeen-year-old Lincoln's journey by raft down the Mississippi is valuable because of the author's ability to picture so clearly this brief period in his life." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:255 Ag '54 160w

"The author has admirably told, with an interesting quality of frontier vernacular, Abe's reactions to what he saw and their effect on his character and later achievements." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 79:864 My 1 '54 70w

"We long to quote much, but can only recommend that teachers and librarians should try reading this aloud, and should post up somewhere the three final paragraphs on page 171."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 My 16 '54 290w

"This book is beautifully done. The writing approaches the level of prose poetry. Moods of fervor for justice to all men, an intense yearning for accomplishment and even a brooding sadness prevail. Lincoln's road to greatness began on such paths as this book traces." G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times p12 S 5 '54 200w

Wis Lib Bul 50:142 My '54

LETHBRIDGE, THOMAS CHARLES. Painted men. 208p il maps $6 Philosophical lib.

942.01 Picts. Great Britain—Antiquities. Great Britain—History—Roman period, B.C. 55-A.D. 449

54-11965

An account of the Picts, Britons, Scots, Saxons and others who lived in Britain during or immediately after the Roman occupation. The painted men of the title are the Picts, to whom the author, an amateur archeologist and antiquarian, pays most attention. Illustrated with photographs, drawings, and maps. Index.

"Not a very substantial slice of beef, perhaps, but it has a very piquant sauce."
New Yorker 30:78 S 4 '54 140w

"Mr. Lethbridge's conclusions are not entirely convincing. Which is an understatement. The author, audacious and fun-loving, would be disappointed if his trailing coat failed to provoke criticism, and he repeatedly pleads to be challenged or proved wrong. In a field where 'there is room for doubt in almost every conclusion' it is enough to agree with Mr. Lethbridge that he is often 'talking nonsense.' But it is vigorous nonsense, always amusing and occasionally instructive."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p428 J1 2 '54
600w

LETTERS, FRANCIS JOSEPH HENRY. Life and work of Sophocles. 310p $4.50 Sheed

B or 92 Sophocles 53-3355

"This book is an attempt to present with a minimum of speculation what we know of Sophocles and his age and to use that knowledge in interpreting his work. Since without forgetting the classical scholar I have had the interests of the general reader chiefly in view, while I have quoted freely from the plays, I have rarely done so in Greek. When special circumstances made it necessary to give the poet's ipsissima verba, I have added a translation." (Foreword) Index.

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 14
'54 40w

"Mr. Letters presents a clear picture of Sophocles, his Fifth Century B. C. Athenian environment and the plays that were the products of both. He has done this without once falling into the trap that ensnares so many who write of the ancients; he has not judged Sophocles or his works in the light of modern mores, nor has he overburdened the reader with amateur psychological studies." A. N. C.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 27 '54
290w

"This is clearly a book for the Greekless reader. . . His most valuable achievements in this book are first, his perception of the strength of religious feeling which makes several of the plays. . . Particularly valuable is his emphasis on the importance attached by the Greeks—overriding any more personal considerations—to the correct burial of the dead; and in the field of symbolism his analysis of Trachiniae vv.831-40 exposes ruthlessly those editors who would emend what they cannot understand." Peter Green

+ Spec p599 N 20 '53 750w

"This is a somewhat uneven book, which none the less deserves the expert's attention quite as much as that of the common reader to whom the foreword is modestly addressed."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p488 J1 31 '53
800w

LEUCHTENBURG, WILLIAM EDWARD. Flood control politics; the Connecticut River Valley problem, 1927-1950. 339p il $5 Harvard univ. press

333.91 Flood control. Connecticut valley.
Electric utilities 53-6031

Extensively documented study of the political aspects of the question of flood control in the New England states. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by C. D. Curran
Am Pol Sci R 48:560 Je '54 750w

Reviewed by C. H. Pritchett
Ann Am Acad 292:165 Mr '54 290w
Booklist 50:159 D 15 '53

"Mr. Leuchtenburg is a former Smith College professor who is now an associate in American History at Columbia University. While the chapters on floods move along like a well-written news story, most of the information presented is so heavily documented as to be rather laborious reading. Even so, it is well worth the effort." R. M. F.

+ Springfield Republican p3D D 27 '53
380w

"Although painfully detailed, the thirteen chapters of the book provide valuable source material for the student and the legislator. The book carries a large and excellent bibliography and a good index."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:91 Mr '54 170w

LEVENS, ALEXANDER SANDER. Graphics in engineering and science. 696p il $7 Wiley 510.84 Graphic methods. Engineering
54-5416

"A person leafing through this book might jump to the conclusion that it is another text on mechanical drawing. Instead it is aimed at college students who are already familiar with the standard techniques of drafting and its theme is the use of drawing as a medium of expression for scientists and engineers. There are three parts, one on orthogonal projection, another on standard conventions and practices and a third on the use of graphic methods in mathematical computation and the solution of research problems. The last part especially will be helpful to graduate engineers and to practical mathematicians. The author is a member of the faculty of the University of California." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 79:1406 Ag '54 100w

"Although this book contains material which is of interest to the mechanical draftsman, it is a text on the 'graphic language' rather than on mechanical drawing, and is intended for the instruction of scientists and engineers who will use drawing techniques as a medium of expression or in mathematical computation."

N Y New Tech Bks 39:56 J1 '54

LEVERKUEHN, PAUL. German military intelligence [tr. by R. H. Stevens and Constantine FitzGibbon]. 209p il $3.50 Praeger

940.4 Germany. Army. Military intelligence.
World war, 1939-1945—Secret service

[55-69]

"Author was chief of the Istanbul station of the Abwehr (German secret service) in World War II. His account of the Abwehr, its chief, Admiral Canaris, and its work in the Balkans, Poland, Russia, the West, and the Far East is sketchy and more anecdotal than factual. . . Author believes that the usurpation of the German military intelligence by the Nazis was one of the major factors in limiting the efficiency of the German secret service, and that once Canaris had gone the Abwehr disintegrated, while the SD had only partial success in fulfilling its functions." Library J

"A book to link with Hoettl's The Secret Front, though less compelling reading."

Kirkus 22:608 S 1 '54 190w

"Of limited usefulness, but thus far the only work of its kind in English." Louis Barron
Library J 79:1887 O 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman
Nation 179:427 N 13 '54 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p362 Je 4 '54
900w

LEVI, WERNER. Modern China's foreign policy. 399p $5.50 Univ. of Minn. press

327.51 China—Foreign policy 53-10470

"A chronicle of Chinese foreign policy from the 19th-century foreign interventions to the present day. The author limits himself to non-Chinese source material, which may be a contributing factor to the somewhat superficial character of the analysis." (Current Hist) Index.

LEVI, WERNER---Continued

"Professor Levi has undertaken to discuss a subject of great complexity and importance. . . The book considers or touches upon many of the major topics it might be expected to contain. At times the analysis is useful. Unfortunately, in too many places it is superficial and contradictory." L. K. Rosinger

— + Am Hist R 60:192 O '54 400w

Booklist 50:233 F 15 '54

Current Hist 26:125 F '54 60w

Foreign Affairs 32:518 Ap '54 20w

"Professor Levi has made something of a strait-jacket of his thesis and fails to escape from it to examine more significant differences which make the Communist power unique in the history of Asia. Whether we like it or not, history does after all move by revolutionary as well as evolutionary mutations. Despite the defects noted, this book is recommended as a highly useful presentation of one approach to contemporary political understanding which has been generally ignored in popular thinking." Edgar Snow

Nation 178:182 F 27 '54 850w

"Mr. Levi's method is eclectic. There is a little bit from everything he has read, held together by what looks like the modified outline for a course in the International Relations of the Far East. Certainly there is no pattern, either explicit or implicit, of Chinese society to unify the story or to inform the analysis. What could have been an interesting attempt to portray the spiritual conflict in Chinese leadership under the impact of the West is tedious because it is not related to the pattern of power in Chinese society. . . The passages that deal with the early days of the Communist movement and the role of the Kuomintang seem reminiscent of some other writings on this subject. . . The Chinese reacted to the events of July, 1914, by seeing their country in perspective, 'they fully realized the global interdependence of international relations.' These categories are not those of political sciences; nor do they even enliven the author's dull and awkward style." G. E. Taylor

N Y Times p22 N 22 '53 750w

Reviewed by F. C. Jones

Pacific Affairs 27:281 S '54 600w

Reviewed by H. M. Vinacke

Sat R 37:17 S 25 '54 430w

LEVIER, ANTHONY WILLIAM. Pilot, by Tony LeVier, as told to John Guenther; foreword by Arthur Godfrey. 263p il $3.50 Harper B or 92 Aviators—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-6018

The life story of one of America's top pilots. It begins with his struggles to stack up enough hours in the air so he could qualify for a private pilot's license, in the early 1930's. It ends with some predictions as to the future of military and commercial flying. Mr LeVier is now a veteran Lockheed test pilot.

Booklist 50:449 Jl 15 '54

Bookmark 13:235 Jl '54 30w

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 27 '54 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

"LeVier plays down his many close brushes with death but the spine-tingling quality is here nevertheless."

Horn Bk 30:361 O '54 80w

Kirkus 22:281 Ap 15 '54 140w

"Will have special appeal for young aviation enthusiast, and a book which will be of deep interest to all who are fascinated by man's conquest of the air, and who contemplate a trip to the moon." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 79:1313 Jl '54 90w

"A remarkably fast-moving book." Carl Norcross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 13 '54 850w

"Mr. LeVier, now one of the country's top test pilots, tells his story with an enthusiasm as contagious as his subject is fascinating. . .

'Pilot' is a book that will interest not only would-be flyers and airline passengers, but even the most adept planners of our aerial future." B. K. Thorne

+ N Y Times p12 Je 27 '54 500w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 8 '54 160w

LEVINSON, RONALD BARTLETT. In defense of Plato. 674p $10 Harvard univ. press

184 Plato

53-5070

"Many are the detractors of Plato that the twentieth century has produced. Chief of these have been R. H. S. Crossman, Warner Fite, Otto Neurath, Hans Kelsen, and, of course, Karl Popper. The general plan of the present book is to state clearly the nature of the criticisms and attacks thus made on Plato, to catalogue them, and then, by textual or cultural reference, to demonstrate the frequency erroneous and occasionally malicious character of the criticisms. Not only does the author find inconsistencies in the detractors of these men, but he also discovers that criticisms of Plato have been made on the basis of vicious mis-translations, severe historical inaccuracies and speculations so fanciful as to leave almost completely the realm of fact." U S Quarterly Bk R

Reviewed by William Ebenstein

Ann Am Acad 295:180 S '54 600w

"His long book is full of interest along a variety of lines. Wisely handled it has real possibilities for adult education. Recommended for many public libraries and for college and university libraries. Should be considered for high schools where the Republic is studied." A. D. Osborn

+ Library J 78:1933 N 1 '53 160w

"It is truly one of the most important volumes on Plato to appear in many decades."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:65 Mr '54 210w

"Mr. Levinson was a pupil of Paul Shorey, and his book is a work of which that exacting master, and indeed American scholars generally, might well be proud." Brand Blanshard

N Y Times p10 Ag 15 '54 650w

LEWE VAN ADUARD, EVERT JOOST, baron. Japan, from surrender to peace; with a foreword by John Foster Dulles. 351p il $7.50 Praeger

952.033 Japan—History—Allied occupation, 1945-1952 54-6648

"Quite a few good books have been written about the American occupation of Japan. Most of them have been by Americans. The best one that has come to this reviewer's attention is written by a Dutchman, Baron E. J. Lewe Van Aduard is a foreign service officer who spent four years for The Netherlands in Tokyo during the Occupation. In [this book] he tells what he saw, and makes an appraisal of what was done and its chances of permanent impact on Japan." N Y Times

Booklist 50:448 Jl 15 '54

"Objective, lucid study."

+ Bookmark 13:235 Jl '54 30w

"Scholarly."

+ Kirkus 22:255 Ap 1 '54 230w

"His concluding chapter, in which he makes a cautiously optimistic evaluation of the lasting accomplishments of this great experiment in social engineering, is excellent. Recommended for libraries maintaining collections on current international affairs." William Henderson

+ Library J 79:1401 Ag '54 170w

"A solid, factual account." D. W. Overton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Jl 11 '54 850w

"Any reader who wants a concise, accurate account of events in Japan from 1945 to 1951 will find this book ideal. On the other hand, the well-informed specialist in Far Eastern affairs can read it with genuine pleasure. Thus it enjoys the rare distinction of being a book that can appeal equally to the novice and the expert." R. A. Smith

+ N Y Times p3 J1 25 '54 750w

Reviewed by W. M. Ball

Pacific Affairs 27:282 S '54 440w

LEWELLEN, JOHN BRYAN. Atomic submarine; il. by Paul Valentino. 134p $2.50 Crowell
623.8 Nautilus (submarine). Submarines—Juvenile literature 54-5540

"Since the author explains the atomic submarine largely by comparing it with earlier types, his book provides both a history of submarines and an account of the uses and workings of the Nautilus." Library J

Booklist 50:384 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Robert Nicholas

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 S 19 '54 80w

"For the uninstructed at any age, this offers simple and adequate answers to the mystery of atomic power in any application, as well as the particular importance of the new power for atomic warfare undersea." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:256 Ag '54 100w

"The explanations are sometimes repetitious and occasionally confusing, but on the whole this is a clear and interesting treatment of a difficult subject. For an older age group than the author's books on atomic energy and space travel." Dorothy Schumacher

+ Library J 79:994 My 15 '54 90w

"The excellent pictures and diagrams by Paul Valentino have admirable strength and clarity." + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 16 '54 60w

"Mr. Lewellen has taken today's most fascinating submarine, the nuclear powered Nautilus, for his principal theme. . . He is able to inject both color and humor into this rather formidable subject. And, to top it all, the illustrations by Paul Valentino are excellent." C. B. Palmer

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 1 '54 140w

"There's not a dull or abstruse paragraph in this account of the development of submarines, and in particular of the workings of the Nautilus, the Navy's atomic-powered submarine." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:219 N 27 '54 70w

LEWELLEN, JOHN BRYAN. True book of farm animals; il. by Dwight Mutchler [prepared under the direction of Illa Podendorf]. 44p $2 Childrens press

636 Animals—Juvenile literature 54-8736

A picture-story book about farm animals for young readers.

Booklist 50:328 Ap 15 '54

Kirkus 22:231 Ap 1 '54 40w

"Shows first hand knowledge of farm lore and presents 'unusual and factual information' concerning domesticated animals and their usefulness." Jeanne Massey

+ N Y Times p20 J1 25 '54 30w

LEWELLEN, JOHN BRYAN. True book of moon, sun and stars; pictures by Lois Fisher [prepared under the direction of Illa Podendorf]. 43p $2 Childrens press

523 Astronomy—Juvenile literature 54-8737

"Tells what the moon is made of and how it moves around the earth, and shows the relationship of the spinning earth to the moon, the sun, and other stars." Publisher's note

Kirkus 22:231 Ap 1 '54 50w

"The text is excellent for grades 1-3 and worth while, since there are few books on astronomy for this group. Nevertheless, some of the concepts are too difficult for the average 6-8-year-old without additional explanation. Recommended especially for schools." Anne Jackson

+ Library J 79:786 Ap 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by Jeanne Massey

+ N Y Times p20 J1 25 '54 20w

LEWELLEN, JOHN BRYAN. You and space neighbors; drawings by Winnie Fitch [and] Joe Phelan. 58p $1.50 Childrens press

523 Astronomy—Juvenile literature

53-11693

Informal introduction to astronomy for young readers with a background of TV spaceship fantasies.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p28 N 15 '53 120w

Kirkus 21:531 Ag 15 '53 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 31 '54 70w

"Universe, space, time are difficult notions which John Lewellen brings to the child's intellect and makes comprehensible to the average young reader. We recommend this book for young readers in the age group of nine to twelve." V. S.

+ Sat R 36:78 N 14 '53 30w

LEWINSOHN, RICHARD. Animals, men and myths; an informative and entertaining history of man and the animals around him; tr. from the German. 422p $5 Harper

590 Animals and civilization 53-11848

A social history of animals which reaches back to pre-history and brings the story of animals and man up to the present, with a chapter on the animal's future. Index.

Booklist 50:369; 392 Je 1 '54; Je 15 '54

Bookmark 14:5 O '54 20w

Reviewed by W. M. Krogman

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 4 '54 450w

"The stuff for an exciting book is here, but somehow it lacks the divine spark which made Gods, Graves and Scholars an adventure in reading. The scientist, the naturalist, the people who like their facts marshalled in systematic and orderly fashion, will find this rewarding, if not absorbing, reading."

Kirkus 22:220 Mr 15 '54 220w

"Recommended." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:1314 J1 '54 120w

Reviewed by Francis Huxley

— New Statesman & Nation 47:198 F 13 '54 800w

"Some of the information presented is of the sort one expects in natural history books, but quite a little is out-of-the-way. . . Written simply and straightforwardly, the book is obviously not intended for specialists, but it ought to be interesting to any one interested in the subject matter." J. W. Krutch

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 27 '54 850w

"Careless and sweeping assertions mar the book in several places. After the dinosaurs died out, 'small mammals thrive on grass forage'—I would like to see a small mammal that does not starve to death on a grass diet. . . A fine book in spite of its weak points. And if anyone tells me he has read it without learning something new, I firmly resolve to disbelieve him." Willy Ley

+ — N Y Times p7 Je 20 '54 800w

New Yorker 30:99 Je 19 '54 190w

Reviewed by A. C. Smith

San Francisco Chronicle p15 J1 25 '54 370w

"'Animals, Men, and Myths' taken piecemeal is a wonderful bedside book or source for table-talk. There is something astonishing or provocative on every page. But taken as a whole it has a stature and strength to earn it rank as a monument." Alan Devoe

+ Sat R 37:23 Je 26 '54 850w

LEWINSOHN, RICHARD—Continued

"The chief defect of this work is one of scale. Had the author been more compact and selective he might have been more successful. Had he been even more abundant and exhaustive, giving a life-time to the compilation, he might have produced something of a biological Anatomy of Melancholy. As it is, much of the book is sketchy, and there are many omissions made all the more irritating by seemingly unnecessary inclusions. Nevertheless, it is redeemed by a passionate concern for the future of the animals, and an intense awareness of the extent to which that future depends on man. Because of its enterprise, its ingenuity, its vast range of reference, even because of its very tendentiousness, it was well worth doing, though at the same time, it was worth doing better."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p172 Mr 12 '54 900w

Wis Lib Bul 50:171 Jl '54

"It is inevitable that this encyclopedic range should, at its best, make for a delightful and chatty informality while, at its worst, it betrays the superficial errors all too often accompanying the gossipy and undocumented approach. . . It would be unfair to Mr. Lewinsohn, however, to exaggerate few minor errors in what is, in general, a pleasant and informative work. 'Animals, Men, and Myths' contains suggestive insights and trains of thought which ramify with rich profusion. Fortunately, it can be read piecemeal, much as one wanders in a museum, passing from case to case and emerging with a renewed sense of the quaint and marvelous, but with little feeling of direction." L. C. Eiseley

+ — Yale R n s 44:121 autumn '54 340w

LEWIS, CLAUDIA. Writing for young children. 115p $3 Simon & Schuster

028.5 Children's literature—Technique. Authorship 54-5809

The author has been a teacher in the Bank Street College of Education; has done research in psychology and ethnology; and has written for and about children. She shows the importance of such aspects of writing as rhythm, sound, form, and content, and demonstrates how outstanding authors have used them. Bibliography.

Booklist 50:410 Jl 1 '54

"Anyone who aspires to write for children will do well to absorb the point of view that Miss Lewis presents and to benefit from her recommendations for entering the child's world." E. C. Ince

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 N 11 '54 420w

"At the Bank Street College, Lucy Sprague Mitchell, who introduces this delightful book, still holds the writing workshop in which Miss Lewis also has been a teacher. . . Its basis is an understanding of children's earliest use of language, and close observation of their understanding and enjoyment of words, in relation to their daily life. . . One hopes that such a book will reach not only writers but editors, publishers and parents, for it is a revealing introduction to a way of thinking about small children's mental development. It is also an introductory critical book about children's reading in general, brief but potent." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 18 '54 400w

"She stresses the appeal of sound, rhythm, pattern and imagery, quoting from children's own unself-conscious expressions of emotion and impressions at different age levels. No manual for those who run as they write, this is a rewarding exploration of what children seek in form, content and theme." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p34 S 26 '54 180w

LEWIS, CLIVE STAPLES. The horse and his boy; with ill. by Pauline Baynes. 191p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

54-12817

Another volume of the chronicles of the mythical land of Narnia. This one tells the story of a talking horse, Bree, and his companion, a young boy, Shasta, and their flight from a neighboring country where they have been held in bondage. Characters from other tales of Narnia re-appear here.

Booklist 51:116 N 1 '54

"Children who loved the previous books about the magic land of Narnia will welcome these new adventures. But it is not necessary to know the other stories first."

+ Commonweal 61:203 N 19 '54 30w

"It is a good story, well written and true to the land of fancy, but it lacks some of the richness of the first four." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:435 D '54 120w

"A beautifully written tale to read aloud as well, in which C. S. Lewis' talents seem to flower more than ever."

+ Kirkus 22:484 Ag 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by Mary Crozier

Manchester Guardian p11 O 8 '54 90w

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis

New Statesman & Nation 48:404 O 2 '54 240w

"Besides its rare fairy-tale quality, this tale, with its stories within a story, has an air of Arabian Nights tales. Its multiple inventions, its people like King Lune and the Thing, its many animals and medieval battles are a very special brew, mixing time and imagined places as only this writer has skill to do. It is not the best of this series, but in style and imaginative power still far above other modern fairy tales." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p6 N 14 '54 240w

"Children, surfeited on unimaginative tales of socially adjusted children learning socially useful processes, will welcome this story of kidnapped princes and knights in armor and turreted castles as they have welcomed the preceding four. C. S. Lewis at his least-inspired is better reading than most of the dutiful authors who provide reading matter for the up-and-coming generation. But in the opinion of this admirer, 'The Horse and His Boy' is relatively uninspired." Chad Walsh

+ — N Y Times p44 O 17 '54 220w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:210 N 27 '54 90w

"This is a story to read and to reread, and a beautiful book to hold in the hand." A. O. Murphy

+ Sat R 37:74 N 13 '54 120w

Spec p658 N 19 '54 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p vii N 19 '54 160w

LEWIS, J. M. Sailing and small boats [Eng title: Sailing and small boats for boys and girls]. 95p il $2 Crowell

797.124 Boats and boating—Juvenile literature 53-9407

"An extremely readable book for the beginning sailor which covers, in easily understood terms and a few diagrams, the fundamentals of boat construction, canoeing, rowing, sailing, navigation, weather and tides, signalling, knots, care of boats, and safety rules, and adds a brief chapter on the history of shipping. Although published in England in 1951, the book is, with few exceptions, applicable for American sailors. . . Grades 6-9." Booklist

Booklist 50:302 Ap 1 '54

Kirkus 22:202 Mr 15 '54 30w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:714 Ap 15 '54 20w

LEWIS, MRS MARY CHRISTIANNA (MILNE) (CHRISTIANNA BRAND, pseud). Death in high heels. 287p $2.50 Scribner

54-315

Detective story.

Booklist 50:343 My 1 '54

"Droll characterization and refreshingly unique atmosphere for English detecting at a farcical level." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 F 28 '54 150w

Kirkus 21:772 D 1 '53 50w

"Miss Brand keeps her cast at a high tension of twitter so that the effect, if protracted, is still light." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 21 '54 150w

"Standard fare, but unusually well served." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p32 F 14 '54 60w

"Not the best Brand, but readable and pleasing." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 7 '54 50w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:34 Mr 27 '54 20w

LEWIS, NORMAN. Single pilgrim. 247p $3 Rinehart

54-5888

Novel of contemporary Siam. The hero, John Crane, works for a lumber company dealing in teak. Crane is interested in his work, in the country, and the people, and is unprepared for the orders from the government that the company must leave Siam. Crane takes a dangerous job, rather than go back to an unhappy marriage situation in London. Things are complicated by the unexpected arrival of Crane's neurotic wife. The end is tragedy.

Booklist 50:309; 321 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:186 My '54 20w

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 25 '54 360w

Reviewed by E. L. Snodgrass

Christian Century 71:823 Jl 7 '54 500w

"Mature readers who are weary of sallies into adolescence and sensationalism will appreciate the mellow quality that pervades Mr. Lewis' novel. . . . As his followers can testify, Norman Lewis knows Indo-China well."

+ Kirkus 22:132 F 15 '54 230w

"An interesting but painful book. . . . The painfulness of the underlying theme is offset by the charm and brilliance of the Siamese scene and above all by the character of Crane, so ordinary, so unassuming, and so strong an argument in himself for the standards he was trying to uphold. Mr Lewis creates this effect without the smallest approach to heroics, and it is perhaps the most memorable feature of this many-sided book." Elizabeth Jenkins

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 13 '53 120w

Reviewed by Giles Romilly

New Statesman & Nation 46:694 N 28 '53 170w

"As a novel I suppose that, strictly speaking, 'A Single Pilgrim' must be accounted a distinguished failure. But it is very well worth reading and very easy to read; and it throws a vivid, semi-documentary light on a little known part of the world whose destinies are currently of some importance to mankind." Peter Fleming

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 25 '54 1150w

"Sensitive book, written with an astonishing eye for the detail of Siam, Mr. Lewis points to the loyalties that remain." Robert Payne

+ N Y Times p27 My 16 '54 550w

"There are times when the motives of the characters . . . grow a little vague. But the plot moves rapidly and credibly and the atmospheric touches have a ring of authenticity which saves the book." John Haverstick

+ Sat R 37:34 Je 5 '54 200w

Reviewed by Stevie Smith

Spec p548 N 13 '53 270w

Time 63:120 Ap 26 '54 350w

"A few years ago Mr. Norman Lewis wrote a lively intelligent book about Indo-China. In A Single Pilgrim he has used much of the same background to produce a novel of unusual competence. It may, in fact, be a work of more than competence—for it abounds in acute political and human comment, in vivid description—but somehow, and it is difficult to tell exactly why, Mr. Lewis's writing leaves no great impression on the memory. It is perhaps that his style is not quite, for all its exotic natural images, individual or distinctive enough."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p757 N 27 '53 350w

LEWIS, OSCAR. Hawaii, gem of the Pacific; il. by Stephen Medvey. (Landmark bks) 183p $1.50 Random house

996.9 Hawaiian Islands—Juvenile literature 54-6265

A history of the Hawaiian Islands from the coming of the first natives to the present day. Includes industries, government, and strategic importance of the islands. For ages twelve to fifteen. Glossary. Index. There is a school edition published by E. M. Hale and Company, priced at $1.68.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p32 N 14 '54 20w

"An accurate, if not full, portrait of a place now more than ever in the public eye."

+ Kirkus 22:155 Mr 1 '54 130w

"Packed with information, the book, nevertheless, seems at times dry and uninspired. More detailed than O'Neill or Fergusson. Recommended only for large libraries and schools needing more material on Hawaii." M. J. Meade
Library J 79:1672 S 15 '54 70w

"Timely, painstaking, informative, but for the most part dull. It should be of greatest value as supplementary reading." E. L. B.

N Y Times p50 N 7 '54 20w

San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 28 '54 150w

"Adequately indexed and contains interesting glossaries of Hawaiian phrases and words. They are timely and librarians and young people will find [the book] useful until better material is made available." D. M.

+ Sat R 37:86 N 13 '54 30w

LEWIS, ROY, and MAUDE, ANGUS. Professional people in England [Eng title: Professional people]. 284p $4 Harvard univ. press

301.44 [323.32] Professions. Great Britain—Social conditions. Middle classes A53-5294

"Account of the transformation of the professional class from an exclusive intellectual hierarchy to a mass service stratum of modern society. The authors trace the processes that are responsible for this change from the days of the Cleric, the Doctor, or the Lawyer to the present day of the Technical Expert, and present data to support their thesis that this mass development has lowered professional ethics, subjected the expert to the demands of industry, government and society, and forced him to surrender his individuality." Library J

Reviewed by M. M. Gordon

Ann Am Acad 290:159 N '53 350w

"However accurately one might think Lewis and Maude have discerned trends—and it cannot be seriously doubted that they have done so with great skill—one cannot really believe in the usefulness of their solution; in fact, it may be doubted that they themselves have much faith in it as an anchor point for a conservative reaction to what is happening in the professional life of modern societies." C. W. Mills

Harvard Law R 68:198 N '54 1100w

"Both writers bring to this challenging analysis the scholarship and practical experience that give it authority. Recommended for most public library collections and for college libraries." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 79:457 Mr 1 '54 200w

"This book contains much interesting information about the development and growth of the professions in response to the demands of an increasingly complex society. Unfortunately, Mr. Lewis, a journalist, and Mr. Maude, economist and Tory member of Parliament, have mustered their facts in a thoroughly tendentious manner."

LEWIS, ROY—Continued

Nation 178:245 Mr 20 '54 220w

"This is a thoroughly bad book. It is full of grumbles, unsupported generalisations, and vague uses of words. It keeps jumping from facts to mere assertion, and back again, without any indication that its authors are conscious of the difference. It wanders about, so that the argument is often very difficult to follow; and it leaves one reader at least very doubtful, on more than one major point, what the authors really mean." G. D. H. Cole

— New Statesman & Nation 45:17 Ja 3 '53 800w

"That admirably instructive (and entertaining) book, The English Middle Classes, with which Mr. Lewis and Mr. Maude made their joint bow to the public three years ago, contained a single pregnant chapter on the professions. . . In their new book, [the authors] have provided the full-length study for which that chapter was, in a sense, a preliminary sketch, and much more beside; and have displayed the same shrewdness, objectivity, humour and sense of historical perspective as distinguished their earlier volume." Honor Croome

+ Spec p640 N 14 '52 750w

"Admirers of The English Middle Classes will be disappointed with Messrs. Lewis and Maude's Professional People. The earlier book was an admirable and coherent essay in descriptive sociology, based on wide research and presented with agreeable humour and many flashes of wit. Its successor, on the other hand, is rather scrappy and confused, and the humour seems to have gone sour; some of it, indeed, reads almost like a satire on the Welfare State and on the officials who administer it."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p124 F 20 '53 950w

LEWIS, WARREN HAMILTON. Splendid century. 306p il $5 Sloane

944.033 France—Social conditions. Louis XIV, king of France. Seventeenth century 53-9235

Beginning with a sketch of the life and character of Louis XIV, the author goes on to deal with various aspects of life in France in the 17th century in a series of chapters entitled: The court; The church; The army; The country gentleman; The town; The medical world; Female education; The world of letters, etc. Index.

"This volume is the work of a nonspecialist and was written for the entertainment and edification of a generous cross-section of the reading public. . . The level of approach is thus distinctly not that of the vast majority of the historians' guild. However, for the reader who seeks the type of information which this volume contains, it compares favorably with many similar treatments of the period in the selection of materials, sustained interest, the few judgments attempted, and above all the communication to the reader of a genuine feeling for the innumerable intricacies of human experience during the reign of the sun king." W. F. Church

+ Am Hist R 60:83 O '54 440w

Booklist 50:276 Mr 15 '54

Reviewed by R. M. Brace
Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 28 '54 340w

Reviewed by Neil Martin
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 27 '54 250w

Kirkus 21:814 D 15 '53 130w

"A truly distinguished work both in style and content. Recommended for general purchase." E. T. Smith

+ Library J 79:546 Mr 15 '54 170w

Nation 178:312 Ap 10 '54 240w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 21 '54 750w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

N Y Times p10 Ag 15 '54 650w

New Yorker 30:121 My 1 '54 160w

"There is much to enjoy in the vivid picture of life in the France of Louis XIV that W. H. Lewis offers in 'The Splendid Century.' Mr. Lewis is not only extraordinarily informative; he paints with a high color and he enlivens his graceful pages with humor and wit. . . Perhaps it is churlish to ask for more than Mr. Lewis has given us, but one cannot help wishing that he had stepped out and away from his colorful material to handle it a little more in perspective. His whole is not more than the sum of its parts." Leo Gershoy

+ — Sat R 37:10 Mr 27 '54 800w

"The author of this book does his best to make Louis human and he does stress many of the good qualities that the King possessed, but it would require a much better organised book and a much more critical handling of the materials before we could begin to hope we had seen even Thackeray's dummy under the grand robes of office. True, Mr. Lewis calls his book 'some aspects of French life,' but these turn out to be mainly 'social history' of the old type; no subjects are thoroughly dealt with and some are totally ignored. . . Yet the book has merits. It does make plain that there was something in Lewis XIV that justified Acton's very high estimate of him." D. W. Brogan

Spec p704 D 11 '53 1450w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 11 '54 600w

Time 63:118 Ap 12 '54 750w

LEWITON, MINA (MRS HOWARD SIMON). Rachel; pictures by Howard Simon. 185p $2.50 Watts. F.

54-5948

Story of Jewish life on the lower East Side and farther uptown where the Lessings moved when Rachel was eleven and Herman was eight. The time is forty years ago or more. For grades four to six.

Booklist 50:424 Jl 1 '54

"A sensitively written—and illustrated—book for today's young readers." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 25 '54 80w

"Girls of nine to eleven will enjoy Rachel. She is a very real little girl, quiet and thoughtful, often worried about the possibility of leaving the familiar streets for the unknown Uptown. Her family and neighbors in the crowded tenements are real individuals, too; and the East Side is clearly pictured. Yet, in spite of its many good qualities, the book lacks some of the spontaneity and warmth of Sydney Taylor's lively recollections of her East Side childhood, All-of-a-Kind-Family." J. D. L.

+ — Horn Bk 30:248 Ag '54 160w

Kirkus 22:198 Mr 15 '54 90w

"Little girls of eight, nine, and ten who devour family stories should enjoy reading about Rachel and her family." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 79:1238 Je 15 '54 40w

"A slight plot, composed of a succession of incidents, is the framework for a delightful picture of a close-knit Jewish family." Rose Friedman

+ N Y Times p20 Je 13 '54 180w

Reviewed by Augusta Baker

Sat R 37:30 Jl 24 '54 120w

LEY, WILLY. Engineers' dreams; diagrams and maps by [the author]; il. by Isami Kashiwagi. 239p $3.50 Viking

620.9 Engineering—History

54-5683

"Power from wind, waves, sun, artificial islands in mid-ocean for refueling planes, deserts made fruitful, heat from volcanoes and hot springs are some of the dreams that could come true in our lifetime according to Willy

Ley. Long a writer of popular science, Mr. Ley was one of the founders of the German Rocket Society, and has been engineer and consultant for various government scientific services in this country." Library J

Booklist 50:423 J1 1 '54

Bookmark 13:165 Ap '54 10w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 J1 18 '54 100w

"Make no mistake. This book is not science fiction, though it reads just as easily. Nor should it be viewed in the light of crystal gazing. The author has chosen his subjects carefully and those he writes about here are all great projects that engineers believe could come true." H. B. Nichols

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 1 '54 900w

"The 'engineers' dreams' included here 'are things that can be done—as far as the engineer is concerned . . . things that cannot be done—for reasons that have nothing to do with engineering.' . . . Mr. Ley does not merely throw out suggestions; he discusses each possibility with great detail in a way that will be fascinating to boys, and men too, who are interested in engineering." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:256 Ag '54 140w

"A series of highly readable portraits of unexecuted projects in which all Mr. Ley's talents as an entertaining, factual explainer of science for the layman, come to the fore."

+ Kirkus 22:123 F 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:720 Ap 15 '54 70w

"Some boys who read it may be among those who see some of the dreams come true. Some young would be engineers may start their own dreams, after such reading." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 16 '54 300w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:71 S '54

"A large part of the book is taken up with projects to extract useful power from winds, tides, volcanoes, the sun and ocean waves. This section seems a bit dated: atomic energy, which is fast approaching real practicality, promises to supply mankind with all the energy it will need. Still, 'Engineers' Dreams' offers both pleasure and profit to young readers—and to their elders as well." J. N. Leonard

N Y Times p14 My 30 '54 320w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:220 N 27 '54 70w

Reviewed by James Stokley

+ Sat R 37:19 Je 5 '54 700w

"This is a handsome book, full of many fascinating illustrations. It is written with competence and some charm. It is a book primarily for boys and young men whose interest lies in science and invention." A. O. Murphy

+ Sat R 37:39 Je 19 '54 140w

Wis Lib Bul 50:144 My '54

LEY-PISCATOR, MARIE (VON CZADA) (MRS ERWIN PISCATOR). Lot's wife. 506p $3.95 Bobbs

54-6496

A novel based on the Biblical story of Abraham, his nephew Lot, and their wanderings from Tyre, to Egypt, and Sodom.

"A heroic novel of panoramic sweep and concept." Henry Cavendish

+ N Y Times p42 O 17 '54 500w

"It seems as if Mrs. Piscator has caught up into her hands so great and fluid a mass of material that some of it has escaped between her fingers. Her statement about the life of man, which carries impressive force at its best, occasionally falters, blurs, and becomes less than coherent in cryptic, symbolic patterns. Yet, only a few writers could match the positive side of her accomplishment." Edmund Fuller

Sat R 37:17 D 11 '54 230w

LEYSON, BURR WATKINS. Man, rockets, and space; il. with photographs and diagrams. 188p $3.50 Dutton

629.14353 [629.13] Rockets (aeronautics). Interplanetary voyages 54-5032

Describes the advances that have been made in rocket flight and engineering in the last ten years, and presents the problems to be met before there can be a successful interplanetary trip. Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by John Lewellen

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 11 '54 60w

"The merits of this volume lie not in the originality of its subject matter, for books on rockets and space travel flood the market, but in its lucid and calm presentation of a complex and controversial subject. . . . Particularly well-done are the descriptions of the construction and operation of high-altitude rockets, and of the technical aspects of the von Braun plan for an orbital space station." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:380 F 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by Creighton Peet

N Y Times p16 Ag 8 '54 110w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 15 '54 150w

"'Man, Rockets and Space' is not a technical book and the layman will have no difficulty understanding Capt. Leyson's views." J. J. N. Springfield'd Republican p9C Mr 14 '54 350w

LEYSON, BURR WATKINS, and MANECKE, RUTH. Zoo comes to you; il. with photographs by [the authors] with an introd. by Herbert Knobloch. 88p $2.95 Dutton

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 54-6827

A book with photographs and descriptive text of the following creatures: owl, box turtle, rabbit, cockatoo, mouse, deer, skunk, parakeet, chipmunk, porcupine, llama, hamster, snake, beaver, fox, raccoon, armadillo, bat, pig, woodchuck, crow.

Booklist 50:425 J1 1 '54

Commonweal 61:202 N 19 '54 20w

Reviewed by V. K. Fitch

Library J 79:1323 J1 '54 40w

"With the aid of Capt. Leyson (author of 'Manty the Mantis') the text is written both to describe the zoo life and to inform about these creatures as they would live in the wilds. A generous size page, large type, many stunning photographs give it great appeal, either as a gift or for school or library use. Young children will particularly enjoy the reality of each animal personality." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 25 '54 180w

Reviewed by Augusta Baker

Sat R 37:30 J1 24 '54 130w

LIAS, GODFREY. I survived. 255p $3.75 Day 940.547 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, Russian 54-10459

An account of ten years spent in Russian prisons and labor camps, as told to the author by an Austrian lieutenant who was captured by the Russians at Stalingrad.

"His is a picaresque account filled with details of life in Russia, some interesting, some a mere recital of trivia. The book has many amusing and informative moments, but it is extremely disjointed. It lacks a sense of reality as well as any emotional identification with the cold-blooded observer that Mr. Lias makes of Pepi."

+ — Kirkus 22:561 Ag 15 '54 190w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 79:1892 O 15 '54 140w

"Pepi told his collaborator that his main purpose was 'to tear away the veil which hides the real face of the Soviet regime from the outside world.' In fact he has not done so and could not do so. When you are herded from one prison-camp to another, tortured, let out on probation only to work in fields, and even when you escape to inch your way towards a distant frontier, you are in no position to tear away any veils. . . His story is a good story, since he had rare experiences." Nigel Nicolson

LIAS, GODFREY—Continued

New Statesman & Nation 48:20 J1 3 '54 550w

"The book has its full share of horror and it has an authentic ring."

+ New Yorker 30:227 N 20 '54 180w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p27 D 2 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 15 '54 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p375 Je 11 '54 300w

LIDDELL HART, BASIL HENRY. Strategy; the indirect approach. 420p $5.95 Praeger

355.48 Military history. Strategy 54-9111

An English authority discusses his theory that the indirect military and political approach, combined, is more effective than the direct approach. He also analyzes the two world wars, and the careers of some great military men of history. In his Preface the author says: "My original study of 'the strategy of indirect approach' was published in 1929—under the title The Decisive Wars of History [Book Review Digest 1930]. The present book embodies the results of twenty-five years' further research and reflection, together with an analysis of the lessons of World War II—in strategy and grand strategy."

Booklist 51:55 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:5 O '54 30w

Reviewed by C. A. Willoughby

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 O 10 '54 1150w

"Probably the most important book by one of the outstanding military authorities of our time." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1508 S 1 '54 130w

Nation 179:368 O 23 '54 290w

New Statesman & Nation 48:304 S 11 '54 300w

Reviewed by G. A. Craig

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 5 '54 950w

"If at times the argument wears thin, it is because, out of excess enthusiasm for his theme, he overreaches. . . However, any Hart book is good foraging for the student of war. Sometimes he becomes too abstruse to be understandable even to those who toil in this same vineyard. Frequently he undervalues main factors, but the gross product is instructive and in parts inspired." S. L. A. Marshall

+ — N Y Times p3 Ag 29 '54 1150w

New Yorker 30:153 S 11 '54 140w

"His new book, 'Strategy,' in some sense is a major bid by Captain Liddell Hart for recognition as an architect and prophet. Self-conscious as a chef d'oeuvre and as vindication, it is a backward glance not only at all military history but at most of what its author has been saying for more than a quarter of a century. . . Captain Liddell Hart cannot write dully, and this book, like his earlier ones, bristles with challenge to the mind." Gordon Harrison

Sat R 37:11 Ag 28 '54 1250w

Reviewed by N. H. Gibbs

Spec p236 Ag 20 '54 700w

LIE, TRYGVE. In the cause of peace; seven years with the United Nations. 473p $6 Macmillan (N Y)

341.13 United nations (organization). International cooperation 54-12462

The former Secretary general of the United Nations writes in his foreword: "This volume of recollections deals with the questions which concerned me most during seven years as Secretary-General of the United Nations. These very questions also aroused the greatest public interest and were discussed daily, demanding constant attention by governments and by the United Nations itself. . . The present book is neither a history of the first seven years of the world organization nor a textbook, though I hope that teachers and students of international relations will benefit by reading it. It is written for ordinary men and women—in all countries—who are interested in the world in which they live and in the political climate of their own day." Index.

Booklist 51:56 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:32 N '54 20w

Cath World 180:v D '54 100w

"This is at the farthest extreme from being dry diplomatic history. The substance of it is solid, but through it runs the play of an alert and sensitive personality. Mr. Lie's report to the world is not only a record of political actions on the highest level, but also a picture of the personal experiences and inmost thoughts of a secretary-general; and it is the better for it." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:1303 O 27 '54 1500w

"If Mr. Lie had chosen to be indiscreet, he could have written a sensational book. Fortunately or unfortunately, he has resisted this temptation. Future historians will not find a great deal of raw material here for study. Those who have followed the UN closely since 1945 will be disappointed if they look for an 'inside story' which they did not already know. But short of this, the Lie memoirs are candid, highly readable, and informative." W. R. Frye

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 23 '54 600w

"An important book."

+ Kirkus 22:353 Je 1 '54 500w

"He is an honest man of strong convictions and a devoted worker for peace. This is a simple but intensely interesting story of Mr. Lie's efforts. Highly recommended for all libraries." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 79:1499 S 1 '54 170w

"It is a year and a half now since Trygve Lie ended his seven-year career as the first Secretary General of the United Nations. That career ended on a decidedly low note, and assessments of his contribution to international diplomacy were generally attuned to the latest unflattering impression of him. But the intervening months have made it easier to take a more objective view. And Lie's eminently readable 448-page 'apologia' will help mightily to insure that he gets his due though it will also reemphasize the personal shortcomings that accounted for the mistakes for which he has been rightly censured." Richard Friedlich

Nation 179:339 O 16 '54 1100w

Reviewed by P. J. Allen

New Repub 131:19 O 4 '54 1600w

Reviewed by Kenneth Younger

New Statesman & Nation 48:618 N 13 '54 1050w

"The concert of powers which willed into existence the United Nations as a permanent structure fell apart almost at once, giving way to the great and dangerous confrontation of interests known as the bi-polar world. This situation became enormously confounded by the emergence of a competition in massive weapons beyond anticipation at the time of the drawing up of the Charter. These facts produced frustrations of purpose and crises of operation undreamed of by Mr. Lie at the hopeful outset. His account tells of them in great and precise detail. It is drawn, he tells us, from official minutes and memoranda and from his diaries. It has that flavor. It is well-told narrative, notable for clarity and order of ideas rather than for subtlety and insight, for conscientiousness rather than imagination." C. B. Marshall

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 S 19 '54 1400w

"The Secretary General had powers exceeding those of any of the sixty individual states constituting the United Nations, the Big Four of course excepted. What did Mr. Lie do with these unique powers? That is the story told in this book, and perhaps it is inevitable, in view of the circumstances of his election, the extension of his term and his resignation a year before its completion, that he adopts a defensive tone." T. J. Hamilton

N Y Times p1 S 19 '54 1400w

"He writes with frankness and with a modesty tempered by the conviction that he did a good job against considerable odds. His concluding reflections on what should be done to keep such peace as we have and his recommendations for reforms in the United Nations, particularly in the matter of the use and misuse of the veto power, are sober and seem sound."

+ New Yorker 30:147 S 13 '54 230w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 10 '54 600w

"Interesting and readable." Lindsay Rogers
+ Sat R 37:27 O 2 '54 1200w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p9C N 14 '54 500w

"It is impossible to feel that Mr. Trygve Lie, conscious of his own good will and of the good will of his colleagues, has wholly faced it. By the end of the book he has come quite clearly, like many other people, to the sad conclusion that Communism is of its nature an aggressive creed. . . . Although circumstances have driven him to this analysis of the nature of Communism, he does not, it seems, even now appreciate the point of view of such a man as Ernest Bevin, of whom he is critical—Ernest Bevin, who thought from the first not only that no good but even that much harm might come out of constant politeness to, and conference with, Communists."

Times [London] Lit Sup p667 O 22 '54 1350w

LIND, LEVI ROBERT, comp. Lyric poetry of the Italian renaissance; an anthology with verse translations; with an introd. by Thomas G. Bergin. 334p $5 Yale univ. press
851.08 Italian poetry—Translations into English 53-7770

"In this anthology 165 Italian poems are printed opposite their verse translations. The most important poets in Italy from the 13th to the end of the 16th centuries are included, and all of the rare forms of the early Italian lyric—canzone, sestina, madrigal, and ballata—are represented, as is folksong." (Publisher's note) Indexes of poets and translators.

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 N 14 '54 100w

"Poetry of this sort is peculiarly difficult to translate and Professor Lind was fortunate in being able to use some sensitive and often beautiful versions by the American writer, Mr. Morris Bishop. For the earlier poets represented in his anthology he has wisely drawn on Rossetti wherever possible (surely one of our finest translators), except for Cavalcanti, who is left to Mr. Pound, and to Mr. G. S. Fraser, who supplies some accomplished renderings. Of other younger English writers, the best translations come from Mr. John Heath-Stubbs and Mr. Edwin Morgan. . . . It is with the remainder that the trouble starts. . . . And of the greater part of the versions in this anthology, it can only be said that they would be more acceptable if they were in plain, workaday prose."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p608 S 24 '54 1650w

"Italian Lyric Poetry through the Renaissance" might have been a more descriptive title, for it takes an advanced point of view indeed to accept St. Francis as a Renaissance figure, but perhaps one should not complain at receiving more than the title promises. The 165 poems are excellently chosen both for their intrinsic worth and as characteristics of the more than 30 poets included. . . . Every reader who knows Italian will obviously judge for himself, but it is my opinion that the translations are very good, with only a few that fall below that level and with a fair number (including many of Mr. Lind's contributions) that are really superb." A. T. McAllister

+ Yale R n s 44:157 autumn '54 350w

LINDBERG, JOHN. Foundations of social survival [ed. by Paul Clement]. 260p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

301 Sociology

53-11452

"The concept of God is the measure of man and civilization; the discovery that 'God is love' enlarges the measure of both." This statement succinctly summarizes the fundamental philosophy which pervades Dr. Lindbergh's extended essay in pure social theory. He addressed himself to the problem of social survival conceived as the striking of the right balance among the several basic functions of production, reproduction, order, and defense. From Plato and other social philosophers, Dr. Lindbergh adopts the method of construction of theoretical models." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"As an analysis of the pagan theology underlying dominant political theory since Plato, Lindbergh's testimony is of first importance. Most readers would find Fustel de Coulanges' classic, The Ancient City, a valuable preface to Lindbergh's book. Jane Harrison's Themis and Rachel Levy's Gate of Horn are likewise filled with detailed information about the pagan theory of the universe and the city as a machine for the making of gods. And Lindbergh assumes to some extent a reader who is at home in pagan ritual and theology. So far as these concern politics, he also provides a good deal of information himself." Marshall McLuhan

+ Commonweal 59:606 Mr 19 '54 1150w

"A work dignified by excellence of style and marked by reasoned reflection." W. T. Deininger

+ Ethics 64:319 Jl '54 950w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:202 Je '54 210w

LINDGREN, MRS ASTRID (ERICSSON). Bill Bergson lives dangerously; translated from the Swedish by Herbert Antoine; il. by Don Freeman. 214p $2.50 Viking

54-4337

Mystery story for young readers.

"Many children have as great a desire to read mystery stories as do some of their elders; and we are always on the lookout for the books that have more than just the mystery to recommend them. Astrid Lindgren's do. Good characterization, the vivid picture of the little Swedish village which is the scene of the Bill Bergson adventures; and, above all, real humor, along with a well-worked-out plot, make this a good addition to the mystery shelf for young readers." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:334 O '54 120w

Kirkus 22:489 Ag 1 '54 80w

"Full of laughter and excitement that is sure to give boys and girls of 10-13 a lot of entertainment." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 79:2497 D 15 '54 50w

"The author is writing about a village in her native Sweden, but her characters are so real and her emotional values so universal that the young reader will feel as though the action of the story had just taken place in his own home town." L. R. Davis

+ N Y Times pt2 p32 N 14 '54 80w

"Far more believable than most juvenile master minds, Bill Bergson and his friends have normal reactions to a real tragedy. Their adventures are also wonderfully funny."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 14 '54 40w

LINDGREN, HENRY CLAY. Effective leadership in human relations. 287p $3.50 Hermitage 301.155 Human relations. Leadership

54-10898

The purpose of this book is to stimulate self-examination on the part of leaders. "The term

LINDGREN, H. C.—Continued

'leaders,' as we shall use it in this book, covers executives in business and industry, teachers, doctors, economists, salesmen, lawyers, committee chairmen, ministers, labor union officials, scoutmasters, social workers, political candidates, bureau and division chiefs, directors, and so on ad infinitum. When we discuss leaders, we shall therefore be thinking of people who in various ways guide, control, direct, counsel, advise, teach, influence, and help others in the conduct of their public and private lives." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 51:98 N 1 '54

"The entire work is highly readable. . . . Practical for any general library." J. W. Stein
+ Library J 79:1585 S 15 '54 160w

LINDSAY, HOWARD, and CROUSE, RUSSEL.
Prescott proposals. 168p il $2.75 Random house

812

54-7469

"A sedate and rather old-fashioned melodrama revolving around a high-minded widow who serves as American delegate to the U.N. Her proposals to reach 'areas of agreement' with the Russians are almost sabotaged when the Czech delegate, her former lover, dies of a heart attack in her apartment, a situation that the Russians promptly exploit. The obvious plot is redeemed by the spirited and authentic sequences showing a subcommittee of the U.N. in action." Booklist

Booklist 50:316 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 79:779 Ap 15 '54 30w

Reviewed by William Hogan
San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 23 '54 50w

LINDSAY, PHILIP. Haunted man; a portrait of Edgar Allan Poe. 256p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Poe, Edgar Allan

54-11394

"Feeling that 'Poe's biography was a tale invented by Poe,' an Australian novelist and biographer here offers a not unsympathetic study of a man who created for himself 'desperate situations and lonely unhappiness,' and from these derived his 'great and terrible stories.' The ambivalence of his feeling for women, aggravated by the death of his mother and foster mother and the madness of Mrs. Stanard, the 'Helen' of his youth, is studied in relation to the abortive courtships of his later years." (Library J) No index.

Booklist 51:39 S 15 '54

"Actual criticism of his work is perfunctory. A useful biography, comparatively brief (compared to Allen and Quinn!), but perceptive. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1314 Jl '54 100w

"A book which can best be described by the American adjective 'slick.' The psychological judgments are confident and breezy, often superficial, sometimes utterly inconsistent with each other. There are flowery generalisations about aspects of Poe's life and emotions concerning which little or nothing is known. . . . Mr. Lindsay is not even familiar with recent research on Poe. . . . But Mr Lindsay does succeed in getting across something of the atmosphere of Poe's strange, melodramatic life, and those who are not too squeamish about the handling of the English language will find his book full of interest." David Dalches

Manchester Guardian p4 O 23 '53 430w

"Working in England, Lindsay has done nothing to distract interest from the standard life by Quinn; he does not pretend to offer more than a retelling—it is overwrought and not always reliable—of the powerful story Poe's life is, with only stock treatment of the man as artist, and none of the focus or synthesis that the meaning of the story makes us want." James Hafley

New Repub 132:20 Jl 19 '54 1500w

"We have come to think that the business of giving the public what it wants is a matter of really streamlined and insidious efficiency. Mr. Lindsay, by comparison, makes so few pretensions, or so few that are not disarmingly flimsy, and his technique is so reassuringly ingenuous and old-fashioned, that his book is almost engaging."

+ — New Statesman & Nation 46:464 O 17 '53 240w

"If Mr. Lindsay fails in his admirable intention—and he does, unfortunately fail—it is precisely because, not having done any original research himself, he too often seems to be unable to distinguish fancy from fact, legend and hearsay from documentary proof, theory and speculation from authentic biography." N. B. Fagin

Sat R 37:16 S 4 '54 750w

"This is a popular psychological study, but unfortunately it adds little to literary appreciation." J. R.

Spec p466 O 23 '53 60w

LINES, KATHLEEN M., comp. Lavender's blue; a book of nursery rhymes; pictured by Harold Jones. 180p $6 Watts, F.

Nursery rimes

A book of nursery rhymes illustrated in color and in black and white. Besides the many familiar rhymes there are some which are changed or not so well-known. The book is of English origin.

"It is all gay without being boisterous. A book to keep for years."

+ Commonweal 61:205 N 19 '54 30w

"This English import has a distinctive place of its own. There's definitely a nostalgic quality, a recall of Kate Greenaway and Caldecott in the quaintly mannered, pastel-tinted illustrations."

+ Kirkus 22:431 Jl 15 '54 140w

"It is not a large collection (167 rhymes), but the choices are good and the uniquely lovely combination of rhymes, format, and pictures make it a book to cherish." Lillian Morrison

+ Library J 79:2492 D 15 '54 50w

"In spite of Walter de la Mare's tribute to the artist on the dustcover one cannot agree that he was a happy choice in this instance, though it is difficult to say why the illustrations displease. One hopes that this is merely an adult reaction, because the collection is most interesting and includes additional verses of well-known rhymes as well as many longer rhymes not found in the usual compilations."

Pamela Brisbane

+ — Manchester Guardian p11 O 8 '54 110w

"The bookmaking has an eighteenth century flavor, with lovely colors well-printed in England. The style is rather stilted, but there is much humor and story action which will interest children above nursery age." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk pt2 p16 N 14 '54 240w

"Notable for the excellence of its format and the variety of material, including groups of rhyming games and finger plays. Distinguished illustrations by Harold Jones have been beautifully reproduced in delicate color and black-and-white." Eugenia Garson

+ N Y Times pt2 p40 N 14 '54 50w

Reviewed by B. B. Thorpe

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 14 '54 100w

Sat R 37:67 N 13 '54 50w

"[It would be] madness to ask this beautiful and satisfying book the many scholarly questions that an assemblage of nursery rhymes—the very stuff of folklore—provokes, particularly when many of the 150 are folksongs lacking their tunes, counting rhymes, riddles, or songs that have become popular but are no part of folklore. At what date, for instance, did the familiar holy passengers leave The Three Ships that come sailing by? Pedantry aside, a rich comprehensiveness is something for which to give thanks. Harold Jones's il-illustrations, best in color, fully express the richness of the collection as they frame each page." K. G.

+ — Spec p351 S 17 '54 200w

"Miss Lines, as could be expected from someone so knowledgeable in the field of children's books, has done her part with great thoroughness. No traditional favourite seems to be missing and sticklers can be sure, too, of finding the traditional versions. Mr. Jones's pictures, mainly in black and white, though there are many in delicate colour, can be studied and learnt by heart like the rhymes."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup pxvii N 19 '54 390w

LINGANE, JAMES JOSEPH. Electroanalytical chemistry. 448p 107il $8.50 Interscience

545.3 Electrochemistry. Chemistry, Analytic 53-10756

"A graduate-level review of methods of chemical analysis (except polarography) which depend upon reactions at metallic electrodes in contact with electrolytes or upon the passage of an electric current through electrolytes. Electrogravimetry, electrography, potentiometry, amperometric titrations, conductometry are the chief methods covered." N Y New Tech Bks

"The volume is a review of technique, procedures, instrumentation, and descriptive methods covering all of the literature on the subject and coordinated in such a fashion that it becomes intensely useful and necessary to those who might want to employ the procedures of the volume. It is a 'must' for the analytical and control chemist." C. L. Mantell

+ Chem Eng 61:353 J1 '54 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:83 N '53

"Although admittedly a graduate text, it is neither handbook of electronic circuitry nor laboratory manual of electroanalytical procedures, for the author has created a scholarly presentation of enduring principles rather than the usual descriptive catalogue of apparatus and techniques. Critical, factual, comprehensive, and written with the discerning touch of skilled authority, the book can be useful to graduate student, research man, and practicing analytical chemist."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:123 Mr '54 220w

LINK, ARTHUR STANLEY. Woodrow Wilson and the progressive era, 1910-1917. (New American nation ser) 331p 1l maps $5 Harper

973.913 Wilson, Woodrow. U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 53-11849

"This book represents an attempt to comprehend and re-create the political and diplomatic history of the United States from the beginning of the disruption of the Republican party in 1910 to the entrance of the United States into the First World War in 1917." (Pref) This is the first volume of the New American nation series. Essay on sources. Index.

Reviewed by G. C. Osborn

Ann Am Acad 295:160 S '54 500w

Booklist 50:220 F 1 '54

"A readable, unbiased study."

+ Bookmark 13:105 F '54 20w

Reviewed by A. S. Henning

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 24 '54 450w

"So scholarly and complete is this history of the first four years of the Wilson administration that it would take an expert of Professor Link's stature to challenge his work. Even then one suspects that the faults to be found would be so picayune as to contribute little."

Roland Sawyer

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 F 11 '54 440w

Foreign Affairs 32:673 J1 '54 20w

"A brisk, fruitful study."

+ Kirkus 21:753 N 15 '53 200w

"A scholarly, exhaustively documented treatise. . . For reference, college and university libraries." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:141 Ja 15 '54 200w

Reviewed by Max Beloff

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 11 '54 130w

"Professor Link has given us a scholarly account of President Wilson's first term. He has dug deep into the vast storehouse of source materials and has made excellent use of his findings." C. A. Madison

+ Nation 178:242 Mr 20 '54 300w

New Statesman & Nation 48:140 J1 31 '54 200w

"Mr. Link's treatment is careful, comprehensive and cold. He has read everything on the subject, he has compared and balanced contradictory accounts of the same event, and he has rigidly resisted the temptation to be moved by enthusiasm. . . It has great value, however, in the examination of a situation in which there is no doubt that the lowest possible motives had free play. . . In any event, the movement from neutrality to intervention was glacial both in its slowness and in its irresistible power, and nowhere has it been portrayed better than by Mr. Link. This is the high point of his book." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk p6 F 21 '54 700w

"'Wilson and the Progressive Era' is authoritative history, hewn out of massive research. It is, moreover, highly suggestive history. Mr. Link has not backed away from the portentous quality of the Wilson years. His theme is essentially one of troubled newness—of swift, turbulent, many-directional change toward the present. His favorite word is 'dilemma.' If he often uses it in a way that outrages the semantic amenities, it nevertheless suggests his concern with the tortuous problems that arose when America made contact with the twentieth century." E. F. Goldman

+ N Y Times p3 F 21 '54 700w

"To many people, Wilson was a great social reformer and a precursor of the progressive movement, but Mr. Link's findings—and he is careful to give his sources—tend to qualify that conception. . . However, the book is in no sense unsympathetic to its subject. In the latter half, which deals with Wilson's unhappy experiences in foreign policy and concludes with the declaration of war, Mr. Link is practically holding his hand. All in all, one of the clearest and best accounts available of the period."

+ New Yorker 29:114 F 13 '54 250w

Reviewed by Richard Johnston

San Francisco Chronicle p27 F 14 '54 700w

"Drawing upon his prodigious research on the life and times of Woodrow Wilson, Arthur S. Link has achieved the difficult goal he set for himself in writing 'Woodrow Wilson and the Progressive Era.' . . His account supersedes all previous accounts. His accuracy and perception set a standard that will challenge the contributors to Harper's New American Nation Series, of which his is the first volume published." J. M. Blum

+ Sat R 37:22 Ja 30 '54 750w

"Wilson is here as a representative man as well as a leader. Professor Link is free, possibly too free, from the disease that Macaulay called the lues Boswelliana. His Wilson is painted, warts and all. That is all to the good. But the author is a little unjust to his chief character because, doctrinally, Wilson and he, both 'liberals,' differ on a great many important points. . . But the student, at any level, must be grateful for this pioneering and fascinating work."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p332 My 21 '54 320w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:175 Je '54 240w

Wis Lib Bul 50:72 Mr '54

LINKLATER, ERIC. House of Gair. 251p $3.50 Harcourt

54-5251

A Scotch novelist, the narrator, stops at a lonely house on the moor, where he is entertained by the occupant, a contemporary of Oscar Wilde and Aubrey Beardsley. He is fascinated by his elderly host and a few weeks later he returns for another visit. Gradually he learns the truth about the suave villain of the House of Gair, and he himself is rescued from the villain's clutches just in time.

LINKLATER, ERIC—Continued

Booklist 50:279 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:159 Ap '54 30w

"The writing is smooth and practiced; the structure interesting. But the tone is monotonous, and the story is not so much resolved as merely stopped by the final pileup of faintly incredible violence." Richard Sullivan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 7 '54 370w

"This book is a tight structure of three parts, each of them skillfully supplementing the one theme. With the growing awareness of the theological implications of imaginative literature, this book may well merit inclusion on the shelf given to the doctrine of sin; it makes the concept come alive and shows vividly the shape that evil takes." E. L. Snodgrass
+ Christian Century 71:553 My 5 '54 360w

Kirkus 22:13 Ja 1 '54 180w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:451 Mr 1 '54 100w

"Mr Linklater's skill in building up the narrator's circumstances with so much conviction, his broken marriage and his aunt who lived at Brighton, gives the inner story that grip that only the illusion of reality can create." Elizabeth Jenkins

+ Manchester Guardian p6 O 9 '53 170w

"I'm afraid it is really a rather large setting for a quite small stone." Derwent May
New Statesman & Nation 46:462 O 17 '53 170w

"Eric Linklater's new novel, 'The House of Gair,' is that rare thing nowadays—a novel of unflagging entertainment that tells a good story very well indeed." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 21 '54 600w

"The verdict is: good for half the distance, but slim pickings the rest of the way. Or, as that old scoundrel Crome might have put it, an entertaining opusculum for an idle hour." John Barkham

+ — N Y Times p4 Mr 7 '54 600w

"[The] story has a fine and spirited beginning; the ending, though, unfortunately falls just short enough of good melodrama to be unconvincing."

+ — New Yorker 30:125 Mr 20 '54 50w

"Mr. Linklater's frightening termination of his story is a holocaust that would not be convincing if he had not led up to it so deftly in his previous chapters. In addition to its fascinating and odd characters and its tightly-knit plot, 'The House of Gair' is one of the most convincing and well-written novels of suspense of the new year." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R 37:19 Mr 20 '54 600w

"This is a story to which one can surrender wholly. The penetration is intuitive, sharp, and on occasion pitiless." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p408 O 9 '53 550w

Time 63:104 Mr 8 '54 450w

"Mr. Linklater is still a good enough storyteller to keep us concerned and curious about what will happen next, but what in fact does happen is disappointing and dissatisfying. One feels that even Mr. Linklater heaved a sigh of relief when he finally sent the House of Gair up in flames."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p657 O 16 '53 400w

Wis Lib Bul 50:73 Mr '54

LINTON, CALVIN DARLINGTON. How to write reports. 240p $3; college ed $2.25 Harper 808.06 [029.6] Reports—Preparation 53-11850

"The three sections of this book cover forms, or the characteristics of various kinds of reports; methods, or how to approach a topic, plan and carry out research, evaluate sources, and present material according to the type and purpose of the report, and the mechanics of grammar, punctuation, note-taking, and outlining material. A glossary of grammatical terms and a discussion of expository writing are included." Management R

Booklist 50:219 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:181 My '54 10w

Kirkus 21:727 N 1 '53 90w

Reviewed by R. L. Vormelker

Library J 79:630 Ap 1 '54 80w

Management R 43:207 Mr '54 70w

"Mr. Linton has written one of those rare handbooks in which you're pretty sure to find what you are looking for. . . The last part, the 'mechanics,' and very good it is too, is a quickie refresher in grammar."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ja 24 '54 50w

Wis Lib Bul 50:67 Mr '54

LIPKIND, WILLIAM (WILL, pseud), and MORDVINOFF, NICOLAS. Circus ruckus, by Will and Nicolas. [44p] col il $2.75 Harcourt 54-8577

Small boy Dan, and his dog, Kelly, go to the circus. At first their presence caused a ruckus but after a wild chase they turned up unexpectedly in a star act. Brief text and many pictures tell the story.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:94 D '54 60w

Booklist 51:90 O 15 '54

"Everyone loves a circus. If your child has seen a circus he will thoroly enjoy the story and the large comical, colorful illustrations. The younger child, who has yet to be initiated to circus life, is apt to be a little confused by the wild experiences of Dan and his pet, Kelly." E. S. D.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 14 '54 120w

"Enormous pictures of circus people and much zip in the text (for they all run after Kelly) makes this appealing for the four-to-eights." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 7 '54 50w

Commonweal 61:205 N 10 '54 20w

"These collaborators have found in the circus an admirable subject for their new picture book. Nicolas' dashing drawings, with bright color printing, have properly exaggerated tempo for the author's hilarious tale. . . Wonderful fun!" V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:326 O '54 90w

Kirkus 22:633 S 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by M. S. Mathes

Library J 79:2493 D 15 '54 70w

"A dream of excitement and fun for small boys is offered in this original circus picture story." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p5 N 14 '54 180w

"Hurry, hurry, hurry! Don't miss this one. It'll leave you breathless, delighted and cheering." Pat Clark

+ N Y Times p50 N 7 '54 100w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:202 N 27 '54 60w

Reviewed by B. B. Thorpe

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 14 '54 100w

"A first purchase for the picture-book shelves and to add to a collection of books about the circus. It is comparable to 'The Two Reds' in originality of both text and art work." E. A. Groves

+ Sat R 37:67 N 13 '54 140w

Springf'd Republican p9C D 12 '54 50w

LIPKIND, WILLIAM (WILL, pseud), and SCHREIBER, GEORGES. Professor Bull's umbrella [il. by Georges Schreiber]. [36p] $2.50 Viking

54-3677

"Professor Bull was fond of three things—music (especially brass), radishes (well-seasoned), and his umbrella (Philip). 'No radishes in the house!" sends the Professor to the store and launches Philip on an astonishing odyssey that throws the populace in a tizzy. After a wildly careening flight through the air with one amusing stop-off, Philip slips quietly back into the Professor's outstretched hand." Sat R

Booklist 51:116 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:11 O '54 20w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 14 '54 150w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p17 D 9 '54 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

"Philip's brief and exciting adventure is amusingly told, but it is the sweep and gusto of the illustrations, and their interesting use of color, that make this one of the most distinguished picture books of the year." J. D. L.
+ Horn Bk 30:427 D '54 160w

"No encores for the text but a curtain call for the pictures."

Kirkus 22:432 J1 15 '54 80w

"Children love a good chase, and here's an elegant one, as Philip eludes various shopkeepers, a mounted policeman, and a noble statue who almost keeps him for good." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p32 N 14 '54 250w

"The humor is a little heavy in spots, or perhaps merely too adult, but Georges Schreiber's pictures are lively, and particularly when musical instruments are used, the patterns are fine." Marjorie Fischer

+ — N Y Times pt2 p40 N 14 '54 90w

"The story is a fluffy bit of fun, guaranteed to tickle the funny bones of most small children, especially when it accompanies the completely delightful illustrations of Georges Schreiber. Boys and girls will pore over the pictures and let them recall the story long after they have ceased to read the text." A. B. McGuire

+ Sat R 37:72 N 13 '54 120w

LISLE, CLIFTON. Growing year. 265p il $3.50
Farrar, Straus

635.9 Gardening 53-10416

A retired army colonel, living at Chester Springs, Pennsylvania, gives in this book a kind of garden calendar; a month by month report of work in his own garden thruout a whole year.

Booklist 50:197 Ja 15 '54

"A book to be read and thoroughly enjoyed by everyone who loves gardens."

+ Bookmark 13:136 Mr '54 10w

"Col. Lisle has a delightful way of making a garden come to life. . . He has that true love of the land which makes gardening so gratifying. Anyone who has a plot of ground and no garden will discover, in this book, what he or she has missed." Helen Reber

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 D 27 '53 40w

"A fine book. Other gardening books have followed the pattern of what to expect and chores to be done each month of the year, but the treatment in this book is new. . . An excellent gift for any small house gardener; good garden club item."

+ Kirkus 21:649 S 15 '53 190w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 13 '54 80w

Springf'd Republican p10D Ja 17 '54 200w

LISTER, RAYMOND. Silhouettes; with a foreword by Simon Lissim. 76p il $2.95 Pitman 741.7 Silhouettes [54-7395]

"An introduction to their history and to the art of cutting and painting them." (Subtitle)
Mr Lister is Librarian of the Royal Society of Miniature Painters, Sculptors and Gravers and author of "The British Miniature". Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:218 F 1 '54

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1060 Je 1 '54 40w

LITCHFIELD, EDWARD HAROLD, and others. Governing postwar Germany. 661p $7.75 Cornell Univ. press

354.43 Germany—Politics and government 53-12380

"Edward H. Litchfield, one of General Clay's principal advisers, [has] edited this symposium of twenty articles on the origins and the political processes of postwar German democracy. The contributors, chosen for their competence and their first-hand experience in governing Germany, describe in admirable detail the formal elements of German politics. The result is without question the most comprehensive survey of present-day German political institutions. It is, perforce, a highly specialized work and essays on Organizations and Methods Control and Budget Management, for example; are included, while considerations of a broader and more analytical nature are omitted." Sat R

Reviewed by H. C. Deutsch

Am Hist R 59:705 Ap '54 240w

"By and large, this is an excellent reference work. However, one must observe that a better balanced work would have resulted if the informative chapter on Labor by Professor Taylor had been accompanied by one on business." Harold Lewis

+ — Ann Am Acad 292:209 Mr '54 500w

Foreign Affairs 32:512 Ap '54 30w

"The glaring shortcomings of this book are, in the main, the result of three factors. First of all, the publication of a book on the government of Western Germany, which constitutes the main topic of this volume, is clearly premature. . . Second, to do justice to the topic of this book would have required a unified point of view with regard to the relevance of problems and the standards of evaluation. . . Finally, and most important, in the contrast between its own lack of vitality and the vital importance of the subject with which it deals, this book is but another example among many of that self-mutilation and self-stultification which are widely taken as the mark of scientific endeavor in the social sciences. . . It is this basic intellectual deficiency which has frustrated the objective of this book, eminently worthwhile in itself." H. J. Morgenthau

+ — Harvard Law R 67:904 Mr '54 1400w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Nation 179:233 S 18 '54 280w

Reviewed by Fritz Stern

Sat R 36:40 O 31 '53 260w

LITCHFIELD, PAUL WEEKS. Industrial voyage; my life as an industrial lieutenant; il. by Richard Bartlett. 347p $4.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Goodyear tire and rubber company, Akron, Ohio 54-10455

"The autobiography of Paul Weeks Litchfield, the New Englander who began his career as plant superintendent of a struggling company, the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company in Akron, Ohio, and who grew with it until it is now a billion-dollar business and he is chairman of its board. The book is illustrated with photographs and line drawings." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:129 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:32 N '54 30w

"Apart from dramatically recording the excellent job Goodyear did in the World War II effort, Mr. Litchfield discusses at length his opinions of the New Deal-Fair Deal philosophy. Of course, the reader has the right to applaud or object to his critical viewpoint—but it all adds up to an important book about a vital era in American history." H. C. Kenney

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 19 '54 700w

Kirkus 22:520 Ag 1 '54 180w

LITCHFIELD, P. W.—Continued

"The personal life history is deadily dull. When the author lapses into economic philosophy, which is all too frequently, the book reads like something straight out of the 19th century. For all this, the work is important both as a picture of the growth of a great industrial enterprise and of the man who directed it. For all economic and business biography collections." Paul Wasserman

+ — Library J 79:1822 O 1 '54 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 10 '54 40w

LIU, BEATRICE. Little Wu and the water-melons; il. by Graham Peck. 96p $2.50 Follett 54-10099

Little Wu wanted to earn money to buy an ornament for his mother. The story tells how he raised the money, and then changed his mind about the use of it, thus bringing joy to his whole family. For ages seven to ten.

Booklist 51:22 S 1 '54

"A child's love for his mother warms this tale—whose author has lived among his people—and beautiful, authentic pictures do her story full justice." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 1 '54 120w

"Both the author and the illustrator, Graham Peck, have lived in China. Both book and pictures have in themselves a feeling and look of authenticity." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 2 '54 90w

"A realistic and quietly appealing story." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:330 O '54 140w

"Quietly told, this has the stature that won it the Charles W. Follett award."

+ Kirkus 22:485 Ag 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:700 Ap 15 '54 50w

"Excellent social studies material." Grace Shakin

+ Library J 79:2497 D 15 '54 70w

"The story is overlong for its simple plot, largely because of Mrs. Liu's all-too-thorough treatment of the manners and customs of the Miao (whom she knows well). Nevertheless, it has a kind of elemental wisdom, presented in terms which young children can understand." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p30 O 3 '54 180w

"Both Beatrice Liu and Graham Peck have lived in China and in their text and illustrations have recreated the spirit of the people, their love for the land, and the basic simplicity of family life. Though not a picture book, it is profusely illustrated with striking and colorful pictures, and will be enjoyed and read by younger children." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:34 Ag 21 '54 160w

Wis Lib Bul 50:217 O '54

LIVINGSTON, HAROLD. Coasts of the earth. 278p $3 Houghton; pa 35c Ballantine

54-5701

"The time was 1948, and the place was Israel, and they were American airmen in Tel Aviv—Americans risking their lives to fly arms and ammunition from a secret Czech base across the Mediterranean to this beleaguered little country fighting for its independence. . . . The story moves from Tel Aviv to Paris to Prague to Jerusalem, and like a twin leit-motif the two themes sound through the book—that of the Gentile seeking self-realization, the Jew trying to find identity." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 16 '54 420w

Kirkus 22:40 Ja 15 '54 150w

"Recommended." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 79:551 Mr 15 '54 140w

"Though highly readable, the novel is in many respects superficial—no less so because of its critical undertones. The author is apparently not thoroughly at home with his subject, and readers therefore do not fully understand the trouble with Becker. They may even be left with the notion that the only alternative to being a neurotic, self-torturing American Jew is to be a dashing American Gentile."

+ — Nation 178:265 Mr 27 '54 320w

"Sensitively written if rather slight first novel." Gerold Frank

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Mr 28 '54 550w

"It all rings true. Old hands in Israel will have some fun identifying the characters. It is not too difficult. 'The Coasts of the Earth' can be read, and thoroughly enjoyed, as a fast-paced adventure story. But the author has given it a deeper, more universal meaning—and these overtones will also repay the thoughtful reader." D. A. Schmidt

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 21 '54 700w

"A book that needed to be written. . . . Mr. Livingston's characters are really types, representative composites, but he has produced a fascinating panorama of a chapter in world history which was and is a human struggle with its roots in scriptural antiquity." Mack Morriss

+ Sat R 37:21 Ap 10 '54 550w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 100w

LOCHLONS, COLIN, pseud. See Jackson, C. P.

LOCHNER, LOUIS PAUL. Tycoons and tyrant; German industry from Hitler to Adenauer. 304p $5 Regnery

338.943 Industry and state. Germany—Industries and resources 54-10443

"An account of German industry from Hitler to Adenauer told by a man who was for fourteen years chief of the Berlin Bureau of the Associated Press." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Reviewed by Robert Root

Christian Century 71:1336 N 3 '54 460w

"Despite ample opportunities for observation, Mr. Lochner still does not understand the sociology of fascism. In a time of recartelization and impending rearmament, he bids us have faith in German big business." F. L. Schuman

Nation 179:427 N 13 '54 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 24 '54 30w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

N Y Times p32 N 14 '54 500w

Reviewed by Telford Taylor

Yale R n s 44:287 winter '55 450w

LOCKE, ARTHUR. Tigers of Trengganu; with a foreword by Malcolm MacDonald. 191p il maps $3.50 Scribner

799.2 Tigers. Hunting—Malaya 54-10372

"Trengganu is a wild, remote state in north-eastern Malaya, and soon after his arrival there as British Government Administration officer Colonel Locke realized that part of his duties would be to hunt and kill tigers who were man-eaters or who were destroying domestic animals. He developed an immense interest in the great cats and collected a vast quantity of information about them. . . . All of this information he has included in this book, along with the thrilling stories of his personal adventures hunting them." Publisher's note

Booklist 51:35 S 15 '54

"An enthralling account of hunting experiences."

+ Bookmark 14:5 O '54 40w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 30:465 D '54 70w

Kirkus 22:420 Jl 1 '54 180w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 79:2106 N 1 '54 40w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 12 '54
50w

Reviewed by R. R. Camp
N Y Times p10 Ag 22 '54 450w
New Yorker 30:154 D 18 '54 100w

"One of the best big-game books in several seasons." Edison Marshall
+ Sat R 37:26 Ag 21 '54 600w

LOCKE, CHARLES O. Last princess; a novel of the Incas. 316p $3.50 Norton 54-6716

Historical novel of the conquest of Peru by the Spaniards. Told from the Inca point of view, the story follows the life and loves of a princess of the ruling house, Tacara-mi, and her lover, Taclos.

Booklist 50:240 F 15 '54

"Locke tells the story in a modern idiom which often seems inappropriate to the material. But his novel brings a primitive culture vividly to life and recreates one of the least known dramas of history." Walter Havighurst
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 24 '54 270w

Kirkus 21:720 N 1 '53 160w

"One could forgive the triteness of the plot if the author gave the reader more of the flavor and feeling of Peruvian civilization and countryside. Mr. Locke does not begin to approach the grandeur of the country nor the epic qualities of the Spanish conquest. Not recommended." Julia Sabine
— Library J 79:146 Ja 15 '54 130w

"The remarkable fact about 'The Last Princess' is that the entire cast of characters is as convincing as the background. This book is in the tradition of 'Andivius Hedulio'—and no higher praise can be given."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 2 '54 260w

"Although it doesn't quite come off, either as fiction or political science, 'The Last Princess' contains enough exotic detail, enough intelligent speculation about the eternal riddle of what makes an empire fall, to add up to a historical novel of more than average interest." Richard Match
+ N Y Times p22 Ja 17 '54 460w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 7 '54 240w

"The story of 'The Last Princess' is beautifully written but it is too bad that it does not contain a more complete description of the lives and customs of the peoples of a fabulous era of history." B. F. K.

+ Springfield Republican p10D Ja 17 '54 90w

LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES LOUISE (DAVIS), and LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. Curtain for a jester. 222p $2.50 Lippincott 53-12291

Detective story.

Kirkus 21:722 N 1 '53 50w

"Remarkably well sustained in general for all that the Norths have been at this sort of thing for a couple of decades and might reasonably be tired." James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ja 17 '54 180w

"Frances and Richard Lockridge always manage to achieve a good formal detective story in their tales of character and manners; and Curtain for a Jester is even more the pure whodunit than most novels of Mr. and Mrs. North." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p26 Ja 10 '54 70w

"Nothing very new or astonishing, but remarkably pleasant."
New Yorker 29:60 Ja 2 '54 160w

"If the pattern's familiar, it's still good for interest and thrills." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ja 31 '54 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:39 Mr 6 '54 20w

LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES LOUISE (DAVIS), and LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. Key to death. 224p $2.50 Lippincott 54-9427

Detective story.

Booklist 51:134 N 15 '54

Kirkus 22:504 Ag 1 '54 70w

"This is all spun delicately and with that soft little pelting of ambiguity which is as much a part of the Lockridge manner as Pamela's secret sequiturs. For the old readers it is, of course, enough to observe that there's a new story about the Norths at hand." James Sandoe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 31 '54 100w

"I am almost convinced that the Lockridges are werecats; no one else could write of both cats and people so well. And story and movement are here, as usual, so smoothly devised as to please even ailurophobes." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p49 O 17 '54 120w

"Up to the Lockridges' usual standard, which is quite a high one."

New Yorker 30:175 O 23 '54 120w

"Quieter than usual, but satisfying. B plus." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 31 '54 80w

"Slow start, strong finish." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:63 N 6 '54 20w

LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES LOUISE (DAVIS), and LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. Nameless cat; pictures by Peggy Bacon. 78p $2.25 Lippincott 53-12836

Cats—Legends and stories

The "nameless cat" was a big black stray Tom which the boy, Bob Wilkins, had been feeding quietly after dinner. Then one night the S.P.C.A. moved in to try and capture some of the strays in the neighborhood. After a wild chase, the cat finally sought refuge with Bob and thereby gained a name.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 D 26 '54 60w

"Only adults who know and like cats can fully appreciate the Lockridges' remarkable ability to interpret cat nature. For cat lovers of any age." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:334 O '54 90w

"Most of it is back yard geography (with a little Egyptian history) rather dryly spun, but with Lockridge appeal."

+ Kirkus 22:387 Jl 1 '54 60w

"This is an exciting tale of a New York City cat, written skillfully by experienced authors who certainly understand cats. Peggy Bacon's illustrations are good, though not her best, by any means." M. C. Skinner
+ Library J 79:1665 S 15 '54 50w

"A tense, powerfully written, rather strange little book. . . It is good to see Peggy Bacon's wonderful cat pictures again in a book, matching its feeling and action so perfectly." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p7 N 14 '54 220w

"It's good."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 14 '54 80w

"A dramatic, tightly-written story which will appeal to many nine-to-eleven-year olds. Peggy Bacon's distinctive drawings add to the suspense." M. P.

+ Sat R 37:35 S 18 '54 150w

LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD, and LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES LOUISE (DAVIS). Death and the gentle bull. 224p $2.50 Lippincott 54-6111

Detective story.

Booklist 50:453 Jl 15 '54

Kirkus 22:250 Ap 1 '54 60w

LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD—Continued

"It's all as easy and pleasant as it usually is and undoubtedly this is the consequence of a good deal of highly professional grooming." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p9 My 30 '54 120w

"This one offers a novel and ingenious method of murder, a fascinating background of the breeding of Aberdeen Angus cattle, and Capt. Merton L. Heimrich—with gratifyingly greater emphasis this time on his skill than on his mannerisms." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p13 Je 20 '54 60w

New Yorker 30:88 Ag 21 '54 120w

"Heimrich, whose mannerisms have pleasantly abated, does one of his neatest jobs on tenuous evidence, and the menace to the heroine really makes sense. Nice young people and extraordinarily good background are added attractions. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 18 '54 110w

"Not hard to take." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:31 J1 10 '54 20w

LOCKWOOD, AUGUST G., and STANTON, NORMAN E. How to finish your attic and basement yourself; drawings by Louis A. D'Amelio. 279p $3.50 Barrows

694 Building—Repair and reconstruction 53-8221

"An easy-to-use book for the amateur, describing the methods of professional carpenters 'to save time, money and materials.' Photographs, diagrams. Glossary, index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:161 D 15 '53

Bookmark 13:84 Ja '54 10w

LODWICK, JOHN. Love bade me welcome. 318p $3 Roy pubs.

Detective story.

53-9778

Kirkus 22:10 Ja 1 '54 160w

"Count against it an alibi based on an impossible mistake in police procedure and some odd notions of the author's (that the name of Carmen's lover is Rodrigo or that it was Horatio who stood at the bridge) and you're left with a moderately enjoyable book—which could surely have been told in 40,000 fewer words." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p32 F 14 '54 120w

New Yorker 29:113 F 13 '54 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 18 '54 260w

"Nice going." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:52 Mr 13 '54 20w

LOESSER, ARTHUR. Men, women and pianos; a social history [pref. by Jacques Barzun]. 654p $6.50 Simon & Schuster

786.2 Piano

54-9801

The idea back of this book is "that pianos have always been bought by middle-class families for show. The instrument rose to prominence in the eighteenth century when businessmen all over Europe, coming up in the world, began to want daughters as sensitive and accomplished as noblewomen. Music seemed to be the answer, and the piano, which permitted a ladylike posture and made more noise than the harpsichord, seemed to offer the best value." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 51:127 N 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p35 D '54

"Today the piano, no longer a symbol of respectability, has settled into its place as a musical instrument—in maturity it can look back on the growing years, the youthful sallies and flirtations in society. Anyone interested in music and manners will enjoy looking back too."

+ Kirkus 22:525 Ag 1 '54 200w

"The author, a resourceful and widely read pianist and critic (Cleveland), is the right man for this exposition. His one difficulty is the style: a tendency to 'write cute' when, really, his normally felicitous vein would serve." C. K. Miller

+ — Library J 79:2456 D 15 '54 160w

"What a book! At first sight one is intimidated by this portly volume of 654 pages. It is weighty to handle—but it never makes heavy reading. It never drags; it keeps one going; it is crammed with interesting and often novel information and is throughout entertaining and even exciting. And what a wide view it takes of its subject!" P. A. Scholes

+ N Y Times p5 N 14 '54 1200w

"Mr. Loesser, having exhumed two hundred years of mediocrity with care, seems heartily disgusted by what he has found."

New Yorker 30:139 O 30 '54 140w

Reviewed by Carolyn Stull

San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 12 '54 280w

LOETSCHER, LEFFERTS AUGUSTINE. Broadening church. 195p $4.75 Univ. of Pa. press

285.1 Presbyterian church in the U.S.A.—Doctrinal and controversial works 54-7110

"A study of theological issues in the Presbyterian Church since 1869." (Subtitle) The author is Associate professor of church history at the Princeton Theological Seminary.

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 71:1434 N 24 '54 160w

"Dr. Loetscher's book is well documented. . . He has produced a volume which clearly traces theological issues during an important era in the life of a major American denomination. His presentation seems somewhat mechanical and would have been more interesting if he had interjected editorial comments more often. A source of some disappointment is the fact that the author, while recognizing the contemporary need for new theological formulations, concludes his work abruptly without a hint of the content of his own faith." F. W. Whittaker

+ — New Eng Q 27:423 S '54 900w

LOEWENGARD, HEIDI HUBERTA (FREYBE) (MARTHA ALBRAND, pseud). Nightmare in Copenhagen. 236p $3 Random house

53-9716

"If the Russians ever get hold of the secret explosive that a Danish fisherman has recovered from a wrecked German submarine, they will, of course, blow everybody up, and, as it happens, nothing stands in their way except a young American scientist. In addition to bringing in all these nationalities, Miss Albrand's book has quite a lot to say about love, kidnapping, Communism, and various brands of scenery and manners." New Yorker

Booklist 50:360 My 15 '54

Horn Bk 30:194 Je '54 60w

"Craftsmanship and know-how keep this smooth and diverting."

+ Kirkus 21:769 D 1 '53 130w

"Not quite as good as Miss Albrand can be, but exciting and colorful. For all spy story fans." M. D. Read

+ Library J 79:792 Ap 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p28 My 2 '54 30w

"It is a fairly crowded work, but the author is very skillful at this kind of thing, and she handles her material with commendable vivacity."

+ New Yorker 30:135 Mr 27 '54 110w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 23 '54 50w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 20w

LOFTS, MRS NORAH (ROBINSON). Bless this house. 285p $3.50 Doubleday

54-5363

The chronicle of a house and its inmates over a period of more than three hundred and fifty years. The house was called Merravay, a handsome E-shaped building, which was erected in East Anglia in 1577 and went thru many hands until 1953 when it came back to the Rowhedges.

Booklist 50:297 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54 40w

"A remarkable achievement and eminently readable." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 179:231 Je '54 180w

"It is very good indeed. . . The book has its shortcomings, I suppose. A certain lack of continuity inheres in the plan. The style seems too modern in the Elizabethan episode, more so surely than in Mrs. Loft's novel about Raleigh, 'Here Was a Man.' But you will not think much about such things. And if the final episode seems anti-climactic, that, too, is part of the design." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 28 '54 350w

"Some of the Interludes, naturally enough, are more interesting than others, but all set forth in varying degrees the moods and manners of their periods. . . However, when one looks back and sums it all up, a little sense of disappointment creeps in. The Interludes are less sharply portrayed, less poignant than they might be in feeling. Perhaps, after all, the author became too absorbed in the experiences of her characters, so that she sometimes loses sight of the old tawny brick house standing squarely upon its green lawn with the great hedge of trees beyond." Margaret Williamson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 18 '54 360w

"Norah Loft's writes with grace and beauty and a dramatist's sense of the pattern of her tale."

+ Kirkus 22:159 Mr 1 '54 180w

"Outstanding novel recommended for duplication by small public libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 79:626 Ap 1 '54 60w

"Miss Loft's holds the long tale of Merravay together in a wonderfully satisfactory fashion, keeping it unforgettably interesting, moving and changing, even in narrative style, with the times. I can't recall when I have enjoyed a historical novel so much." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Mr 21 '54 420w

"To span four centuries in a normal-sized book requires some fast footwork on the part of the writer. Miss Loft's covers the distance by weaving together eight separate episodes, each of a different generation. . . The individual episodes are uneven in quality, but all are enveloped in a rosy romanticism. Women readers will love it!" John Barkham

N Y Times p4 Mr 21 '54 320w

"A long novel, delightful to read."

+ New Yorker 30:125 Mr 20 '54 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 28 '54 550w

"An extraordinarily engrossing book, carefully and ingeniously plotted and beautifully written. Norah Loft's is a born storyteller, and her chronicle of a house and its people is memorable not only for the brilliance of its range and the poignance and drama of its human protagonists, but for her gift for making manifest that quality of the vitality and personality of a great house, a house which was far more than simply an ordered arrangement of brick and timber." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 37:16 Mr 27 '54 490w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p149 Mr 5 '54 110w

Wis Lib Bul 50:137 My '54

LOGAN, RAYFORD WHITTINGHAM. Negro in American life and thought: the nadir, 1877-1901. 380p $5 Dial press

301.451 [325.26] Negroes—History 54-6000

This book is a study of the political, social and economic aspects of the "Negro problem" during the last quarter of the nineteenth century. The author is professor of history at Howard University. Index.

Reviewed by Ulysses Lee

Am Hist R 60:132 O '54 420w

Reviewed by Roi Ottley

Ann Am Acad 296:186 N '54 480w

Booklist 50:291 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:182 My '54 20w

Reviewed by Roi Ottley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 1 '54 350w

"A valuable contribution to a little-understood phase of American history."

+ Current Hist 26:256 Ap '54 140w

"Though his opinions and choice of facts may be considered by some readers to be depressingly one-sided, the author has been remarkably objective in his treatment of all aspects of the question. A distinguished work, and perhaps the definitive one. Highly recommended." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:201 F 1 '54 140w

"Dr. Logan's book is almost painfully enlightening. It is proof of the author's scholarship that the facts are set down objectively and that the conclusions based on them are not only sound but temperate. No reader can miss the significance of this brilliant first volume of a projected—and long needed—re-evaluation of an important aspect of American history." Saunders Redding

+ Nation 179:196 S 4 '54 500w

Reviewed by Philleo Nash

New Repub 130:19 Mr 22 '54 290w

"Mr. Logan introduces realism into a period of the Negro's hard history about which too little is available aside from white-supremacy fiction." Marquis James

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 14 '54 700w

"Portions of this book are understandably bitter and occasionally the author appears more the advocate than the historian. But the study, based on enormous research into sources not previously exploited by historians, is unusually rich in new fact and interpretation. All in all it is a valuable and absorbing contribution to the history of the Negro and the nation." B. I. Wiley

+ N Y Times p3 F 14 '54 450w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:176 Je '54 290w

Reviewed by C. V. Woodward

Yale R n s 43:604 summer '54 650w

LOINES, ELMA, ed. China trade post-bag of the Seth Low family of Salem and New York, 1829-1873 [and Harriet Low's journal, 1829-1834, much abr. by Katharine Hillard, 1900]. 324p il maps $12.50 Falmouth

387.5 U.S.—Commerce—China. China—Description and travel. Lowe family 54-22380

"A volume of letters from the young Lows who, for more than forty years, were active in the China trade. They gave it up in favor of commission houses after steamers and the telegraph came into use, but before that, one of them was caught in the Opium War, one was marooned on a small space of land in Canton, and one went to be a companion to her aunt in Macao. . . one founded a fleet of clipper ships, and one captained some of these vessels and was commodore of the American fleet in China waters." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Well edited but poorly proof-read, these letters provide insights into the personalities and affairs of a prominent American merchant family. In them also is much American social and economic history." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 16 '54 700w

LOINES, ELMA—Continued

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ja 31 '54
70w

"The men were deadly dull, but Harriett had the spark of life, and well rewards us. . . She had a pretty face and an abiding faith in the Unitarian religion: happiness kept breaking through. She wrote artlessly, and it is not always possible to know whether she is writing with her tongue in her cheek. . . For the rest, there are the solemn letters of traders, the profit and loss, brief descriptions of the skirmishes between the British and the Chinese in the years before the Opium War broke out, the merchants' inflated letters filled with moral precepts and a jumble of figures. The best is Harriett and the clippers, taking sea cucumbers, sandalwood, and Spanish dollars to China, returning with their treasure chests of tea." Robert Payne

+ — Sat R 37:15 Jl 17 '54 700w

LONDON, UNIVERSITY. Courtauld institute of art. Courtauld collection; a catalogue and introd. by Douglas Cooper; with a memoir of Samuel Courtauld, by Anthony Blunt. 205p 91pl $15 De Graff

708 Courtauld, Samuel. Paintings—Catalogs. Impressionism (art) [54-3512]

"While this book might be described as a full-dress catalogue of a great collection, designed for libraries, scholars, and connoisseurs, its introductory essay has considerable general interest. It offers a detailed study of English taste in art from about 1870 to about 1920 and a reappraisal of the connections between England and the Impressionists." Nation

"The catalog is valuable for information on specific paintings and on the artists in general, for detailed descriptions of paintings, drawings, engravings and prints, and sculpture." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:1059 Je 1 '54 160w
Nation 179:219 S 11 '54 350w

LONG, EDWARD LEROY. Conscience and compromise; an approach to Protestant casuistry. 166p $3 Westminster press

241 Casuistry 54-5280

"How to apply Christ's rule of love in an evil world is a harrowing problem to thoughtful Christians. Prof. Long of Virginia Polytechnic institute addresses himself to the task of making the technique of dealing with this problem in personal life—'casuistry'—theologically and emotionally respectable. His task No. 2, also effectively handled, is to jar persons into thinking about the problem if they have been Sunday Christians and Monday pagans." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) No Index.

Reviewed by H. N. Wieman
Ann Am Acad 294:211 Jl '54 400w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 21 '54 60w

"An interesting and challenging book of interest to Protestant students of theology and Christian ethics."

+ Kirkus 22:106 F 1 '54 180w

"A valuable study, more successful in its general ideas than in their applications to specific cases. Only large libraries will need." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 79:201 F 1 '54 130w

LONG, HARRIET GENEVA. Rich the treasure; public library service to children. 78p pa $2 A.L.A.

027.62 Libraries, Children's 53-9660

"Miss Long, associate professor of Library Science at Western Reserve University, reviews the role of the public library in the life of the child so that the library's contribution may be made increasingly effective. The book traces the early beginnings of children's librarianship and relates the profession to contemporary thought about the child and to the stream of effort by which the modern community hopes to develop better citizens of tomorrow. The library as a guiding influence on the child's reading and cultural development is discussed." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 50:214 F 1 '54

"In a brief treatise Miss Long, an associate professor of library science at Western Reserve University, has reported clearly and challengingly on the role of the public library in the life of the child. Addressed to administrators, heads of children's work, children's librarians, and students of library science at a graduate level, it is a helpful and quotable piece of professional literature." Virginia Haviland

+ Library J 79:437 Mr 1 '54 420w

"Its challenging presentation should prove interesting not only to librarians but to teachers and students of social science."

Wis Lib Bul 50:38 Ja '54

LONG, JOHN CUTHBERT. Soldier for the king; a story of Amherst in America; il. by Frank Nofer. 182p $1.50 Winston

54-5065

A Boston lad, shanghaied by privateers and taken to England, manages to join General Jeffery Amherst's forces, and plays an important part at the siege of Louisbourg in 1758. For grades four to six.

"Tactics cum trouble cum triumph move at a good clip through historical fiction of the winning side."

+ Kirkus 22:115 F 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr
Library J 79:1238 Je 15 '54 50w

Reviewed by G. A. Woods
N Y Times p22 Ag 22 '54 60w

LONG, LAURA. Queen Esther, star in Judea's crown; a dramatic retelling of the book of Esther. (Heroes of God ser) 156p $2 Assn. press

Esther, queen of Persia—Juvenile literature 54-8383

A novel based on the life of Queen Esther, the beautiful Jewish girl, who married the Persian king, Ahasuerus, and lived to save her people from destruction. For age twelve and older.

Booklist 50:425 Jl 1 '54

Kirkus 22:66 F 1 '54 40w

"Recommended." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 79:461 Mr 1 '54 70w

"Biblical retelling at its best. Faithful to the essential story, Laura Long has brought it alive with a fast-moving plot, frequent humor and irony, and a real skill of individualizing the morality-play figures of the biblical narrative. With deceptive casualness, she catches the atmosphere of an oriental court and what went on behind the scenes." Chad Walsh

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 4 '54 320w

Springf'd Republican p7C Mr 28 '54 80w

LONGRIGG, STEPHEN HEMSLEY. Iraq, 1900 to 1950; a political, social, and economic history [issued under the auspices of the Royal institute of international affairs]. 436p $6.15 Oxford

956.7 Iraq—History 54-699

"This is a British history of 'Iraq for 1900 to 1950. It is a full account of the events of the half-century, with a complete record of the personalities producing the events. It also describes the policies and principles that determined 'Iraq's recent history. Here a careful, experienced, honest historian, who participated in the story, writes as one who sought 'Iraq's and Britain's welfare. An 'Iraqi historian could interpret many of the events differently, and might add information, but, as history, his report would do well to be as good as this book." Am Hist R

"Mr. Longrigg's Four Centuries of Modern Iraq (1925) prepared him for writing this book. His years as a government official gave him knowledge of, and access to, important sources. He uses, but does not quote, these sources. Literary skill and understanding of historical values enabled him to turn official documentary information into reliable historical literature." E. E. Calverley

+ Am Hist R 60:70 O '54 650w

Foreign Affairs 33:167 O '54 50w

"There are several misspelled words and names and his system of transliteration is not uniform. These minor errors and misspellings should be corrected in a second edition of this worthy continuation of General Longrigg's earlier scholarly volume. On both he is to be congratulated." Majid Khadduri

+ Pol Sci Q 69:473 S '54 600w

"At a time when the weakness and instability of the Arab states is causing a dangerous vacuum in a vital area, the specialist will welcome Brigadier Longrigg's careful survey of the last fifty years in Iraq. The author's credentials require no scrutiny. And the fact that so careful a book by so sympathetic an observer makes gloomy reading is a measure of the intractability of the problem." H. A. R. P.

+ Spec p246 F 26 '54 350w

"That an outstanding recruit to English historical scholarship was diverted from Oriel by the chances of the First World War . . . is confirmed by this sequel to the author's Four Centuries of Modern Iraq, published as long ago as 1925. Nevertheless, Brigadier Longrigg's deferred contributions to history gain not a little by their being informed by practical experience of men and affairs which is all too often lacking when academic historians essay the contemporary scene."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p308 My 14 '54 950w

LONGRIGG, STEPHEN HEMSLEY. Oil in the Middle East: its discovery and development [issued under the auspices of the Royal Institute of international affairs]. 305p maps $4 Oxford

338.47 Petroleum—East (Near East) 54-9920

"This is a painstaking, precise, and compact account of the development of the world's greatest oil reserve. It traces the industry from its establishment as a modern enterprise in the late nineteenth century to its present spectacular achievement. The book is skillfully organized on a combined chronological and geographical basis, thus enabling the author to give full justice to the effects of the exigencies of two world wars and the opportunities of peace upon the successes and failures of each country and company." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by D. D. Crary

+ Ann Am Acad 296:218 N '54 270w

"A remarkably well-balanced historical study." R. M. Saunders

+ Canadian Forum 34:165 O '54 250w

"An essential reference book." Nancy Crawshaw

+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 25 '54 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p435 Jl 9 '54 800w

LONGSTREET, STEPHEN. Lion at morning; with line drawings by the author. 597p $4.95 Simon & Schuster

54-9798

The theme is the rivalry between Bart and Tom Heacock, father and son. Bart is a promoter and a woman chaser; his son is an artist, sometimes touched with genius; and he, too, has difficulties with women. Tom ranges over the United States, and France and Italy, looking for the answers to some of his problems. The father goes down to defeat; for the son there is a ray of hope.

Kirkus 22:500 Ag 1 '54 210w

"Mr. Longstreet, himself an artist and playwright, has written a novel rich in experience; he seems equally at home in Rome, Mexico, New York, or on the West Coast. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1504 S 1 '54 120w

"This story, though essentially that of two men, has a rare scope and a grandeur. Its scene roves over much of the United States and some of Europe; it does not meander, but moves with a precision, an exactitude and a rightness that keeps everything in sharp focus and clearly understandable, like the best of the paintings of Tom Heacock, one of the book's two protagonists." D. M. Mankiewicz

+ N Y Times p35 O 31 '54 550w

New Yorker 30:185 N 6 '54 90w

"There are times when Mr. Longstreet strikes false notes: he has a tendency to write bad lines and to deal in the glib currency of words like 'so good and wonderful and strange and honest.' But the total impact of his novel is one which adds up to a portrait of an artist who is frequently believable, and as a large artist at that." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat N 37:38 O 23 '54 190w

LONGSTRETH, JOSEPH. Tiger tizzy; designed and illustrated by William D. Hayes. [38p] $2 Abelard-Schuman

54-5242

A picture-story book for ages four to six. It tells about a young tiger in a tizzy and what the other animals and the tiger himself did about it.

Kirkus 22:109 F 15 '54 80w

"The humor of his predicament will appeal to the beginning reader and to those younger children who still have to be read to. This animal fable unobtrusively brings out the moral that in keeping busy and helping others a person forgets his own troubles." Elenora Alexander

+ Library J 79:634 Ap 1 '54 70w

"Young children enjoy a moral when it is presented as this one is, with action, diverting dialogue and amusing pictures." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p24 F 21 '54 90w

LONGSTRETH, THOMAS MORRIS. Scarlet force; the making of the Mounted police; il. by Ruth M. Collins. 182p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

354.71 [351.74] Canada. Royal Canadian mounted police—Juvenile literature

A54-10030

"This book deals with the making of the Mounties, the first twenty-odd years of their existence which started with one of the great marches of history and closed with the orderly conquest of the Yukon. It shows how law and order were set up in a wild country then dominated by rum-selling desperadoes. It reveals how a few men of decent instincts and great courage could subdue a country nearly as big as Europe, persuade 20,000 proud and nationalistic red men to accept domination, and prepare a wilderness for settlement." Publisher's note

Booklist 50:207 Ja 15 '54

Kirkus 21:589 S 1 '53 130w

"An admirable history. . . Lack of index hampers use for reference. Deserves more distinguished illustrations. Recommended for teenagers." Elizabeth Mitchell

+ Library J 79:77 Ja 1 '54 90w

LONGSTRETH, THOMAS MORRIS. Time flight; il. by John C. Wonsetler. 216p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

54-9010

Two teen-aged boys are transported back in time to the days of witch-hunting in Salem, Massachusetts. They meet Cotton Mather and are accused of witchcraft, are jailed, and escape. For ages 12 to 16.

LONGSTRETH, T. M.—Continued

"Longstreth's jauntiness often masks some idea-worthy material."

+ Kirkus 22:117 F 15 '54 70w

"Recommended for boys 12-15 who like historical adventure stories." E. S. Yoneshige

+ Library J 79:866 My 1 '54 60w

"A first-rate period adventure story, full of well-researched local color and exciting action, and marked by rounder characterization than the average juvenile." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 23 '54 170w

"Here is a good picture of those early troubled days—and perhaps there is a parallel to be noted for our own day. As Rich cautions Doug about telling anyone of their adventure he says, 'they just wouldn't believe it—people don't change much.'" G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times p20 J1 11 '54 200w

"The story is fast moving, the historical background is reasonably accurate, and the vocabulary is suitable for junior and senior high school. Both the space ship enthusiast and the serious history student would find the book interesting and instructive." R. O. M. Anderson

+ Social Educ 18:382 D '54 150w

LONGYEAR, WILLIAM LLOWYN. Advertising layout. 108p il col il $6.50 Ronald

659.132 Advertising—Layout 54-7647

"The great contribution of this book to the field lies in its numerous illustrations of the latest styles in design as exemplified by the work of leading commercial artists and directors plus the marginal notes concerning these which the author has made. Also added is a chapter on the graphic arts in television. The rest of the text is practically the same as that given in a book of the same title written in 1940 by Richard S. Chenault, to whom this volume is dedicated." Library J

Booklist 51:99 N 1 '54

"Here is an 'idea' book which should prove helpful to anyone planning or engaged in advertising layout for magazines, newspapers, direct mail, posters, and magazine covers."

R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:1318 J1 '54 120w

"High school students considering a career in advertising art will find it helpful. Much of the large-size book is given over to excellent examples of work by leading designers, with appropriate explanatory captions. . . . Mr. Longyear will be remembered by art teachers as being active for many years in the Eastern Arts Association. His book should receive wide use in the professional art schools."

+ School Arts 54:51 S '54 190w

LOOMIS, CHARLES PRICE, and others. Rural social systems and adult education. 392p $5 Mich. state college press

374 Sociology, Rural. Education of adults

"This book is a committee report resulting from a study sponsored by the Association of Land-Grant Colleges and Universities and the Fund for Adult Education established by the Ford Foundation. Here is a wealth of information on the purposes, structure, programs, and interrelation of educational facilities available to farm and rural people in relation to the three areas of adult education being investigated, namely: (1) international understanding for peace, (2) strengthening of democracy, and (3) understanding and strengthening the economy." J Home Econ

Reviewed by S. C. Mayo

Am Soc R 19:797 D '54 700w

"The chief limitation of this exceedingly valuable study is the lack of clarity in what passes for rural 'education.' The inquiry, by design, was limited to three areas, international understanding for peace, strengthening of democracy, and understanding and strengthening of the economy. Much, if not most, of the effort of the agencies and organizations described in the study as relating to these areas can be considered educational only by grace of language." Nathaniel Cantor

+ — Ann Am Acad 293:188 My '54 480w

Booklist 50:271 Mr 15 '54

"Each chapter is a separate unit concluding with a brief summary. Footnotes, chapter bibliographies, and appendix material describing the study aid in making this an unusual reference not only for teachers and students but also for those concerned with the current operation or future development of educational programs in rural areas of the United States." Frances Scudder

+ J Home Econ 46:347 My '54 300w

LOOMIS, CHARLES PRICE, and others, eds. Turrialba: social systems and the introduction of change. 288p il maps $3.50 Free press

309.17286 Turrialba, Costa Rica. Costa Rica —Social conditions 54-7388

"This book is described as a report on 'the results of an interdisciplinary research program on the introduction of change and the nature of the social systems in the Central American community of Turrialba, Costa Rica' (Pref) [Partial contents:] Social status and communication; Informal social systems; Economic systems; The ecological basis of social systems in Turrialba; Health systems; Religious systems; Educational systems; Agricultural extension systems; Political systems; Study of the strategy of changes on large estates and small farms in Latin America." Ann Am Acad

"The work will be very useful for persons contemplating research projects in Latin America and will be especially valuable for extension workers in any country. On the negative side, the work, as might be anticipated, appears to suffer somewhat from lack of coordination due probably to the large number of authors involved." N. L. Whetten

+ — Am Soc R 19:639 O '54 600w

"This is an extensive program for a single monograph, even when done by several authors; but this work does manage to give at least a survey of the main aspects of each of its topics. One reason for the comparative success of the book is that the frames of reference have been explicitly stated." G. L. Trager

+ Ann Am Acad 295:177 S '54 650w

LORAC, E. C. R., pseud. See Rivett, E. C.LORANT, STEFAN. Life of Abraham Lincoln; a short, illustrated biography. 256p $3.50 McGraw

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 54-7674

"An illustrated biography with more than 180 pictures. Mr. Lorant is the author of several illustrated and picture biographies, among them 'Lincoln; His Life in Photographs' and 'FDR; a Pictorial Biography.'" N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by B. P. Thomas

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 26 '54 360w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 10 '54 20w

"Mr. Lorant has written a one-volume biography of Lincoln that has the distinction of being the most compact, yet comprehensive, book among the one-volume lives of the Emancipator that have appeared in the last five years." Jay Monaghan

+ N Y Times p16 O 17 '54 480w

"Mr. Lorant, a leading authority on Lincoln iconography uses the anecdotal method, a very appropriate one, in this brief, breezy, illustrated biography, which covers the whole story. . . . In view of the many unusual pictures, it's a pity that such a lot of them have been so miserably reproduced."

+ — New Yorker 30:186 O 9 '54 120w

Reviewed by John Haverstick
Sat R 37:23 D 4 '54 30w

"It is a fine and welcome addition to the steadily increasing Lincoln library, and an excellent opportunity to read the best work of a notable writer." R. F. H.
+ Springfield Republican p7C N 28 '54 800w

LORD, CLIFFORD LEE, and LORD, MRS ELIZABETH SNIFFEN (HUBBARD). Historical atlas of the United States. rev ed 238p $3.75; pa $3 Holt

911 U.S.—Historical geography—Maps. U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Population 53-10208

"The original edition of this work was reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin for April 1945 [Book Review Digest 1944, 1945]. This revised edition remains a useful collection of maps and information presenting the political, social, and economic evolution of the United States. Its contents is divided into four sections: general maps, colonial period, 1775-1865, and 1865-1950. The wide variety of maps shows among other trends the development of the settlement and territorial expansion of the United States, the growth of suffrage, progress of abolition, state votes on amendments to the national constitution, geographical distribution of House and Senate votes on war declarations and peace treaties, population densities, compulsory school attendance, child labor, hours of work, manufacturing areas, production of crops, and transportation facilities." Subscription Bks Bul

"Some of the shortcomings of the 1944 edition as brought out in the 1945 review are not corrected. The lack of clarity in many of the maps remains a valid criticism. Although the results of the 1952 presidential election are listed in Appendix II, some other data have not been brought up to date. . . Owners of the first edition of the atlas when considering replacement should be aware that most of the revisions occur in bringing the coverage of the fourth section from 1941 up to 1950, and that Section V, 'World Maps,' and Appendix IV, 'Imports and Exports, 1799-1938,' are omitted in this edition. Within the limits of the authors' statement in the Preface that 'it is not designed to be a reference atlas,' the Historical Atlas of the United States contains much reliable material in convenient form. It is recommended."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 25:24 Ap '54 800w
Wis Lib Bul 49:258 N '53

LORWIN, LEWIS LEVITZKI. International labor movement: history, policies, outlook. 366p $5 Harper

331.88 Trade unions 53-8542
For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by L. T. Morgan
Am Econ R 44:701 S '54 850w

Reviewed by Paul Meadows
Am Soc R 19:368 Je '54 230w

"The emphasis throughout the volume is on the presentation of the facts themselves; the author keeps himself as far as possible in the background. This has tremendous advantages in terms of objectivity; however, this reader at least regretted on several occasions the absence of critical comments on the part of the author, the more so as a close and astute observer such as Dr. Lorwin can speak with particular authority of some of the events discussed in this book. . . At a time when the struggle for the soul of the industrial worker of the world is in full swing and its outcome one of the main issues of the battle between East and West, this book will prove invaluable to scholars, statesmen, and journalists alike." Adolf Sturmthal

+ Ann Am Acad 292:172 Mr '54 370w
Foreign Affairs 32:671 Jl '54 30w
Nation 178:244 Mr 20 '54 280w
U S Quarterly Bk R 10:104 Mr '54 240w

LOTHERS, JOHN EDMOND. Design in structural steel. 454p il $10 Prentice-Hall
624.177 [691.7] Steel, Structural. Steel construction 53-12566

"An authoritative and very practical book on the design of steel structures. It is addressed to advanced engineering students and to graduate engineers; nevertheless the style of treatment is simple and direct. The author has assumed that the practical engineer will use handbooks. He not only mentions the useful ones by name but gives explicit advice on how to use them. The exposition includes numerous worked examples of problems in design. The author is Professor of Architectural Engineering in the Oklahoma Institute of Technology." N Y New Tech Bks

"The book should prove to be a very useful textbook, though it has some shortcomings. Quite often, explanations of how certain designs are intended to function are omitted. . . Another handicap is that experienced structural designers will find topics that they probably would like to review have not been included; rocket and roller supports, for instance."

+ — Eng N 152:65 Ap 22 '54 200w
N Y New Tech Bks 39:3 Ja '54

LOTT, MILTON. Last hunt. 399p $3.95 Houghton

54-8695

A novel telling a story of the last buffalo hunters on the Western frontier in the 1870s.

Booklist 51:109 N 1 '54

Reviewed by V. P. Hass
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 31 '54 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

"Loaded, maybe overloaded, but stirring and effective."

+ Kirkus 22:500 Ag 1 '54 270w

"Recommended for general purchase." James Heslin

+ Library J 79:1400 Ag '54 130w

"The book has beautifully written passages. The part about the trip through the sub-zero snowstorm with supply wagons for the starving reservation Indians is one that I will remember for a long time. It also has flaws, which Mr. Lott will learn in future novels to avoid. In a good book they don't matter; one remembers it better for running into a few of them." H. L. Davis

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p6 O 24 '54 650w

"It seems to me that Charley Gilson is not a happy choice as the protagonist of this undeniably able and interesting book. The significance of the whole story is likely to escape the reader who may well take an instinctive dislike to such a hopeless, unregenerate character. At times Mr. Lott writes graphically and with marked originality. But for long stretches the tone never rises above the mental and spiritual level of the characters themselves—all simple, nearly illiterate men—and at times it seems that you are reading an extremely artless and repetitious account of the actual day to day life of these savage hunters." W. R. Burnett

+ — N Y Times p4 O 31 '54 500w

"I have no doubt that 'The Last Hunt' will be taken by some of its audience as just an exceptionally well-done 'Western.' The best-intentioned reader is busy and harried, and sometimes he can do no more than accept a piece of fiction on its surface level, reading it unthinkingly and simply for the action and perhaps the physical setting, when that is as finely done as it is here. There will be others, though—and it is these for whom Mr. Lott writes—who will take the novel slowly and find in it what is there to be found below the surface of incident and setting, admirably as these aspects of it are handled." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 10 '54 1650w

LOTT, MILTON—Continued

"Mr. Lott has an authentic natural talent. What its limits or lack of limits may be we cannot tell as yet, but the prognosis is hopeful. This first of its products is restrained, well organized, and mature." Oliver LaFarge
+ Sat ■ 37:15 S 16 '54 550w
Time 64:94 O 25 '54 220w

LOTZ, IRMGARD FLUGGE. See Flügge-Lotz, I.

LOVELL, ERNEST JAMES, ed. His very self and voice. See Byron, G. G. N. B.

LOWE, ARNOLD HILMAR. Power for life's living. 190p $2.50 Harper
248 Christian life 54-6898

A series of twenty-five inspirational essays which have been adapted from his own sermons by a Presbyterian minister.

Booklist 50:390 Je 15 '54

"Sound counsel is offered on how to acquire a workable faith that will create mature attitudes toward troubles and lead to meaningful years."

+ Bookmark 13:233 Jl '54 30w

Wis Lib Bul 50:126 My '54

LOWEN, WALTER ALBERT. How and when to change your job successfully. 241p $2.95 Simon & Schuster

658.311 Vocational guidance 54-1199

"From long experience as head of a well-known placement bureau, the author discusses the various factors to be considered in job-changing and offers satisfying suggestions for all office levels." (Bookmark) No index.

Bookmark 13:235 Jl '54 20w

"The book is sensible and practical." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 25 '54 40w

"Positive and concrete with potentials of employer-employee market."

+ Kirkus 22:98 F 1 '54 170w

"The author writes well and proves his points with many amusing examples. Recommended for public and college library purchase." E. T. Smith

+ Library J 79:621 Ap 1 '54 100w

LOWENFELD, VIKTOR. Your child and his art; a guide for parents. 186p il col il $6.50 Macmillan (N Y)

706.9 Child study. Children ■ artists 54-9226

"This book is written exclusively for parents, yet it may be of help to anyone who has direct contact with children and wants to promote their growth through creative expression. The book discusses the parent's role in the promotion of creative activity at home. It discusses how the parent can help his child in overcoming his difficulty. It provides the parent with information regarding the connections between the art of the child and his personality growth. It deals with proper art materials and also with the space which we should provide for the art of our children. The book actually consists of answers to questions from parents, collected over a period of six years on lectures from coast to coast." Foreword

Booklist 50:395 Je 15 '54

"The examples of child art included in the book are not, in my opinion, so imaginative and exciting as those shown in some of the other recently published books. Nevertheless, I think that this is the most complete and acceptable book now available on the subject of a parent's understanding of a child's art expression. I recommend it highly."

+ Horn Bk 30:349 O '54 240w

"An important volume for the educational world."

+ Kirkus 22:52 Ja 15 '54 240w

"Mr. Lowenfeld has produced a book that will help every parent who is interested in his child's creative growth—and that should be every parent." Victor D'Amico

+ N Y Times p31 Ap 25 '54 370w

"Written as a guide for parents, Dr. Lowenfeld's new book is everything that we would expect from this distinguished art educator, author, and lecturer. . . . Although the book is directed to parents, we believe that it would be an excellent reference for teachers."

+ School Arts 53:47 My '54 400w

LOWIE, ROBERT HARRY. Indians of the plains. (American museum of natural history. Anthropological handbook) 222p il $4.75 McGraw

970.1 Indians of North America 54-8815

An account of the Indians of the Great Plains, by the professor of anthropology at the University of California, who has also been curator of the American Museum of Natural History. He deals with their culture, social organization, games, religion, and pre-historical existence. In each section the different tribes are considered as to their variations. Bibliography. Index.

Bookmark 14:58 D '54 50w

"An unfortunately dry book [it] is nevertheless an authoritative, orderly composite of information about the Plains Indians and their cultures."

+ — Kirkus 22:473 Jl 15 '54 180w

"Since the primary purpose of this book is to convey information, it will not satisfy those looking for light reading matter, but there is enough of that on this subject anyhow." J. W. H.

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 17 '54 60w

"As adequate a handbook as any authority could produce. Almost a long lifetime has gone to the making of it. Written with simplicity and clearness, it yet is encyclopedic and therefore, on any one phase of its subject, over-abbreviated." John Collier

+ Sat ■ 37:14 S 16 '54 750w

LOWIE, ROBERT HARRY. Toward understanding Germany. 396p $6 Univ. of Chicago press

301.2 National characteristics, German. Germany—Social conditions 54-8456

The Vienna-born author is at present professor emeritus of anthropology in the University of California, Berkeley. In his present volume he attempts to explain the nature of the German people. His work is based on diaries, novels, autobiographies, poetry, as well as history. "The subjects he investigates include: German particularism, class structure, family, anti-Semitism, Nazism, and democracy. All of these topics he has approached ethnologically, that is to say, with an eye to separating what is universally human from what is distinctly German." (Sat R) Bibliography. Index.

"As may be gathered from a brief survey. Professor Lowie takes issue with or tries to refute many of the more commonly held generalizations about the Germans. He does so with a genuine effort at objectivity and with an impressive array of interesting material. As a corrective to some of the more one-sided and oversimplified treatments of the 'German Problem,' this book can serve a useful purpose, and as such its modest title is well chosen." H. W. Gatzke

+ — Am Hist R 60:101 O '54 550w

"When all the assets of this engaging book are considered, including the author's objectivity, his meaty style, and his consummate skill in using case material, mention must be made of one deficiency: one cannot understand Germany without explaining the stated modal traits of Germans and the political calamities which have befallen them. To state these things is not the same as to account for them." Ernest Manheim

+ Am Soc R 19:813 D '54 550w

Reviewed by K. H. Wolff

Ann Am Acad 29:199 S '54 400w

"This volume is packed with useful, interesting, and fascinating information, for which the author has drawn upon historic research, personal recollections, and recent experience. What is lacking to a rather surprising degree is a theoretical framework which would give meaning to a mass of material which is largely left to tell its own story." H. J. Morgenthau

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My 2 '54 230w

Reviewed by Robert Root

Christian Century 71:1336 N 3 '54 460w

"Few of the numerous postwar books dealing with the German people, their desirable and not so desirable character traits, are as full of pertinent information and come as close to giving an all-round, objective picture as Prof. Robert H. Lowie's ethnological study." E. S. Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 24 '54 350w

Current Hist 26:376 Je '54 50w

"His chapter on the relations between Germans and Jews is especially enlightening. . . Strongly recommended for college and public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 79:773 Ap 15 '54 150w

"Robert H. Lowie's 'Toward Understanding Germany' is of considerable interest for at least two reasons. First, it is an objective appraisal of the Germans, their character and patterns of behavior. Secondly, it applies the methods of ethnology to an historic, highly developed, modern people. Hence it offers the reader something of an intellectual challenge." S. K. Padover

+ Sat R 37:40 My 1 '54 1150w

LOWRY, ROBERT JAMES. Happy new year, kamerades! [drawings by the author]. 256p $3.50 Doubleday

54-6783

A collection of ten short stories and three poems.

Kirkus 22:241 Ap 1 '54 130w

"Mr. Lowry writes vividly upon a wide variety of subjects, and he is able to speak convincingly from the mouths and minds of people from many walks and stations of life. In fact, there is in these stories a kind of direct connection with everyday realities as they seem when we encounter them. Here is fiction that yields both the familiarity and the peculiarity of neighbors and news." Gene Baro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 30 '54 360w

"As a disenchanted diarist of bitter or unbalanced people or incredibly angry people, Mr. Lowry throws his hardest punches at the vulnerable system which produced them. One senses that he writes not as a cynical reporter but as a cynical man. These plaintive soldiers and neurotic civilians represent his dissenting vote; and they are his spokesmen before they are fictional subjects. For this reader the ten stories illuminate, sometimes fascinate, but seldom entertain." James Kelly

N Y Times p23 My 23 '54 550w

"The experimental stories, including one in atrocious Joycean verse, are simply eccentric proof of the author's infatuation with his own work and of his indifference to Alexander Pope's observation that he hoped to be praised as much for what he had burned as for what he had printed." Charles Lee

Sat R 37:15 Jl 10 '54 500w

LUBAC, HENRI DE. Aspects of Buddhism; tr. by George Lamb. 192p $3 Sheed

294.3 Buddha and Buddhism. Christianity and other religions—Buddhism 54-6142

"Similarities—and fundamental differences—between Buddhism and Christianity are among the topics treated by Henri de Lubac, S. J. Father Lubac gives a brief exposition of the essentials of belief held by the 140,000,000 adherents of Buddhism and follows with essays on Buddhist charity, symbolism in Buddhist and Christian art, and a comparison of Buddhist and Christian writings." N Y Times

"Father de Lubac, a thorough and honest scholar, has a technical knowledge of Buddhism which inspires full confidence in his book. While at times he has to be as dry as dust to do justice to his task, one puts his book aside with the feeling of gratitude." H. A. Reinhold

+ Commonweal 59:607 Mr 19 '54 950w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 14 '54 60w

"This is a scholarly little book, with many pages of notes, but the general reader will not find it too formidable." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 18 '54 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 9 '54 40w

"Outwardly Father de Lubac maintains an air of scholarly impartiality, but his comparative method, interesting and suggestive as it often is, is used throughout to commend the Christian faith at the expense of Buddhism, which is reduced by the end of the book to little more than a Docetist heresy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p45 Ja 15 '54 550w

LUCCOCK, HALFORD EDWARD. Communicating the Gospel. 133p $2.50 Harper

251 Preaching 53-10974

"The 1953 Lyman Beecher lectures on preaching by a professor of homiletics. Addressed to divinity students, these lectures discuss the importance of clear, simple communication of the Christian message, of keeping alive its wonder, and of recognizing and communicating its inexhaustible pertinence to the age and the individual." Booklist

Booklist 50:251 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:336 Mr 17 '54 700w

LUDDEN, ALLEN. Plain talk for men under 21! 181p $2.50 Dodd

179 Conduct for life. Young men 54-10210

"Covers the multiplicity of problems facing today's adolescent boy. Chapters are brief, averaging four pages, and are devoted to such subjects as personality, dress, manners, first date, going steady, and driving." Library J

Booklist 51:153 D 1 '54

"Despite the author's tendency towards over-simplification and the too frequent use of slang, this is a welcome book. . . Recommended for boys of 15-18." Robert van Benhuysen

+ Library J 79:2259 N 15 '54 60w

LUGT, ARIE VAN DER. Crazy doctor; tr. from the Dutch by Alfred van Ameyden van Duym. 248p $3 Random house

54-7797

"A Dutch island where rich and poor live separate existences is the scene for a boisterous story whose pious overtones eventually predominate. The crazy doctor who came to replace the old village medico was a hairy barbarian who romped through town on a motorbike, cursed patients back to health with skillful ministrations, battled the village rough-necks who wanted to test their strength with his, and even lived in a house known to be haunted. Behind his shenanigans and doctoring, he battled most fiercely of all with God, whom he had forsaken along with his wife when his marriage was not blessed with children. His friend the priest counters Dr. de Geus' boldest blasphemy, his establishment of a town lady in his village home, with the simple wisdom of a young country girl, and with the priest's death the doctor returns to God and his wife, a respectable and reverent Robin Hood." Kirkus

LUGT, ARIE VAN DER—Continued

"The combination of village color and religion are reminiscent of the Don Camillo stories; but the religious theme takes over in midstream, leaving lightheartedness stranded." Kirkus 22:403 J1 1 '54 170w

"A humorous tale rich in atmosphere and bucolic characters. . . Recommended for medium and large public libraries." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1513 S 1 '54 80w

"Vigor rather than subtlety is likely to be characteristics of an author of great productivity. This seems to be van Lugt's first work to appear on this side of the Atlantic but, not yet forty, he is said to be the author of more than seventy plays, of a half dozen other novels, and a series of juveniles. Vigor is certainly here, and a memorable character, and a rollicking account of the way of life in a remote Dutch polder. 'The Crazy Doctor' is an import to be welcomed." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ag 15 '54 650w

"The novel reads at times like a juvenile which treats lamely of adult themes. This is doubly unfortunate because a Dutch novel has not appeared in translation in some time. . . There is, according to all accounts, a vigorous naturalistic school of writing in Holland, both in the short story and in novels. Examples of it would be welcome but this offering is disappointing." Frances Keene

N Y Times p19 Ag 15 '54 500w

New Yorker 30:80 Ag 28 '54 30w

"What weakens Author Van der Lugt's lively yarn is his unashamed sentimentality, his failure to make the doctor seem like a truly troubled man or even a convinced atheist. What is good about The Crazy Doctor is its author's earthy sense of humor, and the fresh background of Holland life and scenery that sometimes has the authenticity of a Rembrandt."

+ — Time 64:96 Ag 16 '54 500w

LUKACS, JOHN ADALBERT. Great powers and eastern Europe. 878p maps $7.50 Am. bk.

940.5 Europe—History

"This large and detailed volume is a narrative and analysis of events between 1934 (Russia's entry into the League of Nations) and 1945, in a relatively misunderstood area. While it necessarily deals with the Great Powers, it concentrates primarily upon the fate, week by week and month by month, of the 13 smaller central and eastern European states. They extend from Finland and the Baltic states in the north, through Poland and Czechoslovakia, to the Danubian and Balkan states in the south. Unfortunately for them, they were all neighbors of Russia." Current Hist

"The book is excellent in many respects. . . The book is at the same time disappointing. Unimportant and important events are mentioned without sufficient selectivity and emphasis. . . With 124 two-column pages of footnotes to 700 pages of text one might expect the volume to be well documented. Yet here is where the volume leaves most to be desired." E. C. Helmreich

+ — Am Hist R 59:898 J1 '54 1000w

Am Pol Sci R 48:591 Je '54 30w

"The author has produced an interesting and valuable work. If somewhat one-sided, it assuredly presents a challenging thesis." O. J. Hale

+ — Ann Am Acad 295:202 S '54 420w

"This work, which has involved an epic delving through an astonishing range of materials in many languages, is an impressive scholarly achievement. At long last the diplomatic history of Eastern Europe is told in detail and related to the activities of the great powers. . . This admirable work is not wholly without flaws. Longer reflection might have given Mr. Lukacs greater mastery over his somewhat broken narrative." M. A. Fitzsimons

+ — Commonweal 59:584 Mr 12 '54 600w

"One may not always agree with all the author's exuberant adjectives and political conclusions, but one must admire his breadth of scholarship, insight, respect for moral principles and nobility of outlook. The volume contains very helpful statistical tables, ingenious maps to indicate shifting boundaries, a rich bibliography of works in many languages, and an excellent index." S. B. Fay

+ — Current Hist 26:189 Mr '54 850w

Foreign Affairs 33:164 O '54 100w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:163 Je '54 280w

LUMBARD, CHARLES G. Senior spring. 243p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

54-5464

"Mr. Lumbard's first novel tells the story of Steve Burnett, an architectural student at what appears to be the University of California at Berkeley, during the spring term of his senior year. This is the term in which he suddenly comes of age. . . He has his first real love affair with a co-ed, Cassy Kane. . . Finally, from an elderly architect named Devereux, he learns some of the facts of a successful life." N Y Times

Booklist 50:279 Mr 15 '54

Kirkus 21:797 D 15 '53 190w

"Mr. Lumbard has written with first-hand knowledge and unusual perception, in so young a man, of his college generation. In him, it has found an able and honest spokesman." H. F. West

+ N Y Times p26 F 14 '54 500w

New Yorker 30:117 Mr 6 '54 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 14 '54 410w

"In his first novel, 'Senior Spring,' C. G. Lumbard has portrayed undergraduate life in a large university with freshness, zest, and a reality that goes beneath the surface of college manners." Walter Havighurst

+ Sat R 37:17 F 13 '54 550w

LUMBY, ESMOND WALTER RAWSON. Transfer of power in India, 1945-7. 274p maps $4.50 Praeger

954.09—India—Politics and government

[54-14407]

"The author was an India Office official who was on the staff of the Cabinet Mission to India in 1947. He has thus been able to produce an authoritative and indispensable record of the negotiations leading up to the transfer of power. Mr. Lumby considers that it is too early to come to definitive judgments, but feels that it is 'in detail rather than principle that British policy is open to criticism.'" (New Statesman & Nation) Index.

"His book, compact and lucid, will remain of importance to all students of the period—a time vital in Indian history and also full of instruction for the connoisseur of politics. Nowhere else is it possible to find summarised so correctly the main happenings. The reader is not necessarily grateful to every writer who makes a painstaking compilation, but he certainly will be to Mr. Lumby." Guy Wint

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 10 '54 360w

"While The British in Asia is interpretative, Mr. Lumby's book fills an important gap in the documentation of Indian independence." Victor Purcell

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:806 Je 19 '54 70w

"Together with its very considerable merits, this book has some odd characteristics. There is no bibliography; there are few references to sources; and the author frankly disclaims any first-hand knowledge of the country and its people. Yet, with all these apparent disadvantages, it remains the most balanced and objective account so far written of the negotiations leading up to the transfer of British power, of the circumstances which made these negotiations inevitable, and of the long-standing difficulties by which they were surrounded."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p483 J1 30 '54
800w

LUNDBERG, FERDINAND. Treason of the people. 370p $4.50 Harper

973.91 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Democracy 54-6295

"The aim of [the book] is two-fold. One is to state the terms of the ideal in democratic government. The other is to gauge how far that ideal has been realized in the formidable world of reality, not by government officials, but by the citizenry as a collective body. For as Mr. Lundberg says, government officials most of the time do no more than implement 'the going values of the average man.'" (Sat R) Index.

Booklist 51:3 S 1 '54

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 12 '54
470w

Kirkus 22:378 Je 15 '54 200w

"Anyone interested in what's wrong (and what's right) with the American people will have to read this book." Louis Barron
+ Library J 79:1508 S 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by H. H. Wilson

Nation 179:215 S 11 '54 2000w

Reviewed by L. A. Fiedler

New Repub 131:18 O 25 '54 1850w

"When Mr. Lundberg forgets his pet peeves and curbs his tendencies toward distortion and exaggeration, his message is of the greatest possible public concern and it strikes home to the reader with telling impact. At its best this book deserves the careful attention of Americans who prize our democratic tradition and wish to perfect and preserve it." R. K. Carr
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 5 '54
800w

"Mr. Lundberg looks over the situation with a jaundiced eye and writes in a style that at its best suggests the irony of the late Thorstein Veblen. . . Sometimes Mr. Lundberg's desire to stimulate or to shock is annoying. The very title of the book is unnecessarily misleading even though it does draw attention. What Mr. Lundberg is describing is not anything resembling treason but a section of the human race blundering along, sometimes successfully, sometimes failing, sometimes moral, sometimes grossly immoral, sometimes uncertain what the difference is between morality and immorality. We aren't quite as bad or quite as weak as Mr. Lundberg thinks we are. Yet a jeremiad does us good now and then." R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p6 Ag 29 '54 750w

"Mr. Lundberg is not a very original thinker, and, like most self-appointed scolds, he often overstates his case. Still, he has a case, and his bill of particulars is occasionally devastating. Just why he wrote this book, though, is not clear; if Americans are as benighted as he says they are, what makes him think that they will leave the television set to read a three-hundred-and-fifty-two-page tirade against themselves?"
New Yorker 30:137 O 30 '54 160w

"Though Mr. Lundberg in some particulars merely updates a long tradition of criticism of democracy going back to the Constitutional Convention, the updating is in itself a warrant for the writing and the close reading of his book." Sidney Hyman
Sat R 37:20 Ag 28 '54 800w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 24 '54 350w

LUTHIN, REINHARD HENRY. American demagogues: twentieth century; with an introd. by Allan Nevins. 368p $5 Beacon press

923 U.S.—Biography. U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 54-8428

Contents: Masters of the masses: early twentieth century; James M. Curley: The Boston

Brahmin-Baiter; Theodore G. Bilbo: "The Man" of Mississippi; William Hale Thompson: "Big Bill the Builder" of Chicago; William H. Murray: "Alfalfa Bill" of Oklahoma; Frank Hague: "The Boss" of Jersey City; Mr. and Mrs. James E. Ferguson: "Pa" and "Ma" of the Lone Star State; Eugene Talmadge: "The Wild Man" of Sugar Creek, Georgia; Vito Marcantonio: New York's leftist laborite; Huey P. Long: The Louisiana Kingfish; Joseph R. McCarthy: Wisconsin's briefcase demagogue; The mark of the demagogue; Notes on sources; Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 11 '54
600w

Kirkus 22:648 S 15 '54 250w

"There is an introduction by Allan Nevins that is a little masterpiece. In what it presents, the work comes close to being flawless, Mr. Luthin's industry is prodigious, his judgment is balanced and his style is lucid. His ten autopsies are conducted with a neatness and dispatch that must command the admiration of every literary pathologist. Criticism is driven from what he did to concentration on what he failed to do, and that centers pretty much on his concluding chapter in which he turns from the individual to describe the genus." G. W. Johnson
+ New Repub 131:20 D 13 '54 1050w

"A careful, learned study." F. S. Adams
+ N Y Times p12 N 21 '54 380w

"Although the author is apparently aware that the objectives of an urban boss like James Curley were a good bit more modest than those of a national figure like Huey Long, he does not make this point sufficiently clear, and as a study of dictatorship in the bud, his book suffers accordingly."

New Yorker 30:150 D 18 '54 120w

"A swift-moving, sometimes funny, sometimes terrifying, but at all times eminently readable book." Sidney Hyman

+ Sat R 37:20 N 6 '54 1000w

LUTYENS, LADY EMILY (LYTTON), and ELWIN, WHITWELL. Blessed girl; memoirs of a Victorian girlhood chronicled in an exchange of letters, 1887-1896. 340p il $4 Lippincott

B or 92 Great Britain—Social life and customs 54-8744

Memoirs of the granddaughter of Bulwer Lytton, covering the years of her girlhood, 1887-1896. Part of the material consists of letters written to a family friend, a clergyman, who was fifty-eight years her senior. Index.

Booklist 51:59 O 1 '54

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 19 '54
450w

"Unusual for its period and unusual in its honest revelations, this offers a special pleasure for the more demanding reader and has a more intense note than Raverat's Period Piece."

+ Kirkus 22:379 Je 15 '54 210w

"Now, at eighty years of age, the widow of the famous architect Sir Edwin Lutyens, has shown courage and discrimination in publishing these letters, unchanged. With the introduction they throw a clear and penetrating light on England of the 1890's. The Blessed Girl will give great pleasure to all who love youth and life." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1509 S 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Bennett Epstein

Nation 179:311 O 9 '54 90w

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis

New Statesman & Nation 46:494 O 24 '53 1100w

"Not all the material is uniformly interesting. The long letters that record the three-year flirtation with Wilfred Scawen Blunt, she seventeen, he forty-eight when it began, might have been cut with profit. . . But if Lady Emily had cut at all, she might have spoiled the artless immediacy of the whole story, of the girl as she grows up. We might have lost not only an authentic facet of the nineties but the universal qualities of human shoddiness and nobility which her penetration and young daring reveal." E. C. Dunn

LUTYENS, E. L.—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 29 '54 750w

Reviewed by James Stern

N Y Times p7 S 5 '54 950w

"Lady Emily, who is a granddaughter of the novelist Bulwer-Lytton and is now teetering on the edge of eighty, has finally brought herself to print a correspondence she carried on in her teens with an elderly family friend, the Reverend Whitwell Elwin. Nothing could sound less promising, but this unbuttoned memoir turns out to be one of the liveliest books of the decade."

+ New Yorker 30:152 S 11 '54 210w

"Students of Victorianism owe thanks to Lady Emily's American son-in-law, the author and editor Herbert Agar, for his role in encouraging the publication of this authentic souvenir of our recent past." H. B. Woodward

+ Sat 37:19 S 18 '54 850w

"A singular and very attractive book." J. D. Scott

+ Spec p486 O 30 '53 1700w

Time 64:92 S 6 '54 900w

"After the steady downpour of loquacious but artless memoirs and autobiographies, with which mankind is afflicted in the middle of the twentieth century, this book shines with all the stimulating charm of sunshine after a shower."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p678 O 23 '53 950w

LYMAN, SUSAN ELIZABETH. Face of New York. See Feininger, A.

LYNAM, SHEVAWN. The spirit and the clay. 293p $3.95 Little

54-6862

A novel about the Basques in the Spanish Civil war. It describes the experiences of a group of these devout Catholic people who fought against Franco, suffered severely from bombings, and were betrayed in surrender. One of the chief characters is a saintly priest who manages to lead some of his people back to the faith, after they had suffered grave doubts.

"The Spirit and the Clay is a poignant record of a group of Catholic people tempted to despair and disillusion. . . . The author's episodic treatment makes for rather baffling reading, though. It is particularly hard to keep track of the characters for the hero of one episode often turns up as a minor character in another, and the action shuttles uncomfortably back and forth in line." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 179:394 Ag '54 220w

"From exile, in prisons and underground, the Spanish Basques struggled against a unitary regime which was crushing a deeply cherished autonomous and democratic tradition inspired by an ardent Catholic faith. Perhaps it therefore is inevitable that the surviving patriots should grow fainter in texture and color as the shadows deepen for them all. That makes The Spirit and the Clay all the more authentic." E. S. S.

+ Commonweal 60:399 Jl 23 '54 260w

"Worthy of attention."

+ Kirkus 22:81 F 1 '54 140w

"An absorbing and memorable novel." Hiram Haydn

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 2 '54 650w

"There is interest and value to all of this. Unfortunately, as a novel even of this frankly episodic type, the book is not well wrought. It starts off quite excitingly, with considerable promise and power. Before long, it dissipates these effects and thenceforth is sometimes confusing, sometimes static, often taking dismaying leaps. The individual stories often are of merit, particularly in portraying the religious dilemma which the war brought to these Basques." Edmund Fuller

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 1 '54 330w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 27 '54 900w

LYNCH, ERNEST CARLYLE. Furniture antiques found in Virginia. 95p il $3.50 Bruce pub.

749.21 Furniture

54-7784

"The subtitle is A Book of Measured Drawings, and the volume's purpose is to aid hobbyists and craftsmen in the construction of reproductions of ante-bellum Southern furniture. Photographs, measured drawings, construction notes, and bills of materials are given for each piece. There are 35 pieces in all and they range from a simple trundle bed to an elaborate Queen Anne highboy. The measured drawings were made by the author himself from original furniture found in the State of Virginia." Library J

Booklist 51:35 S 15 '54

"Well worth adding to your collection of craftsmen's books on furniture." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1594 S 15 '54 80w

LYNCH, JAMES J. Box, pit and gallery; stage and society in Johnson's London. 362p il $5 Univ. of Calif. press

792 Theater—London

53-10723

"Taking the period between 1737 and 1777, the author has compiled a vast amount of information about the eighteenth century London stage. There were but two licensed theatres in London during this time: the Drury Lane and Covent Garden; and a large part of the book concerns itself with the listing of plays presented there. The plays are listed, divided into categories, and qualified as to success and importance. On this solid, even ponderous, base, the author then explains the professional conditions that existed and makes an attempt to describe the changing appetites of the audience." Theatre Arts

"This is as neat a roundup of the facts on the English drama in Sam Johnson's London as can be found within boards." John Randolph

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 3 '54 170w

"Recommended for literature, sociology and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 78:1849 O 15 '53 20w

Reviewed by Herman Shumlin

Theatre Arts 38:10 F '54 700w

"Dr. Lynch has assembled plenty of useful material; his book is more notable for its solid factual research than for its critical conclusions."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p115 F 19 '54 700w

LYNES, RUSSELL. The tastemakers. 362p il $5 Harper

973 [917.3] U.S.—Civilization. Esthetics. Art—U.S. 54-8968

History of American popular taste in art, architecture, and interior decoration, with short sketches of the men and women responsible for the trends. Index.

"Mr. Lynes, a skillful writer with a spirited and often witty touch, has made the most of his subject matter; and the forty pages of pictures form a notable contribution to the text." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:92 N '54 600w

Booklist 50:442; 51:80 Jl 15 '54; O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:58 D '54 20w

Reviewed by F. A. Sweet

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 24 '54 600w

"Mr. Lynes' treatment is complete without being encyclopedic, urbane without being condescending—but where necessary he does not hesitate to play the role of a 'distastemaker' in pointing to the excesses which high fashion has occasionally caused." E. W. Foell

+ Christian Science Monitor p4 N 4 '54 1000w

"Through it all, Lynes is an attractive escort: he writes with grace and ease and discretion."

+ Kirkus 22:517 Ag 1 '54 270w

"Recommended for any library having a general collection." Paul von Khrum

+ Library J 79:2101 N 1 '54 140w

"Mr. Lynes covers a great deal of ground, including that occupied by 'high art' as well as by low. . . There is an amusing table of pictures arranged in parallel columns to illustrate the wanderings of certain works of art taken up successively by the three kinds of brows. . . Anyone looking for a quarrel with Mr. Lynes will find the best basis for it in his more serious theses. To say that, on the whole, contemporary Americans are too little influenced by their own likings and too much by mentors of one sort or another is sound enough. But to imply that therefore everybody ought to let them alone is another matter." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 61:388 O 30 '54 1350w

"Mr. Lynes' chapters on art, meaning painting and sculpture, are full of brilliant thumbnail sketches and his account of the famous Armory Show of 1913 is a contribution to history. . . The great merit of the book, however, is less the ideas it presents than the manner in which it presents them. Even his chapter headings are good and one is inspired; it is 'The Peacock on the Newel Post.' Without reading the chapter that follows you know what is in it, for the heading compresses a whole period into a single line." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 O 10 '54 750w

"A mature and thoughtful book. . . It is readable, entertaining and often very profound. The easy tolerance of our fads and fancies which, in the hands of another critic, would have become excommunicable, has made this history as pleasant as a gust of fresh air in a room heavy with the corrosive cynicism of the art world." F. H. Taylor

+ N Y Times p6 O 10 '54 1050w

"Mr. Lynes, whose celebrated treatise on highbrows, lowbrows, and middlebrows is reprinted as a chapter of this book, writes with a sort of cheerful carelessness, occasionally repeating a sentence almost word for word, or not troubling to complete a sentence, or inserting an unwanted apostrophe in 'Finnegans Wake'—flaws more than ordinarily conspicuous when found in a book on taste, and possibly to be accounted for on the ground that the author has chosen to execute a highbrow deed in a middle-to-lowbrow manner."

New Yorker 30:186 N 6 '54 220w

"Here, in far greater detail than it has ever before been explored, is the subject of American taste in the last century-and-a-quarter. It all makes wonderful reading." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 17 '54 1700w

Reviewed by Roger Butterfield
Sat R 37:36 N 6 '54 650w

LYNIP, MRS RYLLIS ALEXANDER GOSLIN.
Great ideas of the Bible, outlined for moderns [with selected passages from the Bible: a new tr. by James Moffatt]. 2v v 1 272p $2.75 Harper

220.6 Bible. Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc. (53-10929)

"This book and the forthcoming companion volume attempt to present in understandable form the essential ideas of the Bible. . . The aim has been to avoid theological discussion and to emphasize those ideals and values which contribute to the building of character and to the achievement of high purpose. . . The procedure has been to select those passages from both the Old and the New Testaments which would have the greatest possible meaning for modern life. About one-tenth of the total Bible is included in the two volumes and the selections have been organized by ideas instead of being arranged by Books from Genesis to Revelation. . . The new translation of the Bible by Dr. James Moffatt, which was published first in 1922 and revised in 1935, has been used." Intro

Bookmark 13:105 F '54 20w

Christian Century 71:900 J1 28 '54 70w

"An unusually successful and readable presentation for modern readers. . . A second volume is promised, but this one definitely can stand alone." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p17 Ja 31 '54 70w

Wis Lib Bul 50:62 Mr '54

LYON, JEAN. Just half a world away; my search for the new India; photographs by the author. 373p $5 Crowell

954 [915.4] India 54-8719

"A graphic journalistic account of what the Five Year Plan means to India's future and of what Nehru the national hero means to his compatriots today. [The author] also covers such major matters as the present state of affairs in Kashmir, how India is seeking to free 50 million 'untouchables' from the shackles of caste, India's conduct of the first genuinely free elections in the history of Asia, and India's working of a parliamentary system of government." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:12 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:59 D '54 20w

"This book is well-written and makes good, sometimes fascinating reading. Apart from having spent three years in India, the author has certain special qualifications for writing on a most complex and baffling subject. She is sympathetic toward the Indian people and is ready to endure discomfort in order to get to know them in their villages and homes." C. R. Hiscocks

+ Canadian Forum 34:211 D '54 270w

"It is certainly a very open question whether the statesmen of the West should have a more mystical approach to diplomacy than they appear to have already. But there is no questioning the fact that the key to friendship is understanding and that if the West wants India's friendship it first has to understand India. Which is what makes this an important as well as most interesting book." J. A. May

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 2 '54 230w

Kirkus 22:374 Je 15 '54 240w

"To Americans who may wonder how it is that their country's championship of the cause of Indian independence weighs so little—or seems to—in the minds of Indian nationalists today, Miss Lyon's account of the working of American aid should be helpful. Also, the fact that she was able to wander at will, mostly alone, throughout the length of India without encountering any hostility other than verbal criticism of American policies, should put into proper perspective the charge of anti-Americanism." Eric Britter

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 22 '54 650w

"'Just Half a World Away' is recommended either for the prospective student of India seeking a quick introduction to the country in all its baffling complexities, or for the more casual reader who simply wants entertainment and information." Robert Trumbull

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 22 '54 900w

New Yorker 30:166 O 16 '54 220w

"Something is missing from Miss Lyon's book and we might almost read the title 'Just Half a World' for, though her experiences are enlightening and well reported, they are offered as fragments and fragments they remain. There are fine, flashing insights from time to time, but the point is: they are flashes, there is no steady light, so that at the end of the book one feels as if he had been given a jigsaw puzzle with some pieces missing." J. F. Muehl

LYON, JEAN—Continued

+ — Sat R 37:16 S 25 '54 550w
Wis Lib Bul 50:207 O '54

LYONS, DOROTHY. Blue Smoke; il. by Wesley Dennis. 244p $2.75 Harcourt

Horses—Legends and stories 53-7867

A horse story for girls of eleven to fifteen. The scene is California, and there is a mystery about the ownership papers of the horse for young readers to solve.

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 178:206 D '53 40w
Kirkus 21:431 Jl 15 '53 160w

"If you need another horse story, this it it." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 78:1861 O 15 '53 50w

"The Western contests, fairs, races, are very well done, and a slight mystery is happily solved." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 D 27 '53 20w

"Both horse lovers and mystery fans will like this new novel by the author of 'Dark Sunshine' and other stories. Readers not overly familiar with the world of horses will find the descriptions of shows and stock-cutting competitions exceptionally interesting." Alberta Eiseman

+ N Y Times p44 O 25 '53 180w

M

MACARTHUR, DAVID WILSON. Desert watches. 350p il $3.50 Bobbs

966.1 [916.61] Sahara—Description and travel 54-7227

Mr MacArthur and his wife bought a powerful car and set out from Algiers bound for their home in Rhodesia to drive the 2266 miles thru the Sahara desert. In this book they record their trip as far as Kano in Nigeria. The book describes their experiences, their troubles with their car, which finally gave out, and their difficulties with French officials, along with their happier moments. Glossary. No index.

Booklist 50:417 Jl 1 '54

"This tense account of nearly fatal experiences is lightened with the lore of the wasteland and a sensitive communication of its lonely beauty."

+ Bookmark 13:235 Jl '54 30w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 23 '54 300w

Reviewed by M. D. Read
Library J 79:1241 Je 15 '54 60w

"His account of their adventures often makes heavy reading as he is wholly unselective in his material, the same space being given to the description of a town or a landscape as to an irrelevant exchange of marital repartee or a detailed report on trouble with the engine. This and a weakness for repetition blur the edges of a fine story, full of excitement, interest and novelty." Honor Tracy

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:378 Mr 20 '54 180w

"The story is simply told without flourish or rhetoric; and it builds slowly to high drama. It is a moving book for anyone to read. It has a special charm for those who love the desert." W. O. Douglas

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 2 '54 750w

"Thousands of travelers cross the Sahara by air every week—and see almost nothing of it. This plucky pair, having driven across it, hope that a real thoroughfare will never be built across its face, so that it may continue to belong to the men and beasts of the desert. 'Better a desert of sand and rock than a desolation of brick and concrete,' is the closing thought of this armchair adventure." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p23 My 2 '54 470w

"A most unusual book."

+ New Yorker 30:137 Je 5 '54 160w

"It is difficult for a traveler, in describing his adventures, to transmit the same wonder and excitement with which they infuse his own memory, and the MacArthurs' story, partly because of the similarity of their repeated mishaps, tends to drag at times. . . As an informative, clear-headed report of the great desert and a good many of the people who live on it, it would seem to fill the bill." Jerome Stone

+ — Sat R 37:35 Jl 10 '54 230w

"This is an excellent book for ambitious motorists and those who enjoy a travel-story without wanting to be held up by literature." Peter Vansittart

+ Spec p368 Mr 26 '54 360w

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 300w

MCCAHL, TOM. Modern sports car. 228p il $3.95 Prentice-Hall

629.22 Automobile racing. Automobiles 54-9324

"A thoroughly practical handbook for sports car enthusiasts. Written in a straightforward but humorous manner and offering a wide variety of practical information on purchasing, driving, and maintaining a sports car. The author is a recognized authority who has been active for many years in the sports car field." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 51:7 S 1 '54

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 79:2457 D 15 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p8C Jl 25 '54 60w

MACCAMPBELL, DONALD. Marketing your literary material. 223p $2.95 McBride co.

029.6 Authorship—Handbooks, manuals, etc. Publishers and publishing 54-7375

"In his foreword the author indicates that this is a replacement rather than a revision of his Selling What You Write, the older title having been rendered obsolete by a publishing revolution brought about by television, paper-backed books, the decline of pulp magazines, the supplanting of bookstores by newsstands, and the collapse of the Hollywood market. Writing from the down-to-earth viewpoint of one who looks on literature as a commodity, this established literary agent discusses what and how to write, and where and how to offer it for sale in today's market." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 50:410 Jl 1 '54

"Factual and down to earth, this book contains sound information, good suggestions, and a brief list of markets. The appendix of '101 Marketing Tips' holds hard words—but, taken to heart, they will toughen the spirit. They are the stones that can pave the way to eventual success." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 26 '54 120w

MCCARROLL, MARION CLYDE. Summer cookbook. 188p $3 Barrows

641.5 Cookery 54-5378

"The title is accurate as to the contents of this book. It has two parts: '(I) Menus, with recipes' and '(II) Summer Specialties.' Emphasis is upon salads, cool drinks, and backyard barbecue pits. Cookies, sandwiches, cold plates, and 'quickie' meals are listed (with directions), and desserts and picnic lunches are stressed." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

"I don't know when a cookbook has offered so many new ideas as this. . . One can forgive occasional forays into tricky, woman's magazine ideas, for the general average of imaginative dishes."

+ Kirkus 22:176 Mr 1 '54 130w

"The book is not and clearly was not intended to be a gourmet's delight. It is a directive for using ready-cooked, frozen and canned foods to produce palatable, balanced meals with as little stove work as possible." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p19 My 2 '54 50w

Wis Lib Bul 50:129 My '54

MACCARTHY, SIR DESMOND. Humanities; pref. by Lord David Cecil. 222p $3.50 Oxford 824 54-7619

"Book reviews, reminiscences, and short stories by the late British critic who was an astute student of human nature as well as of books. His memories of his early career, theater criticism, and literary reviews exhibit his catholicity of taste, deep-rooted liberalism, and profound moral concern." Booklist

Booklist 50:256 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 4 '54 450w

Reviewed by Francis Russell
Christian Science Monitor p7 S 16 '54 '54 420w

"I particularly enjoyed MacCarthy's two short stories of boyhood and his very wise assessment of the Irish situation in 1920, before the partition of the country, under the title 'Reflections of an Anglo-Irishman,' but I think these items belong in two other books. All in all, the editor, Mr. T. R. Fyvel, in his laudable desire to display as many facets as possible of Desmond MacCarthy, has failed to illuminate any one of them sufficiently for the American reader." Vivian Mercier

+ — Commonweal 59:558 Mr 5 '54 800w

Kirkus 22:138 F 15 '54 170w

Library J 79:554 Mr 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by David Daiches

Manchester Guardian p4 O 13 '53 480w

"MacCarthy's essays written in 1929 and 1933 on the critical writings of T. S. Eliot, though very good and in model prose, do not match in excellence or value those done then by Wilson, or later by Blackmur and W. H. Auden. . . To judge Desmond MacCarthy, in all the kindness he most surely deserves but in a comparison with his peers, is to point out these limitations. This too, I feel sure, he would also admit. But the rest is in the pleasure of reading the last of the Edwardian familiar and casual essayists." Robert Richman

+ — New Repub 130:20 Mr 29 '54 850w

"If the sixth volume of 'collected MacCarthy' delights less than the first, it is only that, being briefer, it hints an end. Some pieces have been reprinted from earlier volumes (those on Chekhov, I fancy); there's quite a mixture of memory, reporting, stories, essays on writers and the theatre. Yet the effect is not in the least scrappy. MacCarthy's interests were many, but he had one responsiveness, one voice. His critical voice is no different from his musing or story-telling voice; and how rare that is!" G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:396 O 3 '53 750w

"[The author] had long flourished as the dean of British literary critics when he died in 1952, and this symposium, following and supplementing his 'Memories' should spread his fame here and further delight and inspire his American audience. As Lord David Cecil says in his preface, it is no heterogeneous hotch-potch but a book with an underlying unity, for Sir Desmond saw life as well as literature steadily and saw it whole." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 14 '54 500w

New Yorker 30:127 Mr 20 '54 170w

"'Humanities' is illustrative of [its author's] integrity which has persuasiveness because it lacks self-importance. Moreover, Sir Desmond's air of detachment never belies the high seriousness of the arts; on the contrary, his good humor assumes that standards of excellence in writing are a concern of any civilized people." W. T. Scott

+ Sat R 37:22 Mr 20 '54 800w

"This collection of essays can be confidently and warmly recommended to the reader for its own sake: by itself, if there was nothing else at all to go on, it would establish its author in a very respectable position." Richard Hughes

+ Spec p364 O 2 '53 1600w

"Humanities bristles with many vivid values. When anything passes through the crucible of MacCarthy's analytic appreciation we may be sure of a judgment fine and subtle, and rounded off with benignity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p646 O 9 '53 800w

MACCARTHY, SIR DESMOND. Portraits. 293p $3.50 Oxford 920 54-4109

"'Portraits' (now published for the first time in America, although it made its English appearance over twenty years ago) was the initial volume in a series of selections from MacCarthy's literary and dramatic criticisms written for press and periodicals over a span of thirty-odd years. . . There are thirty-four essays in this book, all of them attractive compounds of wit and discernment." Sat R

Reviewed by Francis Russell

Christian Science Monitor p7 S 16 '54 140w

"He will continue to be read (as this post-humous reissue of Portraits argues), but as time goes on and his personal impact on his contemporaries fades he may be read as one is drawn to the subjects—and they were many—on which he wrote so well. But perhaps less and less will one be drawn to Desmond MacCarthy (in contrast, say, to George Orwell) to learn what subjects interested him." Riley Hughes

Commonweal 60:491 Ag 20 '54 650w

"A critical compendium that assays high in variety, dignity and interest."

+ Kirkus 22:419 Jl 1 '54 160w

"Public and University libraries." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:1398 Ag '54 80w

"The essays, written at various times during the past half-century, are, with one exception, reprinted without dates of original publication, arranged alphabetically by subject, from Herbert Asquith to Izaak Walton. In between, [there are] some people as diverse as Henry James and Horace, John Bunyan and Voltaire. Fortunately for the American reader, the men of letters far outnumber the politicians, for politicians seldom bear exporting. One sketch, however, is a brilliant study of a peculiar churchman. . . In Mr. MacCarthy himself, it may be added, a happy blend of tolerance, wide-ranging curiosity and lucidity of expression has produced a book of unusual readability." DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Ag 15 '54 500w

"There are great 'characters' here like Sir Richard Burt and Oscar Browning. There are Clough and Goethe. Not all are equally successfully depicted. . . The portrait of Renan suffers from too general a knowledge of the French intellectual and literary scene. But this matters little in comparison with the completely successful sketches of the great and the equally successful sketches of the odd and extraordinary." D. W. Brogan

+ — N Y Times p4 Ag 15 '54 750w

"Sir Desmond is so unfailingly entertaining that it is easy to overlook the brilliance and justice (tinctured with charity) of his perceptions. If this book is not criticism but simply literary journalism—as the mocking dedication to the author's youth insists—it is literary journalism that has had few peers since the eighteenth century."

+ New Yorker 30:83 Ag 14 '54 180w

MACCARTHY, DESMOND—Continued

Reviewed by W. R. White

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 29 '54
360w

"Although excerpts from his drama reviews (including the best criticisms ever written of Shaw's plays) appear in other volumes, this one indirectly but incontestably demonstrates Sir Desmond's love for the theatre and knowledge of its skills." Maurice Dolbier

+ Sat R 37:16 Ag 14 '54 850w

Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 1 '54 80w

MCCARTHY, MRS MARGUERITE GILBERT.

The queen is in the kitchen; 500 new recipes [informal meals of all kinds]. 232p $3 Scribner

641.5 Cookery. Menus

54-10373

"This cookbook offers some special dishes which can be easily prepared and comfortably served. While Mrs. McCarthy is not above using mixes, cans, etc. as a base, her dishes have special dressings . . . and the combinations are unusual. Entertaining with ease includes canapes, casseroles and chafing dishes; there are hot weather menus, Sunday suppers, soup and sandwich meals. Almost a snack type cuisine, but different, and presumably delectable." (Kirkus) Index.

Booklist 51:126 N 15 '54

+ Kirkus 22:510 Ag 1 '54 90w

"Suggestions for the serving of emergency meals, out-of-doors and buffet suppers are particularly good." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:2453 D 15 '54 40w

"The menus are good for a certain mode of living, but they are hardly regal. Moreover, the queen is in the kitchen only part of the time: more often she appears all over the place, inside the house and out." Charlotte Turgeon

N Y Times p41 O 17 '54 150w

MCCARTNEY, EUGENE STOCK. Recurrent maladies in scholarly writing. 141p il $2.50 Univ. of Mich. press

808.06 [029.6] Authorship

53-4446

"The author, during 30 years as editor of scholarly publications of the University of Michigan Press, shepherded some 1,400 articles into print and also edited many books. This is a pleasantly bitter accounting of some of the most irritating habits and/or mistakes found among those writings. They include: failure to write simply [apparently by design], choice of words whose sound disturbs the intended effect, offenses against logic, passages which are too flowery, curious spelling, ignorance in the use of participles, needless repetition, and unscholarly statements by scholars." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"A book which should be read by writers, would-be writers, or those who detest writers and are in need of ammunition." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 23 '54 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p458 Jl 16 '54 1000w

MCCLANE, ALBERT JULES. Practical fly fisherman; fly plates in full color painted by Walter Dower. 257p $5.95 Prentice-Hall

799.1 Fly casting. Flies, Artificial 53-12817

Drawing on years of fishing experience on several continents, the author gives advice on how to use wet and dry flies, nymphs, buck-tails and streamers. He tells how to select tackle, how to match the line to the rod, and how to match both to the angler.

Booklist 50:200 Ja 15 '54

Bookmark 13:182 My '54 10w

Reviewed by Bob Becker

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 21 '54 40w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:68 Ja 1 '54 20w

"All of the steps to mastery are here, plus a welcome chapter on panfish, that often overlooked source of fun for the beginning fly fisherman. For the advanced angler there's a wide variety of advice." Nathan Aleskovsky

+ N Y Times p16 F 7 '54 150w

"McClane writes clearly. His instructions to his readers are given with enough confidence to convince the timorous beginner that practice plus equipment will produce fish." Stanleigh Arnold

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 13 '53 150w

MCCCLINTOCK, THEODORE. Tank menagerie; adventures of the little-game hunters of the Fenway. 180p il $2.50 Abelard-Schuman

590.74 Fresh water fauna. Aquariums

54-5245

"In 1938 Vanguard Press brought out Theodore McClintock's 'The Underwater Zoo,' a diary account of the creatures that flourished in a bowl of water brought for observation from the Fenway in Boston to the author's apartment. The present volume is a retelling of these adventures in fictional form, but with strict adherence to scientific facts." N Y Times

"Recommended for ages 8-12." H. M. Brogan
+ Library J 79:1326 Jl '54 80w

"To our mind it would have been better if not fictionalized, but the idea it carries out should interest many children under twelve, who are fascinated by snails and tadpoles, and other tiny pond creatures."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 16 '54 70w

"In this reviewer's experience such treatment is more of a hindrance than a help in snaring the interest of older children. Solid pages of conversation between a boy and a girl about damsel-fly nymphs, scuds, snails and tadpoles are soon boring. Youngsters who have their own tanks and an avid interest in the subject may find the story fascinating, but most young readers above the nursery age prefer their science straight." Margaret Martignoni

— + N Y Times p11 Jl 4 '54 150w

MCCLOY, HELEN (MRS DAVIS DRESSER). Unfinished crime. 234p $2.75 Random house

54-7454

Detective story.

Booklist 51:134 N 15 '54

Kirkus 22:551 Ag 15 '54 90w

"Miss McCloy lets this one feel its way through the startled awareness of an earnest if too confiding damsel in distress and manipulates all of it without any admission of satiric intent. Eyes glitter, there are oily chuckles, hands are clenched and hostility abounds. Indeed it is all played, at the expense of a good deal of practiced ingenuity, with a desperately dead pan." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 O 24 '54 140w

"For most of the way (until coincidences and anti-climaxes pile up too heavily), Miss McCloy manages to make surprisingly entertaining and suspenseful reading out of this unlikely theme." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p39 O 31 '54 60w

"This is a new treatment of an old gimmick, with lots of surprises and scares, but it seems rather talkative and explanatory for McCloy. New York scene and—of course—thoroughly literate style." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 7 '54 70w

"Bit thinnish." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:39 N 27 '54 20w

MCCCLUNG, ROBERT M. Bufo; the story of a toad; il. by [the author]. 40p $2 Morrow

597.8 Toads—Juvenile literature

54-6258

Describes the life-cycle of Bufo from an egg to a mature toad. The author is curator of mammals and birds at the Bronx Zoo in New York city. For ages six to eight.

Booklist 51:22 S 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 21 '54
70w

Horn Bk 30:438 D '54 80w

Kirkus 22:389 J1 1 '54 90w

"Interesting, well-written nature study material for the six-to-ten-year-olds. . . Illustrations by the author are excellent." H. E. Walker

+ Library J 79:1665 S 15 '54 70w

"When a child first notices the funny old toad in his yard or garden, or first sees his dog making a face when he catches a toad, he should hear read aloud this delightful, short nature book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 10 '54
150w

"'Bufo, the Story of a Toad' further confirms the opinion that all of Mr. McClung's books are consistently good. . . The excellent illustrations fit in so smoothly with the text as to seem a running part of it." M. M.

+ Sat R 37:82 N 13 '54 130w

MCCOMB, WILLIAM H. Businessman must save himself. 110p $1.75 Harper

338.973 U.S.—Commercial policy. U.S.—
Economic policy 53-11852

"In a practical discussion of the factors that cause depressions, the author appeals for greater moral integrity in organized business and suggests positive programs for better employer-worker relations." Bookmark

Booklist 50:233 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:105 F '54 20w

Reviewed by H. C. Kenney
Christian Science Monitor p9 My 6 '54
350w

Reviewed by R. L. Vormelker
Library J 79:987 My 15 '54 110w

"Like so many participants in arguments of this sort, Mr. McComb tends to divide the world into the black and the white—the white being the businessman and the black the non-businessman. The realization that several shades of gray exist would add substance and import to his thesis." J. J. N.

Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 31 '54
200w

MCCONNAUGHEY, JAMES. Three for the money. 247p $2.75 Sloane

54-5544

Mystery story.

Kirkus 21:749 N 15 '53 50w

"A pungent sort of goulash, flavored with judgment." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 7 '54
170w

"His material is familiar enough—the suspect who flees to clear himself rather than trust the police, the strange girl who joins him, the love that blossoms under tension—but Mr. McConnaughey is so observant in detail, so carefully convincing in motivation, so wise in avoiding blacks and whites of character that even cliché situations seem as fresh as if they'd been just invented." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 31 '54 40w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 21 '54
60w

"Somewhat overcontrived, but pace in main is brisk. Plus mark." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:40 F 27 '54 20w
Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54
70w

MCCONNAUGHEY, MRS SUSANNE. Tropic of doubt. 256p $3.50 Westminster press

53-9210

Novel based on a record found in a missionary journal of the eighteenth century. It purports to tell the story of one Thomas Lewis, an English Calvinist missionary in Tahiti. Lewis married a native girl, hoping to convert her to Christianity. Instead he found himself ostracized by the English and not too welcome among the natives.

Booklist 50:260 Mr 1 '54

Kirkus 21:550 Ag 15 '53 180w

"Rather slight. Of interest because of the locale, and because the natives come alive as people with varied characters; never are they just types." J. L. Ross

+ — Library J 78:1846 O 15 '53 80w

"Mrs. McConnaughey makes Lewis's ordeal into a fine tale." M. L.

+ Sat R 37:69 Ja 23 '54 230w

MCCONNELL, GRANT. Decline of agrarian democracy. 226p $3.75 Univ. of Calif. press

338.1 Agricultural administration—U.S.—
American farm bureau federation 53-9387

"The broad theme of this book is that the spirit of agrarian democracy in America, with its doctrines of freedom and equality and antipathy to potentially tyrannical power, has been succeeded by a contrary reality. Agrarian threats to the anti-egalitarian tendencies of manufacturing and trade have been replaced by a structure of power, in the American Farm Bureau Federation, of the kind that agrarian radicals used to condemn. Most of the monograph is devoted to an analysis of the development, organization, policies, and political maneuvers of the Farm Bureau." U S Quarterly Bk R

Reviewed by R. B. Vance

Am Hist R 9:660 Ap '54 550w

Reviewed by R. K. Huitt

Am Pol Sci R 48:568 Je '54 430w

"Interesting, well-written, and well-documented book. . . Some of Mr. McConnell's charges may seem to be severe to many directly concerned with agricultural policy formation and program administration. However, there will undoubtedly be agreement that he has made a real contribution to the understanding of the power structure in agriculture." W. N. Thompson

+ Ann Am Acad 290:148 N '53 550w

Current Hist 26:124 F '54 100w

Foreign Affairs 32:337 Ja '54 30w

"I could go into rather elaborate detail in pointing out faults in the writing of the book, but I should not have the courage to stop, once I got started. By far the worst fault of them all is a three-and-a-half-page index that is all but useless. Yet, I recommend a wide reading of the book. It may not cover the subject adequately, and some people may seriously question the conclusions, but an adequate understanding of the decline of rural democracy, which seems to be an established fact, cannot be gained without taking this book into consideration." F. A. Shannon

J Pol Econ 62:90 F '54 450w

"Mr. McConnell's book makes a respectable contribution toward filling the need for independent study and evaluation of the AFBF. . . A gross summary of the argument may convey the impression that Mr. McConnell overstates the significance of agrarianism in American political thought. Perhaps he does a bit. Yet his analyses will be most suggestive to those who are disposed to ponder about the state to which the American democracy has evolved." V. O. Key

+ New Repub 129:20 Ag 10 '53 700w

"In attempting to account for the 'transformation of the quality of American agrarianism' during the past half-century, Dr. McConnell, a University of California political scientist, has undertaken a formidable task. Many students of native social movements will take exception to his principal thesis. Others, although they agree with the general argument, will question the adequacy of the supporting evidence. However, few will deny that he has probed with fresh insights and novel instruments an old problem that has received an undue amount of standardized attention.

MCCONNELL, GRANT—Continued

One hopes that this study will be carefully examined by members of our craft, especially by those rural sociologists who have displayed a peculiar reluctance to study stratification and power in non-urban areas." Wilson Record

+ Social Forces 32:300 Mr '54 900w

"The book will be of interest to students of American politics in general as well as to those more narrowly concerned with farm organization. Foreign readers will find the book helpful in their attempts to disentangle the roles and relations of pressure groups, political parties, and government in the American scene."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:276 S '53 200w

MCCONNELL, JANE. See Tompkins, J.

MCCORD, DAVID THOMPSON WATSON.

Odds without ends. 139p $3 Little 811

54-5139

A collection of light verse with subjects ranging from dogs and walking sticks to the gods and food.

Booklist 51:148 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:32 N '54 10w

Kirkus 22:518 Ag 1 '54 90w

"Rhymes? Oh, yes, there are rhymes. If the right word with which to complete one doesn't happen to be in the language at the time, Mr. McCord creates one." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p12 O 17 '54 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 7 '54 600w

"There may be more side-splitting humorists than David McCord, but no one has more fun with the endless oddities of the English language. Examine the first poem in his new book, 'Odds Without Ends,' and you will get a fair sampling of his peculiar savor." Louis Untermeyer

+ Sat R 37:17 N 27 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 100w

MCCORD, DAVID THOMPSON WATSON.

Old bateau, and other poems. 54p $2.75 Little 811

53-10241

"A collection of recent work, this has his characteristic distinction of content and craftsmanship. It is 'serious' poetry, leavened with wit and the ability to expose with subtlety the ridiculous or the pretentious aspects of our times, to make a point with dry understatement, to bring us up short with an unexpected and yet inevitable conclusion. Mr. McCord is quick to observe human foibles, and somewhat merciless in his ability to expose them in a few revelatory phrases, but he is charitably tolerant except with crassness or insincerity or stupidity." Sat R

Booklist 50:219 F 1 '54

Kirkus 21:652 S 15 '53 130w

"The Old Bateau and Other Poems' is the work of a poet of stature and integrity. And it is a rewarding and satisfying book to read and to return to." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 37:23 My 22 '54 500w

"At his best, David McCord is a writer of witty light verse or of precise, almost impressionistic poems. In the latter vein he shows a fine eye for detail and metrical skill. . . In some instances, when the poet strains for more serious intellectual effects than can be conveyed by witty little forays or evocative impressionism, he blunders."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:197 Je '54 260w

MCCORMICK, MARY JOSEPHINE.

Diagnostic casework in the Thomistic pattern. 239p $3.50

Columbia univ. press

361.3 [361.8] Social work. Thomas Aquinas, Saint

53-10938

"Elaboration of concept of social casework according to philosophy of St. Thomas Aquinas presented by author in her Thomistic Philosophy In Social Casework [Book Review Digest 1948]. Opposes Freudian Ego-Id theory of personality and will-psychoanalysis of Otto Rank with 'third orientation' of spiritual and supernatural goals both for worker and patient. Particularly applies in practical terms Thomistic teaching on Prudence and conditions of foresight, circumspection and caution. Cites from wide professional experience including former teaching at School of Social Work, Loyola University. Appendix of philosophical basis of functional casework, and Bibliography." Library J

"A real contribution to the literature on the theory and philosophy of social work. Dr. McCormick is to be congratulated for handling the subject with intellectual maturity and philosophical sophistication." A. P. Miles

+ Ann Am Acad 296:193 N '54 400w

"Coherent, concise treatment and clarity of style make it highly useful for students, professionals and others in field of social casework." R. J. Hurley

+ Library J 78:2210 D 15 '53 140w

MCCORMICK, PATRICIA.

Lady bullfighter; the autobiography of the North American matador; il. with photographs. 209p $3.95

Holt

B or 92 Bull fights

54-10526

The story of the Texas co-ed who against parental wishes became the United States' first professional woman bullfighter.

"Readers with no knowledge of bullfighting will find the use of technical phraseology a barrier. But after all, the market will be primarily those who do understand. Plus those interested in personal records of unusual careers."

Kirkus 22:573 Ag 15 '54 200w

"Written at the outset of her career, this account has youthful vigor, and a certain flamboyance as well as novelty, since it is the art from the feminine viewpoint. Recommended for medium and large public libraries." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1888 O 15 '54 110w

"What troubles this reviewer is Miss McCormick's almost infinite capacity for self-delusion, her mixing of values, and the fact that she has little to write about after all. With her success have come all sorts of good things—TV appearances, visits from movie actors and lots and lots of fan mail, including at least one proposal of marriage. But Miss McCormick has dedicated herself to some thing which she refuses to divulge, and seems to have renounced marriage. One can only wish her all further success in avoiding the rather nasty horn-gorings which have hospitalized her at least twice." Harry Sylvester

N Y Times p44 N 14 '54 310w

"Her story is simply told with sincerity and feeling and will make fascinating reading for those with only a casual interest in the subject as well as for the confirmed 'aficionado.'" A. C. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 28 '54 550w

"A well-written, thoroughly engrossing book." C. V. Little

+ Sat R 37:18 N 6 '54 1050w

"This ingratiatingly modest account of a girl's apprenticeship in one of man's most mysterious worlds will tell most North Americans more than they ever knew about the art of the corrida."

+ Time 64:116 N 8 '54 330w

MCCORMICK, RICHARD P.

History of voting in New Jersey; a study of the development of election machinery, 1664-1911. 228p $5 Rutgers

univ. press

324.749 Elections—New Jersey

54-7430

"It is the purpose of this study to relate the history of the development of the election process in New Jersey from the beginnings of English settlement down into the twentieth century. On the purely descriptive level, an effort has been made to answer numerous relevant questions. Who were entitled to vote? How many people voted? How were candidates placed in nomination? How was the voting conducted? What was the system of representation? To what extent was the existence of political parties recognized? (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. E. Brown
Am Hist R 60:211 O '54 280w

Reviewed by R. E. Noble
Ann Am Acad 294:179 J1 '54 300w

"The book is a scholarly, if not overly imaginative, study of electoral reform, but not of reformers, and not of the social conditions which created and shaped both corruption and reform. The bibliography is a useful one for scholars in this field."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:224 Je '54 250w

MCCRACKEN, HAROLD. Pirate of the north; with drawings by Ernest Tonk. 213p $3 Lippincott

53-8914

Story of a youthful hunter and a wolverine who match wits in a lonely, snow-covered valley in Alaska.

Booklist 50:225 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:87 Ja '54 10w

"The mounting awareness of the boy and the wolverine as adversaries embraces the reader until their war becomes vital to him as to them. It is a tribute to Mr. McCracken that he permits the close of this struggle to take place as nature rather than the accepted juvenile tradition would have it." E. B. Hungerford

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p30 N 15 '53 100w

"Mr. McCracken has written in this vein before and wields a sure naturalist's pen."

+ Kirkus 21:490 Ag 1 '53 110w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p10 N 15 '53 30w

Wis Lib Bul 50:78 Mr '54

MCCREADY, THOMAS LEIGHTON. Biggity Bantam; il. by Tasha Tudor. 49p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

54-5202

The story of Biggity, a bantam rooster on a New Hampshire farm, whose fighting spirit got him into a lot of trouble.

"A lively and charming little tale." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 21 '54 120w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel
Christian Science Monitor p9 My 13 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:229 Ap 1 '54 80w

"Will be useful for reading aloud to pre-school children and for children in grades 1-3 to use themselves. Recommended." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 79:634 Ap 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 9 '54 120w

"Frankly, Biggity is not a pleasing personality and the story of his adventures is poorly developed. Nevertheless this book has charm, for author and artist have presented an attractive picture of real life on their own New Hampshire farm, generously illustrated with Tasha Tudor's characteristic soft-toned illustrations." C. E. Van Norman

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 7 '54 80w

MCCULLOUGH, JOHN G., and KESSLER, LEONARD P. Farther and faster; il. by Leonard Kessler. [62p] $2.50 Crowell

385 Transportation—Juvenile literature 54-12602

Brief humorous story of transportation from the days of primitive man. For ages six to nine.

"The book is most attractively and profusely illustrated, tho I fail to understand why the artist makes his machines mechanically unworkable." John Lewellen

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 14 '54 70w

Kirkus 22:635 S 15 '54 50w

"This account proceeds through the ages, touching briefly on the important changes in transportation, with explanation of how they came about. The educational theme is made exciting by an alert, lively approach and by illustrations which are clear, gay and humorous." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p36 N 28 '54 110w

MACDONALD, MRS BETTY (BARD) HESKETT. Mrs Piggie-Wiggle's farm; pictures by Maurice Sendak. 127p $2 Lippincott

54-7299

Mrs Piggie-Wiggle, who used to live in town, now has a farm and lots of animals. These five stories for young readers describe Mrs Piggie-Wiggle's methods of overcoming the faults of some rather obstreperous children.

"Especially if your child thinks he has no need of Mrs. Piggie-Wiggle, he'll find her remedies very funny. And everyone will enjoy the even funnier illustrations." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 O 17 '54 110w

"Some cleverly done fantasy in which the morals are golden, enticingly packaged and totally unlike sermons."

+ Kirkus 22:387 J1 1 '54 110w

"Many children will blush as they read these purposely exaggerated portraits, each done with acute knowledge of some average childhood failing: being untruthful, forgetting to feed one's pets, being carelessly destructive, being a fraidy cat (this one is a girl), and never being able to find what one is sent for. The satire extends on to other silly ways and manners of children under twelve, all put down with high humor, and with talk painfully real for each obnoxious character." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p6 N 14 '54 290w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 14 '54 110w

"The tongue-in-cheek moralizing will be highly amusing to middle-aged boys and girls who love Mrs. Piggie-Wiggle. Maurice Sendak's diverting black-and-white illustrations fit the story perfectly." Ruth Gagliardo

+ Sat R 37:34 S 18 '54 1400w

MCDONALD, CHRISTINA. Young folks Bible quiz book. 223p $2 World pub.

220.076 Bible. Whole—Catechisms, question books, etc. 52-8443

A collection of Biblical quiz questions, arranged in groups of ten, each group on a different subject. Answers are given in the back of the book.

"Try the idea again. This isn't a success."
— Kirkus 21:669 O 1 '53 130w

"For almost any age and almost any group that has any Biblical knowledge. Recommended." R. M. McEvoy

+ Library J 79:77 Ja 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 20 '53 20w

Reviewed by Chad Walsh
N Y Times p26 Ap 4 '54 80w

MACDONALD, JOHN ROSS, pseud. See Millar, K.

MCDONALD, MRS LUCILE (SAUNDERS), and ROSS, ZOLA HELEN. Friday's child; decorations by Genia. 189p $2.50 Nelson
54-5908

Fran was Friday's child "loving and giving." The story is of her summer vacation after her freshman year at college when she learned all she could about journalism, while acting as a copy girl on a Seattle paper. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 50:362 My 15 '54

"A honey of a newspaper story that should go a long way in introducing the young to the tough realities as well as the excitement that underlies the printed word."

+ Kirkus 22:119 F 15 '54 160w

"A pleasant combination of journalism, mystery, and romance for girls of 12-15." G. P. Slocum

+ Library J 79:566 Mr 15 '54 60w

MCDOWELL, CARL E., and GIBBS, HELEN MARILLA. Ocean transportation [foreword by E. L. Cochrane]. 475p il $7 McGraw

387.51 Shipping. Merchant marine 53-9879

"Two former Stanford University faculty members have combined to write a comprehensive account of the world's Merchant Marine, its problems and the part it plays in the world's economy." (San Francisco Chronicle) Index.

"In this reviewer's judgment, a basic fault is that large issues of public policy are passed over far too cursorily. . . . Although most of the controversial subjects mentioned are handled quite objectively, McDowell and Gibbs do not wholly succeed in breaking away from the tradition of shipping specialists in looking at American shipping through partial eyes. Nevertheless, for what it does cover, theirs is an excellent text." J. C. Nelson

+ — Am Econ R 44:690 S '54 500w

Reviewed by R. L. Vormelker

Library J 79:987 My 15 '54 160w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 11 '54 40w

MCDOWELL, CHARLES RICE. Iron baby angel. 274p $3 Holt

54-5455

The iron baby angel was an ornament on the horse-drinking fountain in Danville, Kentucky, back in 1909. That was the year Harold Hines, Jr. from Chicago, aged nine going on ten, came to spend his vacation with his grandmother. This novel of adolescence is filled with Harold's experiences in the sleepy little town, where he learned that playing with children of his own age was more of a hazard than climbing a stand-pipe two hundred feet high.

Booklist 50:321 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by Gilbert Laue

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 2 '54 150w

"McDowell writes with great wit but relatively little humor, but he produces a sweet and gentle tale which reflects the security of 1909 and local inhabitants with gentleness and dignity. The angel is symbolical—but real. Highly recommended." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:623 Ap 1 '54 140w

"When a Kentuckian has a natural-born gift of storytelling it is, in Danville's succinct phrase of approbation, 'sump'n, sump'n on a stick.' Certainly 'The Iron Baby Angel' is sump'n on a stick—half reminiscence, half fable, and wholly delightful." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 11 '54 600w

"No one will accuse Mr. McDowell of having written an integrated novel. As a roll-call of small-town characters, however, the book is all present and accounted for. It is highly anecdotal, airily inconsequential and seldom dull." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 1 '54 360w

MACDUFFEE, CYRUS COLTON. Theory of equations. 120p $3.75 Wiley

512.82 Equations, Theory of 54-5768

"A short book addressed to such readers as science majors, engineering students, and graduates in these fields who find themselves in need of a fresh look at equations. Requires only calculus as background." (Library J) Index.

Library J 79:920 My 15 '54 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:24 Mr '54

MCGAUGHEY, WILLIAM HOWARD. American automobile album; over 250 photographs. 224p $6 Dutton

629.209 Automobiles—History 53-10338

Popular text and many photographs give a history of the American automobile from early 1890's to the present. No index.

Booklist 51:166 D 15 '54

"This is a light hearted family trip which everyone will enjoy." W. J. E.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 28 '54 30w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:22 D 4 '54 40w

MCGERR, PATRICIA. Fatal in my fashion. 191p $2.75 Doubleday

54-10772

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:552 Ag 15 '54 80w

"It is all strenuous contrivance but managed with boldness so that it comes off considerably better than a bald admission of her plot would indicate." James Sandoe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 31 '54 90w

"Probably the best of Miss McGerr's novels to date." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p43 N 14 '54 30w

"Highly interesting background of fashion world is an agreeable feature. You can't get very fond of any character, but the solution's consistent and cleverly handled." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 N 28 '54 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:53 D 11 '54 20w

MCGINLEY, PHYLLIS (MRS C. L. HAYDEN). Love letters. 116p $3 Viking 811

54-9882

A collection of light verse by an American poet. The majority of the poems have been published previously in the New Yorker.

Booklist 51:58 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:5 O '54 10w

"That would be a real hostess who should put this lovable volume on her guestroom table—a real friend who could put it into the hands of another!" Katherine Brégy

+ Cath World 180:157 N '54 270w

Reviewed by A. F. Otis

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 3 '54 130w

"Miss McGinley views herself and her world with delicate irony and amused affection, seeing the faults and flaws in herself (why must I talk so much at parties?), in her children—the tender and touching 'Ballade of Lost Objects' brings this out beautifully, in the company she keeps, in the Old and the Great, in her friends and in her foes. But she touches everything tenderly, almost strokingly, for she is aware not only of the 'tears of things' but also of their infinite fragility." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 61:69 O 22 '54 1300w

"A fresh piping, an agility in rhyme and rhythms and a sincere feeling are the passports of this new collection of light verse which should head to a popular market."

+ Kirkus 22:430 Jl 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 79:1593 S 15 '54 100w

"An honest review of 'The Love Letters of Phyllis McGinley' is much in danger of sounding like a love letter to Phyllis McGinley. But honestly! . . . Occasionally the inevitable comparison is the obvious one. . . . Mostly, however, there are no such technical devices; Miss McGinley is as purely cadenced a poet as say, Christina Rossetti." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 S 19 '54 420w

"I suppose the most meaningful thing that can be said of her is that she has restored delight (repeat, delight) to poetry, has written her poems with the completest possible clarity (here you will find no stylish obscurantism so dear to the avant garde), has achieved a magical sense of communication and intimacy between herself and the reader, and in so doing has not compromised by so much as a syllable her own standard of integrity." Charles Jackson

+ N Y Times p4 S 19 '54 650w

"One of the finest practitioners of the art, a wise and witty poet, Phyllis McGinley, has a new collection of her poetry. . . . Miss McGinley, is like quicksilver; the moment you think you have her pinned down and classified, she slips through the fingers of whatever definition you may chose." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 8 '54 500w

Reviewed by G. P. Meyer

Sat R 37:11 S 18 '54 1900w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p7C O 3 '54 450w

MCGIVERN, WILLIAM P. Rogue cop. 224p $2.75 Dodd

54-5986

Mystery story.

"A successful, savage little thriller quite as good as 'The Big Heat.'" James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ap 25 '54 110w

"It's a situation that could easily have been slickly oversimplified; but the author makes of it a classic study in guilt, retribution and atonement—without for an instant forgetting to tell an exciting story of swift action." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p28 My 2 '54 150w

"McGivern's great insight and power give his story the shattering impact of truth." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 23 '54 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:31 J1 10 '54 20w

MCGOLDRICK, EDWARD J. Management of the mind; how to conquer alcohol and other blocks to successful living; with an introd. by Bartley C. Crum. 261p $3 Houghton

616.86 Alcoholism 53-9257

"A one-time alcoholic outlines the principles on which he bases the system of his own devising for the cure of alcoholism used at New York City's Bridge House clinic. Patients who cannot accept the religious approach of Alcoholics Anonymous, the authoritative guidance of psychiatrists, or the physiological methods of medicine often respond, the records show, to the McGoldrick 'mental diet,' which appears to paraphrase and modify widely-used psychotherapeutic devices leading to an enlightened self-interest that enables an individual to bring about his own cure." Booklist

Booklist 50:374 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by William Yates

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 D 12 '54 100w

"A book for those who need help of this kind, and those who work with them—social workers, clergy, etc."

+ Kirkus 22:184 Mr 1 '54 110w

"Recommended as an elementary vademecum for our 'Age of Anxiety.'" J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 79:858 My 1 '54 220w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 20 '54 40w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 J1 23 '54 700w

"This is a solid book, which requires careful study; professional members of a community will find it to their interest and may direct its use."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:205 O '54

MCGRAW, MRS PEG, and MCGRAW, WALTER. Assignment: prison riots. 270p il $3.95 Holt

365 Prisons—U.S.

54-5456

"Late in 1952 Mr. and Mrs. McGraw, producers of radio and TV documentary programs, were commissioned by NBC to do a story about the many prison riots of that year. Out of their investigations came this book and a notable series of nine radio shows called 'The Challenge of Our Prisons.'" (Library J) Glossary.

"The authors give evidence of a respectable knowledge of the essentials of enlightened penology. They did a great deal of hard work in assembling the material they present. They demonstrate a high order of repertorial ability. If much of the material they give us is sensational, it is always cogent and interesting." H. E. Barnes

+ Ann Am Acad 296:190 N '54 500w

Booklist 50:335 My 1 '54

"The fact that there have been about 40 prison riots of varying scope and intensity during the last two years has brought our scandalous prison situation before the attention of the public to an extent unprecedented in American experience. It was inevitable that this situation would stimulate the production of a good book covering the prison crisis in general and the prison riots in particular. This is it, and its excellence is commensurate with the serious problem with which it deals. It is better than could have been expected of a volume obviously designed to attract wide interest on the part of the general public." H. E. Barnes

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 18 '54 850w

Reviewed by Stafford Derby

Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 22 '54 180w

"An expose, which seems at times more impulsive than intensive, but which should have some challenging and some chastening influence."

Kirkus 22:174 Mr 1 '54 220w

"Highly recommended." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:768 Ap 15 '54 140w

"Overcrowded and understaffed prisons, poorly trained and incompetent personnel, tasteless food, and unimaginative and stifling rules—these are classic to the prison scene. But the McGraws take these things out of the sociologist's textbook and turn them into vivid reality. Verbatim interviews with prison officials and riot leaders give a new and illuminating dimension to the facts. The convicts themselves, however, with few exceptions come through as copies of the stereotyped creations of Hollywood and popular fiction." Alfred Hassler

+ Nation 179:514 D 11 '54 750w

"Mr. and Mrs. McGraw have turned in a piece of good reporting." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 6 '54 650w

Reviewed by Frank O'Leary

N Y Times p9 J1 4 '54 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 13 '54 160w

Reviewed by W. M. Wallack

Sat R 37:21 My 22 '54 350w

MCGRAW, WILLIAM CORBIN (WILLIAM CORBIN, pseud). High road home. 250p $2.75 Coward-McCann

53-9565

Nico LaFlamme is a French orphan, brought up in a combination of highly protected schools and Paris streets. With an intense purpose to find a father he believes alive in America, he manages a way to cross the ocean and the American continent, sustained by arrogance and cleverness, childish naivete and strong will power. Sharing the hero role with the child is an American youth only a little older with an equally strong purpose to break into the newspaper world.

Booklist 50:382 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:165 Ap '54 20w

"A meaty book, with much food for thought." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 18 '54 160w

+ Horn Bk 30:184 Je '54 90w

"Promising."

+ Kirkus 22:3 Ja 1 '54 220w

"Excellent and very realistic story. . . Fine characters, good details, and positive values. Children's rooms and young people's collections." M. D. Read

+ Library J 79:564 Mr 15 '54 80w

"Sometimes apart, sometimes together, the two boys cover a lot of the United States. Through French eyes we see some of our great cities and much of our countryside, all the way to California. Nico meets a variety of people who gradually convert him from hostility to deep enthusiasm about America. It is a somewhat overpacked, rambling and slightly sentimental book. But boys and girls over fourteen will find it good adventure reading with unusual realism and with moral values that leave interesting after-thoughts." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p8 Mr 21 '54 230w

"By journey's end, Nico has changed his opinion about America and Americans. This, of course, is not unexpected, especially since he teams up with a quixotic, would-be reporter on the way. But Nico arrives at his conclusions by a devious route—hitch-hiking, riding the rods, through a job here and a hand-out there, all of which make a realistic, tough-fibered story, with thoughtful overtones." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 14 '54 220w

"The ending for Nico who accepts the wealthy family that is ready to adopt him and for the older boy who gets a job on a San Francisco newspaper is somewhat contrived. However, the narrative of the two boys on their own and always in danger of capture is realistic and the maturing of the French boy is credible. Older boys will like this story." F. L. S.

+ — Sat R 37:65 My 15 '54 230w

MCGREGOR, ELLEN. Miss Pickerell goes to the Arctic; il. by Paul Galdone. (Whittlesey House publication) 126p $2.25 McGraw

54-8816

"In this fourth book in the series, Miss Pickerell flies to the Arctic, having offered to act as observer on a plane going to the relief of a stranded weather experiment expedition. She takes along a new snowmobile, bought for her cow's birthday present, which has the power of a tractor and the comforts of a trailer. This is a great asset in the rescue work." Sat R

Booklist 51:47 S 15 '54

"In this latest and, unfortunately, last of Ellen MacGregor's engaging science-fiction stories, Miss Pickerell displays, the same dry humor, charming oddity, and dauntless courage that have endeared her to boys and girls everywhere." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 S 12 '54 90w

"It is with regret that we report that Ellen MacGregor, creator of beloved Miss Pickerell, died recently. Always, her books have been models of the kind of humane and humorous fantasy that comes realistically yet light-heartedly to grips with today's world, and she does not fail us here."

+ Kirkus 22:339 Je 1 '54 130w

"Recommended for grades 4-6." Averil Randall

+ Library J 79:1665 S 15 '54 80w

"The dry humor of Miss P. herself, her continued devotion to her cow, and her never-failing courage, give the books their particular charm." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 22 '54 180w

"If this fourth story is a bit more serious in tone than the earlier books, what it lacks in comic situation is more than compensated for by suspense." Jeanne Massey

+ N Y Times p12 S 5 '54 140w

"While lacking the same degree of freshness and spontaneity as the first book, nevertheless it is fun and will be welcomed by those young readers of nine to eleven who are already clamoring for another Miss Pickerell book." Helen Fuller

+ Sat R 37:34 Ag 21 '54 200w

MCGREGOR, JAMES MURDOCH (J. T. M'INTOSH, pseud). Born leader. 221p $2.95 Doubleday

54-5173

Science fiction.

Kirkus 21:723 N 1 '53 90w

"Mr. McIntosh has worked out with beautifully convincing detail the sociological and cultural developments of his colony in space, and its conflict with a later shipload of desperate authoritarians; but he's failed to breathe into the novel any of the lively warmth which has characterized his shorter stories. One hopes for an equally enjoyable long space-story soon." H. H. Holmes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ja 17 '54 100w

"This early entry among 1954's science fiction novels is a good one to start off the new year." J. F. McC.

+ N Y Times p24 F 14 '54 170w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ja 17 '54 40w

MCGREGOR, JAMES MURDOCH (J. T. M'INTOSH, pseud). One in three hundred. 223p $2.95 Doubleday

54-9186

Science fiction.

Kirkus 22:415 Jl 1 '54 110w

"The story of the final destruction of earth, with its concomitant problem of who shall be given a further chance at life on a safer planet, has been told before. But no one, I venture to say, has ever told it with the warmth, the simplicity, the terrifying personal urgency, that mark this quiet, matter-of-fact account." J. F. McC.

+ N Y Times p42 S 26 '54 110w

"A good conversational filler for those agonizing pauses between television commercials." + San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 24 '54 270w

MCGREGOR, ROB ROY. Silicones and their uses. 302p il $6 McGraw

661.8 Silicon organic compounds 53-6046

"Treats as nontechnically as possible for maximum understanding properties, preparation, and applications of silicones. Includes silicone fluids, silicone compounds, silicone lubricants, silicone resins, silicone rubber, and bouncing putty." (Chem & Eng N) Bibliography. Index.

"If a summary is needed, your reviewer recommends this book as a valuable and conscientious effort on the part of an able man to present the properties and uses of those silicones with which he is most familiar. While someone with quite different experience and associations would have written parts of it differently, it is hard to see how the author could have done so." E. G. Rochow

+ Am Chem Soc J 77:3613 J1 5 '54 650w

Chem & Eng N 32:88 Ja 4 '54 30w

"For those desiring to get a general background of the subject without being faced with the intense writing of the specialist, the book should be of value." C. L. Mantell

+ Chem Eng 61:425 Je '54 130w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:778 Ap 15 '54 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:20 Mr '54

MCGREW, FENN, pseud. Made for murder. 246p $2.50 Rinehart

54-7075

Detective story.

"Good angles here."

+ Kirkus 22:251 Ap 1 '54 60w

"From everyday and rather promising materials Fenn McGrew has written a singularly laborious and unreal tale. . . It's difficult to take any of it seriously because the frightful old hag is distorted into caricature, the harassed family by that token turns into a succession of doormats with built-in sensibilities and the malice of the town has nothing worthy to feed upon." James Sandoe

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 13 '54 100w

"Has a good background of small-college unpleasantness and an admirably created not-quite-senile murderess." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p15 Je 27 '54 30w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p16 J1 25 '54 40w

"Plus mark." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:31 J1 10 '54 20w

MACHADO, JOSE BETTENCOURT. See Bettencourt Machado, J.

MACHADO DE ASSIS, JOAQUIM MARIA. Philosopher or dog? (Quincas Borba) [tr. from the Portuguese by Clotilde Wilson]. 271p $3.50 Noonday

This is a sequel to the author's earlier novel Epitaph of a Small Winner (Book Review Digest 1952). It tells the story of Quincas Borba's heir, Rubiao, left a fortune on condition that he take care of Quincas' dog (also called Quincas Borba).

"This book does not have the impact of the earlier one, but the mature reader, unmoved, it is to be hoped, by yellow pessimism, will find here many delightful bits of satire directed against man's cruelty and indifference to philosophers and dogs alike." Rileigh Hughes

+ Cath World 180:73 O '54 230w

Reviewed by Vivian Mercier

Commonweal 60:372 J1 16 '54 1050w

Kirkus 22:271 Ap 15 '54 130w

"Recommended for the library desiring South American literature in translation." J. D. Marshall

Library J 79:1310 J1 '54 100w

"It is entertaining and worth reading, although decidedly less brilliant than the author's Epitaph of a Small Winner."

+ — Nation 179:178 Ag 28 '54 110w

Reviewed by Dudley Fitts

New Repub 131:19 S 20 '54 1450w

Reviewed by Angel Flores

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p4 Ag 8 '54 400w

"Were it not for the translator's informative preface, readers of 'Philosopher or Dog'—particularly those who have not read 'Epitaph'—could be excused for admitting they were somewhat flummoxed by this strange and wonderful book. Even with Clotilde Wilson's assistance, properly to digest 'Philosopher or Dog'—with its 201 short chapters in the style of Sterne, its author's asides and fantastic interludes, his cynicism, his subtle Firbankian humor, his frequent, unexpected, poetic but not always comprehensible use of symbols—requires steady concentration." James Stern

+ N Y Times p4 J1 18 '54 750w

"For all its merits, 'Philosopher or Dog?' is unlikely to attain a place on the best-seller lists. One can hardly expect the general reader to welcome a book which, if he succeeds in penetrating its irony, will reward him with a lambasting where it hurts most, i.e., in his premises. Machado de Assis is still caviar—delicious caviar." W. L. Grossman

+ Sat R 37:12 J1 17 '54 750w

Time 64:83 J1 26 '54 700w

MACHETANZ, SARA (MRS FREDERICK MACHETANZ). Where else but Alaska? lithographs and photographs by Fred Machetanz. 214p $3 Scribner

979.8 [917.98] Alaska—Description and travel 54-8787

Account of the author's wedding in an Eskimo village, followed by the story of the young couple's early years in the Alaska they both loved.

Booklist 51:88 O 15 '54

"Mrs. Machetanz writes well, with humor and suspense. The result is an unusually fine account of our far-northern neighbors, to which her husband's stunning lithographs and photography make a real contribution." A. B. McGuire

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p36 N 14 '54 150w

"The author's affection for the North country and its simple resourceful people warms every page and lights up whatever might otherwise be stark or barren or bleak." J. A. Arndt

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 2 '54 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

Horn Bk 30:443 D '54 110w

"For high school these experiences of a newly married couple in Alaska make entertaining reading with a rewarding view of life far north. . . The stone lithographs by Fred Machetanz are striking and his photographs superior. Recommended." Virginia Haviland

+ Library J 79:1675 S 15 '54 90w

"Mr. Machetanz contributes striking lithographs, portraits of the rare characters we meet and dramatic, lovely scenes. The many photographs give us contrasting details, and show us this courageous couple themselves. You will find the book wordy at times and without any literary pretenses. But its honesty is engaging, also its revelation of the fascination felt by an artist and a writer for this far land." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 10 '54 320w

MCINNES, GRAHAM. Lost island. 254p $3.50 World pub.

54-5349

The sole survivor of a plane crash in the Pacific, a Canadian scientist, found his way to an island which had been unvisited since the days of Francis Drake. The only inhabitants were a beautiful young woman and her father, supposed to be survivors of the Drake expedition. The love of the scientist and the beautiful girl had a strange ending when their idyl was threatened.

Booklist 50:420 J1 1 '54

"Such a story must succeed gloriously, sweeping the reader along triumphantly in spite of its impossibility or else it must fail utterly. For me, 'Lost Island' does not succeed." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 25 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:318 My 15 '54 100w

MCINNES, GRAHAM—Continued

"All plot; no people; style clear though sticky. Acceptable." M. S. Byam
Library J 79:1225 Je 15 '54 120w
Nation 179:96 Jl 31 '54 320w

"Fantasy such as this requires a talent that goes beyond the weaving of an extravagant plot and this Mr. McInnes does not possess. One reads his book with curiosity to its outcome but never with the bemusement of enchanted conviction." Carol Field

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 25 '54 360w

Reviewed by W. B. Hayward
N Y Times p18 Jl 25 '54 400w

"A fairy tale, not particularly well written but still very readable. . . A pleasant, harmless, dreamy book."

+ New Yorker 30:75 Jl 17 '54 40w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 8 '54 140w

M'INTOSH, J. T., pseud. See Macgregor, J. M.

MACINTYRE, ELISABETH (MRS JOHN ROY ELDERSHAW). Mr Koala Bear. [30p] col il $2 Scribner

54-8608

Picture story book about a kindly elderly Australian koala bear who had a visit from two small bears, who thought he was their uncle. The havoc they wrought in his orderly house was finally ended when their mother arrived to straighten out the mistake. For the very young.

"Enchanting picture book." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 5 '54 40w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '54 90w

Commonweal 61:204 N 19 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:479 Ag 1 '54 80w

"The rhymed text and chartreuse, brown, and cerise pictures have a freshness and charm that is simple and satisfying. Recommended." Anne Izard

+ Library J 79:1661 S 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 24 '54 170w

"Miss MacIntyre, who lives in the koala's native land, has accompanied her appealing, precise, pastel-colored drawings with some equally sprightly verse." G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times p26 S 19 '54 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 14 '54 170w

"When a book comes to us from another country (this author-illustrator lives in Australia) one cannot help hoping it will have a little of the flavor of the place of its origin. In spite of a quick glimpse of a platypus and a kangaroo, one has no feeling that this book emerged from any place but the nursery among companionable toy bears. However, it is an amusing picture book, and good nonsense for the youngest children is always welcome." R. H. Viguers

Sat R 37:34 Ag 21 '54 170w

MACIVER, ROBERT MORRISON, ed. Hour of insight; a sequel to Moments of personal discovery [by Hudson Hoagland and others]. (Institute for religious and social studies. Religion and civilization ser) 145p $2 Harper

156 Inspiration. Civilization 54-5796

"Symposium of 12 articles by leaders in diverse fields, describing significant personal experiences that have given each a clearer sense of direction. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:310 Ap 15 '54

"Stimulating."

+ Bookmark 13:156 Ap '54 20w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 14 '54 40w

"One can't help but have a renewed feeling of optimism about mankind's capabilities after reading this excellently done little volume." R. S. L.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 25 '54 90w

Springf'd Republican p18D My 16 '54 80w

MACK SMITH, DENIS. Cavour and Garibaldi, 1860; a study in political conflict. 458p il $8.50 Cambridge

945.08 Cavour, Camillo Benso, conte di. Garibaldi, Giuseppe. Italy—History 54-3061

"D. Mack Smith has undertaken to analyze the course of revolutionary politics during a civil war which, within the span of a few months, transformed the Italian peninsula from a melange of insignificant states to a nation just short of territorial completeness. It is the story of the labors of Garibaldi and of Cavour in the dramatic months of 1860 that brought the whole of the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies and much of central Italy under the banner of the House of Savoy." Am Hist R

"Excellent study." G. A. Carbone
+ Am Hist 60:93 O '54 550w

Reviewed by Garland Downum
Ann Am Acad 296:212 N '54 380w

Reviewed by Cecil Sprigge
Manchester Guardian p6 My 14 '54 600w

New Statesman & Nation 47:535 Ap 24 '54 2000w

"Mr. Mack Smith tells the complicated story with verve and keeps it moving at a lively pace. . . There is perhaps too little concession to the uninitiated in Mr. Mack Smith's treatment of his subject. An introductory chapter on the situation in Italy in the spring of 1860 might have been useful, and occasionally the style is too allusive (not everyone will learn much from the bare assertion that 'Lacaita's dramatic mission to Russell turns out to be less important than was once thought'). But this is a small flaw in a fascinating and very important book." D. P. Waley

+ Spec p719 Je 11 '54 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p493 Ag 6 '54 3000w

MACKAYE, DAVID LORING, and MACKAYE, MRS JULIA JOSEPHINE (GUNTHER). Pat's new worlds; decorations by Richard Bennett. 242p $3 Longmans

54-9207

An adventure story about Pat Boyle who came to America from Ireland in 1847. By accident Pat meets Professor Agassiz, who takes a part in Pat's life at Harvard. There is a mystery to be solved in this novel for older boys.

"Quite absorbing."

+ Kirkus 22:441 Jl 15 '54 150w

"Recommended." Ruth Bostwick

+ Library J 79:2501 D 15 '54 80w

"Pat's story, told in the first person, is an unusual novel for older boys, done in the true picaresque tradition." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p26 N 14 '54 300w

"Through the droll words of Pat, who relates the story, shines the meaning that America—with its equality of opportunity—had for a young immigrant a century ago. Agassiz, Longfellow and other famous Harvard figures are portrayed in lively, down-to-earth manner. Pat's quest of an education makes a heartening tale, far superior to the superimposed mystery yarn." Howard Boston

+ N Y Times pt2 p14 N 14 '54 160w

MACKAYE, LORING. See MacKaye, D. L.

MCKENNEY, RUTH (MRS RICHARD BRANSTEN). Far, far from home; drawings by Susan Knight. 210p $2.75 Harper

949.3 [914.93] Belgium—Description and travel 53-11853

In 1947 the author and her husband took their three children and two thousand pounds of household gear and went to live in Brussels. Their experiences are here retold in a series of gay stories, which first appeared in Holiday.

Booklist 50:27; 236 S 15 '53; F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:130 Mr '54 30w

Reviewed by M. B. Snyder

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 14 '54 350w

"The action is raffishly unpredictable, the sum of it all, for the most part, superlatively entertaining. Eleven lively sketches which make up this book were first published in Holiday magazine." O. D. Hormel

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 18 '54 900w

"Done with a sophisticated touch and understanding of both Belgians and Americans."

+ Horn Bk 30:193 Je '54 80w

Kirkus 21:776 D 1 '53 180w

Manchester Guardian p6 My 28 '54 30w

"Miss McKenney brings to the battle the weapons already familiar to her readers: a wondering, non-combatant helplessness and a sustaining faith that everything will turn out right in the end. She reports the fray with her usual loving warmth, wisdom and wit. The result is deliciously gratifying, the best thing of its kind in at least fifteen years." Marion Hargrove

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 7 '54 450w

"Ruth McKenney has lost none of her zest for skylarking or her tart sense of humor. On the contrary, this is her funniest book. . . Miss McKenney has the true comedian's gift of caricaturing the truth without departing basically from it." Nancie Matthews

+ N Y Times p7 F 7 '54 450w

"The Branstens went to Brussels, an unfamiliar setting for this kind of light literature, and while their difficulties and exasperations with domestics, plumbers, customs men, and other functionaries, and with the language, were the usual ones, Miss McKenney writes about them in a fresh and often funny way."

+ New Yorker 29:115 F 13 '54 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 2 '54 300w

"Binoculars and microscopes, telescopes and radar all render service to mortals trying to inspect the universe. But for my money give me in these parlous times a chance to look through Ruth McKenney's eyes at almost anything. Helps a body relax and see what a cockeyed world it is, and all nations so slow to see themselves as others see them." Ernestine Evans

+ Sat ■ 37:22 F 13 '54 600w

Wis Lib Bul 50:68 Mr '54

MACKENZIE, GORDON NOTH, and COREY, STEPHEN MAXWELL. Instructional leadership; in association with James Hall and others. 209p $3.25 Teachers college

371.14 School superintendents and principals. School supervision and supervisors 54-5335

"Instructional Leadership brings out the development of its theory through the report of an experiment in action research carried on by Denver secondary school personnel and consultants from the Horace Mann-Lincoln Institute of School Experimentation, Teachers College, Columbia University. It illuminates the dynamic nature of forces at play within situations encountered in releasing leadership among teachers and administrators and makes clear the value of such release for educational progress." J Home Econ

"This book is dreary reading. . . These deficiencies in communication are regrettable, because the book makes three significant contributions—contributions that are valuable in other areas as well as in education." E. B. Wesley

+ — Ann Am Acad 295:178 S '54 310w

"Those working in all kinds of organizations and agencies who seek maximum returns from group meetings will find this book an aid toward an understanding of the group process and what goes on within a total group. Status leaders and others will find a clearer understanding of themselves in their leadership roles and a keener awareness of the problems to be met when they are faced with needs for motivating productive group action." Rose Cologne and Ruth Ayres

+ J Home Econ 46:607 O '54 270w

MCKEON, RICHARD PETER. Thought, action and passion. 304p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

104 Philosophy

54-9579

"In McKeon's earlier writings, culminating in Freedom and History, a schema of the history of thought was used in which philosophy, beginning with orientation toward things, progressively became re-oriented toward thoughts, then toward words and operations. It was not clear whether the facts warranted the assumption that speculation would return to the study of things with new insights derived from interim epistemological and semantic exploration, or whether the process at work here was linear, with a contraction of scope and power destined to be irreversible. The present book both contains and is an answer to this question: the history of thought, in this respect, is cyclic, not linear." J Philos

"McKeon has written a book which, with its 57 pages of solid notes, will prove invaluable for the historian of ideas. But the poor common reader is apt to feel that McKeon works from only one assumption: that everything thus far has been oversimplified. The book may also leave him with the distressing realization that things of the mind are even more complicated than he had feared." Huston Smith

+ Christian Century 71:826 Jl 7 '54 500w

"This is an important contribution both to metaphysics and to the history of philosophy." R. S. Brumbaugh

+ J Philos 51:531 S 2 '54 800w

Reviewed by Austin Warren

Yale R n s 44:271 winter '55 800w

MACKERSEY, IAN. Rescue below zero. 214p il $3.50 Norton

998.2 [919.82] British North Greenland expedition. Survival (after airplane accidents, shipwrecks, etc) 54-12571

In the fall of 1952 a Royal Air Force plane, ferrying supplies to a British scientific expedition, crashed and its crew were marooned for nine days. This is an account of the experience. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 51:173 D 15 '54

"Kipling would have admired Mr. Mackersy's strong and sufficient account of this Herculean labor, with its thrift in the use of words and its reserve in sharing emotion. 'Rescue Below Zero' is a new experience for most of us. Also its author proves that the machine need not curtail the viability of the English language." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 12 '54 230w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 30:465 D '54 100w

"An interesting picture of Greenland, the start of a research project, the men who make it possible."

+ Kirkus 22:474 Jl 15 '54 130w

MACKERSEY, IAN—Continued

"Mr. Mackersey, an aviation writer, has done an excellent job of interviewing all the men who participated and writing a smooth yet exciting story of the preliminary operations and the rescue." Beach Conger
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 5 '54 450w

"Mr. Mackersey was not a witness to the adventure he describes. A London journalist, he merely pieced it together from talks with some of the participants, and since, in the cheerless tradition of their calling, they seem to have been articulate only on the mechanics of flight and freighting, his evocation of their experience . . . could hardly be less satisfying." Berton Roueché
— New Yorker 30:185 N 6 '54 130w
Springf'd Republican p7C N 28 '54 110w

MACKINNON, DONALD MACKENZIE, ed.
Christian faith and communist faith; a series of studies by members of the Anglican communion. 260p $4.50 St Martins

261.7 Communism. Communism and religion 53-4149

"The authors are all members of the Anglican communion (professors, clergymen and laymen). Through discussion and under the skillful editorship of the Regius professor of moral philosophy in the University of Aberdeen (who also wrote the two concluding chapters and collaborated on another), the essays attain a unity in direction that is truly exceptional for a symposium. I would say that almost every page drives toward a 'theology of human action,' although in the end it is acknowledged that just here our theological understanding is simply inadequate to the perplexities of the present." Christian Century

Reviewed by C. H. Moehlman
Ann Am Acad 293:195 My '54 550w

"An open-hearted, whole-minded study of this book cannot be too strongly recommended. 'Wherein does the power of this thing lie?' everyone asks. This question receives unusually penetrating answer in this series of essays, which at every point requires the reader to live within 'a confrontation of Christian faith and communist faith in a small space.'" Paul Ramsey
+ Christian Century 71:433 Ap 7 '54 1200w

Foreign Affairs 32:507 Ap '54 20w

"An important book for those equipped to deal with the ideological aspects of the world struggle."
+ Kirkus 21:794 D 15 '53 180w

"This is an honest, provocative, searching, yet in some ways unsatisfactory book. It is not in any sense a mere popular pulpit attack on Marxism. Indeed the writers often stress an agreement between Marxism and Christianity in rejection of features in modern philosophy and modern society. . . This book is notable because it takes a great issue seriously, gives full force to what is said on the other side, and attempts no smart rejoinders or easy solutions. Some readers will feel that such a subject requires a treatment more historical and down-to-earth, but the authors are following an honourable tradition of philosophical theology, as studied in British universities, when they treat this urgent practical issue as fundamentally metaphysical." H. L. Short
+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:136 Ja 30 '54 650w

"The arguments for Communism are made to appear stronger than those for Christianity. Why? Three reasons suggest themselves. First, the very laudable zeal of the symposiasts to be fair to Communism has made them emphasise its merits far more than its faults. . . Secondly, the Christian advocacy is feeble, the theologians seeming more concerned to keep up to the intellectual level of the philosophers than to provide a compelling alternative to Marxism. Thirdly, the book is badly edited." Maurice Cranston
— Spec p80 Ja 15 '54 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p220 Ap 2 '54 1000w

MACKINTOSH, ELIZABETH (GORDON DAVIOT, JOSEPHINE TEY, pseud.). Shilling for candles, by Josephine Tey, pseud. 188p $2.50 Macmillan (N Y)

54-8661

Detective story.

Booklist 50:360 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:186 My '54

Kirkus 22:84 F 1 '54 60w

"Highly recommended, on all counts." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:452 Mr 1 '54 140w

"Miss Tey's tale is as rich and lively in its leisurely digressions as her others." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 28 '54 230w

"Here is all of Tey's warmth and charm and sympathy and insight." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p23 Ap 18 '54 170w

"While some of the author's gifts are apparent in the book, it will probably be something of a disappointment to her admirers." New Yorker 30:136 Mr 27 '54 80w

"The Tey magic hadn't reached its heights 14 years ago, but some of it is here, and the characters—especially Grant—are of course superb."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 9 '54 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:35 Ap 17 '54 20w

MACKINTOSH, ELIZABETH (GORDON DAVIOT, JOSEPHINE TEY, pseud.). Three by Tey; with an introd. by James Sandoe. (Murder revisited ser) 3v in 1 200;238;219p $3.95 Macmillan (N Y)

54-12125

Contents: Miss Pym disposes; The Franchise affair; Brat Farrar.

Booklist 51:86 O 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

"If any one characteristic most distinguished Miss Tey's work it was her power to evoke character, atmosphere, mores by conversation. Her people talk as though speech comes natural to them. It is good talk as well as story propelling. Indeed it makes one nostalgic for the art of conversation." D. S. Davis

+ New Repub 131:17 S 20 '54 1300w

"An exceedingly welcome volume." James Sandoe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 12 '54 40w

"More human, warm and likable novels of crime you won't find in any season; this is an unquestionable entry for your permanent library." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p17 O 3 '54 130w

"Mystery bargain of 1954." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 37:64 O 2 '54 30w

Springf'd Republican p9C S 26 '54 380w

MACLANACHAN, WILLIAM, ed. Television and radar encyclopaedia. 216p il $6 Pitman 621.3803 Television—Dictionaries and encyclopedias. Radar 53-8285

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Definitions in the Television and Radar Encyclopaedia are succinct, clear and readily understandable to anyone familiar with the fundamentals of radio, television or radar. Because it contains so much information in convenient form that is not available in other encyclopedias or dictionaries, The Television and Radar Encyclopaedia is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:45 Jl '54 800w

MCLAUGHLIN, KATHLEEN. New life in old lands [foreword by Henry Cabot Lodge Jr]. 272p $3.75 Dodd

338.9 Technical assistance. United nations (organization) 54-11230

"In 1948 a powerful new force in the battle against ignorance, famine and disease came into existence in the form of the technical assistance programs of the United Nations. Selected case histories of projects undertaken by subsidiary, implementing agencies are the basis for 'New Life in Old Lands.' . . . [The author] takes the reader through Latin America, the Caribbean, Africa and Asia, and deals with diverse projects in agriculture, public health, domestic science, forestry, public works and rural education. Featured are the international teams of scientists and workers who have united in this common effort, and especially encouraging are the author's reports of the degree of enthusiasm with which most of these unselfish efforts are received." (N Y Times) Index.

"A warmhearted and colorful, though not too comprehensive, account of some of the day-in and day-out jobs being done to improve life for millions in underdeveloped countries. Even those who scoff at 'dogooders' may be interested in this picture painted with reportorial skill by one long experienced in journalism at this juncture when the Soviets for the first time have put into the program a gift of rubles equivalent to one million dollars—and real Red Communists will soon be knocking at the UN door as TAA personnel." Mary Hornaday

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 D 3 '54 550w

"Entertainingly written vignettes. . . In her introduction Miss McLaughlin observes that the U. N. is little known and understood in the country where its headquarters are located. This suggests that there has been too little effort to acquaint all of us with the objectives and functions of this union of nations. 'New Life in Old Lands' aids in filling this gap in our knowledge and should be included in lists of recommended reading for persons with an intelligent curiosity concerning the technical aspect of the program of the United Nations." George Harrar

+ N Y Times p4 N 21 '54 800w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 40w

MCLAVERTY, MICHAEL. School for hope. 242p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

54-10996

The romance of the headmaster of an Irish boys' school and a lovely young woman who came to teach in the school. Nora had to fight thru discouragement to happiness, helped on by the headmaster, the understanding priest, and the two spinster sisters with whom she boarded.

Booklist 50:451 J1 15 '54

"The plot of School for Hope is not one of its strong points, but the people in it have a rich life in them, and they have humor and dignity too." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 179:473 S '54 240w

"Previously, and again in School for Hope, the author has shown his understanding of the waywardness of human personality. He has delved expertly into the passions which destroy and misshape the outwardly normal life. It is unfortunate that his undeniable ability and his feel for language have not enabled him to rise above the ordinary in this presentation." Elizabeth Bartelme

— + Commonweal 60:419 J1 30 '54 600w

Kirkus 22:345 Je 1 '54 80w

"Mr. McLaverty is able to represent happiness and to particularise certain kinds of continuous perceiving which feed the secreted happiness of an outwardly humdrum soul. . . He can play his story without one wrong or violent or sentimental note. Its impact is curious and distinct—an old-fashioned sunny room filled with the scent of dried lavender. As an experience, School for Hope is both genuine and agreeable. But it is faint." Giles Romilly

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:806 Je 19 '54 300w

Reviewed by Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune D1 F p7 J1 4 '54 370w

"Intensely realized personalities, acting in a circumscribed scene, give 'School for Hope' its force and quality." Edmund Fuller

+ N Y Times p19 J1 11 '54 220w

"Mr. McLaverty has added to his literary stature in this little gem of Irish storytelling. His Ulsterman's way with the English tongue and the human soul was never more impressive. The reader feels that he has lived all his life in the tidy pastoral community close to the river and the sea. The realism is achieved, in the main, by exquisite economy of detail." A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R 37:15 J1 31 '54 320w

Springf'd Republican p8C J1 25 '54 200w

"School for Hope shuns brogue but catches the lilt of Irish talk, skirts bathos but dips candidly into human feelings. In its quiet pastoral way, it celebrates nature as well as human nature. No more pretentious than a mousetrap, it captures the novelist's most elusive mouse—a little bit of life."

+ Time 64:82 J1 5 '54 440w

"The scene is set, but nothing particular happens. To be successful, this kind of story requires a Chekhovian pathos which Mr. McLaverty does not achieve. Nora, herself, is a shadowy creature, though Elizabeth Devlin, the severer of the two sisters, one of those in whom virtue presents a sombre face, and Helen Lynch, the schoolmaster's shrewish sister, help to bring the story down to earth. In the end a reader feels that Irish charm, unharnessed to a solid theme, fails of its effect."

Times [London] Lit Sup p421 J1 11 '54 200w

Wis Lib Bul 50:211 O '54

MCLEAN, JOHN GODFREY, and HAIGH, ROBERT WILLIAM. Growth of integrated oil companies. 728p il maps $12 Harvard univ. Division of res.

388.27 Petroleum industry and trade 54-6417

"Examination of the structure of the oil industry as it existed in 1950, technological, economic, and business circumstances which have encouraged vertical integration, differences, and similarities of a selected group of oil companies, and changes which have taken place in participation of small business in the refining industry from 1920 to 1950." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

"This is a very complete and detailed study of one aspect in the development of the petroleum industry in the United States. . . [It] is certainly a major contribution to the growing list of authoritative descriptions of economic conditions for specific industries." R. S. Vaile

+ Am Econ R 44:695 S '54 1200w

Chem & Eng N 32:765 F 22 '54 50w

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD. Songs for Eve. 58p $3 Houghton

811

54-9118

"This volume is a wholly fresh book rather than a collection. There is a basic theme to this sequence. Self-knowledge is the unique quality of man, the fruit which caused his fall. And it is Eve in her role as temptress of the apple to whom these songs are sung." Publisher's note

Booklist 51:79 O 15 '54

"To be able to write an innocent-seeming poetry, to possess the lyric gift and outward flow unimpaired after a life of political action and world affairs is a token that the spirit of lyric itself is timeless, endlessly delightful, possible, eventful, worthy of report. MacLeish has been able to dip into the sea of this primal innocence. He has plunged into the sea of Ideal Lyric. And he has made songs of simplicity, of ease and immediate communicability, poems of wonderful efficiency. He says, 'The more I have traveled the less I have departed.'" Richard Eberhart

+ N Y Times p14 O 10 '54 650w

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD—Continued

"The present volume of new poems contains in its relatively slim confines the same high quality of content and masterly technique, the subtlety, the profundity, the blending of intellect and emotion, the lucent and lyric charm. It is a joy to read, and to think about." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 37:28 D 4 '54 650w

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD. This music crept by me upon the waters. (Poet's theatre ser) 38p pa $1.50 Harvard univ. press

812

54-5428

The action of this one act play in poetry takes place on an island in the Antilles. "The characters sit about, wait for a delayed dinner, and talk. Then, in a magic instant, the incessant trade winds fall still and the moon rises from the ocean. In that suddenly becalmed and lit moment the mood of time overtakes the characters." (Nation) The play was "printed in Botteghe Oscure in Rome in April of this year [1953] and produced, as a radio play, by Geoffrey Bridson on the Third Program of the British Broadcasting Corporation in June." (Foreword)

Booklist 50:163 D 15 '53

"What sort of poetry this is, is irrelevant here, as are minor differences of interpretation in the reading. What matters is that it is poetry, formed and rhythmically convincing both as a line to be received by an audience and as a formalization of American speech. MacLeish's ear and the metric it is teaching him are the best bequests modern poetic drama has received to date." John Ciardi

+ Nation 178:15 Ja 2 '54 950w

"It isn't enough—at least not from one with such capabilities as MacLeish." Selden Rodman

N Y Times p5 N 22 '53 450w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 21 '54 60w

MCLEOD, EMILIE WARREN. Seven remarkable bears [il. by Juliet Kepes]. 46p $2.50 Houghton

Bears—Legends and stories 53-6211

Picture story book about a smart polar bear living in the zoo who thought up a clever trick in order to get enough to eat. For ages four to eight.

Booklist 51:68 O 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 S 19 '54 60w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '54 120w

"It is hard to tell which is the funnier, pictures or text. Satisfactory for reading over and over again."

+ Commonweal 61:205 N 19 '54 20w

Horn Bk 30:326 O '54 120w

Kirkus 22:480 Ag 1 '54 80w

"Recommended for ages 4-8." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 79:2492 D 15 '54 70w

"The story does not quite come off." E. W. Turpin

— Library J 79:2492 D 15 '54 70w

"Fully half the fun lies in the rare, bold, expressive pictures of the talented artist, who also gave us 'The Five Little Monkeys.' . . Half the pages are given a brilliant blue background and clever touches of red. It is interesting modern art work, clear to the eyes of younger children, always funny, and often masterly in rhythm and page design." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p4 N 14 '54 200w

"Po's gay deception ought to charm young children, even if Mr. Fitz's character seems a bit ambiguous. Juliet Kepes' stylish illustrations make it all seem reasonable." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p12 S 5 '54 140w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:207 N 27 '54 60w

"That Po's secret is guessed by the little boy in the striped shirt adds greatly to the charm of a story, grand for reading aloud to younger children or for reading alone by third- and fourth-graders." Ruth Gagliardo

+ Sat R 37:67 N 13 '54 90w

MCLEOD, LAURENCE SPURGEON. Mental health in the home. 243p $3.50 Bookman associates

131.3 Mental hygiene. Parent and child

53-4421

"This book is written for parents and prospective parents. . . It attempts to present in fairly concrete form some of the fundamental, recognized facts and principles of child guidance, wholesome personal adjustments, and happy family relationships." (Pref) The author has taught courses in mental hygiene for twenty-five years and is now Dean of the Graduate Division at the University of Tulsa. Index.

Booklist 50:215 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:105 F '54 20w

MCLOUGHLIN, EMMETT. People's padre. 288p il $3.95 Beacon press

B or 92 Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works 54-6164

A former Catholic priest gives an account of his reasons for leaving the priesthood and the church. He is now married, and is superintendent of a hospital in Phoenix, Arizona.

"An interesting document, but unacceptable to Catholic readers."

Booklist 50:340 My 1 '54

"This book is likely to raise a storm. . . It is a book that is violently controversial. Blanchard's book is mild in comparison."

Kirkus 22:188 Mr 15 '54 280w

"Mr. McLoughlin is not humble, is no philosopher, and although he has every right to write this book and the Beacon Press to publish it, it will unquestionably arouse much controversy and dissension and will offend many readers. Libraries should buy with caution." G. W. Wakefield

Library J 79:773 Ap 15 '54 150w

Nation 178:468 My 29 '54 240w

Wis Lib Bul 50:133 My '54

MACMAHON, ARTHUR WHITTIER. Administration in foreign affairs. 275p $3.50 Univ. of Ala. press

341.7 U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S.—Executive departments 53-12901

"A professor of public administration discusses the adjustments required in our conduct of foreign affairs in an era when, for the first time, 'the American people are asked to have a sustained interest in situations which they can influence, perhaps decisively, but never fully control.'" Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by J. A. Vieg

Am Pol Sci R 48:51 Je '54 1000w

"These lectures reveal a deep knowledge of the intricate processes of public administration which should delight the expert in that field. They are at the same time easily readable by the layman. There are apt figures of speech and touches of Macmahon's urban humor, as well as illustrations useful to the general student of foreign affairs." D. F. Fleming

+ Ann Am Acad 294:171 Jl '54 550w

Foreign Affairs 32:509 Ap '54 40w

"Professor Macmahon is primarily a student of politics and public administration rather than of international affairs, although thoroughly acquainted, of course, with this field."

He feels very strongly the importance and value of the policy of the United States in world affairs today, although he is not uncritical in his treatment. Not a great deal of historical or factual material is provided, but his predominantly philosophical approach is wise and sound. The general reader and the reflective student should warmly enjoy and seriously profit by the discussion."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:92 Mr '54 380w

MCMASTERS, MRS SUSANNE, and IDELL, ALBERT EDWARD. Gallant heart; the story of a race horse; il. by Paul Brown. 204p $3 Doubleday

798.4 Horse racing 54-9829

Story of a horse, born on the author's horse farm, which the family loved and hoped would make their fortunes.

Booklist 51:58 O 1 '54

"A horse story that is really different."

+ Kirkus 22:426 Jl 1 '54 210w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:2106 N 1 '54 30w

"The Gallant Heart" is not a success story, but essentially it is a true story, and there is a warmth about it in regard to people and horses which will not be missed by horse lovers." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p26 S 12 '54 360w

MCMEEKIN, CLARK, pseud. of MRS DOROTHY (PARK) CLARK and MRS ISABEL (MCLENNAN) MCMEEKIN. Tyrone of Kentucky. 310p $3.50 Appleton

54-7156

"Returning to his ravaged Kentucky farm with an attractive Alabama bride, David Tyrone, a Confederate soldier, strives to wrest a living from the soil and to resolve the strained relationship with his former fiancée in a novel of conflicting loyalties during the Reconstruction." Bookmark

Booklist 50:342 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:186 My '54 40w

Kirkus 22:214 Mr 15 '54 180w

"Tyrone of Kentucky" makes at once an honest period novel and a thoughtful character study."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 25 '54 300w

MACMILLAN, DONALD D. Good taste in home decoration; with il. by Marvin Culbreth. 372p $5.95 Holt

747 House decoration. Furniture 53-5269

Guide to home decoration and furnishing. Contains shopping guides; pointers about antiques; modern furniture; and ideas in color, design and scale. Index.

Booklist 50:274 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:182 My '54 30w

"This book is as thoro a guide as we've seen on what to look for in purchasing home furnishings. There also are chapters on color and period styles. Tops in usefulness is a section on the new synthetics and what they will do and not do, a subject on which most women are eager for advice." Anne Douglas

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 2 '54 40w

Kirkus 21:751 N 15 '53 150w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1317 Jl '54 20w

MACMILLAN wild flower book; descriptive text by Clarence J. Hylander; il. by Edith Farrington Johnston. 480p $15 Macmillan (N Y)

582.13 Wild flowers. Botany—U.S. 54-7383

Descriptions of approximately 500 flowers which grow in the United States, of which some 425 are pictured in color. Arrangement is by families. Contains a guide to the flower families in the book, and an index.

Booklist 50:216 F 1 '54

"Anyone who loves to roam the fields and woods looking for wild flowers will want to own this book. It is not an encyclopedia of wild flowers nor a botany text, nor yet something to be carried about in the pocket (it is too large for that). It is a collection of some five hundred plants one will normally find around the countryside of Canada and the United States. But more than that, it is a work of art." R. T. L.

+ Canadian Forum 34:95 Jl '54 120w

"Clarence Hylander has aimed at keeping his text as nontechnical as a botanist can. The entries on families and species are clearly and interestingly written. Edith Johnston's illustrations are ably executed and well reproduced, tho there is some show-thru." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 21 '54 100w

"Dr. Hylander, without at any point 'talking down' to the reader, explains with remarkable clarity the successive steps in identifying plant and flower, skillfully guiding the beginner to the very threshold of botanical scholarship. . . It is a book for the home library. The full page color plates are lovely, although the colors are not as realistic as they are decorative, a comment which applies also to the painting and arrangement. It is, however, a beautiful book, and should open up for many a nature lover the keen delights of plant exploration and study." Millicent Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 18 '54 180w

"The arrangement of the plates, in conjunction with the descriptive text; the combination in a single plate, of closely related flowers, so that the differences, the likenesses can be examined; the introductory section which defines succinctly the scientific approach, what to look for, what you see when you look as you should. . . Worth the price!"

+ Kirkus 22:47 Ja 15 '54 150w

"Recommended." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:557 Mr 15 '54 120w

"This is no fieldbook to tuck in a pocket when woods-wandering; it is a handsome table-size volume which will attract attention anywhere. Its careful selection of types makes it more practical than the even handsomer 'Wild Flowers of America.' . . Though in the nature of the case it cannot be all-inclusive as a bird book can be, it fulfills its purpose, to make the layman, ignorant of technical botanical details, feel able to name the wild flowers most likely to catch his attention on our roadsides and in our woods." Lewis Gannett

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 My 30 '54 300w

"The guide to flower identification makes this more than a book to leaf through and admire. Simpler than many other guides of its kind, it reads as though it would work. However, since no wild flowers are blooming in my part of the country now, I couldn't try it out. This is a glamorous-looking volume, but because of some faulty reproductions it doesn't quite live up to its promise of beauty." D. H. Jenkins

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 28 '54 230w

San Francisco Chronicle p29 F 14 '54 80w

"Over thirty species have full descriptions but no pictures. One cannot help wondering why, when condensation was so necessary, the garden phlox, the French mulberry, and the English cowslip should have been selected. . . It is, however, idle to pick flaws in the text. . . when the colored illustrations were the obvious reason for making such an expensive book. No one who is not as skilful as Mrs. Johnston knows the difficulty of reproducing an artist's painting on the printed page. It is only fair to say that the publishers have in some cases done her less than justice. . . The illustrations, as a whole, are of very high qual-

MACMILLAN wild flower book—Continued
ity, however, and reflect great credit on the artist who painted most of them from fresh material." Norman Taylor

— + Sat R 37:32 Mr 27 '54 350w

Springf'd Republican p5D F 21 '54 120w

"The Macmillan Wild Flower Book, as an exceedingly attractive book, and an accurate and unusually well written popular guide to wild flowers, is suited to both young people and adults. It is recommended for libraries and for home use."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:41 Jl '54 1150w

MCMULLIN, MARGERY D. How to help the shut-in child; 313 hints for homebound children; il. by Paul Galdone [pref. by Mathilde
May Gould]. 192p $2.75 Dutton

649.1 Children—Care and hygiene. Amusements 54-5831

"In 1939 author helped organize the Handicapped Children's Home Service. The staff, composed of volunteers, visits handicapped children in their homes, teaching handicrafts, stimulating latent imaginative capacities, building up child's morale. This book was written to give practical suggestions to parents so that they may be of greater aid to their homebound children." (Library J) Index.

"Topics range from hints on the arrangement of the patient's room, playthings and creative pastimes to devices for keeping the patient in touch with other people. Of most practical encouragement to the family of the older shut-in child should be the chapter on hobbies that may eventually lead to gainful occupations." L. E. Culp

+ Am J Pub Health 44:1594 D '54 180w

"Excellent book." F. D. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 4 '54
60w

Kirkus 22:3 Ja 1 '54 110w

"Valuable sourcebook of excellent ideas which should be in all public libraries and hospital libraries which serve a children's ward." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:448 Mr 1 '54 140w

"Every parent might well own a copy, but the librarian may have the pleasure of introducing this book. Highly recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:130 My '54

MENABBE, VINCENT JOSEPH. Father McNabb reader; selections from [his] writings; ed.
by Francis Edward Nugent. 227p $3.50 Kenedy

208.1 Catholic church 54-10068

Selections from the essays and other writings of this Irish-born member of the English Dominicans.

"Readers have good cause to be grateful to the American clerical editor of the volume for many readable, instructive, inspiring pages extracted from the author's conferences and theological essays."

+ Cath World 180:240 D '54 100w

"We are grateful for these selections because almost anything Father McNabb said or did was good: as Chesterton said, he was 'almost the greatest man of our time.' We find, however, that some of the toughest sides of his thought are nearly left out. . . All the same, a lot of people are going to like this book.
Schools will want to see it, and many priests may want to make it for a time a sort of vade mecum." L. R. Ward

+ Commonweal 61:102 O 29 '54 420w

"His short biography of Francis Thompson is a masterpiece. . . As Father McNabb visited America, (and some of his scathing comments on Babylonian New York are preserved here) and his writings are well known in Catholic circles, one could expect that many here will wish to keep green their memory of a beloved priest and vigorous defender of their faith."

+ Kirkus 22:722 O 15 '54 200w

MACNEICE, LOUIS. Penny that rolled away;
il. by Marvin Bileck. 37p $2.25 Putnam

54-5499

A nonsense tale for ages four to eight. It is about a family composed of a half dollar, a quarter, and their children, a dime, a nickel, and a penny. When the baby, Penny, rolled away, a rescue had to be planned.

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 13 '54
120w

Kirkus 22:230 Ap 1 '54 80w

"Marvin Bileck's illustrations, for all the world like etchings on a spree, caper through the book in the same mood of merry foolishness as the story. Recommended for picture book age." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 79:864 My 1 '54 70w

"Louis MacNeice, English poet, critic and radio dramatist, has concocted an amiable bit of tomfoolery with wit, taste and never a trace of archness. As he tells it, it seems perfectly reasonable." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 14 '54 230w

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54
60w

"British Poet MacNeice, a junior member of the Auden-Isherwood-Spender literary axis of the '30s, pitches his pennies in and out of trouble with enough sly surprises to clinch his first bid for fame with the lollipop set."

+ Time 64:88 Ag 9 '54 80w

MCNEILL, JOHN THOMAS. History and character of Calvinism. 466p $6 Oxford

284.2 Calvin, John. Calvinism 54-6911

"The work seemed naturally to divide itself into the four major sections. . . The longest of the four parts has taken the form of something resembling a brief monograph on John Calvin himself. This is followed by an account of the spread of Calvinism in Europe and America, and a series of chapters on its later struggles and developments in response to the revolutionary changes of modern society and thought. Here, amid an embarrassing wealth of materials, enough has been selected to give some factual body to the discussion. Although Calvinism's formative stage was passed in the sixteenth century, its subsequent history, both internal and in exterior relations, is neither unimportant nor dull. At every period vivid figures move in the pageant of Calvinism, and it has touched the destinies of nations." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Not only the general reader but scholars as well will find this book useful. Not many men possess the learning and devotion which have enabled Professor McNeill to carry out his formidable task so successfully; and the value of the book is enhanced by the fact that it is clearly a labor of love." William Gilbert

+ Am Hist R 60:60 O '54 650w

"By all odds the most important sections of this book are the ones dealing with the Zwinglian background and the biographical and historical discussions of Calvin in Geneva and Strasbourg. This is church history as it ought to be—scholarly, thorough, objectively critical, readable. An immense fund of information and research has been drawn upon to fill in the few scattered events which are common knowledge. . . As regards the author's point of view in dealing with the controversial issues, he is moderate and calm, sympathetic yet critical."

H. T. Kerr

+ Christian Century 71:924 Ag 4 '54
1600w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 4 '54
60w

"Professor McNeill retired last year from a chair of church history at Union Theological Seminary, New York, after a lifetime of teaching and research in this field. Consequently, though intended for the general reader, his book is no mere popularization of familiar material, but a first-hand discussion based on primary sources."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p725 N 12 '54
1150w

MCNEILL, WILLIAM HARDY. America, Britain and Russia. See Survey of international affairs; v3

MCNEILL, WILLIAM HARDY. Past and future. 216p $3.75 Univ. of Chicago press 901 Civilization 54-9578

"Professor McNeill discusses four major epochs in history—the pedestrian, equestrian, ocean shipping, and mechanical transport epochs—during each of which most men, who were governed by habit, custom and routine, were at critical periods exposed to the intellectual innovations of foreigners and forced to reorganize and enlarge their political, economic and social systems." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 50:355 My 15 '54

Reviewed by T. E. Kennelly

Commonweal 60:229 Je 4 '54 850w

"This lucid brief work admirably fulfills its purpose of examining the present in the light of the broad scope of the past, and from this deducing possible paths of future events. With the deftness of many of the English historians the author sketches the main elements of history which have a meaning today, especially the interaction of one culture and another."

+ Current Hist 27:63 Jl '54 120w

Foreign Affairs 33:157 O '54 50w

"A minor gem of historical writing which is recommended for purchase by all libraries." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:984 My 15 '54 220w

"With the aid of reason man fashioned the world, and with the continuing uses of reason he can salvage democracy or destroy it. The reading of this book will not guarantee our salvation, but it will give courage to those who believe deeply that, however slender, reason is still the only hope." B. J. Lowenberg

+ Nation 179:15 Jl 3 '54 320w

"Remarkable little book. Mr. McNeill is, despite his obvious inability to believe that human reason can make the world over in our times, by no means cynical, hard-boiled, or even conservative. He is, as a good child of his age, doing his best to salvage what he can of the great democratic dream of the eighteenth-century enlightenment." Crane Brinton

+ N Y Times p12 My 2 '54 700w

New Yorker 30:135 My 22 '54 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p762 N 26 '54 600w

MCNICKLE, D'ARCY. Runner in the sun [a story of Indian maize] il. by Allan C. Houser. (Land of the free ser) 234p $2.75 Winston

54-7729

The hero is a young Indian boy, Salt, who lived in the canyon country of our southwest, centuries before Columbus. The story is of the boy's journey to the land of the Aztecs to procure a harder kind of maize, which was his tribe's staff of life. For age twelve and over.

"This book is all-Indian—the artist is a full blooded Apache." Bruce Grant

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p38 N 14 '54 100w

"The book is at once a lively story of event and a racial saga of material temptation routed by increased spirituality. We see that these people of the sun not only belong in the great tradition we call American but were in part the originators of it. The Land of the Free series has added an important title to its long list of junior historical novels." T. M. L.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 11 '54 200w

"A worthy contribution to the series."

+ Kirkus 22:538 Ag 15 '54 170w

"Highly recommended for age 10-15." Katherine Maxon

+ Library J 79:2501 D 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p26 N 14 '54 60w

"The author, a full-blooded Indian, now director of American Indian Development, has mixed mystery and history to the detriment of neither. The stylized illustrations also by an Indian are well suited to the text." L. T. Bulman

+ Sat R 37:90 N 13 '54 160w

MACNIECE, E. H. Industrial specifications. 158p il $4.50 Wiley

658.01 Specifications

53-10480

"An authoritative introduction to the use of specifications and standards in present-day industry. The author, Director of Quality Control at Johnson & Johnson, covers the subject from the viewpoint of the interrelations between quality control and specifications. He discusses the essential elements of specifications of various types, reprints examples of various kinds, and stresses the importance of writing specifications so as to obtain the qualities desired in raw materials or manufacturing products at the most economical cost. The book will be of interest not only to purchasing agents but also to anyone in industry who is concerned with quality control and inspection or specification writing." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 78:2037 N 15 '53 80w

Management R 42:745 D '53 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:95 N '53

MACPHAIL, JAMES RUSSELL. The way, the truth and the life; an outline of Christian doctrine. 208p $3.50 Oxford

230 Christianity

54-6910

An outline of the essential doctrines of the Christian religion with suggestions for their applications in daily life. The author is presently professor of English at Madras Christian College in South India. Index.

"The author makes a brave effort to salvage the doctrines of original sin and predestination and make them seem reasonable. In spite of what seems to me his limited success in this respect, the book as a whole is wholesome and helpful and gives a highly intelligent discussion of the central items of Christian belief."

+ — Christian Century 71:900 Jl 28 '54 110w

"As the author frankly admits, there is nothing new in this study. Scholars need not look to it for some fresh interpretation of Christian truth. What is refreshing about it is the clarity of thought and style and the comprehension of the whole of Christian theology in such brief compass. A good book for use in the mission field, at home as well as abroad."

+ Kirkus 22:192 Mr 15 '54 180w

"There is a freshness in his approach, a wealth of wide-ranging and apt quotation, a gift for everyday language and modern analogy, and an insight into the real meaning of words when they have been stripped of accretions which makes this a fascinating book." W. G. Robinson

+ Manchester Guardian p10 Mr 3 '54 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 21 '54 30w

MCSADDEN, JOSEPH WALKER. Pioneer heroes; ports. by Robert Hallock. [rev ed] 215p $3 Crowell

923.973 U.S.—Biography

54-9146

"A revised edition of a book of biographical sketches first published in 1929 and out of print since 1943. Rewritten and brought up to date in the light of modern research. Included are: Robert Cavalier de La Salle, James Edward Oglethorpe, George Rogers Clark, Daniel Boone, John Sevier, Zebulon Pike, Lewis and Clark, Marcus Whitman, Father Junípero Serra, John Charles Fremont, and Davy Crockett. The stories of Iberville and Bienville have been telescoped into a few pages incorporated in the chapter on La Salle. Grades 7-9." Booklist

MCSPADDEN, J. W.—Continued

Booklist 51:48 S 15 '54

Kirkus 22:312 My 15 '54 90w

"Interesting and readable. Useful in social studies." E. H. Speer

+ Library J 79:1672 S 15 '54 80w

"Although there is a common purpose in the book—the exploration of the continent of America—each man's individual motive for taking part in this venture is related in a fresh and exacting style, bringing out the personality of each and showing the relationship to his time. These accounts, focused on the human interest, the adventure, and the excitement of the times, should serve as an introduction to longer biographies for boys twelve and up." N. R.

+ Sat J 37:86 N 13 '54 110w

MCSWIGAN, MARIE. All aboard for freedom! with an introd. by Ján Papánek; il. by E. Harper Johnson. 249p $3 Dutton

54-8855

A story for young readers. Based on fact it tells how a group of liberty-loving Czechoslovaks escaped by train into the United States zone of Germany in September 1951.

Booklist 51:180 D 15 '54

"A thrilling, dramatic story." R. F.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p30 N 14 '54 70w

"At times melodramatic, at times long winded, this has its moments of suspense and serious character study that seem to spring from actual experience. Studied drawings by Harper Johnson add to the picture of a troubled country."

+ — Kirkus 22:535 Ag 15 '54 210w

"Dr. Jan Papanek writes a moving introduction. The illustrations are excellent, giving vivid portraits of young and old, of the train and of Prague." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p6 N 14 '54 270w

MADDEN, WARREN. Enormous turtle; with il. by Lita Scheel. 160p $2.50 Bobbs

54-9490

Story of a trip by car and trailer across the continent from Indiana to California via Florida. Projected as an efficient way to get in a summer of research in a California library, the experience proved anything but efficient or cheap.

Booklist 51:109 N 1 '54

"The whole adventure is enormously funny—funny, that is, provided that it is happening to somebody else. . . . How Mr. Madden can bear to recollect all of this, let alone write about it, is something of a mystery. He has dedicated the book to an uncle who was hanged, and one cannot help thinking that he regards this relative with a certain amount of envy." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p20 S 12 '54 300w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 14 '54 100w

MADGE, JOHN. Tools of social science. 308p $4.75 Longmans

307.2 Social sciences—Methodology. Social science research 53-12461

"It has been the aim in this book to concentrate attention on the practical techniques developed by social scientists. After an examination of some aspects of language and logic, attention will be given in turn to the use of documents, to observational methods, to the interview and questionnaire, and to the rôle and prospects of social experimentation. . . . The emphasis is throughout on practice rather than on theory." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. C. Angell

Am Soc R 19:231 Ap '54 750w

Reviewed by G. A. Lundberg

Ann Am Acad 293:185 My '54 490w

"The great merit of Mr. Madge's book lies in its practical usefulness. The snags are described, but methods of overcoming them are described as well, and anyone embarking on a piece of social research will profit from an inspection of Mr. Madge's account of the tools available for carrying it out." W. J. H. Sprott

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:108 J1 25 '53 600w

"My guess is that this British view of social science research will irritate those who have written so many of the American books on methodology, the neo-positivists and the social technicians for management. . . . Unfortunately Madge's work reflects a lack of acquaintanceship with the critical writings on methodology of such social scientists and philosophers of science as Morris R. Cohen, Frank E. Hartung, Daniel Katz, Abraham H. Maslow, Arnold M. Rose, and George Simpson, and he has not assimilated recent contributions by social psychologists to observation and interview methodology. For a book on methodology, however, Madge's work is refreshing." A. M. Lee

+ — Social Forces 32:205 D '53 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p696 O 30 '53 850w

MAGARSHACK, DAVID. Turgenev: a life. 328p il $6 Grove

B or 92 Turgenev, Ivan Sergëevich 54-12099

A study of the life and work of the author of Fathers and Sons, and many other novels, stories, and plays, who was a leading literary light in Russia during his lifetime. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:130 N 15 '54

"Mr. Magarshack's biography, based on a wealth of documents which have only recently come to light, traces the manifold tendencies and influences which stimulated the development of that genius. . . . It is to be hoped that Mr. Magarshack's biography may spark a revival of interest in Turgenev's own writings." Kathleen Cannell

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 16 '54 900w

"The biographer keeps—almost anxiously, it seems—in the background; it is perhaps just by this technique of the factual account that he is able to convey a sense of nobility and tragedy." Karl Stern

+ Commonweal 60:612 S 24 '54 480w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 79:2462 D 15 '54 30w

"The undoubted value of this book lies in the vivid picture which the author gives of Turgenev's personality and the sometimes almost over-detailed account of the author's literary and social feuds and friendships. Of great interest also is Mr. Magarshack's interpretation of the part played in Turgenev's life by Pauline Viardot, which he makes the focal point of his biography." N. Andreyev

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 20 '54 360w

Reviewed by Jacob Korg

Nation 179:470 N 27 '54 50w

"If we turn to Mr. Magarshack's new biography, we shall find a more positive, less negligent figure than is commonly portrayed. It is a thorough book but the trouble is that, although Mr. Magarshack has some new material, he does not do very much with it. Careful and industrious, convinced that Turgenev was 'the greatest European of his time,' Mr. Magarshack is unimaginative and unenlivening in the interpretation of his facts; he trudges the chronological road; and has nothing new to say about the works." V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 47:409 Mr 27 '54 2200w

"In David Magarshack's book we have the first full-length biographical study of Turgenev in English for a good many years; not, indeed, since Avrahm Yarmolinsky's biography appeared, nearly thirty years ago, has there been a better work in English. Perhaps it would be too much to say that the new volume is an improvement in every sense; admirable as it is, it does not have the narrative vitality or the literary richness that make Yarmolinsky's book even now both highly readable and genuinely searching. But in the period since that volume was published, a good deal of 'new material' on Turgenev has appeared, especially in Russian, and Mr. Magarshack, author of 'Chekhov: A Life,' has been able to avail himself of this." Newton Arvin

+ N Y Times p34 S 12 '54 800w

"The merits of his very thorough volume which is clear and orderly in style, are considerable. Like recent Russian biographers, Mr. Magarshack has drawn extensively upon the correspondence and memoirs of Turgenev's Russian and French contemporaries, some of them published only in fairly late years." R. D. Charques

+ Spec p473 Ap 16 '54 900w

Time 64:102 S 27 '54 500w

"Mr. Magarshack's biography will do much to set Turgenev in the perspective that he deserves, at least in this country, where his importance has been largely overshadowed by his two great contemporaries. The portrait which the author presents is a detailed, accurate and clear-cut photograph rather than a profound or final statement of character. But that is exactly what is needed at this stage in English."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p369 Je 11 '54 3250w

MAGAZINE OF FANTASY AND SCIENCE FICTION. Best from Fantasy and science fiction; third series; ed. by Anthony Boucher [pseud] and J. Francis McComas. 252p $3.25 Doubleday

Short stories—Collections
Science fiction anthology.

Booklist 50:360 My 15 '54

"The volume sustains an agreeable balance of drama, humor, satire, and sentiment—avoiding space opera as well as a certain stylistic archness that has from time to time marred this magazine's content." Mark Reinsberg

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 9 '54 100w

Kirkus 22:16 Ja 1 '54 120w

"If any one has doubts about the vitality and variety of modern American imaginative fiction, let him pick up this book with its rich melange of fantasies, supernatural stories, folk fables and science fiction. It will prove to him that this is one of the more vigorously alive branches of our contemporary literature." Groff Conklin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Mr 14 '54 220w

"There are sixteen pleasant stories in this volume, many of them written by authors whose names are familiar to readers of the two previous issues: R. Bretnor, H. Nearing Jr., Idris Seabright." Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times p19 My 23 '54 110w

"If anything can be said to distinguish the collection as a whole from those displayed on other tables, it is the insistence by the editors (rare in this field) that the English language is still susceptible of style, and that a story must, first of all, be entertaining. The other hall mark of this approach to editing is a quiet humor, based on a profound grasp of literary effect." Don Fabun

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 18 '54 320w

"This anthology has the double advantage of not excluding pure fantasy, which gives it a much wider range than the rest, and of having been kept in mind by the twin editors from the beginning, so that when they got hold of a really hot story for their magazine they immediately exercised seignioral rights and let no one else have a chance at it for an anthology." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat ■ 37:14 Ag 7 '54 100w

MAGER, NATHAN H., and YARMON, MOR-TON. Put your money to work for you. 287p $4 Harper

332.67 Investments

53-11854

"Clear, comprehensive survey of investment fields for the average earner, including life insurance, stocks and bonds, securities, real estate, business. Charts, graphs, tables. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:233 F 15 '54

+ Bookmark 13:105 F '54 20w

"This is a practical book." Harry Adams
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 21 '54 30w

"Recommended." Paul Wasserman

+ Library J 79:142 Ja 15 '54 40w

MAGNUS, SIR PHILIP MONTEFIORE, bart. Gladstone. 482p il $6.75 Dutton

B or 92 Gladstone, William Ewart 54-14624

"Sir Philip Magnus, with the approval of the Gladstone family, has tried in this book to breathe life into the rather statuesque figure of Gladstone that remains fifty years after his death. He was a volcano of a man with quite exceptional physical, mental and emotional powers which he kept for the greater part of his long life, yet it seems almost as though he had been smothered in his own ashes. . . In this new biography, Sir Philip Magnus has sought to make Gladstone stand out more vividly by describing in detail four aspects of his life about which Morley said little or nothing; his relations as Prime Minister with the Queen; his life-long efforts to save women from prostitution (which were the subject of a hostile book and a libel action in 1927); his campaign to rescue his sister, Helen, from opium and Roman Catholicism; and his relations with his wife." Spec

"A biography which is a model of unassuming scholarship and understanding." A. J. P. Taylor

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:446 O 9 '54 900w

"The virtues and defects of this notable biography are those of Gladstone himself. It is honest and earnest, but it lacks wit and humor. It fails rather frequently to discriminate between the essential and the trivial. It frankly admits that Gladstone made mistakes in judging men and events, but it does not seek the origins of his mistakes." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 19 '54 750w

"A brilliantly retouched, and, in some respects, a new portrait of one who, in the Victorian era, was called 'the grand old man' of British politics, and who in the pubs was 'the G. O. M.' long before alphabetization was governmentally sanctioned, even encouraged." Lindsay Rogers

+ N Y Times p1 D 12 '54 2100w

Reviewed by Francis Boyd

Spec p450 O 8 '54 1000w

Time 64:66 D 27 '54 1250w

"Far from being lurid or sensational or even exclusively personal, this biography is a valuable addition to our knowledge about Gladstone—full of private information but all firmly set against the background of his public life, which it explains and illumines."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p617 O 1 '54 3000w

MAINWARING, MARION. Murder in pastiche; or, Nine detectives all at sea. 215p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

54-11836

Detective story.

Bookmark 14:9 O '54

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 29 '54 30w

"A caprice, for connoisseurs."

Kirkus 22:372 Je 15 '54 50w

MAINWARING, MARION—Continued

"Pastiche, an essay in perceptive and critical imitation done with good nature and often with affection. Miss Mainwaring works delicately with sharp eye and alert ear and the consequence is an uncommonly effective performance." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 15 '54 200w

"Now this sort of undertaking cannot be just mildly successful; it must be a brilliantly achieved tour de force or a ridiculous failure. And the brilliance of Miss Mainwaring's achievement is, so far as my fairly compendious memory stretches, unmatched in the history of the detective story." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 15 '54 400w

"Miss Mainwaring has a grand time, treating each detective's adventures in the style of his literary creator, and very amusing she is about them. Nobody need demand a serious attitude toward the plotting, though it's consistent enough if taken in the spirit of fun." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 12 '54 60w

"Takeoffs mainly good, but parodies imperil plot." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:37 S 25 '54 20w

MAJOR sports techniques illustrated; designed and il. by Tyler Micoleau. 470p $5 Barnes, A.S.

796 Sports 54-5411

"The fundamentals of baseball, football, basketball, track and field are explained by expert coaches and made graphic by detailed action drawings. A well-printed quarto. Glossaries, indexes." Bookmark

Booklist 50:447 J1 15 '54

Bookmark 13:183 My '54 20w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1319 J1 '54 30w

Wis Lib Bul 50:176 J1 '54

MAKS, LEON. Russia by the back door; tr. from the Polish by Rosamond Batchelor. 264p map $3.50 Sheed 947 [914.7] Russia—Description and travel.

World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives,
Polish 54-3931

The author was connected with the Polish underground from its beginning in 1939. In March, 1940, he and a woman companion were sent into Russia to try to trace the leader of the underground, who had been sent East. This is the account of that very hazardous assignment.

+ Cath World 179:V S '54 180w

"Though long in mileage and unsuccessful in mission, Mr. Maks' trip to Russia 'by the back door' was rather short in time, which probably accounts for the superficiality of his observations of Russian life. Moreover, Mr. Maks does not seem to have sufficient command of the Russian language. . . 'Russia by the Back Door' is interesting, however, in that Mr. Maks, an experienced underground worker, often makes shrewd remarks on how to get a seat in a train in Russia, how to walk about the streets without attracting attention, how to behave in a Russian town and in the countryside." Mikhail Koriakov

+ N Y Times p3 J1 25 '54 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p375 Je 11 '54 300w

MALAKUAIS, JEAN. The joker [tr. from the French by Herma Briffault]. 319p $3.95 Doubleday

54-5172

A fantastic satire which follows the fortunes of the hero, Pierre Javelin, thru a nightmarish rebellion against invisible Powers.

"All this is strongly reminiscent of Franz Kafka. At his best, Malaquais's nightmarish effects are worthy of Kafka, but his novel as a whole demonstrates the importance of being Franz."

Atlantic 193:83 F '54 200w

"In the early part, when Pierre returns to his apartment to find it occupied by a Russian couple, the dream in The Joker is pointed and lively, but from the middle onward it becomes extremely fuzzy. As a result this book does not end—it merely peters out." Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:232 Je '54 420w

Reviewed by Milton Crane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 31 '54 360w

Reviewed by J. A. Lynch

Commonweal 59:610 Mr 19 '54 430w

Kirkus 21:747 N 15 '53 240w

"The translation is absolutely first-rate. Recommended for larger fiction collections." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:207 F 1 '54 130w

"The Joker has not only liveliness and pattern but also more than we usually get of the true essence of horror. The story is light-handed—almost light-headed, as in fever or dream—but the touch throughout is swift, firm, and sure. Call the characters dream-symbols, if you like; they still behave terribly like human beings." Norman Shrapnel

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 8 '54 220w

"It is a technical triumph and makes delicious reading, both as a convergence of several live traditions and as Malaquais' own idiomatic performance. . . Once in a while the translation, by Herma Briffault, is too true to the letter and the manner sags; or it forces the manner. Still it is very good, considering that the English would have to be as sharp and sweet as Henry Green's to be perfectly right." Donald Sutherland

+ New Repub 130:21 F 22 '54 290w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 48:52 J1 10 '54 120w

"Mr. Malaquais, a Polish-born French writer, makes with this book a departure from the work he has previously published in this country. He may have been less than original in conceiving his latest novel, but he proved himself more than expert in writing it. 'The Joker' is one of the most powerful, provocative and absorbing grotesques I have read in years." Frederic Morton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 24 '54 1000w

"If this is satire, it is neither sufficiently clear nor lively enough. If it is escape literature, the reader's return to everyday life at the end represents a relief, as after a nightmare. It is more charitable to assume that this is a novel which Malaquais had to write on his way to fulfilling the promise of his earlier works." Justin O'Brien

N Y Times p5 Ja 24 '54 500w

"This is a powerful and frightening book which often trembles on the edge of fantasy and hysteria. Mr. Malaquais' consummate skill lies in his ability to maintain his balance even in the most outlandish situations." D. R. McD.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 28 '54 260w

"On 'The Joker' Malaquais has lavished all his talents. The writing is so fine, in fact, that you can enjoy the book even though you ignore the allegory. I am inclined to recommend that you do." Laurent LeSage

+ Sat R 37:20 Ja 30 '54 600w

Reviewed by Kingsley Amis

Spec p722 Je 11 '54 260w

Time 63:100 F 8 '54 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p379 Je 11 '54 100w

MALARTIC, YVES. Tenzing of Everest; tr. from the French by Judith B. Heller. 285p $4 Crown

B or 92 Tenzing Norkey. Everest, Mount. Mount Everest expedition, 1953 54-12067

"A controversial biography of Tenzing of Mount Everest fame (unauthorized and allegedly disclaimed by the subject when it was published in France and Germany)." (Library J) Index.

"This is a different kind of mountain story, and much of it reads like fiction. For here is the human side of a great adventure on which various official records have already appeared with more in the offing. . . This book has already appeared in Europe, and should be sold here as a somewhat fictionized biography, rather than the official story from Tenzing's viewpoint."

Kirkus 22:719 O 15 '54 250w

"Brilliantly written with sympathetic insight and understanding of Sherpa mentality." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:2324 D 1 '54 210w

"The biography which Malartic presents is an engaging one, though fogged in spots. It suffers from an unnecessary tendency to elevate Tenzing at the expense of his British companions, an assistance which Tenzing does not need. True, the British made some serious blunders and have appeared to try to minimize Tenzing's contribution to the conquest of Everest. Mr. Malartic, however, leans too heavily on the conflict and does not give proper recognition to the British logistics and teamwork which made the international success possible." Raymond Holden

N Y Times p44 D 5 '54 160w

MALCOLM, DONALD WINGFIELD. Sukuma-land: an African people and their country; a study of land use in Tanganyika; published for the International African institute. 224p il maps col maps $5.25 Oxford

333.7 Sukuma region. Tanganyika territory 54-8882

"A careful study, by a British colonial administrator and agricultural specialist, of land use in this region in Tanganyika. It is a technical subject but one of utmost importance to Sukuma society as a whole." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 33:169 O '54 20w

"Study land; study water; all else that the practical administrator needs to know of anthropology will be added unto him, even as it was added unto Mr. Malcolm, whose book, starting out from the study of land use, comprises as it were automatically a comprehensive treatise on what it means to be a Sukuma."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p3 Ja 1 '54 500w

MALENBAUM, WILFRED. World wheat economy, 1885-1939. 262p $6 Harvard univ. press

338.17 Wheat trade 53-5071

"A study of the world wheat problem covering the past 50 years, with principal attention to the supply side of the question. In this the three basic factors have been the profit motive, the influence of protective tariffs, and thirdly, geographic expansion. 'Shortages' are nowadays compensated for by deficit countries through the use of funds furnished by the United States under various plans." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

"Even if one cannot accept Malenbaum's ingeniously argued thesis, his book stands as a worthy contribution in commodity economics. Perhaps nowhere else is it possible to find as comprehensive a review of a large segment of the extensive literature on wheat. The book should be of particular value to economists anxious to learn something about the economic facts of life with respect to wheat—facts useful for realistic economic theorizing as well as for appraisal of various national and international policies." H. C. Farnsworth

+ Am Econ R 44:463 Je '54 1150w

"Although the author may have given a rather gloomy outlook for the wheat grower, the book is of value because it summarizes widely scattered information and opinion on a very serious present-day subject." A. F. Vass

Ann Am Acad 292:170 Mr '54 600w

Current Hist 26:125 F '54 40w

Foreign Affairs 32:334 Ja '54 20w

"This is a clear and authoritative study of the world's wheat economy between the years 1885 and 1939." D. A. MacGibbon

+ J Pol Econ 62:176 Ap '54 500w

"Dr. Malenbaum's interesting study includes much original analysis and enlightening comments on many aspects of the world wheat economy. He has worked through a tremendous body of material and has set down the results clearly, concisely, and persuasively. Newly constructed tables on production, consumption, and acreage add to the usefulness of the book. The result is a valuable work on one of the most basic of all commodities."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:78 Mr '54 240w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, pseud). Death won't wait. 247p $2.50 Random house

54-5969

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:214 Mr 15 '54 70w

"Satisfactory hanky-panky with a steady eye on the main chance, but all managed with disarming skill." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 23 '54 190w

"One of Gilbert's duller books." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p21 My 9 '54 30w

"Here's fun, also a perfectly sound plot, neat trapping of the murderer, and plenty of momentum in the action. B plus."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 30 '54 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:40 My 22 '54 20w

MALONE, DUMAS. Story of the Declaration of independence; pictures by Hirst Milhollen and Milton Kaplan. 282p $10 Oxford

973.31 U.S. Declaration of independence

54-10002

"Here is a pictorial history of the Declaration, of the era of which it was the expression, and of the signers who put their names to it. Here are prints and paintings and photographs in profusion, and the faces and the homes and the signatures of the signers. The making of the book could not have been in better hands. It is difficult, in fact, to think of it being done by other hands. Hirst Milhollen is Curator of the Photographic Collection of the Library of Congress and Milton Kaplan is in charge of the Library's historical prints. They have searched their own and other great depositories for their pictures, and they have the experience gained with their earlier pictorial histories, 'Presidents on Parade' and 'Divided We Fought.'" N Y Times

Booklist 51:149 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:58 D '54 30w

Reviewed by R. J. Graf

Chicago Sunday Tribune p1 O 31 '54 450w

Christian Century 71:1369 N 10 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:649 S 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by William Henderson

Library J 79:2445 D 15 '54 110w

"The pictures, special photography, reproductions of lithographs, paintings, woodcuts, engravings, and sketches, hundreds of them, are on virtually every page. . . In the sections which take up the thinking and actions, the 'Cause Which Impelled' the Declaration (and here Mr. Malone is at his scholarly best), the illustrations' discriminating variety add greatly to the flexible, lucid, literate text." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 21 '54 270w

"The text, which itself would make a volume of no mean size, has been written by Dumas Malone. He knows as much about Jefferson and his times as any man alive and he has written a commentary on the Declaration and on each signer. . . All told 'The Story of the Declaration of Independence' is worthy of its subject. I know of no higher praise which it could earn." Coleman Rosenberger

MALONE, DUMAS—Continued

+ N Y Times p7 O 24 '54 450w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:22 D 4 '54 80w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 120w

MALRAUX, ANDRE. Voices of silence; tr. by Stuart Gilbert. 661p pl $25 Doubleday 701 Art—Philosophy. Art—Psychology
53-9134

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"This is a work that will endure: a work rich in the fruits of a brilliant, probing mind, a dynamic imagination, and a profoundly sensitive response to the art of all ages and cultures. It is a book full of beauty. . . It is also a difficult book, for Malraux deploys a phenomenal erudition with the assumption that his reader is similarly equipped; he compresses into a flashing sentence what calls for a paragraph; and his exposition is more passionate than orderly." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 193:80 F '54 470w

Reviewed by Eric Newton

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 13 '54 650w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun

New Repub 129:16 N 30 '53 1400w

Reviewed by Quentin Bell

New Statesman & Nation 48:104 J1 24 '54 900w

Reviewed by Philip Hendy

Spec p399 Ap 2 '54 1700w

"Today the attraction of the visual arts is greater than ever. They are the most directly sensible manifestations we have of other cultures and other times. The general public has long been avid for books about art, and for books of reproductions. Possibly the photographs in 'The Voices of Silence,' which so smoothly and completely accompany the text, will induce American readers to venture into the dense interlace of Malraux's language. Should the 'Voices' in this event awaken the great public, the defects of the book will probably carry little weight. Indeed, Malraux's views on the nature of those works of art to which he is sympathetic, will enlarge and deepen the general understanding of the public. His system of judgment has venerable antecedents and excellent authority behind it. But the book marks an aboutface from historical method. It returns to normative aesthetics, in the attempt to say what art ought to be, rather than to analyze what it is." George Kubler

+ — Yale R n s 43:448 spring '54 1250w

MALVERN, GLADYS. The foreigner; the story of a girl named Ruth; decorations by Corinne Malvern. 214p $2.75 Longmans

54-5952

A novel for older girls. It is based on the life of Ruth the Moabite, whose devotion to Naomi, her mother-in-law, is the theme of the Biblical Book of Ruth.

Booklist 51:90 O 15 '54

"Straightforward and sturdy."

+ Kirkus 22:341 Je 1 '54 130w

"Recommended 12 and up." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 79:1673 S 15 '54 70w

"Young readers will learn something of daily life and customs in Old Testament times, and they will learn the importance of tolerance toward people of other faiths and other lands. There is little physical action of a type to interest boys in 'The Foreigner,' and the pace is leisurely, but older girls especially will find Miss Malvern's re-creation a satisfying one." Marjorie Burger

+ N Y Times p44 O 17 '54 150w

"An excellent book for girls in their teens." H. G. Jefferson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 28 '54 110w

MAN, FELIX H., pseud. See Bauman, H. F. S.

MANDIGO, PAULINE E. Jean Reade in public relations. 248p $2.50 Dodd

54-6678

A career story about a small-town girl whose ambitions lead her to a place in the New York offices of a public relations firm. Includes the story of her experiences in foreign countries. For older girls.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 193:85 Je '54 20w

Booklist 50:423 J1 1 '54

"At last, here is a career story in which marriage is not even hinted at until after Jean has worked hard for three years at her job in public relations. . . Highly recommended." R. C. Buell

+ Library J 79:1065 Je 1 '54 50w

"A background that includes New York and the Stork Club and also South America, will be very alluring to girls." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 11 '54 60w

MANFRED, FREDERICK FEIKEMA, originally FEIKE FEIKEMA. Lord Grizzly. 281p $3.75 McGraw 54-7365

The adventures of Hugh Glass, a mountain man of the 1820's. Savagely clawed by a grizzly Hugh struggled back to Fort Kiowa, part of the time crawling on all fours, in his attempt to get revenge on the men, trappers and explorers, who he believed had left him to die alone.

Booklist 51:176 D 15 '54

"The Hugh Glass legend comes alive in this robust, moving tale of the elemental mountain man who tenaciously survived mauling by a grizzly bear and who found friends when he sought revenge."

+ Bookmark 14:35 N '54 30w

"This is a very fine, real, rich, bright novel. Above all, it is a novel deserving the appreciative reading and warm applause of all who, like the author, value the legends of America and believe in both their perpetuation and their interpretation." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 3 '54 450w

Kirkus 22:451 J1 15 '54 160w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 28 '54 600w

"This is the first novel Mr. Manfred has published since he dropped his alias and I cannot but think there is a new novelist to go with the new name. There is a ranginess, a free-wheeling robustness, an engaging lustiness of style and expression here that I did not seem to find in his deeply introspective 'World's Wanderer' novels, however much I admired those earlier books. Be that as it may, 'Lord Grizzly' is a heady mixture of history made into first-rate fiction." V. P. Hass

+ N Y Times p32 S 26 '54 400w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 150w

MANGONE, GERARD J. Short history of international organization. 326p $5 McGraw

341.11 International federation 53-10619

In this brief history of international organization the author attempts to trace "the development of international organization along constitutional lines with attention to procedure and law, hoping to indicate a potential, though by no means inevitable, growth toward world order." (Pref) Index.

"This is an important contribution to the teaching literature in the field of international relations. . . A colorful style and a practical notion of the limitations on international organization characterize the book. Well-written throughout, it repeatedly emphasizes the role of power politics in relation to organized efforts to cope with the many problems of modern world society." Oliver Benson

+ Ann Am Acad 294:171 J1 '54 290w

Booklist 50:392 Je 15 '54

Current Hist 27:127 Ag '54 150w

MANKOWITZ, WOLF. Kid for two farthings; il. by James Boswell. 120p $2.50 Dutton 53-10861

In London's East Side Jewish community there lived a number of people who each wanted something very badly—Mr. Kadinsky a steam presser, the apprentice boy money to buy his girl a ring, little Joe the return of his father from Africa. So little Joe buys a unicorn in the animal market, and with faith and love quite a few people win their hearts' desires.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 193:80 Mr '54 290w

Booklist 50:321 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54 30w

Reviewed by August Derleth

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 7 '54 150w

"There's a touchstone of sentimental feeling under the drab life, of humor and a sense of the area that softens the grimness and lights the story. Woolcott might have gone 'quietly mad' over this."

+ Kirkus 21:796 D 15 '53 210w

"This is a sweet tale that seems to purify the filth and squalor of slum life. Written in the simple, clear language of the old-fashioned fairy tale, still it seems realistic. A refreshing and lively story for all fiction collections: Adult and YP." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:382 F 15 '54 130w

"Mr. Mankowitz has a quick eye for snapshotting a character and an uncannily good ear for its typical mode of speech. A Kid for Two Farthings should be a natural for the films." Antonio White

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:430 O 10 '53 120w

"An even better book than 'Make Me An Offer,' Mr. Mankowitz' sophisticated tale of the antique business, 'A Kid for Two Farthings' recreates without sentimentality the rich world of childhood." Edme Seton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 14 '54 600w

"In this enchanting story, so brief in length, so rich in content, London's East End is drawn in all its stark realism and immense sociability through the haze of a 6-year-old boy's fantasy." Nancie Matthews

+ N Y Times p5 F 14 '54 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 17 '54 600w

"Through the deceptively simple thoughts and words of a lonely, lost boy and his pet unicorn we get a poignant parable, a gentle fairy-tale. Ironic Jewish idiom and humor seem admirably suited to the classic undertones of grimness and foreboding." James Kelly

+ Sat R 37:20 F 13 '54 750w

"There is no straining for effect; nor more importantly, is there any withdrawal. Weight for age, this is a magnificent performance. Mr. Mankowitz as a two-year-old showed great promise; A Kid for Two Farthings demonstrates beyond doubt that he is a potential classic winner. Potential? Yes, the qualification remains: for the full size, the full breadth and depth of chest need to come yet." John Metcalf

+ Spec p338 S 25 '53 220w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p18D My 16 '54 200w

"There is genuine feeling in A Kid for Two Farthings, but there is secondhand commercial sentiment as well. Mr. Mankowitz's future as a serious writer will depend upon his ability to develop what is original, and to jettison what is secondhand, in his abundant talent."

Times [London] Lit Sup p593 S 18 '53 300w

MANLY, CHESLY. Twenty-year revolution; from Roosevelt to Eisenhower. 272p $4 Regnery

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government. Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 54-5979

"The title of this book expresses the author's view of the policies of the F. D. Roosevelt, Truman and Eisenhower administrations. There is a plot to subvert America, declares Mr. Manly, by destroying free enterprise through practices of high spending and taxation coupled with stifling economic controls. The pretext for these actions is the exaggerated threat of Soviet military might. The plotters are New Dealers, Communists, Socialists, false liberals and left wing intellectuals, but the author has a solution. An American Party, elected on a program which includes withdrawal from the U.N., cessation of subsidies to Europe, imposition of 25% ceiling on income taxes and a military program based on Herbert Hoover's belief in the efficacy of sea and air power, will arrest the creeping revolution." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 179:156 My '54 350w

"Sometimes Manly seems to overshoot the mark, as when he pins the misleading label, 'anti-Kremlin Communist' on Irving Brown Representative of the American Federation of Labor in Europe, Brown has never been a Communist of any kind and is one of the most able and resourceful fighters against communism in the European labor movement. But as a ringing indictment of Roosevelt, Truman, and all their works at home and abroad the book should appeal to the large number of Americans who showed in the election of 1952 their belief that it was time for a change." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 21 '54 900w

Foreign Affairs 32:674 J1 '54 40w

Kirkus 21:816 D 15 '53 270w

"The book is polemical and frankly partisan, but it seems to me that the topical subject matter will prompt demands for this volume in many public libraries." James Heslin

Library J 79:202 F 1 '54 160w

"Thoughtful people should avoid the impulse to drop this volume into the waste basket. It is a valuable reference book. It explains in good English the way some people's minds work. Mr. Manly speaks for quite a few people who can't or won't read." R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p26 Mr 14 '54 750w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 11 '54 280w

MANN, ARTHUR. Yankee reformers in the urban age. (Belknap press bk) 314p $5 Harvard univ. press

301.24 [301.1535] Boston—Social conditions. Reformers 54-5020

"This is the history of good works, philanthropy and reform in New England, specifically Boston, over a period of 100 years. . . The author writes in detail of the reform movements in the areas, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish, of the city bringing out the parts played by such figures as John Boyle O'Reilly, Edward Everett Hale and others less well known." Kirkus

"A plea for humanitarianism and liberalism, this is a timely book, in a rather limited field. Its appeal will rest mainly on the market of sociologists, scholars, social workers."

Kirkus 22:612 S 1 '54 100w

MANN, ARTHUR—Continued

"Recommended for college libraries and for sociology departments—not for the general reader." Ruth Tubby

Library J 79:2324 D 1 '54 120w

"With loving care and unobtrusive scholarship, Arthur Mann has written an excellent book in a plain-spoken style only possible to a historian who knows his period and his subject, and also what to do with historical detail in order to reveal its meaning for our own time." C. W. Mills

+ N Y Times p35 O 17 '54 550w

MANN, THOMAS. Black swan; tr. from the German by Willard R. Trask. 141p $2.75 Knopf

54-7197

Short novel about a middle-aged German widow, her hopes for a renewal of youth and love, and their tragic end.

"In The Black Swan Thomas Mann returns to the compact dimensions and to the subject matter of Death in Venice (transposed into heterosexual terms)—the infatuation of an aging person for a young one. The current novella—though it is not nearly as memorable a piece of storytelling as the masterpiece of 1913—is a provocative addition to Mann's writings." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:83 J1 '54 440w

Booklist 50:420 J1 1 '54

"Many years ago Thomas Mann wrote what is perhaps the most celebrated long story, or short novel, of our time, Death in Venice. This work, written at the height of the author's powers, now has a companion piece in the present work. But the Black Swan is not likely to be remembered, except insofar as it sets off the earlier work to advantage. For the brilliance of particularized observation and the controlled irony of the earlier work have no counterpart here." Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:474 S '54 200w

Reviewed by Warren Beck

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 6 '54 240w

"I hope I am wrong in judging this story to be evidence of Mann's failing powers. I hope he will render my diagnosis ludicrous by giving us, in the fullness of his years, a wise and beautiful book, worthy in its own right to share the splendid eminence already long enjoyed by his best stories." J. F. Sullivan

Commonweal 60:302 Je 25 '54 650w

Kirkus 22:292 My 1 '54 90w

"The Black Swan will not rank with Mann's major masterpieces, but will have its place with his psychological novelettes, such as Tonio Kroeger and Death in Venice. . . Recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 79:1227 Je 15 '54 110w

Reviewed by Douglas Hewitt

Manchester Guardian p4 O 19 '54 270w

"If there were any doubt that Thomas Mann is one of the great men of modern fiction, it would be immediately dispelled by this excellent new short novel, written in Switzerland in 1952, published in Germany in 1953, and now issued here in a highly satisfactory translation by Willard R. Trask." Carlos Baker

+ Nation 178:526 Je 19 '54 800w

"None of the characters is developed with enough amplitude to make them very interesting, and Mann lavishes all his attention on the invention of symbolic detail. What determines the pattern of symbolism, of course, is the special quality of Rosalie's experience—the deceptive flowering of life and joy from death and corruption. . . Perhaps Mann is now going back to the body-soul entanglement, and, reversing the order of his sin-grace cycle, converting his metaphysical farce into a metaphysical morality. If so, The Black Swan shows that he has not yet found the proper means to make this transition successfully." Joseph Frank

New Repub 131:18 J1 5 '54 1300w

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson

New Statesman & Nation 48:480 O 16 '54 330w

"Had Thomas Mann held the sentimental and mildly macabre nineteenth-century romantic tone throughout this little story, it would at least have had homogeneity. But what should have remained the nostalgic study of a lady's transformation from green to sere and yellow becomes ludicrous through his attempt to wed a period piece to Freudian diagnosis." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Je 6 '54 550w

"The deceptions and feints of Nature are the themes of the long, spun-out dialogues that form the novella's main body. They are intellectual exercises, presenting the author's favorite pairs of philosophical opposites: soul-body, spirit-life, health-sickness, life-death. They establish these dichotomies with brilliance, only to reconcile or to debunk them. Unfortunately, the dialogues do not create human beings. Unlike Mann's earlier stories, the novella doesn't reveal sympathy, insight or even interest: his irony puts up a plastic curtain of detachment between his theme and his protagonists." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p6 Je 6 '54 850w

"Old as the author is, he shows no signs of failing vigor or diminished talent. The Black Swan is tedious and disgusting, but it is an aberration and could perfectly well be followed by a masterpiece. The god in the niche may be at work upon it now." Brendan Gill

New Yorker 30:70 J1 10 '54 1050w

Reviewed by Lewis Vogler

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 27 '54 550w

"That 'The Black Swan' is a work of art, I am sure. In retrospect one realizes that only an artist, perhaps only a great artist, could have written it. But I am also sure that it is one of the most repulsive, most devilish works of art that I have looked upon." B. R. Redman

Sat R 37:15 Je 5 '54 600w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 240w

Time 63:122 Je 7 '54 440w

MANNERHEIM, CARL GUSTAF EMIL, friherre. Memoirs; tr. by Eric Lewenhaupt. 540p il maps $6.75 Dutton

B or 92 Statesmen—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Finland—Politics and government 54-5060

Of a distinguished Swedish-Finnish family, Mannerheim saw service in Russia, Germany, and Finland, and was president of Finland from 1944 to 1946. He died in Switzerland in 1951 at the age of eighty-three. These memoirs were finished shortly before his death. Index.

Booklist 50:449 J1 15 '54

Bookmark 14:32 N '54 30w

"It is in describing and analysing the 'Winter War' above all that Mannerheim shows his precision, lucidity, objectivity, and deep insight. The greatness of the man and of his people emerges impressively." F. A. Voigt

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 29 '54 220w

Reviewed by Michael Howard

New Statesman & Nation 47:167 F 6 '54 1050w

"Mannerheim's descriptions of the campaigns of the War of Liberation, the Winter War and the War of 1941-1944 are perhaps the most absorbing sections of this book. But there are many other passages of high interest to be found here, among which should be noted the author's account of the diplomatic background of the Winter War. . . [The memoirs] are also immensely readable, and the decision to have them translated is to be commended." G. A. Craig

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 20 '54 1250w

"At one point, near the beginning, there is a note of apology. Mannerheim regretted that he recalled all too little of his early years. The truth is that his account of that period is splendidly detailed, warm with self-revelation, rich in informational values—in all, a thrilling story, gently and sometimes humorously told. Either Mannerheim was a prodigious keeper of diaries or his power of recall was almost superhuman. Still other qualities in his book reflect the attributes of greatness. . . The most joyous part of this book describes his two years as scientist and explorer. . . What he wrote of it is pure literature." S. L. A. Marshall

+ N Y Times p3 Je 20 '54 1350w

"A great document, through which shines a powerful character."

+ New Yorker 30:82 Ag 28 '54 260w

"For military readers Mannerheim's lucid account of his campaigns—which occupy a good part of the book—will be illuminating despite the totally inadequate maps that time and again leave one adrift among meaningless place names. The chapters on the Winter War are particularly revealing of Russian military concepts and methods. It would be a pity, however, if non-technical readers were to ignore these memoirs on the assumption that they are but another soldier's tale of war. They are, in fact, a contribution to history in the grand style as well as a portrait—though by no means the final one—of a large, fascinating, and controversial world figure." Harry Gordon

+ Sat R 37:14 Ag 28 '54 900w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 8 '54 500w

MANNHEIM, KARL. Essays on sociology and social psychology; ed. by Paul Kecskemeti. 319p $6.50 Oxford

301 Sociology. Social psychology 53-1311y

"The present volume of essays, selected and edited by Dr. Kecskemeti, comprises almost all the more important papers written by Karl Mannheim during the last twenty-five years of his life. Although the arrangement is not strictly chronological, the papers have been grouped into four parts which faithfully reflect the author's changing circumstances and preoccupations over this period. There is, first, the period of German academic sociology, brought to a close by Mannheim's expulsion from his chair at Frankfurt in 1933. Secondly, the adjustment to Anglo-Saxon intellectual values, marked by a sharpening of critical sense and an increasing distrust of the German sociological tradition. Thirdly, the birth of an interest in empirical psychology as a factor in sociological explanation. And fourthly, the emergence of Mannheim's celebrated conception of the 'planned society' in the early years of the war." Times [London] Lit Sup

"This book, ably edited by Paul Kecskemeti, is not Mannheim's most important one. Yet it is a stimulating production by a theorist whose stature, already substantial, seems likely to grow in future estimation." A. K. Davis

+ Am Soc R 19:628 O '54 700w

"Like others of Mannheim's books, this one is a required addition to the library of sociological theorist." R. B.

+ Sat R 37:44 S 16 '54 270w

Spec p54 Ja 8 '54 80w

"Mannheim was a man of vision, courage and integrity. . . If he never lost entirely the tendency to voluminous and uncritical scholarship, at least he gained a clear perspective of the place of the social sciences in a democratic society. Every serious social scientist to-day stands in his debt."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p381 Je 11 '54 1000w

MANNIN, ETHEL EDITH (MRS REGINALD REYNOLDS). Lover under another name. 311p $3.50 Putnam

53-8151

The spiritual journey of Tom Rowse, product of London's slums, who became a sculptor of international fame. Unsatisfied with fame he left his lavish Paris apartment, and went back to England, married and had a son. Disillusioned again he left his wife and disappeared into the bleak anonymity of the slums from which he had risen.

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

— Cath World 179:153 My '54 220w

"A highly readable novel. . . Ethel Mannin is an excellent writer, clear, colorful, and full of action, but she has loaded her story too heavily on the side of the hero to let one consider her message seriously." Maureen Daly

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 7 '54 300w

"A portrait of a visionary who cannot reconcile his dream with the reality of his desire, this is old worldly in its handling, other worldly in its concerns and rather reminiscent of an earlier period in the English novel. A feminine market should not be too hard to find."

Kirkus 22:38 Ja 15 '54 230w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 80w

"The holier-than-thou-ness and the uncompromising egocentricity of Tom Rowse are the legs he stands on. . . Local colour is splashed on with more generosity than discrimination. To pick up a taxi in Greenwich would be almost as improbable an experience as looking at the exhibits in the Maritime Museum several years before it opened must have been for Tom Rowse; the parish church of Greenwich is dedicated to St. Alfege, not St. Alfrege, and so on. The main contentions of the book are that all true artists are anarchists and that Blake's interpretation of Christianity is the only valid one. This point of view has been put with wit and force by Mr. Joyce Cary in The Horse's Mouth, and Lover under another Name has nothing to add."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p797 D 11 '53 350w

MANNIN, ETHEL EDITH (MRS REGINALD REYNOLDS). Moroccan mosaic. 248p il $3.25 British bk. centre

964 [916.4] Morocco—Description and travel [53-2163]

"Miss Mannin's book follows her travels from International Tangier through Tetuan in the Spanish Zone to the principal cities of the French Zone: Rabat, Fez, with its overhanging houses; Marrakesh, with its fleshpots; Casablanca, with its slums; and Meknes, a city of walls within walls. With an eye for the bizarre, the author's primary interest is, nevertheless, the welfare of the native; she is a staunch supporter of his aspiration for nationhood, and self-determination." Library J

Booklist 51:80 O 15 '54

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1598 S 15 '54 80w

MANNIN, ETHEL EDITH (MRS REGINALD REYNOLDS). Two studies in integrity: Gerald Griffin and the Rev. Francis Mahony (Father Prout). 271p il $4 Putnam

B or 92 Griffin, Gerald. Mahony, Francis Sylvester 54-11801

Biographical sketches of two minor Irish literary figures of the early nineteenth century.

"Mrs. Mannin's account of the two writers—undoubtedly the fullest and most accurate of both of them—does not bring the reader next or nigh either Griffin or Mahony. Only a few chapters, like the record of Mahony's outrageous feud with Daniel O'Connell and Tom Moore, sparkle with life, but they are enough to redeem what would otherwise be a dull book." Francis Sweeney

+ — Commonweal 61:45 O 15 '54 750w

"If nothing else it was a piece of creative imagination on Ethel Mannin's part to consider making a book out of the lives of Gerald Griffin and Francis Mahony. . . No doubt it will find some readers, but it is a book which nobody should go to expecting any excitement or much enlightenment." G. F.

MANNIN, E. E.—Continued

Manchester Guardian p6 My 14 '54
180w

"Miss Mannin's book is a refreshingly old-fashioned biography—no Freud, no third-dimension, no intrusion on the part of the author. By digging back into a lot of old letters and forgotten books, she has recreated a small, probably not very important, but nevertheless charming, world that is dead. All who love books and the men who make books will be interested in meeting these two middle-sized literary figures of the past." John Cogley

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 29 '54 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p266 Ap 23 '54
600w

MANNING, CLARENCE AUGUSTUS. Ukraine under the Soviets. 223p $3.50 Bookman associates

947.7 Ukraine 53-11383

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"It is a useful volume especially for the reader who has but a limited acquaintance with Ukraine or with the substance as distinct from the verbiage of Soviet nationality policy. . . While the volume's brevity and lack of documentation and several serious typographical errors may be slightly discomfiting to the reader, it should be recognized that this is a basically sound introductory study which deals with an incredibly complex series of important but neglected events in the history of the Soviet Union." J. S. Reshetar

+ — Am Hist R 59:377 Ja '54 140w

Am Pol Sci R 48:591 Je '54 90w

"While the definitive and fully documented study of Communist rule in Ukraine has yet to be written, Professor Manning's volume is important because it provides valuable data on an area in which neglect can be very dangerous." J. S. Reshetar

+ Ann Am Acad 291:198 Ja '54 360w

Foreign Affairs 32:515 Ap '54 10w

U S Quarterly Bk R 9:402 D '53 160w

MANNING-SANDERS, MRS RUTH. English circus. 358p il $4.50 British bk. centre

791.3 Circus

History of the origins and development of the circus in England from Roman and medieval times to the present.

"Scholarly in approach, this book is delightfully written and will reach many readers outside the circus enthusiasts." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:779 Ap 15 '54 40w

Manchester Guardian p4 D 5 '52 160w

"There is some tiresome moralising about Roman goings on, but also a rollicking account of Astley's and a sympathetic portrait of 'Lord' George Sanger. It is the writer's pen-pictures of the current ways of circus life that really get one down. She prefers herself as a kind of literary Dame Laura Knight; but the accumulation of detail is no substitute for imagination."

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:789 D 27 '52 180w

"No one even faintly interested in the circus—its history, traditions, and bizarre personalities—can fail to be interested in this detailed tribute, in spite of a rather uninspired writing style and the inclusion of material that is sometimes irritatingly fragmentary. Mrs. Manning-Sanders, however, more often than not manages to bring to life the glories of 'the art that eternally contemplates the proud enchantment of its own perfection.'" William Murray

+ Sat R 37:14 Ap 3 '54 280w

"The book is agreeably and quietly written and contains a large amount of interesting information. Much of it has been gathered from the work of other writers and the book's main fault is that it lacks the freshness and drive of genuine originality."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p738 N 14 '52
460w

MANNIX, JULE. Adventure happy [Eng title: Married to adventure]. 276p il $3.95 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Hunting 54-5468

"Few brides would welcome snakes in their pillows and an eagle with a six-foot wing-spread in a one-room apartment, but the author quickly adjusted to the realization that such things were a part of her marriage to animal-loving Dan. . . An amusing and lively account of outdoor life and a companionable marriage, from a woman's viewpoint." Book-list

Booklist 50:293 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:236 Jl '54 20w

Reviewed by Mason Warner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 4 '54
260w

"'Adventure Happy' is more than entertainment, although it never ceases to be that. One learns a good deal about unusual animals, and much about the happier aspects of human nature. The zest, the love of freedom and fair play, the dogged perseverance against mountainous odds, are reassuring today, and the ozone of humor freshens every page." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 Ap 15 '54
360w

Horn Bk 30:361 O '54 80w

Kirkus 22:30 Ja 1 '54 190w

"Light and entertaining reading for public library patrons." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:774 Ap 15 '54 100w

"Jule Mannix's way of persuading a reader to eat out of her hand proves every bit as effective with humans as it was with her furred or feathered friends. There is no taint of anything 'phony,' in attitude or incident." M. C. Hubbard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk p11 Ap 4 '54 550w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p10 Mr 21 '54 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p475 Jl 23 '54
700w

MANOR, JASON, pseud. See Hall, O. M.

MANVELL, ROGER. On the air; a study of broadcasting in sound and television. 202p $3.50 British bk. centre

792.94 Television broadcasting. Radio broadcasting [A54-511]

"Dr. Manvell's study of broadcasting and television falls into four parts. There is, first, an account of the organization of broadcasting as it exists in [Great Britain], in the Dominions, in the United States and in the Soviet Union. Of this, much the most valuable part is the information on Russian radio, which will be new to most readers. Dr. Manvell then discusses the social aspects of broadcasting and the problem of freedom of expression. There follow chapters on the nature and implications of television and on its relation to sound-broadcasting and film. The book ends with some account of the techniques of broadcasting and televising and a survey of some of the distinguished work the media have already given us." (New Statesman & Nation) Index.

"Roger Manvell, whose 'Film' remains a valuable study of the movies as an art form, is less stimulating but still helpful on the subject of broadcasting. He does not believe that radio and television are in themselves art forms. But he feels that each can make a unique contribution to artistic expression. In exploring their distinctive characteristics he assists the reader to a sharpened appreciation of the sights and sounds available on the air."

Rod Nordell

+ — Christian Science Monitor p9 J1 23 '54
420w

"It must be admitted that this book is not of the calibre one would have expected of its author, and it is written with a lack of distinction amounting at times to sheer slovenliness. . . Dr. Manvell is at his best where he is discussing such subjects as the techniques of talks-broadcasting, which he does with great common sense, and radio drama and features. Here, his great knowledge of the film stands him in good stead."

+ — New Statesman & Nation 46:829 D 26
'53 210w

"[The author] is a little hard on the B.B.C. in suggesting that it tends to promote a vague and weak form of Christian practice instead of a faith fighting against the heaviest odds of sheer indifference it has ever been called upon to face since the invasion of Europe by the Vandals. Surely Lambeth and other such addresses rather than Broadcasting House should receive the blame, if blame there is, on this score. Mr. Manvell is at his most interesting when he deals with the technique of sound and television production in plays, talks and other programmes."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p762 N 27 '53
400w

MARCH, EDGAR JAMES. Sailing trawlers; the story of deep-sea fishing with long line and trawl. 384p il $12.50 British bk. centre

639.2 Trawls and trawling [53-13475]

"Encyclopedic account of British fishing in the days of sail. It covers fishing practices and customs, prices paid for fish, earnings of boats and fishermen, descriptions of fishing grounds, accounts of shipwrecks due to storms and losses due to enemy action during World War I, as well as a full range of information on the boats themselves. The author states that much of his information was gathered at first hand from men who 'knew sail in its prime and could speak at first hand of their experiences.' Some of the data on individual boats were procured by direct measurements of them by the author. There are 180 reproductions of photographs, 50 figures, most of which are dimensioned drawings of structural details, and 20 plans." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by Richard Philbrick

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 F 14 '54
50w

"Historical and ship construction interest; unique, distinctive, limited in appeal. For specialized collections." H. A. Wooster

Library J 79:555 Mr 15 '54 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:89 N '53

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 7 '54
150w

"Mr. March has already given us a volume on the spritsail barges of the Thames and Medway and a notable work on Sailing Drifters. His latest work, Sailing Trawlers, is of like excellence, and, if anything, even more exhaustively thorough."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p126 F 19 '54
450w

MARCH, WILLIAM, pseud. See Campbell, W. E. M.

MARCHAL, LUCIEN. Sage of Canudos; tr. from the French by Charles Duff. 381p $3.95 Dutton

54-8849

In the 1880's a group of bandits with a few mystics thrown in, led by a fanatic, set up a so-called holy city in the Brazilian hinterlands. Existing on the spoils of raids this community of 12,000 became such a menace that the Brazilian government was forced to take a hand. This novel describes the incident and the leader, Antonio Marcel, who was called Antonio Conselheiro.

Kirkus 22:319 My 15 '54 120w

"Well done. Recommended for medium and large public libraries." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1402 Ag '54 140w

Reviewed by Isabel Quigley

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 9 '54
140w

Reviewed by Stanley Cooperman

Nation 179:217 S 11 '54 40w

"Lucien Marchal has taken few liberties with [the] true tale; the savagery and the horror are described, the bitter heat and the driving hunger, the strange ecstasy and the magnificent loyalty of those abused people. But the novel suffers by comparison with the Brazilian's handling of the same materials: Euclides da Cunha's Os Sertoes (finely translated by Samuel Putnam under the title Rebellion in the Backlands [Book Review Digest 1944]."

Hubert Herring

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J1 25 '54
500w

"This story is told in a simple, narrative style. Mr. Marchal brings to light, vividly and engagingly, one of the astounding episodes of the New World." Lewis Nordsyke

+ N Y Times p18 J1 25 '54 400w

"The start is slow, and the Brazilian names of people and things are a little disconcerting, but once we are well out on the stream the current grips us, rushing and foaming to a tremendous fall. Mr. Charles Duff's translation is first class." L. A. G. Strong

+ — Spec p272 Mr 5 '54 150w

"Mr. Marchal, a Belgian, spent several years in Brazil as a coffee and cotton planter, and his book is rich in what seems to be authentic background material. Written originally in French, the book is capably translated into English by Charles Duff." H. B. H.

+ Springfield Republican p4C Ag 1 '54
140w

"Such a story cannot fail to be moving, but M. Marchal has not displayed it to the best advantage. He never makes clear to the reader that the St. Sebastian who inspires Portuguese peasants against their oppressors is not the early martyr but the King of Portugal, vanquished in a lost battle against the Moors. . . The first half of the book, describing the early life of the Counsellor, is as dull as any other pessimistic novel about the hard lot of the farmer. . . But the consistently flat treatment of epic fights and hazardous journeys seems due to the author's policy of making things hard for the reader."

Times [London] Lit Sup p165 Mr 12
'54 300w

MARCHER, MARION W. Monarch butterfly; il. by Barbara Latham. [42p] $2 Holiday

595.78 Butterflies—Juvenile literature
54-10558

The life-cycle story of the monarch butterfly, told for ages six to nine. A final chapter tells how to raise a monarch butterfly.

Booklist 50:384 Je 1 '54

"Simply and vividly told, and pictured, for beginner readers." Polly Goodwin

+ Christian Sunday Tribune p6 S 5 '54
40w

"Distinguished for its interesting text and excellent illustrations and bookmaking." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:100 Ap '54 100w

Kirkus 22:111 F 15 '54 70w

"Recommended for all libraries." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 79:1063 Je 1 '54 40w

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 16
'54 40w

Reviewed by Jeanne Massey

N Y Times p33 Je 6 '54 40w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:218 N 27 '54 30w

Wis Lib Bul 50:215 O '54

MARCUS, ABRAHAM. Radio servicing: theory and practice. 2d ed 794p il $5.95 Prentice-Hall 621.384 Radio receivers. Radio apparatus—
Repairing 53-9729

"Material added on developments, including the transistor, that took place in the six years since publication of the first edition [Book Review Digest 1949]. The book continues to be a practical handbook for radio servicemen and intermediate students." Booklist

Booklist 50:361 My 15 '54

"One of the outstanding texts for practical students. The treatment is descriptive but the description is so carefully written and so detailed that the reader receives a sound idea of how a radio receiver operates."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 39:45 My '54

MARCUS, DAVID. To next year in Jerusalem. 297p $3.50 St Martins

The problems of a young Irish Jew, dwelling in Drumcree, a western Ireland, in 1947 and '48. Jonathan is a devout Jew, but he falls in love with Aileen McDonagh, a Catholic. The novel's main concern is the resolving of Jonathan's attitudes toward Zionism and anti-Semitism.

Bookmark 14:9 O '54 30w

"To state it frankly, there is a small-town, provincial odor about this novel which is honest at all times, and admirable in its way, but reminiscent of many stories where the protagonist must suffer because of the lack of imagination and experience that surrounds him. This does nothing to invalidate what Mr. Marcus has written, but it does make his book predictable and perhaps a trifle too naive. A more honorable, upright and conscientious hero than Jonathan Lippmann would be hard to find." Seymour Krim

+ Commonwealth 61:101 O 29 '54 1100w

"The story is heavy with Jewish lore, tradition and practices but the arguments are expressive and the situation interesting."

+ — Kirkus 22:498 Ag 1 '54 140w

"There is too much talk (very little of it good), too much unnecessary description, and too little genuine characterization. Author's Gaelic seems to be better than his Yiddish and Hebrew: transliteration of the latter two is inept, case endings are confused, and several words and phrases—including the title of the book—are incorrectly translated." Louis Barron

— Library J 79:1504 S 1 '54 130w

"The style is plain and sometimes clumsy, and lets the author down when it comes to conveying the magic of praying-shawls and seven-branched candlesticks. Yet its straightness is most attractive, and the novel, naive though it often is, has a remarkable force and serenity. This springs, I think, from the paradoxical fact that the hero has got a home—a security quite out of reach for most of us—in a complex tradition which he can whole-heartedly accept. From that stronghold, with detachment and a curious quiet confidence, he is able to pronounce the poetry of exile." Mary Scrutton

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:106 Jl 24 '54 30w

"Interesting but occasionally heavy first novel. . . The writing is analytical, rather than dramatic. Orderly, evenly paced, informative, 'To Next Year in Jerusalem' is a novel absorbing because of its matter and its motive, but lacking somewhat in fictional juice and vitality." Richard Sullivan

+ — N Y Times p6 S 5 '54 400w

"Interesting by reason of its unusual subject, Mr. Marcus's study lacks impetus and selectivity as a novel."

Times [London] Lit Sup p453 Jl 16 '54 110w

MARGON, LESTER. World furniture treasures: yesterday, today and tomorrow. 186p il $7.50 Reinhold

749 Furniture 53-9173

"Furniture design is the main topic of this book, and the text of the first part is a readable and authoritative discussion of the principles of furniture styles of various periods noted for good design. However, the second part has been given more space and will hold more interest for furniture craftsmen, both amateur and professional. In this part the arrangement is a photograph and description of an example of fine furniture on a left-hand page and on the facing right-hand page several measured drawings which are sufficiently detailed to guide the craftsman in the authentic reproduction of the piece. The number of furniture pieces treated in this way is 52." (N Y New Tech Bks) Photograph credits. Index.

"Recommended." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:861 My 1 '54 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:8 Ja '54

MARIANA, pseud. See Foster, M. C.

MARINO, DOROTHY. Little Angela and her puppy; pictures by [the author]. [37p] $2 Lippincott

54-5587

Angela was a very small girl living in a very large city and because she was too little to play on the street she had no playmates. Daddy, who worked in a vegetable store, was sorry and bought Angela a tiny puppy and then Angela wasn't lonesome anymore. A picture story book for the very young.

"Story and pictures make Angela so lovable and appealing in her lonely and joyful moods that she will seem very real to other little girls." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 4 '54 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

Kirkus 22:151 Mr 1 '54 60w

"Appealing pictures and story for pre-school children." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 79:562 Mr 15 '54 30w

"Little children will enjoy this short story and its many pictures of someone as small as themselves. They will understand Angela's longing for a playmate and will have a fine feeling of satisfaction when she finds one at last." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 11 '54 140w

MARION, FRANCES. Powder keg. 303p $3.50 Little

53-10242

Novel based on the lives of several inmates of a present-day woman's prison.

Booklist 50:168 D 15 '53

"Because the characters are diverse, because the thesis [while not carried off too convincingly] is inexorable, and because the author covers almost every phase of prison life, the story is fast moving thruout. It never drags. It is never mired down in sentimentality as it might have been at the hands of a lesser writer. . . The weakness of Miss Marion's book is its extreme sympathy for the prison inmates." K. Smith

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 D 13 '53 320w

Kirkus 21:643 S 15 '53 240w

"The pitiful stories of half a dozen prisoners are woven together to make an absorbing novel with the ring of truth about it. The author has won three Oscars for her screen plays. Highly recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 78:2028 N 15 '53 70w

"It is to Miss Marion's credit that she makes her girls not much better than they are, nor does she embellish her fast-moving story with psychological probings. The thesis that a moving picture, on the screen or as story should move and have impact is the core of Miss Marion's writing." Alden Whitman

+ N Y Times p13 D 27 '53 220w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 30w

MARITAIN, JACQUES. Approaches to God; tr. from the French by Peter O'Reilly. (World perspectives, v 1) 128p $2.50 Harper

231 Theology. God

54-8969

"M. Maritain, who is perhaps the best-known Roman Catholic lay philosopher of our day, seeks in this first volume of 'World Perspectives' to indicate the traditional ways by which the reality of God has been demonstrated in Western Christianity, and more particularly in the church to which he owes obedience. The author faithfully takes account of most of the modern philosophical criticisms of the Roman Catholic Thomist approach. He also includes concluding chapters in which he considers with genuine sympathy other ways in which God is approached—the esthetic, the moral, the intuitive." (N Y Times) No index.

"Slight in size, but heavy with meaty content. . . . A book for thinking people with a philosophical bent."

+ Kirkus 22:659 S 15 '54 210w

"The new series, of which this is the first volume, is to consist of short popular works dealing with contemporary problems, written by distinguished authors. It holds much promise for libraries of various types. Many will want to place a standing order for the whole series." A. D. Osborn

+ Library J 79:1892 O 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by J. M. Krumm

New Repub 131:28 D 6 '54 900w

"It is valuable to have such a clear statement, written with charm and charity, of the Roman Catholic approach to the reality of God. Even those who do not share this particular kind of philosophical theism will find a study of M. Maritain's work rewarding." W. N. Pittenger

+ N Y Times p32 O 31 '54 750w

MARKHAM, FELIX MAURICE HIPPISEY. Napoleon and the awakening of Europe. (Teach yourself history library) 184p maps $2 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Napoléon I, emperor of the French. Europe—History [54-2259]

"This volume is intended 'by way of a biography of a great man to open up a significant historical theme' with authorship by 'people of good academic standards.' . . . It is based largely on secondary sources, intelligently used. It contains a short bibliography stressing available works in English and a brief index generally limited to names of persons and places." Am Hist R

"It is a small, compact, clearly written book. . . . On the debit side it may be said that in places it is too compact. . . . While designed for the general reader, the book never tries to attract by use of the sensational or even picturesque. It should be helpful to the intelligent layman and to the student of other periods of history who want to learn about the skeleton, not the brass buttons, of the Napoleonic period." George Woodbridge

+ — Am Hist R 60:141 O '54 320w

"One of many excellent qualities of this book is the choice Mr. Markham has made of Napoleon's own sayings. It must have been an exquisite agony of selection to choose so little from so much, but many of the most important and characteristic are there." R. B. McCallum

+ Spec p594 My 14 '54 460w

"To compress the career of Napoleon into 175 pages, without allowing the narrative to become a string of facts, is no light task. Mr. Markham's success is due to his easy command of an immense mass of material, to his sense of proportion, and to the clarity of his style. In writing of Napoleon it is difficult to keep a cool judgment; to censure without violence or praise with restraint. Mr. Markham is reasonable and dispassionate, especially in dealing with those matters which usually raise debate."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p183 Mr 19 '54 650w

MARKHAM, JAMES WALTER. Bovard of the Post-dispatch. (Journalism monographs) 226p il $4 La. state univ. press

B or 92 Bovard, Oliver Kirby

"Bovard was, in James W. Markham's words, 'the greatest managing editor . . . a general of news campaigns.' . . . As managing editor of the [St Louis] Post-Dispatch from 1908 until his resignation in 1938, due to, he said, 'irreconcilable differences with Mr. Pulitzer as to the general conduct of the paper,' Bovard planned the campaigns that exposed the Teapot Dome scandals, the Missouri primary frauds of 1936, the Union Electric Company's bribery of legislators, and led the way in solving a half dozen or so kidnappings, murders, and political crimes by Missouri and Illinois gangsters." (Christian Science Monitor) Bibliography. Index.

"When Bovard was at the helm the Pulitzer slogan plastered on the walls of the Post-Dispatch city room read: Terseness, Accuracy, Terseness. He made the Post-Dispatch live by those words, and James W. Markham, associate professor of journalism at Pennsylvania State University, makes Bovard live by them in this book. It's a first-rate work of scholarship." Webster Schott

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 19 '54 370w

"Although rather pedestrian in manner, this book is a valuable addition to the annals of journalism."

+ — Nation 179:448 N 20 '54 250w

MARKHAM, VIOLET ROSA (MRS JAMES CARRUTHERS). Return passage; autobiography. 260p il $5 Oxford

B or 92

"Violet Markham grew up in a well-to-do Victorian home of liberal views; travelled widely; made friends with many of the distinguished figures of her time. Yet the satisfactions of such a life were not enough. She had money, friends, amusements; but she did not wish for the leisure of her class. Instead, she embraced a career of social service. . . . This is not an autobiography which tells the reader much, save indirectly, about its author. Her eyes are not turned upon herself, but on the problems and sufferings she saw around her." Times [London] Lit Sup

Canadian Forum 33:239 Ja '54 250w

"Here is wisdom and experience in full measure, and indeed something more. Miss Markham has a mastery of words and phrases which enables her to bring people and places and policies to life, and to infuse her chronicle of activities with the vitality which made them possible. Seldom indeed has a human being touched life at so many points." Mary Stocks

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 30 '53 600w

"Amid the mass of trivial or unconsciously self-destructive autobiographies which pile up in the booksellers' windows, Miss Violet Markham's Return Passage stands out like the Rock of Gibraltar. Here is a life story of permanent value, gay and modest and sincere, full of rare entertainment as well as matured judgment on human affairs, for the writer is above all things an expert in the art of good living." Letitia Fairfield

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:240 Ag 29 '53 600w

"Her writing is sound and concentrated and never dull." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 18 '53 350w

"Writers of memoirs are, almost inevitably, tempted to try to make themselves more attractive, or at least more interesting, and in public life more important than they were. But this is an essentially modest book. . . . It is also an essentially honest book, telling us frankly how and why she changed her mind on such problems as female suffrage, on the part of the State in social reform or on religion. What is more, it is an important book from the point of view of the serious student." L. S. Amery

+ Spec p28 Jl 3 '53 550w

MARKHAM, V. R.—Continued

"Most good autobiographies present a personal portrait against a contemporary background. Here the background is the picture, and it is only at the end we realize that we have also made out the features of a remarkable woman."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p459 J1 17 '53
1250w

MARLOWE, JOHN, pseud. History of modern Egypt and Anglo-Egyptian relations, 1800-1953 [Eng title: Anglo-Egyptian relations, 1800-1953]. 440p $6 Praeger

962 Egypt—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Egypt—History. Great Britain—Foreign relations—Egypt 54-8510

"Written by a British specialist on Near-Eastern affairs, this book gives a detailed, documented account of Anglo-Egyptian affairs since the time of the first occupation, following upon Napoleon's invasion in 1798. The Suez Canal, the English in the Sudan, Egypt in two world wars, post-war Egyptian Nationalism and the recent withdrawal of Great Britain from the Egyptian scene are among the topics covered." Library J

Booklist 51:59 O 1 '54

"Competently done, the book will appeal to the specialist rather than to the general reader. Valuable as one of the few books available on the history of Egypt, 1800 to date." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 79:1830 O 1 '54 100w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman
New Statesman & Nation 47:766 Je 12 '54 480w

"Some will feel that less than justice is done to Lord Allenby, who showed much of that understanding of the roots of Egyptian grievances which was to be characteristic of other leading British soldiers during and after the Second World War. Certainly the author might have made more of what Lord Wilson has called the 'personal equation' in Anglo-Egyptian relations during the 1940's. But these are relatively unimportant complaints about an honest and thoroughly useful book."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p715 N 12 '54
1100w

MARQUAND, JOHN PHILLIPS. Thirty years. 466p $5 Little 813

54-6885

"This is a collection of pieces, nostalgic fragments, more or less formal essays, bits of reportage, and short stories, a thirty year crop, one assumes from the title." Kirkus

"His papers on Boston, Harvard, and Newburyport lose some of their humor and quizzicality in cold print. A Professional Yankee, he gives us his sharpest satire in his fiction. Faddiman is right, he is the 'particular gadfly of the gentility,' and there he has his fun." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 194:82 D '54 330w

Booklist 51:30; 102 S 15 '54; N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:59 D '54 20w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 7 '54
250w

"The non-fiction pieces are of varying interest, and with few exceptions, are not Marquand at his best. They seem to have been written for an occasion, reading more like speeches than special articles in some cases. But there are bits of evocative writing, as in the one on Boston (The New Look Reaches Boston) and the one entitled Federalist Newburyport. I'd suggest for the flavor of the whole, that you sample The End Game and Beginning Now."

+ — Kirkus 22:319 My 15 '54 190w

"Civilized entertainment; highly recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1589 S 15 '54 90w

"One of the most interesting aspects of the collection is its almost textbook display of stylistic progress. The author seems to grow, to polish his dialogue, under our eyes. The differences between an early slick-ending story such as 'Golden Lads' and the unhurried competence of the two long Bahaman stories are enormous." Tallaferra Boatwright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 O 31 '54
550w

"I am glad that the early stories are here, for they enable us to measure Mr. Marquand's growth. Most of the later stories not only have the naturalness that Mr. Marquand believes so desirable; they have depth." Granville Hicks

+ N Y Times p5 O 31 '54 450w

New Yorker 30:192 N 6 '54 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 17 '54
650w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

+ Sat R 27:13 N 27 '54 850w

Time 64:106 N 1 '54 170w

MARSH, IRVING T., and EHRE, EDWARD, eds. Best sports stories, 1954. (V10) 328p il $3.50 Dutton

796 Sports

(45-35124)

"A panorama of the 1953 sports year, and a sports record book including the review of the sports year, and the 1953 champions of all sports with thirty of the year's best sports pictures." Subtitle

"Any sports fan reader will get immense entertainment and enjoyment whether he reads about baseball, football, racing, boxing, golf, tennis, or what have you. Sportswriters seem to mellow with age."

Kirkus 22:278 Ap 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:1521 S 1 '54 10w

"Simply as a nostalgic recapitulation of how the Yankees won the World Series in six games, how Rocky Marciano knocked out Joe Walcott in two minutes, of how Yale upset Princeton in twenty-three seconds, 'Best Sports Stories' is without a peer. The newspaper stories retain their eyewitness quality even when the stirring events they describe have been interred under lines of small type in the record books."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ag 8 '54 260w

"As usual, 'Best Sports Stories' is an invaluable handbook to the sports year, and for the second year in a row, Judge John Chamberlain, Bob Considine and Quentin Reynolds decided the winners on the first ballot."

D. A. Pitt

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 6 '54
280w

Wis Lib Bul 50:206 O '54

MARSHALL, BRUCE. Only fade away. 303p $3.50 Houghton

54-10760

The life story of Strang Methuen, a member of the British regular army. The action covers his childhood; his meeting with his nemesis Hermiston, a bully, while still a school boy; his experiences in two wars; and his final ousting from the army. The story is told to a friend on the day of the funeral of George VI.

"A virile, sophisticated novel."

+ Bookmark 14:35 N '54 30w

"It's a pawky sort of book, very Scottish, and at times absurd, but more often funny in a way quite close to pathos." Riley Hughes
Cath World 130:230 D '54 260w

"An improbable story, no doubt, but a highly readable one thanks chiefly to Mr Marshall's skill in documentation." Norman Shrapnel
+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 11 '54 90w

"As entertainment Only Fade Away wins by a good many lengths. Mr. Marshall is never less than supremely readable and his worst fault as a writer is that he knows this all too well. He never minds showing his readers how the wheels go round, he accords us none of that courteous deprecation that the great entertainers know so well how to assume. He never flatters us by catching at our lapsels, his style merely intimates briskly: "This is a good yarn, take it or leave it." It is and we do." John Raymond

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:641 My 15 '54 450w

Reviewed by Taliaferro Boatwright

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 12 '54 300w

"From a vigorous and interesting start Bruce Marshall's new novel only fades away, in keeping with his title. . . The sum total is an odd, sporadically interesting case history of an officer in the Scottish army. It leaves us in doubt whether it is the story of a man's frustrating struggle with right-or-wrong judgments or simply the chronicle of a borderline misfit." Edmund Fuller

N Y Times p35 N 14 '54 450w

"This is a well-constructed, firmly-drawn narrative about the British Regular Army. . . [It] adds up to an uncommonly likeable, efficient and therefore impressive achievement." Kingsley Amis

+ Spec p626 My 21 '54 330w

Time 64:66 D 27 '54 290w

"For all the schoolboy jargon, adolescent enmities and naive preoccupations of its central characters, Only Fade Away remains a forceful novel. The feeling of it, if superficially unreal, is in fact never false. The dialogue is excellent, and often really funny. And while all kinds of things go on that normally have the appearance of taking place only in popular novels, Mr. Marshall's handling of them is so sure that they entertain rather than disconcert."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p373 Je 11 '54 470w

MARSHALL, CHARLES BURTON. Limits of foreign policy. 128p $3 Holt

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. International relations. World politics 54-10524

"This little book consists of five lectures delivered at Hollins College in 1953. Hollins' President John R. Everett, troubled by the students' 'extremely shaky foundation for judgment about some of the most serious questions of our day,' wanted a lecturer who could give the college 'a sane and firm platform of fact and theory' about international affairs. He found Charles Burton Marshall, then a member of the State Department's Policy Planning Staff." N Y Times

"It would be hard to exaggerate the good sense and topical importance of this short essay on foreign policy by a former member of the State Department's Policy Planning Staff. . . I cannot hope in these notes to suggest the keenness and exhilarating sanity of Mr. Marshall's discussion. In my estimate, it makes three-quarters of what is being said about foreign policy sound like the mischievous chatter of retarded schoolboys." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:102 O '54 280w

"To the long row of books on foreign affairs which have been prompted by the cold war, Charles Burton Marshall has added a slender volume of great wisdom. . . The product, urbane, erudite and profound, places him in that select company of classical exponents of the principles of power represented at various times by such men as Francois de Gallieres, Edmund Burke, Guglielmo Ferrero and Herbert Butterfield." G. W. Jaeger

+ Commonweal 60:516 Ag 27 '54 800w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Nation 179:466 N 27 '54 220w

"Here is a book much needed, written with clarity, penetration and wisdom." C. G. Bowers

+ New Repub 131:18 O 4 '54 1850w

Reviewed by G. A. Craig

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ag 8 '54 600w

"The lectures show Mr. Marshall to be one of a small but vital group of Americans who think about foreign policy with a minimum of passion and a maximum of perspective." S. K. Padover

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 8 '54 900w

New Yorker 37:143 O 2 '54 230w

"Mr. Marshall writes with polish, style, more than a touch of humor, and frequently apt quotation from everybody from De Tocqueville to the taxi-driver." Walter Millis

+ Sat R 37:28 O 2 '54 850w

Time 64:102 N 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Herbert Feis

Yale R n s 44:281 winter '55 180w

MARSHALL, EDISON (HALL HUNTER, pseud). American captain. 407 $3.95 Farrar, Straus

54-11068

This story of adventure on land and sea follows the career of Homer Whitman, Maine seaman, during the first two decades of the nineteenth century, in the Mediterranean, in North Africa, and in England.

Booklist 51:109 N 1 '54

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 3 '54 420w

"A lot of story and purposeful in its theme of the brotherhood of man, this is robust tale-telling for those who like their fiction straight."

+ Kirkus 22:498 Ag 1 '54 190w

"Whatever the literary merits of the book, there's never a dull moment." Henry Cavendish

N Y Times p24 S 19 '54 460w

"Written in a lively style, this fast-moving tale should be pleasing to readers who have enjoyed the author's earlier books, such as 'Caravan to Kanadu,' 'The Viking' and 'Yankee-Pasha.'" H. B. H.

+ Springfield Republican p7C O 3 '54 140w

Time 64:106 S 27 '54 60w

MARSHALL, MADELEINE. Singer's manual of English diction. 198p $3.75 Schirmer

784.93 Singing and voice culture

"Miss Marshall is Instructor in English Diction at Juilliard School of Music and Union Theological Seminary. She has striven to standardize an important but too often undeveloped component of the singer's art, aiming to present 'a neutral, standard English, free of regional accents, intelligible to any audience . . . an English that has long been accepted as a norm on the stage and in other public usage.'" Library J

"It should be noted that not all Miss Marshall's precepts are safe in the unguided mouths of young singers. In singing one has often to approximate a sound in order to achieve the appearance of naturalness. These are not techniques one masters without a teacher, and a teacher with a good ear. However, standard or no, this book should be read and pondered." P. L. Miller

Library J 79:776 Ap 15 '54 150w

"Miss Marshall is sound, and sensible, and right on most points. If singers would think about the sounds they produce or vowels and consonants and realize that their pronunciation should give a clear, natural, understandable impression, any distortion of which is less than acceptable, they would take to her book for help." Paul Hume

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:312 Mr '54 320w

MARSHALL, PETER. Prayers; ed. and with prefaces by Catherine Marshall. 243p $3 McGraw

264.1 Prayers

54-11762

"The late Washington minister's pastoral prayers are here topically arranged and his Senate prayers chronologically. Two photographs." Bookmark

Booklist 51:145 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:32 N '54 10w

"Here are simple sentences, the turns of speech heard on the street corner, the words which reveal deep, intuitive knowledge of the personal needs of the senators, the absence of trite religious diction. . . The first half of the book contains those prayers Dr. Marshall used at church. Readers are bound to find in them their own needs and aspirations given effective expression by this pastor with the understanding heart." Clarence Seidenspinner

MARSHALL, PETER—Continued

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 14 '54 220w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p22 D 5 '54 30w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 7 '54 200w

"Mr. Marshall, a naturalized American citizen, gave these prayers with typical Scottish wit and reality. Once, in a humorous vein, he said, 'We thank Thee, Lord, that there is no weather in heaven.' His style is characterized by rugged simplicity and Christian philosophy." G. A. Panichas

+ Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 200w

MARSHALL, MRS ROSAMOND VAN DER ZEE. The dollmaster. 218p $2.95 Prentice-Hall

54-5678

Romantic novel of renaissance Italy. The heroine is the beautiful Bianca whom the puppeteer Belcaro holds in his power.

"A well-developed heroine, and an over-developed plot, this is still a flaccid narrative which even the most solid flesh cannot sustain." Kirkus 22:134 F 15 '54 180w

Reviewed by Richard Match
— N Y Times p22 My 23 '54 240w

Reviewed by J. R. Hunter
Springf'd Republican p7C Je 6 '54 40w

MARSHALL, MRS ROSAMOND VAN DER ZEE. Loving meddler. 248p $3.50 Doubleday

54-7022

Ten-year-old Dodie Bates could have taught Hetty Green how to make money. Dodie even had to pay income taxes and kept her own books. Not that it was necessary for her to earn money (her family had plenty) but Dodie loved money. When it was a question of some member of her beloved family in trouble, however, Dodie's meddling took a new turn.

Booklist 50:452 J1 15 '54

"An always entertaining concoction, and choice hammock reading." O. D. H.
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 1 '54 170w

Kirkus 22:273 Ap 15 '54 120w

"Rosamond Marshall has an uncurbed imagination. Her new book, 'The Loving Meddler,' a story about a little girl, is an interesting departure from her love-burdened historical romances but once again she lets herself be seduced by the extravagant and sensational. With restraint—for there are some very good bits of portraiture in the book—Dodie Bates could have been as real and recognizable as Penrod." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 19 '54 210w

"Dodie's exploits are in Miss Marshall's tradition of dead-pan comedy—a style she has already used with flamboyant success in her historical pastiches." A. F. Wolfe

+ N Y Times p14 Je 20 '54 250w

MARSHALL, VIRGINIA STONE. Flower arranging for juniors; ill. by [the author]. 113p $2.75 Little

635.96 Floral decoration—Juvenile literature 54-5116

A book on flower arranging for ages eight to twelve. Contains many line drawings of fundamentals of arrangements. The author has had experience in teaching young people to arrange flowers.

Reviewed by Helen Reber

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 4 '54 50w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13 '54 130w

Horn Bk 30:179 Je '54 100w

"In spite of its decorous tone, and rather childish references to fairy tales as suitable arrangement nomenclature, this little manual has the virtue of clarity and sound artistic principles that should inspire any flower fancier who can stomach the text."

+ Kirkus 22:63 F 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by R. H. Urban

Library J 79:635 Ap 1 '54 40w

"One can only criticize it for lack of enough pictures of more interesting arrangements than those in the instructive early chapters. It could be given ten to twelve year olds to use alone, and they could turn to adult books for further illustration. It is more a book for home use than one that leads up to the show rules in the last chapter." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 14 '54 110w

"Will give the beginner a good grasp of the primary techniques of arrangement—including those tricks and gadgets which help a flower piece stay put." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 7 '54 110w

MARSLAND, WILLIAM DAVID, and MARS-LAND, MRS AMY LOUISE. Venezuela through its history. 277p $3.75 Crowell

987 Venezuela—History 54-6333

A combination of history and of general information on Venezuela. Maps on end papers. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:377 Je 1 '54

"A valuable study."

+ Kirkus 22:143 F 15 '54 210w

"Any historical novelist pressed for a narrative line and a set of characters may relax and get to work, now that the Marslands have told the story of Venezuela in English. For their book is full of action, studded with melodrama and peopled with authentic heroes, beauties and villains. The stunning single fact about it is that it is all true, at least as true as history ever is." Milton Bracker

+ N Y Times p10 N 28 '54 440w

MARSTON, EVERETT CARTER. Take the high ground. 243p $3.50 Little

54-5112

A story of one year in the life of an instructor in English at a co-educational college in New England.

Booklist 50:240 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54

"It is to the author's credit that he makes Giles' first year on the faculty, if not quite convincing, at least briskly readable. There are some excellent insights into campus life in general, into personalities and relationships. But in the central story, regrettably, reality stretches, contrivance intrudes, and romance takes over." Richard Sullivan

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 7 '54 280w

"The author builds up the atmosphere and the plot with style, dropping in some trenchant comments on college mores. But about midway through, the plot begins to sag. Things just go too well for Giles." C. H. Weiss

+ — Commonweal 59:505 F 19 '54 450w

"No high honors, perhaps, but a pleasantly assured first novel which differentiates its problems and people with a knowledgeable accuracy."

+ Kirkus 21:768 D 1 '53 160w

"A competent job of writing when dealing with everything except the romantic interludes. But evidently the nice, intelligent, compactly put together female doesn't exist for our authors. The gals are scintillating beauties, outright stinkers or piano legged Smith grads, with cloak and dagger pasts in some cases. However, who can resist a peek into faculty dorms?" C. J. Roth

Library J 79:205 F 1 '54 110w

"Marston has written what, today, might be well labeled a decent book—decent in the sense that it is permeated with high-mindedness, honesty, sometimes with wisdom and always with generosity. It displays an intelligent understanding of the difficulties and the pleasures of a teacher's profession. On the whole the characters are well drawn. However, I found the novel, curiously enough, weakest in its main character, Giles Harmony, whose wanton past is darkly hinted at but never revealed." H. F. West

+ — N Y Times p27 F 7 '54 450w

"This is a first novel of unusual maturity, the story of the eternal battle between personal integrity and the forces of compromise." Isabel Stradley

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 4 '54 60w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 11 '54 140w

MARTI, JOSE. America of José Martí; selected writings tr. from the Spanish by Juan de Onís; with an introd. by Federico de Onís. 335p il $4.50 Noonday

868

53-13555

An anthology of the writings of the Cuban writer and patriot, translated from the Spanish by Juan de Onís.

Booklist 50:275 Mr 15 '54

Christian Century 71:585 My 12 '54 120w

"It is doubtful that any foreigner has written with deeper insight and more lyric phrasing about the United States. Martí was attempting to interpret the United States and its great men to Latin Americans of his day. But what he has to say is also for us." R. M. Hallett

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 23 '54 350w

"The present anthology is the tribute we have all awaited from the United States to Martí. It carries an excellent prologue by Federico de Onís, which is indispensable in setting Martí against the background of his world and his times." German Arciniegas

+ N Y Times p10 F 7 '54 850w

New Yorker 30:146 My 8 '54 120w

MARTIN, ARCHIBALD EDWARD. Bridal bed murders. 239p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

54-8602

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ap 4 '54 190w

Kirkus 22:17 Ja 1 '54 70w

"The whole business is a strange and rather effective procedure." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune BK R p8 Ap 11 '54 170w

"A trifle long and slow, it's still a highly rewarding book, with as unusual and well-realized a cast of characters (including a Bearded Lady and a superb Fat Man) as you could ask, and an odd blend of bitter naturalism and quiet humor that gives it a savor quite its own." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 18 '54 90w

"Really fine characterization plus the background makes this one noteworthy." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 25 '54 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 20w

MARTIN, JOHN BARTLOW. Break down the walls; American prisons: present, past, and future. 310p $3.50; pa 50c Ballantine

365 Prisons—U.S.

54-8214

"Mr. Martin gives a brief history of prisons since their inception 150 years ago. He describes in detail the riot at Jackson Prison in 1952, the principals involved, not only the rioters but also the top brass, the political involvements, personnel, and ineptness of management. He also discusses riots in other prisons. He contrasts the Federal prisons with the various state prisons, and observes that prisons are not the answer to our crime problem." Sat R

Booklist 50:444 Jl 15 '54

Reviewed by J. R. Perkins

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 22 '54 340w

Reviewed by Stafford Derby

Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 22 '54 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 Ag '54

Kirkus 22:260 Ap 1 '54 170w

"Recommended for general and special collections." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:980 My 15 '54 210w

"If 'Break Down the Walls' is fast, eye-catching journalism, it is also cogent and eloquent writing. Mr. Martin has studied his subject for a long time, and he knows it well." John Lardner

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 6 '54 650w

Reviewed by Croswell Bowen

N Y Times p7 My 30 '54 700w

"In spite of some glaring errors and an inability to see shadings, Martin's is a good book. It is a good book because it has a quality of honesty and sincerity." D. C. Rigg

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p23 Je 2 '54 650w

Reviewed by W. M. Wallack

Sat R 37:21 My 22 '54 350w

Wis Lib Bul 50:172 Jl '54

MARTIN, LAWRENCE, and MARTIN, SYLVIA (PASS). Standard guide to Mexico and the Caribbean [maps by Grace James]. 623p $4.95 Funk

972 [917.2] Mexico—Description and travel. Caribbean area—Description and travel

53-10789

"Complete, detailed survey of opportunities for travel and recreation in the sun countries by an experienced, zestful team. Currency exchange chart." (Bookmark) Detailed list of contents; no index.

Booklist 50:257 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:105 F '54 20w

"At last a trustworthy guide to the tourist meccas of Mexico and the Caribbean islands. The authors, well seasoned travelers, take each resort apart and point out its virtues and drawbacks. They describe the food [when it's awful they say so], rates for hotel rooms, the service [if any], points of interest, shopping and drinking tips, and what to avoid." R. L. B.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 My 2 '54 70w

"Illustrated with maps, this will take care of many vacations and should find a readymade market, as well as a long term one."

+ Kirkus 21:689 O 1 '53 160w

"An excellent guide." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:633 Ap 1 '54 50w

"Its shopping guides, in particular, are amazing; women travelers are sure to drool over them." V. L. Warren

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 17 '54 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 3 '54 70w

"A solid, catch-all guide to the Caribbean has been a long time overdue, but the need has finally been met by Lawrence and Sylvia Martin in 'The Standard Guide to Mexico and the Caribbean.'" H. S.

+ Sat R 37:48 F 13 '54 280w

MARTIN, MARTHA. Home on the bear's domain [Book title: Home in the bear's domain]. 246p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

5 or 42 Frontier and pioneer life—Alaska 54-12507

"A successor to O Rugged Land of Gold [Book Review Digest 1953] is not quite as restricted and continues after the death of Donnas (the baby of the first book) as the Martins live on an island in Southeastern Alaska. The grandeur of the wilderness here is just a dress for what is largely a story of their 'part-time' children; Pace for whom they waited many years, until she crossed from Yugoslavia. Lamar, a fairly troublesome adolescent; Mary, their sister's five year old; Billy, a miner's son, and then his brother; and finally little Frankie, three, another miner's child." Kirkus

Booklist 51:80 O 15 '54

Reviewed by Stewart Holbrook
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 26 '54
147w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth
Christian Science Monitor p11 S 30 '54
147w

"The challenge of living the hard way, home-styled for a woman's audience." Kirkus 22:467 J1 15 '54 160w

"A remarkable story of courage and great-heartedness required for life in the wilderness, and of how Martha admirably met the challenge. Of special appeal to women." R. W. Emerson

Library J 79:1898 Ag '54 140w

"Most of all it is the story of a woman who met hardship and privation and disaster, and most difficult of all, the rejection of love, with courage and dignity and faith in the goodness of life. Martha Martin does not tell us these things about herself in her quiet account of the long Alaskan years, but they are here for any one to read—particularly anyone in need of the raw elements of courage with which Mrs. Martin is so wonderfully endowed." Margaret Horton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 28 '54
147w

"Without using any fancy literary tricks, Martha Martin reveals herself as a fine, wise and honest woman whom it is a pleasure to turn through the pages of her book." L. D. Kirk

N Y Times p43 S 26 '54 360w

Reviewed by R. P. Corsini
Sat R 37:53 N 6 '54 250w

Springfield Republican p9C S 19 '54 110w

MARTIN, MICHAEL, and GELBER, LEON. 1952. New dictionary of American history. 385p $2.00 Philosophical lib.

PRM U.S.—History—Dictionaries 52-14539

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"In a work of this nature, in which the exercise of selection is important, there are bound to be omissions, some intentional and some not. There is an entry under Hollywood but not Los Angeles, one under Detroit but not Baltimore or Cleveland. References are made to an article, the Department of Defense, under both Army, Department of and National Security Act, but no entry appears under either Defense, Department of, or Department of Defense. There are evidences of careless editing or omission. It is recommended for libraries and individuals who cannot afford the more comprehensive Dictionary of American Biography and do not have sufficient biographical material."

Subscription Bks Bul 24:71 O '53 900w

MARTIN, ROBERT LEE. Tears for the bride. 222p $2.50 Dodd 54-5707

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 F 7 '54
147w

"Mr. Martin works in a small span of time and crams it tight with incident, keeping one happily breathless most of the time." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 21 '54 120w

"Counterpoint of violence (starting with murder by means of a hunting 'accident') and bucolic peace make for good underplayed tension among likable and interesting people."

N Y Times p32 F 14 '54 40w

"Readable and decent." L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 28 '54
80w

"Agreeable." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 20w

MARTIN, ROBERT LEE. Widow and the web. 217p $2.75 Dodd 54-10579

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 29 '54
20w

"Mr. Martin allows Bennett a rather young bachelor's susceptibility for purposes of conventional titillation and admits a vein of cosmic brooding more conventional than telling. But his adroit use of an unusual milieu here, as before makes fresh excitement." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 29 '54
130w

"Robert Martin has the rare quality of getting better with every book, and The Widow and the Web, his fourth, places him very close to Bart Spicer among the humanizers of the hard-boiled private eye story." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p20 Ag 29 '54 90w

"Interesting factory background, literate and agreeable style as always." L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 12 '54
60w

"Grade A." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:37 S 18 '54 20w

MARTIN, WHITNEY, and MCCALLUM, JOHN. How you can play Little league baseball [pref. by Peter J. McGovern; introd. by Ford C. Frick]. 167p il $2.75 Prentice-Hall

796.357 Baseball 54-7752

Contents: It's your game! Choosing your position: Batting; Pitching; Catching; First base; Second base; Third base; Shortstop; The outfield; How to keep fit; The umpires; Care of equipment; Sportsmanship; After Little league—what? Index.

Booklist 50:425 J1 1 '54

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 9 '54
90w

Kirkus 22:115 F 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by Irvin Marsh
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 6 '54
50w

Reviewed by David Dempsey
N Y Times p16 J1 18 '54 30w

MARUYAMA, MICHIO. Anatahan; tr. with a foreword by Younghill Kang. 206p il $3.50 Hermitage

940.543 Anatahan (island). World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Japanese 54-8524

"Anatahan is a small volcanic island in the central Marianas about sixty miles north of Saipan. In 1944 two Japanese ships the S. S. Hyosuke towing the crippled S. S. Akebono landed there with a group of Japanese officers and men who remained on the island until 1951. This is author's personal account of those years. Food supplies ran low, the island was bombed by American planes and discord and intrigue developed among the small group—largely over the one woman on the island, the wife of one of them." Library J

Booklist 50:355 My 15 '54

"A stark story that is a sincere, if laboured, picture of man in dire circumstances."

Kirkus 22:254 Ap 1 '54 220w

"This book has been a best seller in Japan, and is important to us as one of the first Japanese works giving the Japanese picture of World War II to be published here. Highly recommended for all libraries." E. S. Brown
+ Library J 79:768 Ap 15 '54 210w

"If any non-fiction book more bizarre both in style and content has come out of World War II, this reviewer has not encountered it."

Marcus Duffield
N Y Herald Tribune Bk p2 Ag 8 '54 650w

"The author, one of the twenty men who survived and surrendered to the Americans in 1951, describes the experience in a delicately shaded style, and his book is an astonishing and revealing document."

+ New Yorker 30:142 My 8 '54 200w

"'Anatahan' is one of the most remarkable books to come from the Pacific war. As is true of Remarque's 'All Quiet on the Western Front,' its universal qualities transcend national ideals. After some of the more gory tales are forgotten, it is likely that this simple story of elemental human emotions will be read and enjoyed." G. A. Barker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 18 '54 370w

Sat R 37:38 Ag 14 '54 390w

MARVIN, PHILIP R. Top-management and research; with an introd. by Harry A. Toulmin, jr. 120p il $5 Res. press, inc, 137 N. Perry st, Dayton 2, Ohio

658.57 Management. Industrial research 53-7591

"Approaching industrial research as a top management responsibility and as a major determinant of a company's future profits, the author discusses its history, management's role in it, program evaluation criteria, and research contracting." Management R

"The reviewer does not consider this book an important addition to the literature on research management. It contains relatively little new material and may do harm if taken literally by an uninitiated reader. Lack of an index impairs its usefulness as a reference work."

— Chem & Eng N 31:5390 D 28 '53 900w

"In view of its brevity, this book cannot be considered an exhaustive treatment of the subject."

Management R 42:560 S '53 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:14 Ja '54

MARX, ARTHUR. Life with Groucho. 310p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Marx, Groucho 54-9802

The son of Groucho Marx writes of life with his father. The book reviews his life on and off the stage from the time he started out on his career to the present. Index.

Booklist 51:150 D 1 '54

Reviewed by Larry Wolters

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 21 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:526 Ag 1 '54 170w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 79:2462 D 15 '54 20w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 N 16 '54 120w

"The author is Groucho's obviously very devoted son. He has written an extended profile which is lively and readable, and full of stories, yet in places rather thin."

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:626 N 13 '54 270w

"Many sons of distinguished men have written biographies of their fathers, but none has done so with a greater combination of affection and irreverence than the scion of Julius Henry Marx, affectionately known to movie lovers, quiz addicts and sophisticates alike as Groucho. If at times young Marx's style is highly reminiscent of his old man's, who can find fault with him for seeking to imitate so inimitable a parent?" Arthur Mayer

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 7 '54 950w

"Seldom does a man read a book twice and like it both times. I did. Apart from the show-business angle, there's the home-life stuff, which is still better. . . . All in all, I believe this is a great book, an account of an admirably comic and human father by a dutiful son, but a son who is dutiful in a jolly way."

John McNulty

+ N Y Times p16 N 7 '54 700w

New Yorker 30:189 N 6 '54 260w

Reviewed by Jim Walls

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 21 '54 650w

"Throughout, Marx himself does his best to be entertaining when he isn't quoting Groucho, and he does fairly well, too. However, 'Life with Groucho' might have been even funnier if Groucho's life had been written by someone with a true comic flair. Groucho is a lot funnier than the book." Bernard Kalb

— Sat R 37:31 N 6 '54 400w

Reviewed by Emanuel Litvinoff

Spec p683 N 26 '54 500w

MASANI, MINOCHEHER RUSTOM. Communist party of India; a short history; introduction by Guy Wint; issued under the auspices of the Institute of Pacific relations. 302p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

329.954 Communist party of India 54-14347

"Author, prominent in Indian politics, analyzes the history and actions of the Communist Party of India from its inception to the present time. In discussing the Party's activities, he mentions many of its leaders and their actions." Library J

Current Hist 27:325 N '54 300w

"The tone of the book is calm and rational which together with good documentation, makes it an effective and useful study. . . . Recommended for research collections." Donald Wasson

— Library J 79:1586 S 15 '54 130w

"Not every book needs an index, and to deplore that a book lacks one is often more formal than real. But Mr Masani's book is so necessary for reference—now and in future years—that it was a mistake to let it appear without this mechanism for looking things up."

Guy Wint

— Manchester Guardian p9 N 23 '54 600w

"For all its historical approach, the book is no mere academic exercise. In the best sense, it is a powerful polemical weapon in a battle for the minds of India's political leadership. Others more removed from India will also find stimulation in this excellent book, but Masani has less interest in the general reading public of the West than for his own countrymen."

R. L. Park

— Pacific Affairs 27:380 D '54 1300w

"Mr. Masani's study is called 'definitive' by his publishers (who should certainly, therefore, have insisted on an index). It is not on the scale of Borkenau's chronicle of Communism in Europe, but it breaks new ground in an arresting manner. In drawing attention to the methods of Communism before power is obtained rather than to the contents of Communism afterwards, it offers challenging object-lessons." Francis Watson

+ Spec p373 S 24 '54 1100w

"As Mr. Guy Wint remarks in his introduction, this book is really indispensable to anybody concerned with the prospects in India. It is a complete and well-documented history of the Communist Party, which sets out with clarity the party's past record and present position. Nothing like it has appeared before; and it is safe to say that it is unlikely to be superseded."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p651 O 15 '54 350w

MASON, BERNARD STERLING. Woodsman-ship; drawings by Frederic H. Kock. 90p $1.75 Barnes, A.S.

796.54 Camps and camping. Lumbering 54-5406

A guide to the proper handling of axes, wedges, and saws and other implements used in felling trees, moving logs, sawing, splitting and hewing wood. Much of the material appeared in The Book for Junior Woodsmen (Book Review Digest 1945).

Booklist 50:361 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:236 Jl '54 10w

"A most attractive book, each detail splendidly illustrated by sketches and photographs." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:862 My 1 '54 40w

Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 21 '54 30w

MASON, CORA CATHERINE. Socrates: the man who dared to ask. 165p il $2.75 Beacon press

B or 92 Socrates 53-10318

Presents the few known facts of Socrates' life in a biography for young people from fifteen to twenty. The author is a classicist and teacher.

"Perhaps because she wrote this biography primarily for teen-age readers, Miss Mason has brought her subject extraordinarily alive—in a way that should have meaning to readers of every age and degree of sophistication." Robert Peel

+ Christian Science Monitor D ■ '53 380w

"Highly recommended." F. K. Jones

+ Library J 79:151 Ja 15 '54 80w

MASON, FRANCIS VAN WYCK. See Mason, V.

MASON, HENRIETTA. White orchid. 276p $3.50 Longmans

53-10841

Mary Gray, a New Zealand girl, orphaned at eighteen, takes a position as governess to the six half-caste daughters of a French planter in the New Hebrides. Her vicarage upbringing is at a disadvantage in her new life, but Mary has courage. When her employer and his wife both die in a fire Mary stays to help her young charges.

Booklist 50:169 D 15 '53

Kirkus 21:497 Ag 1 '53 180w

"Good magazine fiction recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 78:1532 S 15 '53 50w

"Miss Mason, who seems greatly at home in the South Sea setting, writes with a simple and romantic grace that is admirably suited to the tale she tells." Margaret Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 10 '54 290w

"For a young girl of 20 Mary is one of the most prissy heroines we have had since the turn of the century. Still, anyone interested in a little-known part of the world may enjoy the author's word-painting." J. P. Quehl

N Y Times p38 N 15 '53 210w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 10 '54 50w

Wis Lib Bul 50:32 Ja '54

MASON, HOWARD. Fit as a filly; il. by John Ruge. 191p $3 Morrow

54-10306

Humorous satire mixing race horses, English politics and atomic secrets in a story of mystery and international intrigue.

Booklist 51:110 N 1 '54

Kirkus 22:599 S 1 '54 80w

"The chase is brisk, the course various and the mockery (which reaches to Ministers, MPs and PMs) cheerful. All in all an unaccustomed and pleasant frolic, decked out drolly in John Ruge's sketches." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 7 '54 40w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 30w

MASON, HOWARD. Red bishop. 251p $2.75 Mill

54-5077

Mystery story.

Kirkus 21:722 N 1 '53 70w

"The bishop, by the way, is a member of a chess set, not of the party, and chess is rather weirdly involved in the whole proceedings which might be described as pleasantly tipsy." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 31 '54 120w

"The solution to these strange events is disappointing and crammed with improbabilities and inconsistencies. But half the book, at least, is first-rate." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p26 Ja 10 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ja 31 '54 60w

"Dizzy but diverting." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:39 Mr 6 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p10C Mr 7 '54 80w

"An exciting yarn, told in sound and amusing language, is marred by some thoughtless lapses."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p217 Ap 3 '53 110w

MASON, MARGARET, pseud. and MASON, CHARLES, pseud. How do you build a house? il. by Jon Nielsen. 60p $2 Sterling

690 Building—Juvenile literature 53-13431

A story of how two small boys watched a house being built. Johnny Drake's father is the contractor who is building the house and thru him and the friendly workmen the boys learn about each step, from the digging of the cellar to the final touches of interior painting and decorating.

Kirkus 22:2 Ja 1 '54 70w

"Not a must but can be recommended as a good addition in its field for ages 6-9." E. T. Dobbins

Library J 79:150 Ja 15 '54 40w

N Y Times p24 F 21 '54 120w

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE. Sugarbush family; il. by Zhenya Gay. 137p $2 Macmillan (N Y)

54-12842

A happy family story for ages eight to twelve. It is about the Kings, "the sugarbush family," whose family solidarity and love overcomes all difficulties.

Booklist 51:156 D 1 '54

+ Kirkus 22:435 Jl 15 '54 120w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 14 '54 60w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 30w

MASON, PHILIP (PHILIP WOODRUFF, pseud.). Men who ruled India; 2v; v. 1, The founders of modern India. 402p il maps $5 St Martins

954 India—History

(54-9061)

"The first part of a two-volume work on 'The Men Who Ruled India,' this begins with the founding of the East India Company in 1600 and goes through the Sepoy Mutiny in 1858. It is history combined with biography for it is interspersed with biographical sketches of men both obscure and famous, who the author feels are representative of a particular aspect of his subject." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"This is a remarkable and delightful book, remarkable because of the extraordinary insight with which a complex and controversial subject is treated, delightful because of a felicitous and lively style which makes it a pleasure to read. . . Mistakes in fact in Mr. Woodruff's work, such as the attribution of too saintly a character to Charles Grant, are extraordinarily few. His touch is naturally less sure on those aspects of his theme which are not close to his own background and experience." Holden Furber

+ Am Hist R 60:109 O '54 750w

"Characterized by pride in British achievement modified by a balanced appraisal, this has a definite place in the growing literature on the India we are coming to know politically as well as culturally."

+ Kirkus 22:48 Ja 15 '54 230w

Reviewed by J. W. Rogers

Library J 79:1057 Je 1 '54 120w

"It is painstaking and is nevertheless written in a lively way. Mr Woodruff succeeds better than most of his predecessors in making real and interesting the problems which the British administrators faced at different periods; and about their manners and social life he writes vividly, even though he does not add anything new to the works of Dr Spear and Mr Kincaid." Guy Wint

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 22 '54 500w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 18 '54 100w

"This sweeping backward survey is not a painstaking history, but it does impart a competent appreciation of the British era and thereby contributes a great deal to understanding present-day India. The interested reader will look forward to the second half of this grand adventure." Robert Trumbull

+ N Y Times p10 My 30 '54 500w

"From the start his book, 'The Founders of Modern India,' carries authority. The author's distinguished record in the Indian civil service, extending over almost two decades, has given him an affectionate understanding of the country, and he has by nature a keen and articulate sense of the past. Because he knows at first hand the problems he is describing, he handles the founders as if they were his contemporaries." W. B. Willcox

+ Sat R 37:17 Ap 17 '54 800w

Reviewed by C. H. Philips

Spec p104 Ja 22 '54 900w

"A work written at this time for this purpose has inevitably a valedictory note about it, and this circumstance no doubt strengthens Mr. Woodruff's resolve to show the Englishmen in India at their best. . . His method of treatment is inevitably more illuminating for the later than the earlier periods. The first period is no more than an introduction to what follows. Neither its personalities nor its problems of organization yield much that is new to the author's methods of examination. . . Nevertheless, he contributes some acute commentary, for instance on the permanent settlement in Bengal, and he brings out for this period some of the strands which were to be knit together in the future."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p257 Ap 23 '54 3100w

MASON, STEPHEN FINNEY. Main currents of scientific thought; a history of the sciences [Eng title: History of the sciences]. (Life of science lib) 520p $5 Abelard-Schuman

509 Science—History

53-3983

"A history of the sciences which shows how man's construction of theoretical worlds and practical explorations of the physical world have prospered and then stagnated in each of the civilizations which have flourished on the land mass of Europe and Asia. The author traces the routes whereby the scientific achievement of one society was handed on to another and indicates that the specific characteristics of a civilization influence the science which was assimilated and advanced in that society." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:197 Ja 15 '54

"Here is an excellent history. . . More unified and continuous than Dampier's well-known work, it integrates scientific history into general philosophical, religious and cultural history." Benjamin Hunt

+ Cath World 179:234 Je '54 340w

Chem & Eng N 32:967 Mr 8 '54 30w

"This is on the whole an excellent account of the history of science from the earliest times up to the present day. It is clearly and interestingly written, and in general accurate, though the number of trifling errors is perhaps unduly large." Herbert Dingle

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 11 '53 300w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ja 31 '54 60w

"Stephen Mason [is] a 31-year-old British scientist who has lectured on the subject for six years at Oxford University. In 'Main Currents of Scientific Thought,' his first work, the scientific past comes alive as it does in no other recent study." John Pfeiffer

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 14 '54 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 29 '54 280w

"Dr. Mason's intention in writing this book was to produce a lucid, 500-page survey presenting the 'main currents of scientific thought.' . . This was hardly a practical programme for a man still in his twenties. One is accordingly not surprised to find that he has had time only to throw together a collection of dry ingredients. To his credit, he has taken care not to confine his selection to the West, or to the physical, or even the pure sciences. China and Baghdad, politics and religion, medicine and paper-making all have their place in the mixture. For this reason the book, being well-indexed, may be found useful as a work of reference by amateurs of the subject." Stephen Toulmin

Spec p605 N 20 '53 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p830 D 25 '53 700w

MASON, VAN WYCK. Blue hurricane, by F. Van Wyck Mason. 307p $3.75 Lippincott

54-9417

"The river war of 1861-1862 is the theater in which Matthew Hovey learns the truth about himself. Maddened and vengeful when his mother's death reveals his illegitimacy, he tries to kill his real father, wealthy Josiah Cosby, runs away on a construction gang and, partnered with a cocky ex-pilot, scrambles for the gravy in military supplies and running contraband. The unexpected arrival of Phoebe Whidden, whom he had loved in Maine, shocks him into abandoning his traitorous activities, sends him into the engagement at Fort Henry in which, unsupported by troops, a naval flotilla was responsible for the surrender of the fort, and takes him to the siege of Fort Donelson where he is wounded. His return home, to flaunt the proof of his legitimacy and to discredit his half brother and sister, inspires him with pity rather than retribution and his knowledge remains his secret." Kirkus

Booklist 51:133 N 15 '54

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 24 '54 280w

"The plot indulges in melodramatics while the story of the 'revolving scrap heaps' and their war on the water is highlighted in all its incredible achievement and another panel of Civil War history receives its due. Busting."

Kirkus 22:547 Ag 15 '54 210w

"If at times Mr. Mason overshoots the mark in an effort to get an effect, there is much to be said for his descriptions of naval battles in the River War. . . As always, this lusty author has laid on his colors vividly. . . Even

MASON, VAN WYCK—Continued

"when the melodrama threatens to get out of hand, the reader can't help feeling that he has a front seat on the historical bandwagon; and, even when the pace is most frantic, one feels sure that Mr. Mason knows just where his story is going, and why." W. B. Hayward
+ — N Y Times p42 O 24 '54 650w

"As in all his historical novels, Mr. Mason manages to weave a first-rate adventure yarn and a mass of factual data into a cloth of good fiction." A. N. C.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 7 '54 200w

MASON, VAN WYCK. Winter at Valley Forge; II. by Harper Johnson. (Landmark bks) 180p $1.50 Random house

973.3 U.S.—History—Revolution—Juvenile literature 53-6258

A slightly fictionalized account of the winter Washington's troops spent at Valley Forge (1777-78) marked by cold and hunger and near despair but also by loyalty and pride. For boys and girls in the early teens. There is a school edition entitled Washington at Valley Forge, $1.68, Hale, E. M.

Booklist 50:173 D 15 '53

Chicago Sunday Tribune p59 N 15 '53 10w

Horn Bk 30:107 Ap '54 90w

Kirkus 21:537 Ag 15 '53 120w

Library J 78:1858 O 15 '53 40w

"The mixture of fact and fiction is readable but spotty." E. L. Buell
N Y Times p28 F 14 '54 40w

MASSINGHAM, HUGH. Wandering eye. 248p $3.50 Sloane 54-5212

Tale of a middle-aged English bachelor who, on a trip to Southern France, stops off in a French village where years before he had indulged in two love affairs. He finds again his old loves and adds a third with disastrous results for himself.

Booklist 50:222 F 1 '54

"A rather thin, light, and uncertain novel."
Richard Sullivan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 17 '54 260w

"Massingham writes with wit and acuity, but the way of the transgressor here is rather uninviting."

Kirkus 21:714 N 1 '53 180w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 79:146 Ja 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p4 J1 10 '53 170w
Nation 178:389 My 1 '54 220w

"Excellent. . . In my view by far its author's best novel. Mr. Massingham's hero, the selfish old sensualist Mr. Brockhurst, is well conceived and sharply observed." Walter Allen
+ New Statesman & Nation 46:82 J1 18 '53 300w

"From beginning to end, Massingham maintains a high level of polished humor whose barbs are unerringly directed against a smug, self-satisfied bedroom hunter." Rose Feld
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 10 '54 700w

"The Wandering Eye' is a well-told, often humorous tale, unique in concept and authoritative in its scene-sketching; but, for one reader, anyway, there isn't a great deal of excitement in the account of an aged lecher's efforts to bundle up with a warren of garrulous cronies of easy persuasion." R. L.
N Y Times p22 Ja 17 '54 400w

"Mr. Massingham thoughtfully explores the reactions of the mincing roué to a segment of his personal history, and makes his impasse into a highly entertaining story." Martin Levin
+ Sat R 37:64 F 20 '54 150w

"Mr. Massingham is a most witty and entertaining novelist with a true respect for human feelings, a civilised writer." Stevie Smith

+ Spec p110 J1 24 '53 290w

Springf'd Republican p5D F 21 '54 60w

"Something of the same doubt about a book's conception must be noted in relation to The Wandering Eye. Would Mr. Brockhurst have forgotten the happenings in the little French village that meant so much to him years ago. . . It does not seem likely. Yet once this initial improbability has been accepted Mr. Massingham writes with freshness and amiable malice of his amorist's return to the past, and fills in the details of French village life with assurance and delicacy."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p473 J1 24 '53 330w

MASTERS, DAVID. Epics of salvage; wartime feats of the marine salvage men. 234p $3.50 Little

940.545 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. Salvage 54-8280

Stories of marine salvage during World war II. There are accounts of clearing port facilities from London to Bombay. Partial contents: Refloating the Georgic; The Port of London's ordeal; The Suez Canal crisis; At bay in Crete; Tales of tankers; Trouble on Tyne; Clearing Cape Cod canal.

Booklist 50:448 J1 15 '54

Bookmark 13:236 J1 '54 20w

Reviewed by Richard Philbrick
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 15 '54 70w

Kirkus 22:282 Ap 15 '54 100w

"Will appeal especially to sea story fans and to armchair strategists looking for background on the war years. Recommended for the large public library." C. R. Gough

+ Library J 79:1223 Je 15 '54 100w

"This book is a skillful combing of the salvage incidents of the last fifteen years for the stories that bear re-telling. Mr. Masters presents his material with clear writing and keen suspense." Alfred Stanford

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 J1 4 '54 600w

"The author of a dozen other successful books on marine subjects, he knows how to tell an exciting tale. This 'Epics of Salvage' will make first-rate summer reading for a lot of men who like fast, factual reportage and action along with it." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 J1 7 '54 500w

"Simply, even awkwardly written in some places, 'Epics of Salvage' bristles with fascinating technical lore and breathes authenticity in every sentence. It is good that printed history has caught up with the salvage men and divers who toiled in unnoticed bravery to keep ships afloat and channels clear wherever the enemy struck." T. E. Cooney
+ Sat R 37:15 J1 17 '54 700w

Springf'd Republican p12D J1 18 '54 400w

MASTERS, JOHN. Bhowani junction. 394p $3.75 Viking 54-5226

A novel of modern India in which the heroine is Victoria Jones, a young Anglo-Indian, who is confused by her racial status. She tries to identify herself as an Indian, as English, and Anglo-Indian, before she finally makes her decision.

"Occasionally the author overdoes it. K. P. Roy, the Communist leader, is credited with so much villainy that at the end he becomes a figure out of melodrama. Patrick is too much the blunderer, and when he pushes Birkhe under the train, the act is so implausible that death loses its sting. But when you have so many riotous colors to deal with, it is no wonder if some of them get too thick. This is a spectacular story." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic 193:78 Ap '54 950w

Booklist 50:229; 297 F 15 '54; Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 179:395 Ag '54 220w

Reviewed by Percy Wood
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 11 '54
600w

Kirkus 22:43 Ja 15 '54 260w

"Skillful portrayal of character, racial animosities and Indian life, and full of exciting incident. Some scathing pictures of British Army officers. But plot too complicated, becomes melodramatic, and finally drags. . . For adult readers." R. W. Henderson

+ — Library J 79:551 Mr 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel
Manchester Guardian p4 My 11 '54
80w

Reviewed by Giles Romilly
New Statesman & Nation 47:709 My
29 '54 450w

"A skillful and exciting tale which is probably going to enthrall a great number of people." Margaret Parton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 28
'54 700w

"Certainly no Indian novelist I know of has been able to write about his own country with the immediacy and vividness of a John Masters. This Indian-born Englishman (now a naturalized American) knows India, its people and its landscapes like his own right hand." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 28 '54 950w

New Yorker 30:129 Mr 27 '54 80w

"'Bhowani Junction,' for all of its lively and harrowing scenes, has a great deal more to offer than an excellent and exciting plot. Mr. Masters has managed to present the scene of a harassed city in the midst of a revolution and create a score of memorable Indians, Anglo-Indians, and Britishers. It is an accomplishment of which the author may well be proud." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R 37:18 Ap 3 '54 450w

"If the complacency and insolence of some of the English characters make one writhe, Mr. Masters extenuates nothing on the other side: and we feel, throughout the story, the agonised subterranean heaves and struggles for equilibrium of a country staggered by the attempt to graft upon it a way of life wholly alien from its own. There is no space here to go into the deeper implications of Mr. Masters' magnificent story, but . . . he has added to our knowledge not only of India but of human nature." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p662 My 28 '54 600w

Time 63:98 Mr 29 '54 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p357 Je 4 '54
200w

MATES, BENSON. Stoic logic. 148p pa $2.25
Univ. of Calif. press
164 Logic

"The aim of this study is to present a true description of the logic of the Old Stoa. It repeats most of Lukasiewicz's published conclusions on the subject and offers additional evidence for them. It also (1) describes the Stoic semantical theory and compares it with certain similar modern theories, (2) attempts to give a better account of the heretofore misunderstood Diodorean implication, (3) points out the Stoic version of the conditionalization principle, and (4) discusses the contention of the Stoics that their propositional logic was complete. In appendices it offers and justifies new translations of some important fragments pertaining to Stoic logic." Intro

"The author of this excellent dissertation modestly describes it as a confirmation and elaboration of the investigation of Stoic logic published by Jan Lukasiewicz in 1935. This indeed it is, but beyond this it contains a wealth of material not dealt with by Lukasiewicz, and some important new interpretations of Stoic logical doctrine." E. A. Moody

+ J Philos 51:69 Ja 21 '54 2400w

"The whole essay is impressive in its clarity and thoroughness. Professor Mates combines classical scholarship with logical skill and a knowledge of modern logic. He has therefore been able to clear away mistakes of earlier classical scholars, especially Prantl and Zeller, and he has been able to add a little to the pioneer work of Lukasiewicz. In short, he has probably brought out all that can be reliably known or reasonably conjectured from the available sources, and the present essay will no doubt be the definitive one for some time to come."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:437 D '53 240w

MATHEWS, PAUL WENTWORTH. You can teach music; a handbook for the classroom teacher. 178p il $3.75 Dutton

372.878 [780.72] School music—Instruction and study 53-6092

"A book designed as an introduction to music teaching for the classroom teacher, and written with the intention of setting forth some of the practical ways in which music may be used with increasing effectiveness by the teacher and for the benefit of the children—a book which does not demand any considerable accumulation of technical knowledge and musical skills as a prerequisite to either the enjoyment or the teaching of music." (Foreword) Index.

Booklist 50:135 D 1 '53

"For some time there has been a great need for a book like You Can Teach Music to help the many teachers who, with little or no experience or background, are trying to teach music in elementary-school classrooms. The major premise of the book is that children will enjoy music if only given a chance. . . It is important that teachers, even though they may be untrained in music, realize that there are many kinds of musical experiences that they can give their pupils. This book is designed to help the classroom teacher to discover some of these valuable experiences and also to make use of them." Georgia Lane

+ El School J 54:482 Ap '54 1000w

"This book should do much to inspire elementary education majors in college to a new interest in learning as much as possible about music before they start to teach. It should help arouse an active interest in music among elementary teachers now in the professional teaching field." M. V. Hood

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:467 Je '54
550w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 24 '54
140w

MATTHEWS, MARK STANLEY. Guide to community action; a sourcebook for citizen volunteers. 434p $4 Harper

301.36 [323] Community life. Citizenship
54-6447

"Mr. Matthews's fine guide will be extremely helpful to members of volunteer groups working for better communities, schools, government, and other worthy causes. He gives helpful suggestions on how to determine needs, offers workable procedures, and presents programs and project ideas based on reports of citizen achievement in the major community-service areas. Part I is devoted to attracting and holding members, making meetings more interesting, financing activities, developing a continuing leadership, and receiving and maintaining community approval. Part II describes the major fields of group interest. There are excellent end-of-chapter lists of advisory and material assistance that are available from hundreds of sources." Library J

Booklist 51:5 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:34 N '54 20w

"A fine aid for civic groups on all levels."
+ Kirkus 22:221 Mr 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1055 Je 1 '54 160w

Spring'd Republican p12D Jl 18 '54
90w

MATTHEWS, RONALD. Death of the Fourth republic. 318p $5 Praeger

944.082 France—Economic conditions.
France—Politics and government 54-9112

A survey of post-war politics in France. "A good part of the material in this book is drawn from the author's personal knowledge, accumulated as Paris correspondent between 1944 and 1953, first of the London Daily Herald, then of The Birmingham Post. The title was suggested by an article which appeared in the Terre Humaine in the spring of 1952, and the theme was first sketched out in an article in World Review in June of that year." (Pref)

Cath World 180:vi D '54 110w

"Mr. Matthews has been for many years correspondent for London newspapers in Paris. While it is not possible, or necessary, to agree with all of his conclusions, his facts are verifiable and his observations those of a trained and responsible reporter. It may be said that many of his arguments could be examined with a greater sense of open-mindedness by the reader if they were not quite so angry. But his anger is, after all, that of a man who has loved too well the people among whom he has lived many years and who has suffered deep disillusion in watching and recording their monstrous failures and frustrations." Neil Martin

+ — Christian Science Monitor p7 D 21 '54 650w

"As an analysis, this will interest the serious-minded reader, and the student who will come away from it with a better understanding of contemporary French crises. Recommended for medium and large public libraries, and college and university libraries." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1892 O 15 '54 160w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Nation 179:340 O 16 '54 20w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 21 '54 80w

"The book is lucid in its passion, and therefore continually readable whatever one's own picture of the subject may be. It contains, moreover, the most telling portrait of de Gaulle that I have come across—sympathetic, critical, and humanly plausible." Francis Watson

+ Spec p596 My 14 '54 450w

"The good foreign correspondent has something vital to contribute to the study of contemporary history. He has a sense of atmosphere, an intuitive understanding of the drift of events, a first-hand eye-witness knowledge of political forces. But just because he works so close to history in the making, he may at times neglect the larger trends. Mr. Matthews's book shows both these qualities and these defects."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p195 Mr 26 '54 950w

MATTHIESSEN, PETER. Race rock. 306p $3.50 Harper

54-6020

A study in the growth to maturity of three wealthy young men and two young women. The scene is the New England coast; the time span from 1940 to 1952.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 193:74 Je '54 270w

Booklist 50:230; 297 F 15 '54; Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by Robert Molloy

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 11 '54 410w

Kirkus 22:44 Ja 15 '54 190w

"Recommended." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:551 Mr 15 '54 160w

"'Race Rock' is a strong novel which suffers from technical defects. It might have been stronger as a long short story."

Nation 178:312 Ap 10 '54 200w

"Mr. Matthiessen's absorbing first novel, apart from being a good, well-paced story, offers the reader some depth and breadth of insight. For one thing, 'Race Rock' is a vivid but complex study of evolving character; for another, it is a narrative of character set against a variously changed and changing social background. Mr. Matthiessen has succeeded in making from many strands of reality a close-textured book." Gene Baro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 4 '54 800w

"As one of the founders and editors of the lively Paris Review, Peter Matthiessen has already distinguished himself among the youngest literary generation. Now with his first novel, 'Race Rock,' he assumes immediate place as a writer of disciplined craft, perception, imaginative vigor and serious temperament. . . Mr. Matthiessen presents his material with dramatic power and acute verisimilitude. He commands also a gift of flexible taut expression which takes wings at times into a lyricism beautifully modulated and controlled." Sylvia Berkman

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 4 '54 850w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 9 '54 650w

"Peter Matthiessen, who is a new novelist though not a new writer, intends 'Race Rock' as a story of maturing. Yet the wherefore of this maturing is not as clear to us as I think he intended it to be. Of even more importance—I am not sure what he means by maturity. . . 'Race Rock' announces a new novelist as to whose future Mr. Matthiessen will answer as he goes along." Edmund Fuller

Sat R 37:20 Ap 10 '54 500w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p9C My 2 '54 150w

Wis Lib Bul 50:137 My '54

MAUFRAIS, RAYMOND. Journey without return. 237p il $3.50 Crowell

988.2 [918.82] French Guiana—Description and travel 54-9771

In October, 1949, a young French journalist disappeared on a one-man journey to the unexplored Tumuc Humac mountains in French Guiana. He had very little money and equipment, and illness assailed him all the way. A few months later his diary and meager equipment were found by Indians, on the site of his last camp. Illustrated with photographs.

"Maufrasis has unconsciously written a dramatic document, one that should cure even the most stubborn attack of jungle wanderlust." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 21 '54 450w

"Passionate, perceptive, youthful, honest, Maufrasis sought a self-reckoning in the most demanding surroundings available to man. His journal is a legacy to all seekers."

+ Kirkus 22:523 Ag 1 '54 240w

"While the book is not real literature because of the constant wail against circumstances, the monotonous cataloging of incidents and places and the precious attitude toward those who befriended him, it is a contribution in its field, showing the French keenness of observation and deft turn of phrase, even in translation. Recommended." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1823 O 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by R. C. Lewis

N Y Times p36 D 5 '54 460w

New Yorker 30:221 N 13 '54 180w

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. Mr Maugham himself; selected by John Bee-croft. 688p $5.95 Doubleday

820.81

54-11156

Contents: Of human bondage; Four short pieces: Some novelists I have known (from The Vagrant Mood); Mr. Harrington's washing (from Ashenden); The book bag (from Ah King); El Greco (from Don Fernando); and The summing up, from A Writer's Notebook.

"There is not a word in this vast anthology of William Somerset Maugham's 'autobiographical' writings that is not to be found in other editions of his books and yet, for all that, this new volume is welcome. For one thing, it gathers between two covers virtually everything that he ever put of himself into his writings and, for another, it skims the clotted cream of that particular aspect of his work."

V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 19 '54 270w

"All in all, a symposium which enhances Mr. Maugham's reputation in high lighting phases of his work."

+ Kirkus 22:645 S 15 '54 130w

"Useful to libraries for first purchase or replacement." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:2207 N 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit

N Y Times p55 D 5 '54 50w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:31 D 4 '54 70w

MAUS, CYNTHIA PEARL, comp. The Old Testament and the fine arts; an anthology of pictures, poetry, music, and stories covering the Old Testament. 826p il $5.95 Harper

221.95 Bible. O.T.—History of biblical events. Bible. O.T.—Pictorial illustrations 54-8970

"A few years ago Miss Maus wrote and Harper published a large book on 'Christ and the fine arts.' It was received with favor by a great many people for whom it evidently met a real demand. The present work is built on the same general pattern and applies the same method to the treatment of Old Testament material. The subtitle describes it as 'an anthology of pictures, poetry, music and stories.' More specifically, the book contains '100 full-page art reproductions, 100 art interpretations, 77 hymns and interpretations, 244 poems, 63 stories.'" (Christian Century) Indexes.

Booklist 51:163 D 15 '54

"It must be admitted that there is a good deal in all these kinds of material that is not in the top grade as art, but the book will perhaps serve its purpose as an aid in religious education in home and church school better than it would if more rigorous aesthetic standards had been applied in making the selections." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 71:1433 N 24 '54 200w

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 2 '54 120w

"A most valuable source book for church and church school leaders."

+ Kirkus 22:721 O 15 '54 170w

MAUZEY, MERRITT. Cotton-farm boy; introd. by Luise Putcamp, jr [il. with 50 stone lithographs]. 79p $2.50 Abelard-Schuman

633.5 Cotton—Juvenile literature 53-10940

A series of lithographs depicting life on a Texas cotton farm half a century ago. There is brief accompanying text. The author-artist has drawn on his own childhood for these sketches.

Kirkus 22:61 F 1 '54 90w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 79:563 M 15 '54 80w

"The boy Billy carries through the brief well-written text under each picture. It is a book for art collections, and an information book for school use, from ten or eleven up. As an art book, it could have had more distinguished format and better reproduction; but at this price it may reach a wider audience of young people."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 16 '54 110w

"The book is unusual in more ways than one. Mr. Mauzey makes no concessions to the prettier conventions of juvenile books. Many of his lithographs are somber in tone yet they all have a vigor and a sense of the fullness of life which should draw a quick response from sensitive young people. It is a pleasure, incidentally, to find an artist who can write with simplicity and dignity." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p28 F 7 '54 250w

MAVES, PAUL B., ed. Church and mental health [contributors: Gene E. Bartlett, and others]. 303p $4 Scribner

253.5 [258] Mental hygiene. Psychology. Pastoral 53-12856

Fourteen authorities discuss the place of the church in developing programs of mental health. In the foreword the editor states the aims of the work: "This book is an attempt to help ministers to carry on a more adequate ministry which will foster mental health and help the mentally ill. It is an attempt to help physicians and professional welfare workers understand and use the resources of the Church for this same end. It is an attempt to foster closer cooperation between the various professions concerned with mental health." Bibliography. Index.

"This volume will undoubtedly stimulate further writing. With its excellent bibliography it will induce more reading and more profound thinking on the part of workers in the mental health field, about man's need for wholeness—spiritual, mental, physical—and about cooperative ministration toward that end." A. E. Dines

+ Am J Pub Health 44:823 Je '54 320w

"This is intended as a practical book for the Christian pastor in the many aspects of his job; as such it is not an adequate exposition of psychotherapeutic theory or practice. The other is that it leaves most of the urgent practical problems unsolved, owing both to the evasive nature of most of these and especially to the uniqueness of each individual case. But no minister who reads the work with understanding will fail to thank those who placed it in his hands." W. W. Sikes

+ Christian Century 71:825 Jl 7 '54 950w

"This is an important book, of inestimable value to those concerned with organized religion and especially to leaders seeking to make the ministry of the church altogether relevant to the deep human needs of our time." F. D. Elmer

+ J Religion 34:230 Jl '54 280w

"Some of the chapters are erudite and technical, but most of them are sufficiently practical to be of great use to those who want to be of the maximum effectiveness in their pastoral counselling."

+ Kirkus 21:626 S 1 '53 160w

"The audience addressed will receive essential, helpful, and well-rounded guidance in initiating and developing program of mental health and guidance in further reading. Recommended to libraries building up subject."

O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 78:1843 O 15 '53 130w

"The essays in 'The Church and Mental Health' are by fourteen of the most distinguished psychiatrists, psychologists and ministers in the country. Each essay is interesting and worthwhile. I was especially interested in Gotthard Booth's discussion of mental health from the standpoint of the physician." Smiley Blanton

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 3 '54 320w

"Intended 'to help ministers to carry on a more adequate ministry,' and 'to help physicians and professional welfare workers understand and use the resources of the Church,' the book is more likely to be satisfying to traditionally minded members of the clergy than to humanistically inclined members of the mental-health profession."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:66 Mr '54 280w

"Will be valuable in helping ministers to understand their responsibility to the mentally ill and in helping physicians and professional welfare workers to use and understand the resources of the church in this area."

+ Wis Lib Bul 49:250 N '53

MAXWELL, ALLEN, ed. Present danger; four essays on American freedom [by] Paul G. Hoffman [and others] foreword by Stanley Marcus. 99p $2 S.M.U. press

323.4 Liberty. Civil rights 53-12256

Four essays on the basic American freedoms: business, the press, the law, and education. "The title given to this book of essays refers to the battle for men's minds which has been in progress since the end of World War II. This struggle, early christened 'the Cold War,' has in the past few years generated a heat that has become a serious divisive force in our national life." (Foreword)

Booklist 50:195 Ja 15 '54

Foreign Affairs 32:504 Ap '54 20w

MAXWELL, ELSA. R. S. V. P.; Elsa Maxwell's own story. 326p il $5 Little

B or 92 54-8315

Autobiography of a famous party giver attached to society's International Set, who has known most of the celebrities and near-celebrities of two continents during the last three decades.

Booklist 51:130 N 15 '54

Reviewed by M. B. Snyder

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 31 '54 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

Kirkus 22:520 Ag 1 '54 210w

"This is not a book that all libraries must add but it will be in demand in rental libraries and general collections." K. T. Willis Library J 79:1586 S 15 '54 120w

"Those who rejoice in association with the famous and the infamous, however remote, however apocryphal, will have a field day with Miss Maxwell's 'R. S. V. P.' She tells her story with frankness and high spirits. She has never profited from her life among the quality, but seems to have enjoyed it tremendously." Richard Maney

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 31 '54 800w

"It is called 'R.S.V.P.' and while literary critics may reply by saying they have Read Something Very Phony, others less critically inclined may accept with pleasure this Waring Mixer of name and I-dropping." Cleveland Amory

N Y Times p6 O 24 '54 850w

New Yorker 30:203 D 11 '54 150w

"Rollicking and readable autobiography."

M. B. Robbins

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 21 '54 1100w

"It is believed that Miss Maxwell received quite a bit of help in writing her book from Stanley Frank, the magazine writer, and 'RSVP' does have a smoothness to it that Miss Maxwell's column-writing never had. For this reason the book is easy to read. The reader should be warned though when reading the book to keep it well away from the body. One of those big names might drop out of the book at any time, and fracture somebody's toe." Art Buchwald

Sat R 37:24 O 23 '54 850w

Time 64:104 N 1 '54 700w

MAYER, CHARLES L. In quest of a new ethics; tr. and with a preface by Harold A. Larrabee. 32lp $4 Beacon press

170 Ethics 54-6163

"An eminent French scientist and scholar presents his concept of true liberalism as an active, optimistic philosophy that respects equally the interests of society and the individual." (Bookmark) Index.

Reviewed by W. T. Jones

Ann Am Acad 295:183 S '54 500w

Bookmark 13:157 Ap '54 40w

"In structure, the book falls midway between a systematic essay and the aphoristic style of Nietzsche. On the whole it is of interest largely because of its open, if at times inconsistent, defense of materialism as an adequate basis for ethics and because of its decided, and decidedly emotional, antipathy to religion. . . In fine, this essay may have started out on a quest for a new ethic, but there is little to suggest that this was discovered or that what was found is better than the old." H. E. Kolbe

Christian Century 71:1042 S 1 '54 900w

Reviewed by J. A. Torres

Ethics 65:73 O '54 290w

"The themes of the [author's] earlier books reappear in the present volume but with new emphasis, insights, and perspectives. The style is always clear, radiant, and optimistic." V. J. McGill

+ J Philos 51:582 S 30 '54 800w

MAYER, MRS JANE (ROTHSCHILD). Dolly Madison; il. by Walter Buehr. (Landmark bks) 184p $1.50 Random house

B or 92 Madison, Dorothy (Payne) Todd— 54-6266

A sympathetic story of the life of Dolly Madison, beginning with her family's removal to Philadelphia when Dolly was fifteen, and carrying the story to her eightieth year. Chronology. Index. For grades seven to nine. There is a school edition published by E. M. Hale and company, priced at $1.68.

Booklist 51:156 D 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p32 N 14 '54 30w

Reviewed by Millicent Taylor

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:447 Jl 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by E. M. Malone

Library J 79:2497 D 15 '54 90w

"Jane Mayer's portrait of charming Dolly Madison is not brilliant in its recreation of a personality but the author sets her squarely against the background of her times." E. L. B.

N Y Times p50 N 7 '54 20w

MAYNARD, THEODORE. Long road of Father Serra. 297p $3.50 Appleton

B or 92 Serra, Junípero 54-6213

The life story of Father Junípero Serra, born on the island of Mallorca in 1713. He is best known as the leader of an expedition to California, where he organized missions for the Indians. Index.

Booklist 50:379 Je 1 '54

"Dr. Maynard has a knack of selecting entertaining detail from a mountain of reference material, and he intersperses potentially tiresome facts with interesting personal comment and conjecture. This new book is decidedly readable, therefore, even though it does not add a great deal to the facts already known." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 179:237 Je '54 250w

"Maynard has been careful to keep the center of the picture where it belongs, but he has not left any of the corners blank. He gives an enchanting picture of the island of Mallorca, where Serra was born, and an amazing one of the university there, where he was educated. He achieves a vivid description of the California Indians and their way of life. And in these times many readers will find a very special interest in his account of Serra's determination to prevent the Russians from getting a foothold on the Pacific coast." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 2 '54 240w

"While Father Serra was a colorful, courageous and devoted servant of the church this book is of primary interest and importance because of the light it throws upon the very early history of California."

+ Kirkus 22:187 Mr 15 '54 210w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 2 '54 50w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p21 Ag 15 '54 40w

Reviewed by G. A. Barker
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 11 '54
500w

MEAD, EDWARD SHEPHERD. Big ball of wax; a story of tomorrow's happy world. 246p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

54-9809

"Set in the prosperous year of 1992 in a future quite different from George Orwell's. Instead of power and fear there is only the benign Big Brother Advertising. Advertising has brought peace to the world, for instance, because of man's realization that there are no enemies, only consumers. . . The story is told in the form of a long memo-tape (here reproduced in writing as we haven't yet attained 1992's labor-saving devices) from an executive at Con Chem to his firm's junior executives telling them about the near destruction of this happy state of affairs by XP." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:176 D 15 '54

"Sniping here on the quo vadis of religion, culture and aesthetics—but in return the reader might question the author's own taste."

Kirkus 22:503 Ag 1 '54 170w

"Superficially, as wacky as they come; fundamentally, as perfectly sound a contribution as other writings as to what the world may be like in 1998. . . There is great wit and imagination for the perceptive to enjoy—and enough 'meat' to feed a cult! Highly recommended."

Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1825 O 1 '54 150w

"Mr. Mead, himself a vice-president of a large business has obviously had fun with his commercialized utopia. And though there is nothing very subtle or profound in his satire, it is often ingenious and is fun to read."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 O 31 '54
360w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p10 D 19 '54 550w

"'The Big Ball of Wax' is pure satire, without any flesh-and-blood characters, and with perhaps more gimmickery than it really needs. But on its own terms it is crackling good fun; its point has never been made more tellingly."

Martin Levin

+ Sat R 37:17 O 23 '54 380w

MEAD, MARGARET (MRS GREGORY BATESON), and METRAUX, RHODA BUBENDEY, eds. Study of culture at a distance. 480p pa $5 Univ. of Chicago press

572.07 Social sciences—Methodology. Culture 53-13135

"Making a virtue of necessity, the late Ruth Benedict undertook for the U.S. Government during World War II a series of national-character studies of enemy and enemy-occupied countries. This effort to analyze cultural regularities in individuals from societies inaccessible to direct observation was continued in a further series of projects at Columbia University from 1949 to 1953. As an aid for research workers in the social sciences and for organizers of similar group projects, the editors have assembled this manual on the interdisciplinary research practices which were developed in connection with the projects mentioned." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Some of this material has been published before; much is new. Taken as a whole, it is an enthusiastic potpourri of theory, case material, illuminating discussion of techniques of observation and first-stage analysis, and frank and useful advice on practical procedures. The title, however, is somewhat misleading. The subject is not really culture but national character, and the familiar entities of descriptive ethnography and historiography have little place in it. . . There is nothing in it about how an anthropologist might analyze the educational system of an Iron Curtain country from various available documentary and informant sources; the organization of material culture information is scarcely mentioned. The subject, then, is national character at a distance (although this admittedly would make a clumsy title for a book)." A. F. C. Wallace

+ — Am Anthropol 56:1141 D '54 1600w

"One may recommend this 'manual' to sociological readers as an exceedingly comprehensive and honest portrayal of a large and varied research program which needs no apologies or defenses. There is something in it of interest and value for everyone. Certain criticism is valid, but this does not mean indifference to the work itself. Sociologists as well as anthropologists and psychologists have much to learn from research of this kind, since it penetrates to depths and regions inaccessible by more rigorous methods." J. W. Bennett

+ — Am J Soc 60:91 Jl '54 2600w

Reviewed by W. J. Cahman

Am Soc R 19:792 D '54 1350w

"Much of the material is published for the first time. Some is in the form of abridged versions of articles that have appeared elsewhere. Some is written as mortar for the volume. I am not sure that this all adds up to a manual, but it is nonetheless good reading. . . A fair-minded reading of this volume will not necessarily convince opponents of the validity of national character studies, but it should allay the caricature of such research so frequently indulged in by its enemies. Whatever the ultimate appraisal of this type of inquiry may be, its proponents will have contributed importantly to sensitivities and techniques in cross-cultural studies." Cora Du Bois

+ Ann Am Acad 292:176 Mr '54 400w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:72 Mr '54 240w

MEAD, SHEPHERD. See Mead, E. S.

MEADER, STEPHEN WARREN. Buckboard stranger; il. by Paul Calle. 213p $2.75 Harcourt

54-8574

Mystery for ages twelve and older.

Booklist 51:139 N 15 '54

Reviewed by E. B. Hungerford

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 21 '54
170w

"Good atmosphere and Meader's steady narrative ability recommend an otherwise routine cops and robbers story."

+ Kirkus 22:637 S 15 '54 130w

"Certainly for all junior-high-school collections." L. R. Markey

+ Library J 79:2501 D 15 '54 60w

"Modern boys might well be amused at the contrasts with today, especially in the villain, a type of gambler so different from the criminals in up-to-date adventure stories. Once they are well into the book, they will find it exciting enough, with Chuck and his pal determined to prove what a bad man the Texan adventurer is, and helping the slow-moving authorities to track him down."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p8
N 14 '54 180w

"Time and place are captured with remembered clarity in this first-rate mystery story, built upon an incident out of the author's own boyhood." A. O'B. M.

+ Sat R 37:94 N 13 '54 110w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 100w

MEADOWS, DENIS. Obedient men. 308p $3.50 Appleton

B or 92 Jesuits

53-10090

An account of the ten years the author spent in the Jesuit order, as novice, scholar and teacher, leaving it just before his ordination to the priesthood.

Booklist 50:215 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:106 F '54 20w

Cath World 179:161 My '54 110w

MEADOWS, DENIS—Continued

"Denis Meadows does not write as an apostate or as a propagandist. . . Written with beauty and sympathy, his story fills a valuable niche in religious literature." J. A. O'Brien
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 24 '54 350w

"It is a description—a reverent and honest and never self-pitying one—of the process of making a Jesuit, written by one who for ten years was a devout and obedient son of the Society. . . His varied experiences bring an urbanity and warmth of judgment to his memoir, and enable him to do more than lay bare the motives of the ex-religious." Francis Sweeney
+ Commonweal 59:583 Mr 12 '54 800w

"Well written and interesting."

+ Kirkus 21:623 S 1 '53 230w

"The reminiscences on these ten years of Jesuit monastic life are given here with a remarkable impartiality and clearness, projecting the austerities as well as the cheerful sides. It is a successful challenge to many, often quite unrealistic, concepts of 'Jesuitism.' Recommended for larger libraries." Lajos Borsody
+ Library J 79:142 Ja 15 '54 80w

"He does not expose the deep wells of his own spiritual adventure as a Jesuit. He does not tell us how far he came along the way in finding a more complete awareness of God. This could have been a more compelling and moving book, but Mr. Meadows probably had his reasons for presenting only the facts as he lived them during his ten years as a Jesuit." Francis Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 Mr 7 '54 400w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p17 Ja 31 '54 90w

"Mr. Meadows left the Jesuits because of doubts that he had a vocation to the life (he hadn't lost his faith), and his chapters on his inner struggles are revealing and often affecting. A graceful, unusual little book, with its own share of humor."

+ New Yorker 30:149 Ap 10 '54 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 14 '54 210w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Sat 37:41 Mr 6 '54 320w

Wis Lib Bul 50:126 My '54

MEAGHER, JOSEPH WILLIAM. Through midnight streets. 299p $3.75 Little

54-5103

The story of two men who met in a dreary hotel not far from Brooklyn Bridge. Owen, after a varied career, finally managed to get a good job and the girl he always wanted. Kleinhardt, the drunkard, kept on the way to destruction.

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 21 '54 260w

"The commonplaces, the matter of factness and the bits of humor and characters surprise an unexpected interest, and give a chance for a tough, rough but contrarily innocent and cleanly moral-ed tale."

+ Kirkus 21:800 D 15 '53 170w

"The portraits of Bart, the wastrel, Kleinhardt, the drunkard, and Huckles, the hotel's proprietor, are written with power and clarity. Though the background is different, this has something of the quality of Nightmare Alley: shocking, morbid and distressing. Not recommended for small collections." W. K. Harrison
Library J 79:383 F 15 '54 90w

"The book is weak in construction and coherence, but it offers a slice of grimy life, closely observed and skilfully described."

Nation 178:204 Mr 6 '54 50w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 21 '54 270w

"I have one small if definite reservation. I wish the author had resisted an unbecoming sentimentality which contrives a happy end for Owen. But even so Mr. Meagher must be conceded a thoughtful, powerful, expertly fashioned first novel." Frederic Morton

+ N Y Times p5 F 21 '54 1150w

"Mr. Meagher makes no distinction between cowardice and perversity. His book lacks the partisan energy of a tract, while incorporating all its stylistic penalties." N. M.

Sat R 37:20 Ap 3 '54 250w

MEAKER, SAMUEL RAYNOR. Doctor talks to women; what they should know about the normal functions and common disorders of the female organs. 231p il $3.95 Simon & Schuster

618 Gynecology. Woman—Health and hygiene 54-5471

Dr Meaker has spent thirty years discussing problems of health with women. In this book he takes up the questions most frequently asked by women and explains them in terms understandable to the lay person. Includes a list of Definitions of medical terms. Index.

"The approach is definite and concise, rather than intimate."

+ Kirkus 22:56 Ja 15 '54 90w

"At last a superior book which this reader hails with enthusiasm after too many mediocre ones of the doctor-talks-to-patient type. . . Highly recommended for any library serving women readers." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:546 Mr 15 '54 160w

"Up-to-date, scientific, but simply presented facts that are easy to read. Recommended by the Bureau of Maternal and Child Health."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:204 O '54

MEANS, MRS FLORENCE CRANNELL. Rains will come; il. by Fred Kabotie. 241p $2.50 Houghton

54-9043

"A story of the Hopi Indians 70 years ago. Tragedy faces a Hopi settlement in the form of drought and sickness when Lohmay the chief's nephew commits what may be sacrilege by showing a white man their tribal ways. Then he thinks a spell is cast on his baby brother's life, a rivalry with Maqto over a girl, and the continued drought in spite of the rain dances, deepen Lohmay's guilt until he must make a confession of it in public. The climax lifts the weight from the boy's heart and proves his inner strength." Kirkus

Booklist 51:140 N 15 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p38 N 14 '54 100w

"Action keeps reader interest in a good picture of Hopi life that brings out their traits of non-aggression and selflessness."

+ Kirkus 22:585 S 1 '54 150w

"Carefully authenticated, the Hopi traditions and customs are described in accurate detail. Black-and-white drawings of Hopi artist, Fred Kabotie, admirably supplement the distinguished text." A. B. Martin

+ Library J 79:2257 N 15 '54 80w

"In this beautifully written novel the author portrays vividly the mores of the Hopi people—their close-knit family life, their deep religious feeling and superstitions, and their ever-present sense of humor. However, this is not a happy book! . . . So much unhappiness in one book makes me wonder if the slight love theme and the Hopis' pathetically brave attempts to find some humor in everything are sufficient to sustain the interest of many young readers. We hope so, because the reading of this book is a rewarding, if somewhat saddening, experience." A. B. M.

+ Sat R 37:94 N 13 '54 230w

MEANS, JAMES HOWARD. Doctors, people, and government. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 206p $3.50 Little

614.2 Medicine, State. Medical economics 53-10240

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Not in place of, but as a manageable fraction of the enormous volume of the literature accumulating on the subject of medical care, Dr. Means' book offers a brief, readable, honest, and intelligent set of readings for the use of anyone in the field of Great Medicine who wants to know what it is all about. No one book is enough, but you could perhaps recall three hours last week that were spent 'in the thick of thin things' and far less profitably than the time it would have taken to read Doctors, People, and Government." Alan Gregg
+ Am J Pub Health 44:113 Ja '54 180w

"Although Dr. Means has no new suggestions to offer, he has nevertheless made a noteworthy contribution to the literature on the social and economic aspects of medicine. He has assembled widely scattered material and presented it in a clear and readable manner. He has analyzed the available facts with a discerning mind and a keen eye for basic issues. And he has stated his conclusions with sincerity and courage." Franz Goldmann
+ Ann Am Acad 294:205 Jl '54 450w

Christian Century 71:901 Jl 28 '54 60w

Nation 178:96 Ja 30 '54 300w

"Doctors, People and Government meets a mounting demand for information about medical care, at a time when the nation's health is once more moving into the political spotlight. As one of Boston's most distinguished doctors and past president of the American College of Physicians, Dr. James Means writes with authority on a subject of major interest to us all." John Pfeiffer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ja 31 '54 450w

"The book was written, Dr. Means states, to stir up popular interest in these matters and to promote the formation of an enlightened public opinion. It seems likely that it will be successful in both purposes." G. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 31 '54 220w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 10 '54 140w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:119 Mr '54 280w

Wis Lib Bul 50:66 Mr '54

MEDARY, MARJORIE. Each one teach one; Frank Laubach, friend to millions. 227p il $3 Longmans

B or 92 Laubach, Frank Charles, Illiteracy 54-5550

"Biography of the founder of the system known as 'Each One Teach One,' who has worked among illiterates in the Philippines, New Guinea, Mexico, Turkey, Brazil, and Colombia, promoting one of the significant educational movements of all time, a movement effective in achieving peace and goodwill. . . This informative volume on a revolutionary technique in adult education—whereby when one person is taught, he teaches another, and so on—presents a personal challenge and appeal to help perform a gigantic and rewarding task." Library J

Booklist 50:229; 291 F 15 '54; Ap 1 '54

"The thrilling story of Dr. Laubach's world-wide literacy campaign, in which his simple but vastly effective teaching methods are combined with a deep understanding and love of people." Anne Brosius

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 20 '54 650w

Kirkus 21:762 D 1 '53 180w

"Author's very human story of Dr. Frank Laubach will be welcomed by friends and admirers and by those who are touched by genuineness and reality in a person. . . Recommended." O. G. Lawson
+ Library J 79:202 F 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Ben Bradford
N Y Times p24 Ap 25 '54 360w

"Recommended for all libraries."
+ Wis Lib Bul 50:70 Mr '54

MEEKER, ODEN. Report on Africa. 410p il $5 Scribner

960 [916] Africa 54-5918

Travelog covering the author's trip to Africa in 1952. He reports on most of Africa south of the Sahara, and the islands of Madagascar, São Tomé, and Fernando Po. Illustrated with photographs. Bibliography. Index.

"A lot more inviting than its title might suggest. The author is offering us a somewhat novel kind of reportage which, besides being immensely informative and genuinely enlightening, has the virtue of being consistently entertaining." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:81 S '54 400w

Booklist 51:81 O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:6 O '54 20w

"This is the best so far of the series of recent books written for the general reader as an introduction to Africa. A travelog, it is crammed with history, geography, anthropology, and economics, with its main theme the present racial, social, and political problem facing the people of Africa and their European rulers." William Bascom

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 22 '54 290w

"One might hope that Mr. Meeker would have come up with an interesting set of conclusions and even some solutions as a result of his survey. But wisely, he has not. He set out to write an 'introduction' to the continent of Africa, and he has done it well, reporting factually what he saw." John Hughes

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 19 '54 850w

"For scholars and for those extensively read in the field, this is elementary. But for first comers, it is a first rate introduction to a puzzling land."

+ Kirkus 22:358 Je 1 '54 190w

"Although it is necessarily a cursory report, it is temperate, sympathetic, and immediate." W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1598 S 15 '54 40w

"The book is written in typical New Yorker-ese—bright, comprehensive, sometimes superficial, sometimes showing flashes of insight. Its author, we are told, is an amateur zoologist, and certainly no other recent popular book on Africa describes the flora and fauna so accurately, even to giving the scientific Latin names. . . As always in a book of this sort, there are details that need correction." M. J. Herskovits

+ — Nation 179:154 Ag 21 '54 600w

"Now that Africa is a trouble spot, books about the continent stream off the presses, yet there still is room for such a spotty but cheerful report as Mr. Meeker's. This author has an eye for the picturesque, a sense of humor, and he is well read in African history. In all modesty, his book is presented as an adequate introduction to Africa, and as such it should fill a gap on library shelves." M. C. Hubbard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 S 19 '54 370w

"Mr. Meeker's book is a sane and sober portrait of a continent in turmoil, done with wit and a most pleasant dry humor." Peter Abrahams

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 22 '54 650w

"The tone of his book is flippant, and its emphasis is mostly on lively detail, but a considerable amount of information gets painlessly administered, and there are interviews with practically every African leader of note (except Dr. Malan) and some fine photographs."

+ New Yorker 30:186 O 9 '54 100w

"The value of this well-illustrated book is enhanced by the great amount of research work of other people (gratefully acknowledged by the author), which is evident in every chapter. In fact, it is this serious historical information which elevates the book from what might have been a series of entertaining magazine pieces, to a book of reference which deserves a place on the shelves of any student of Africa." Carveth Wells

+ Sat R 37:24 Ag 21 '54 1000w

MEKHITARIAN, ARPAG. Egyptian painting; tr. by Stuart Gilbert. (Great centuries of painting) 164p col pl $20 Skira

759.932 Painting, Egyptian 54-11064

"Here is a mortuary art, paintings from ancient Egyptian tombs, yet the prevailing impression is one of striking vitality. . . In a quaint, an elementary way, the painters of the Theban tombs could indicate spatial depth; they could express movement. They were able by the simplest indications of gesture to suggest emotion. A horse, a bull, a fleeing hare, a donkey, a locust, each was depicted in unmistakable character. Here is a pictorial review of Egyptian life, activities of farmers, and fishermen; scenes of banqueting and mourning; acts of ritual." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by H. J. Kantor
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 26 '54
200w

"The nearly one hundred reproductions in full color are fascinating to behold. . . What a precious art heritage and how fortunate that the beauty of the original works can now be brought to us in reproductions of the direct color-separation process!" Dorothy Adlow

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 2 '54
170w

"Arpag Mekhitarian is the Secretary General of the Foundation Egyptologique Reine Elizabeth at Brussels and his intimate knowledge of Egyptian painting speaks from every page, even if his opinions may at times surprise the older Egyptologists. He speaks of the 'so-called' golden age of the Pharaohs, and his qualifying of the term usually accepted for the art of the pyramid time will cause certain eyebrows to be raised. . . With the great period of Thebes, the fifteenth and fourteenth centuries B. C., the author is on surer ground for his analysis of styles." Walter Pach

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 5 '54
230w

"Has ninety-five color-plates printed by color-engraving and a remarkably informative and lucid text which directly relates to the illustrations and to their revealing chronological presentation." A. B. Saarinen

+ N Y Times p4 D 5 '54 160w

"This is the first attempt to photograph them directly in color, and it must have entailed almost superhuman difficulties, for the paintings are so delicate that, as the author tells us, even the removal of a spider web required infinite care, lest some flakes of the paint pull away with it. The results are truly magnificent. Surface textures are reproduced with an almost uncanny fidelity, and the color treatment is apparently exceptionally faithful, as well it might be, since the book costs twenty dollars."

+ New Yorker 30:140 O 30 '54 160w

Reviewed by R. H. Hagan
San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 28 '54
120w

"A volume that opens up a rich new field in art for almost everybody." L. R. Sander
+ Sat R 37:34 D 4 '54 40w

MELAND, BERNARD EUGENE. Higher education and the human spirit. 204p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

378 Education, Higher. Education—Philosophy 53-12358

"Examines the quality of experience provided by higher education today and proposes that much more attention be given in the classroom to the development of creative imagination. The author holds that descriptive analysis, though valuable, has been permitted to assume too large a place in academic thinking, almost to the exclusion of appreciative and perceptive experience. Suggests educational means by which the human spirit can be nurtured." (School R) Bibliography. Index.

"This is indeed an exciting book for any reader concerned with contemporary directions of higher education. It is not an easy book; several of the chapters are crowded with the author's erudition. It is not a pacifying book; no teacher whose imagination is caught by this thesis will ever come to his classroom with easy satisfaction in a job half done. Personal success in his world will recede with the reading, for the culture of the human spirit is not a job for a lifetime but for the generations. Nevertheless, he will be a wiser and more persistent and more appreciatively conscious teacher for having seen the new dimensions of the job." K. I. Brown

+ — Christian Century 71:143 F 3 '54 1300w

"The author has provided much food for the thought of deans and for those who feel that science is receiving undue emphasis in our colleges these days." J. W. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 1 '53
100w

Reviewed by Brand Blanshard
Sat R 37:33 S 11 '54 800w
School R 61:551 D '53 40w

"Bernard Meland, a liberal theologian whose scholarly base is poetry and philosophy rather than Holy Writ, has presented in Higher Education and the Human Spirit an eloquently written argument on some basic issues of life and thought which deserves careful reading and wide discussion." Proctor Thomson

+ School R 62:432 O '54 2000w

"One who is not well oriented in philosophy and psychology will find sections of the volume difficult reading. Any well-educated person, however, can grasp the author's point of view and the arguments advanced to support it."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:83 Mr '54 240w

MELISH, WILLIAM HOWARD. Strength for struggle; Christian social witness in the crucible of our times; with pref. by Joseph F. Fletcher. 248p $2.75 Bromwell Press, 157 Montague St, Brooklyn 1, N.Y.

252 Sermons 53-11777

"The socially-minded minister of the Church of the Holy Trinity in Brooklyn has had nation-wide notoriety over the 'Melish Case,' where a Protestant Episcopal churchman fought against losing his pulpit because of alleged 'subversive' connections, lost, but was succeeded by his son (author of this volume). This collection of sermons on 'the Christian social witness in the crucible of these times' includes explanatory connecting sections giving the Melish side of a very controversial situation." Library J

Booklist 50:194 Ja 15 '54

"Although of course special pleading, the book should be a useful addition to any library collection on the 'Cold War' and its domestic repercussions, or on church-state relations." E. M. Oboler

Library J 78:2213 D 15 '53 140w

MELLIN, JEANNE. Horses across the ages; il. by [the author]. 91p $3.50 Dutton

636.1 Horses—Juvenile literature 54-8867

A companion volume to the author's Horses across America (Book Review Digest 1953) this traces the history of the association of the horse with man from the days of ancient Assyria to the present.

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 14 '54
30w

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 11 '54
160w

"Concise written, this spans the 11-13 age group, and, with the author's many meticulously drawn pictures, is a good first course for young interests."

+ Kirkus 22:533 Ag 15 '54 120w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p14 N 14
'54 30w

MELLINGER, MAY (MRS DOUGLAS S. KNOWLES). Harvest of the heart. 277p $3.50
McKay

54-12935

Cory Cooper in spite of poverty and a shiftless husband was able to give her daughter Starr a better chance in life than she had had herself. Starr's first marriage ended in widowhood but after many heartbreaks she finally found happiness with her first love.

Booklist 51:110 N 1 '54

Kirkus 22:412 J1 1 '54 170w

"Character drawing of Cory, Starr and her husband well done. Happy ending somewhat contrived. Not important; for inclusive collections only." E. S. Brown

Library J 79:1504 S 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by Whitney Betts

N Y Times p10 D 26 '54 170w

"On its surface this belongs in the upper bracket of what might be called better magazine fiction. The novel is better than that, however, for two reasons. It is better written than most in this field, and it makes much more of character than most magazine serials ever take the trouble to do. Starr Cooper, the heroine, is rewarded eventually not just because the author says so but logically, as a result of exemplary strength of character." A. B. R.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 7 '54 250w

MELNITSKY, BENJAMIN. Profiting from industrial standardization; foreword by Stuart F. Heinritz. 381p $5.50 Conover-Mast Publications, Inc, 205 E 42d St, N.Y. 17

658.01 Standardization

53-3038

"Standards are 'practicable, profit-provoking solutions to recurring problems,' the author states. . . Emphasizing the evolutionary nature of standardization, he describes in detail (and illustrates by numerous case studies) the savings that have been achieved in many areas through the development and application of standards. In addition, the book covers the history, current scope, development, distribution, and use of standardization in purchasing and other industrial operations. Individual chapters deal with sources of industry, national and government standards; company standards programs and departments; and specific problems of identification, classification, parts numbering, etc. A chapter on preparing company standards suggests ways to present them in printed form." Management R

"A welcome volume in an area in which information is limited and sketchy." Paul Wasserman

+ Library J 78:2032 N 15 '53 90w

Management R 42:745 D '53 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:30 Mr '54

MELONEY, WILLIAM BROWN. Many are the travelers. 344p $3.75 Appleton

54-5705

A story of the Tracy family, prominent residents of a small eastern New York town, Haviland, which has been the scene of earlier novels by the author.

Booklist 50:359 My 15 '54

"The author handles his complex time sequences effectively, and is skilful at vivid characterizations. But one puts the book down with mixed feelings. It is absorbing reading, by an author who knows his craft—yet a curiously remote novel. It has drama and tension and occasional wit—but everything is somehow muted, so that the impact seems like a miniature rather than life size." Chad Walsh

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 28 '54 320w

"A colorful tale, which may achieve a popular, upper-rental-library type of market." Kirkus 22:73 F 1 '54 180w

Reviewed by Karl Brown

Library J 79:626 Ap 1 '54 130w

"'Many Are the Travelers' is briskly though not gracefully written and the author inclines to slip into clichés, both of phrasing and characterization. Nevertheless it is a pleasantly believable story of a democratic small town and its people doing and thinking the same things that people do and think in a place like Haviland, New York." Peter Girvin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 28 '54 550w

"It is perhaps fair (and certainly interesting) to compare Mr. Meloney's novels of Haviland with the far more successful novels that his wife, Rose Franken, has written about Claudia and her David. Miss Franken always stays within her chosen range, never soaring above and never falling below. Mr. Meloney, on the other hand, is sometimes folksy and sometimes literary, sometimes serious, and sometimes deliberately sensational. Miss Franken knows exactly who her readers are and rarely disappoints them. Mr. Meloney, writing for everyone, is likely to please nobody." Granville Hicks

N Y Times p23 Mr 14 '54 500w

MELTON, JAMES, and PURDY, KEN. Bright wheels rolling: the story of the world's great antique cars and an almost-forgotten era of brocade elegance on wheels, taken from America's most famous collection: The James Melton autorama. 188p il $4.50 Macrae Smith co.

629.209 Automobiles—History

54-7153

Describes the 75 ancient cars which make up James Melton's "autorama" in Florida. Each car is described and the story of Melton's acquisition of it told.

Booklist 50:445 J1 15 '54

"It is a fascinating book about a fascinating subject. Readers are invited to visit his autorama—but he gives a word of warning: the hobby of collecting ancient cars is a highly communicable disease." R. L. B.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 20 '54 110w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:1319 J1 '54 40w

Reviewed by E. C. Lessner

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p13 S 19 '54 320w

"Lavishly illustrated with photographs, it is a 'must' book for all those who share the author's happily fanatical urge to find a really old car and put it into shape again." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 14 '54 500w

Reviewed by William Murray

Sat R 37:38 J1 31 '54 50w

Wis Lib Bul 50:174 J1 '54

MENA, PAUL ORTIZ, comp. Economic development of Mexico. See International bank for reconstruction and development

MENEN, AUBREY. Ramayana [retold]. 276p $3.50 Scribner

891.2

54-5919

A retelling of the Hindu classic, which recounts the adventures of Prince Rama, who lived in India some 2,500 years ago. The author of the original Ramayana was the poetic sage, Valmiki. The author says of his interpretation here: "Valmiki was not a philosopher; but it is clear from the bare bones of the story of Rama that he was a sceptical realist. With that in mind, I have retold the story, replacing the Brahminical moralising with some tales of my own." (p 23)

Booklist 51:36 S 15 '54

"An unusual piece of instruction and entertainment." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 12 '54 280w

Kirkus 22:401 J1 1 '54 280w

"A joy to read. Prince Rama's adventures are brilliant and frequently ribald comments on the human situation. While Aubrey Menen's ideas are uneven, his wit turns an epic of antiquity into a new gem; a delightful cross between 'Candide' and 'The Decameron.' " Stanley Cooperman

MENEN, AUBREY—Continued

+ Nation 179:217 S 11 '54 30w

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson

New Statesman & Nation 48:163 Ag 7 '54 180w

"It is in the story of his campaign that Mr. Menen strikes hardest—with the best of his sarcasm, the deftest touches of his wit—against our times and our wars. . . The 'Ramayana' retold is an exciting achievement of sardonic humor. It exerts the appeal of common sense. Unfortunately, in the field of social order, common sense may become the perilous companion of anarchy. One can be funny about the Brahmins frozen in two millenniums of tradition and there is no question but that they are on the way out. . . But perhaps not just now; perhaps it would be wiser to see if there might not just be some one last trace of a tradition that might yet save us." Gouverneur Paulding

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 12 '54 900w

"Fables are in high fashion this year, and Aubrey Menen has produced a timely example. . . His new rendering of the Hindu epic, the Ramayana, is as rich, well-spiced and aromatic a curry of oriental tale-telling, served with an occidental tongue-in-cheeking chutney, as anyone could wish to read." Anne Fremantle

+ N Y Times p4 S 12 '54 850w

New Yorker 30:142 O 2 '54 80w

"Fortunately there are others—people who, although they recognize folly fast enough, have the wisdom to see that there is no ready cure. These are the people for whom Mr. Menen writes, as his predecessor did in his ancient Oriental world. They will relish this ironic tale, draw reassurance from it, and, best of all, laugh with its author." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 10 '54 600w

"Thanks to some highly original researches by Aubrey Menen, at least one of the old classics is available to us in all its pristine freshness and candor. . . His reconstituted Ramayana is a riot bound to set a good Brahmin on his ears. If any of them are still hopeful of patching it up with reformer Menen, this book should be something of an eye-opener. . . If you have ever shrunk from tackling an Indian classic—and who could blame you if you did?—Menen's Ramayana should make you a delightful and willing convert. If it converts you to Menenism at the same time, that is only to be expected." Joseph Hitrec

+ Sat R 37:39 S 11 '54 550w

Time 64:106 S 27 '54 450w

"A most unusual and refreshing work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p469 J1 23 '54 260w

Wis Lib Bul 50:211 O '54

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 44:xii autumn '54 450w

MENIRU, GODWIN UDEGBUNEM. African-American cooperation; a study in tropical development. 120p il $3.50 Libertarian press

966.9 Foreign economic relations. Nigeria—Industries and resources

A survey of the natural resources and industrial potentialities of Nigeria, by the son of a prominent Nigerian textile manufacturer. Mr. Meniru has studied engineering in this country at Howard and Iowa State. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Gilbert Twiss

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 15 '54 50w

"Written with sincerity and enthusiasm. . . Recommended for general African collections." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 79:1509 S 1 '54 70w

MENKE, FRANK GRANT. Encyclopedia of sports; cartoons by Willard Mullin. new rev ed 1018p $10 Barnes, A.S.

790.3 Sports

52-8294

"Frank G. Menke prepared and published the first edition of The Encyclopedia of Sports in 1939. A revised and enlarged edition published in 1944 was reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, April 1946. The title was changed to The New Encyclopedia of Sports in 1947 when a greatly expanded edition was issued. The author reverts to the title The Encyclopedia of Sports in 1953. . . There has been considerable reorganization of material since the 1947 edition. Sports are arranged alphabetically by subject. . . Many of the subjects which were separate entries in the previous edition are now grouped alphabetically under Miscellaneous. . . Other subjects which formerly appeared as separate topics are now treated within other articles and can be found only by consulting the index. . . Some subjects have been dropped from the latest edition. . . Most of the sports now included are competitive active sports; checkers and chess are the only parlor games retained. . . Readers of this encyclopedia will make extensive use of the great amount of statistical data included for records of sports of all kinds. . . Bibliographical references are an important feature in this edition." Subscription Bks Bul

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 4 '54 150w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Sat R 37:42 Mr 20 '54 470w

"The two-column arrangement, a new feature in the latest edition, is very satisfactory and lends itself to the tabulated and itemized statistical listings. The type is clear, and the page arrangement is attractive. The Encyclopedia of Sports presents a large amount of valuable information on sports and their champions. It is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:37 J1 '54 1150w

MENSENDIECK, BESS MARGUERITE. Look better, feel better; the world-renowned Mensendieck system of functional movements—for a youthful body and vibrant health; foreword by Paul B. Magnuson. 276p il $3.50 Harper

613.7 Gymnastics, Medical 54-6021

"The Mensendieck System of Functional Movements as a basis for body sculpture and health is described here with complete instructions for Movement Schemes. Combining the science and muscle function with the technique of teaching muscle control, Dr. Mensendieck presents 'mild, graduated movements' based on a study of anatomy and directed at specific muscles. Aims, steps, and diagrams of Movement Schemes for feet, buttocks, abdomen, back, breast, etc. are explicitly given." (Kirkus) No index.

Booklist 51:126 N 15 '54

Kirkus 22:468 J1 15 '54 40w

"Recommended." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 79:1586 S 15 '54 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 21 '54 120w

MERCER, ASA SHINN. Banditti of the plains; or, The cattlemen's invasion of Wyoming in 1892: the crowning infamy of the ages; with a foreword by William H. Kittrell. 195p il $2 Univ. of Okla. press

978.7 Wyoming—History 54-5940

"An eyewitness account of the cattlemen's invasion of Wyoming which was first published in 1894 but suppressed with such thoroughness that few copies of that edition are now extant. This edition follows the first text exactly, even including the original illustrations. Though no dispassionate historian, Mercer tells how, in April, 1892, fifty-two cattlemen and hired gunmen entered Johnson County, Wyoming, with the alleged intention of 'executing' rustlers; how they besieged the homesteaders and were in turn besieged by the homesteaders, and how, after illegal maneuvering, the invaders were permitted to go unpunished." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:402 Je 15 '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 11 '54 90w

"This reprint contains William H. Kittrell's foreword, packed with history and brightened by wit. . . Literature on the 'Johnson County War' has been growing all these years. Mr. Kittrell's introduction brings both it and the range troubles back of it into focus." J. F. Dobie

N Y Times p21 My 2 '54 290w

"Since the purpose of this series, as assumed or presumed by this reviewer, is to bring scarce material to the reach of the lay reader in Western Americana, a more balanced presentation of the actual wrongs and basic superstitions of both sides would seem to have been the proper province of the foreword. This opinion notwithstanding, the book is a definite contribution to the literature of the American West." W. H. Hutchison

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 20 '54 550w

MERCER, GEORGE. Papers. See Pittsburgh. University. Library. Darlington memorial library. George Mercer papers.

MEREDITH, SCOTT, ed. Bar 3 roundup of best western stories. 223p $2.95 Dutton

Short stories—Collections 54-5052

Contents: The gunny, by Robert Turner; Emmet Dutrow, by Jack Schaefer; Great medicine, by Steve Frazee; The settlin'-down feelin', by Thomas Thompson; Dispatch to the general, by Ernest Haycox; The bitter trail, by H. A. DeRosso; The gift of Cochise, by Louis L'Amour; The pretender, by W. V. Clark; Journey to the fort, by D. M. Johnson; The twilighters, by N. M. Loomis; Quiet morning, by Bill Erin.

Booklist 50:401 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by Al Chase

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 4 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:45 Ja 15 '54 80w

"Many of America's best western story writers are included. For your western story fans." M. D. Read

+ Library J 79:792 Ap 15 '54 40w

"There is no lack of action in these stories; but there is also no lack of the convincing detail which makes the reader feel that 'this is how it must have been—this is how it was.'" S. M. Agnew

+ Sat R 37:15 Mr 27 '54 100w

MERKER, LOUIS HYMAN. Until the doctor comes; or, First aid in a nutshell. 256p il $3.50 Sheridan

614.88 First aid in illness and injury 53-12494

Practical handbook, written by a doctor, giving directions for the emergency treatment of illness and accidents. Lists essential drugs for the medicine cabinet and traveling kit. Index.

Bookmark 13:157 Ap '54 30w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 210w

MERRELL, LEIGH. Tenoch. 191p $2.50 Nelson 54-9875

Novel for ages twelve to sixteen. It tells the story of a Spanish-Indian boy's journey up the California coast in the days after the Cortez explorations.

Booklist 51:180 D 15 '54

"Has its touching moments and makes a good historical adventure. . . Searching and well handled in its many elements."

+ Kirkus 22:443 Jl 15 '54 150w

"Mrs. Merrell deserves praise for producing the first book for young people about Cabrillo, the discoverer of California—a new personality among the stand-by American pioneers, presidents and heroes. Moreover, Mrs. Merrell's story has all the dash and accuracy needed for a satisfying tale of exploration." G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times p38 O 10 '54 180w

"The book is fairly well written and should find welcome readers among young history fans aged 11 and up. A map showing the points of discovery is to be found opposite the title page." Barbara Dillon

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 14 '54 100w

MERRIEN, JEAN, pseud. See Fréminville, R. M. de la P. de

MERRILL, HORACE SAMUEL. William Freeman Vilas, doctrinaire democrat. 310p il $4.50 State hist. soc. of Wis.

B or 92 Vilas, William Freeman 54-10806

A biography of William Freeman Vilas (1840 to 1908). "One of the innumerable nineteenth-century Vermonters who made their careers outside of Vermont, Vilas rose to the rank of millionaire as a railroad attorney and timberland speculator in Madison, Wisconsin. In Grover Cleveland's first administration he served as Postmaster General and then as Secretary of the Interior, meanwhile becoming the President's closest cabinet adviser and crony. During Cleveland's second term he was the most faithful administration spokesman in the Senate." (Am Hist R) Bibliography. Index.

"A well-documented and judiciously written biography." R. N. Current

+ Am Hist R 60:200 O '54 320w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 4 '54 60w

MERRITT, ROBERT DEXTER. Financial independence through common stocks. 310p il $3.95 Simon & Schuster

332.63 Stocks. Investments 53-12524

"A noted security analyst and the financial editor of the United Business Service, has compiled a working guide for investors which adheres to a generally accepted set of investment principles. This book describes those principles calculated to preserve the original money invested, provide continuing dividend rewards, and develop the original principal over a long-run period. This is not a get-rich-quick primer on stock manipulation and speculation, but rather a sober, balanced account of the basic rules for developing an intelligent individual portfolio." Library J

"The author writes in clear, understandable fashion, free from technical terminology yet valuable to the initiated because of its emphasis on the broad principles stressed by professional advisers." George Ericson

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 F 2 '53 350w

Kirkus 21:756 N 15 '53 160w

"Recommended." Paul Wasserman

+ Library J 78:2211 D 15 '53 120w

MERTON, THOMAS. Bread in the wilderness. 146p il $6 New directions

223.2 Bible. O.T.—Psalms 53-13509

Meditations on the Psalms by Thomas Merton, who is Father Louis of the Order of Cistercians of the Strict Observance. Illustrated with photographs of a famous medieval crucifix at Perpignan.

Cath World 179:320 Jl '54 100w

"Here is a genuinely inspiring book." Pierre Conway

+ Commonweal 59:506 F 19 '54 600w

MERTON, THOMAS—Continued

"The veil is lifted again so that one may see something of the monastic experience. I am far from certain that the book is very successful from any other point of view. Some solid stones of theological learning seem to jut out from the wall as if they had stubbornly resisted the chisel. What is said about the various meanings attributable to the Psalmist's declarations may well raise rather than answer questions. Indeed, sometimes one is led to surmise that the subject has been forgotten completely." G. N. Shuster

N Y Herald Tribune ■■■ p21 Mr 7 '54
550w

"The Psalter is the hymnal of the Jews of old. They sang so well that twentieth-century Christians like Thomas Merton can find mirrored in them the depths of today's personal and corporate experience and the full measure of salvation and hope proclaimed by the Christian revelation. What he has found in the corporate use of the Psalter he obviously hopes will be more widely experienced by individual study and devotion—and so does his reviewer. This is truly 'bread in the wilderness.'" J. A. Pike

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 24 '54 320w

MERTON, THOMAS. Last of the fathers; St. Bernard of Clairvaux and the encyclical letter, Doctor Mellifluus. 123p $3.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Bernard of Clairvaux, Saint 54-6396

"This little book is an introduction to an Encyclical of Pope Pius XII (included at the end of the volume) which was written last year on the occasion of the eighth centenary of Saint Bernard of Clairvaux, the great Trappist, who, if not the founder, is at least the spiritual father of his order. The Encyclical itself is very short, and in the manner of these documents, is addressed primarily to those who are already familiar with its subject matter, the life and works of Saint Bernard." (N Y Times) Index.

"If Merton has provided an exquisite spiritual and intellectual setting for the jewel of the Encyclical, his publishers have done their part in enhancing it by an especially attractive format. This is a study that will have to be on the shelves of all libraries and in the personal collections of all who are interested in spirituality the world over." M. T. Lentfoehr

+ Cath World 179:478 S '54 750w

"Not at all a typical hagiography, but a thoughtful and well written interpretation of this great figure in the life of the Roman Catholic Church. Unlike most of his books, there is small likelihood of the market extending much beyond Catholic readers, though his name lends impetus."

+ Kirkus 22:309 My 1 '54 120w

"There has been great scholarly work done upon monasticism and upon the Fathers of the Church; popular accounts have been written successfully about them, but this work is neither here nor there: it should never have been written. The only value of the book is that it contains a very good English version of the encyclical of Pius XII, Doctor Mellifluus, which is the present pontiff's appreciation of Bernard of Clairvaux, and is a far briefer and better account than this book by this too communicative Trappist." W. B. Ready

Library J 79:1314 Jl '54 160w

"This little book does no more than arouse our hunger. We can only hope that in the future Thomas Merton will consecrate his great talent and a few years of study to an extensive and profound study which would do justice to the great Trappist and would make him known to the general reading public of this country." R. L. Bruckberger

N Y Times p7 Jl 18 '54 600w

METCALF, ELEANOR MELVILLE, ed. Herman Melville: cycle and epicycle. 311p il $5.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Melville, Herman 52-9393

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Booklist 50:238 F 15 '54

"Many Melville readers have been hoping for some years for a carefully edited, comprehensive edition of his letters. Mrs. Metcalf has rewarded their waiting. She also has included a fine reproduction of the Eaton portrait, and a generous gallery of family photographs." Gordon Roper

+ Canadian Forum 33:282 Mr '54 600w

Manchester Guardian p6 Mr 26 '54 130w

"Unfortunately, most of the letters Mrs. Metcalf prints are by now thoroughly familiar, and even in her documentary form she has been preceded by Jay Leyda's fuller 'Melville Log.' A few of the letters are new and interesting, though, and her general inside-family slant is very much worth having."

+ New Yorker 30:138 Ap 17 '54 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p250 Ap 16 '54
550w

"Since most of the material offered here is also presented in Jay Leyda's The Melville Log, this volume may seem at first glance to be merely a shorter and more selective version of the Log. An intelligent commentary by the editor, Melville's granddaughter, however, connects the letters, and places a new emphasis upon family relationships, one considerably informed by Mrs. Metcalf's knowledge of the Melville family lore. If it is much less complete as a record than the log, this work is also more coherent, and far better suited to sustained reading."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:9 Mr '54 200w

METHODS of biochemical analysis [1954] ed. by David Glick. (V 1) 532p il $9.50 Interscience

543.8 Chemistry, Analytic. Biological chemistry (54-7232)

"With this volume, a new review series intended to cover new developments in techniques and methods of biochemical analysis has been initiated. The authors and titles of the 17 chapters of this first volume are given above. Although the individual chapters are not strictly uniform in organization, all are addressed to graduate chemists who may be interested in using the methods described in laboratory assays and analyses. Procedures particularly are fully described, and there is a bibliography of related papers." N Y New Tech Bks

"There is little doubt that this volume will make a useful addition to the biochemical literature, since it contains a number of excellent and informative articles. In view of the heterogeneity of the topics covered, however, it is questionable whether many individuals would wish to purchase this book for the sake of one or the other review which is of interest to them." Reinhold Benesch

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:5576 N 5 '54 420w

Chem & Eng N 32:1385 Ap 5 '54 40w

Library J 79:915 My 15 '54 20w

"The series should rapidly become a basic reference tool for all biochemists and also for other chemists who sometimes make analyses of biochemical products."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 39:34 My '54

MEW, CHARLOTTE. Collected poems [with a biographical memoir by Alida Monro]. 80p $2.50 Macmillan (N Y)

821

[54-15462]

"Charlotte Mew, whose poems now appear for the first time in a collected edition was emphatically not of her period; for though most were written either during or shortly before 1914-18, her poems look back both in their style and their subject-matter to an earlier time. . . A preoccupation with suffering, death and parting finds its place in all her poems, and it led her frequently to employ the imagery of the Cross, although she was not a Christian." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis

New Statesman & Nation 47:44 Ja 9 '54
1300w

New Yorker 30:196 N 6 '54 90w

"There is more than beauty in her verse—there are the fine, tough fibres of a proud, embattled soul. Her technique is sure, and often extraordinarily skilful. Without feeling any need of radical experimentation, Charlotte Mew could so vary her melodies and harmonies as to make us believe that she must be playing not one but many instruments." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R 37:17 Jl 24 '54 130w

"Charlotte Mew remains a stage in the pilgrimage from the Pre-Raphaelites to Eliot, and anyone wishing to relive memories of that trek to the serious could not do better than to read Miss Monro's memoir. This chapter of literary history is the most striking part of the book." A. H.

Spec p306 Mr 12 '54 150w

"The interest of this collected edition is greatly increased by Mrs. Harold Monro's excellent and revealing memoir."

Times [London] Lit Sup p814 D 18 '53
800w

MEYER, JEROME SYDNEY. Picture book of electricity; il. by Richard Floethe. 39p $2.50 Lothrop

537 Electricity—Juvenile literature 53-6738

An elementary book on electricity for ages nine and older. It explains about magnets, magnetism, static electricity, electrons, atoms, vacuum tubes, current dynamo, electromagnet, and telegraph.

Booklist 50:225 F 1 '54

Kirkus 21:761 D 1 '53 60w

"Recommended for large collections." B. J. DuPont

+ Library J 79:73 Ja 1 '54 80w

MEYER, PETER, and others. Jews in the Soviet satellites. 637p $6.50 Syracuse univ. press
296 Jews in Europe. Jews—Persecutions
53-12364

"Two years ago the Syracuse University Press published a comprehensive and scholarly volume, 'The Jews in the Soviet Union,' written by Solomon M. Schwarz and sponsored by the American Jewish Committee. Now a similar volume has appeared, sponsored by the same committee. It deals with the position of the Jews in the Soviet satellites of central-eastern Europe and consists of six studies, dealing with Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Poland and Polish Jews under Soviet rule. The four authors are thoroughly familiar with the background and the languages of the region." N Y Times

Cath World 178:159 N '53 110w

"An exceedingly painful and disheartening story."

Foreign Affairs 32:341 Ja '54 60w

"This book provides invaluable background information for whatever the future may have in store." Max Beloff

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 8 '54 300w

"The whole pathetic story unfolded here with careful documentation shows that for the Jews, as for other communities, a secure life is only possible in a society based upon tolerance and the recognition of diversity, when individual rights take precedence over group claims." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p10 D 27 '53 600w

"The five studies in the book are tied together by an introduction by Peter Meyer giving an excellent analysis of the historical background of the Jewish question in Central and Eastern Europe. However, some of his views could easily be challenged. . . . In the opinion of this reviewer, a concluding chapter would have been desirable in order to integrate the individual studies, and to elucidate various aspects only perfunctorily touched upon—such, for example, as differences in policies and developments in the various countries. Also a number of contradictions, omissions, or simply mistakes could most likely have been avoided by tighter editorial guidance. A study about the Jewries of East Germany, Yugoslavia, the Baltic countries and the old Soviet republics of Ukraine and White Russia would be a valuable supplement to these useful and competent volumes." Philip Friedman

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:288 Je '54 1000w

"An introductory chapter is designed to provide a broad historical background for all the studies and synthesize their findings. The studies themselves are not free from overstatements, the uncritical use of some source materials, and dubious generalizations. At times, too, the compilation of complex details obscures the larger picture. In spite of these faults, the book as a whole is a useful contribution to its field, and will be an important source of information for the general reader."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:23 Mr '54 200w

MEYER, ROBERT EUGENE. Festivals Europe. 328p il $4 Washburn

394.2 Festivals—Europe 53-11375

Describes some 600 annual celebrations, musical and sports events in 21 European countries as to origin, where, when, and why. Photographs. Calendar. Index.

Booklist 50:351 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:184 My '54 20w

Reviewed by Leon Harpole

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 16 '54
40w

"Even though you are not heading for Europe in the foreseeable future, 'Festivals Europe' will brighten your bookshelf. You can dip into it practically anywhere and 'pull out a party.'" Kathleen Cannell

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 27 '54 370w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 2 '54
30w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p32 My 9 '54 30w

Reviewed by A. N. Chamberlain

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 17 '54
100w

MICHELFELDER, WILLIAM. Seed upon the wind. 320p $3.50 Bobbs

54-7226

Story of a doctor and a nurse both forced for different reasons, to leave the Catholic hospital in Florida where they had been working. Tho they become lovers and companions their personal problems are not resolved until the man's death.

"A Seed Upon the Wind is Catholic in subject matter and in much of its spirit. Its manner, a borrowed one, is nonetheless subtle and convincing. It is to be hoped that the author will soon come into his own manner, and that he will, without losing the sympathy of involvement with his characters, come to a less sentimental and more just evaluation which will find that not all Catholics are 'bullies' and all Protestants 'samaritans.'" Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:311 Jl '54 300w

"The March Hare believed in butter for the works of his watch, and Mr. Michelfelder believes in love, smeared wholesale in his novel, doubtless the best love, as the March Hare's was the best butter. Yet both seem surprised when the characters, like the watch, will not work." Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 60:227 Je 4 '54 1000w

"For a first novel—Mr. Michelfelder is a staff writer for 'The New York World-Telegram and Sun'—there is remarkably little wavering, though it must be granted that the scenes at the Methodist Hospital which befriends the forlorn couple ring less true than the Catholic milieu which dominates most of the book. This is a minor matter, however. The main point is that a new novelist of stature has suddenly appeared: one with all the essentials of the novelist's trade plus an insight which is very rare." Chad Walsh

MICHELFELDER, WILLIAM—Continued
 + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 11 '54 800w

"Seed Upon the Wind" is fictionally vivid enough to provide a world of room for serious thought on a controversial subject, whether or not the reader agrees with its conclusions." Henry Cavendish

+ N Y Times p13 My 30 '54 320w

"Mr. Michelfelder, a vigorously original writer who can be very witty when he wants to, has written an extremely interesting novel that almost rings true in the reading but sounds false in retrospect, because in spite of all the thought and sympathy that have gone into his story, Andrew Carew is still a poor, mewling, self-indulgent creature, not nearly good enough to stand up as a hero."

+ New Yorker 30:147 Ap 10 '54 200w

"The characters behave, even in the most trivial matters, with a wild desperateness which might easily strain credulity; but this book, reminding one of Djuna Barnes and the Kay Boyle of 'Monday Night,' compels the reader to believe it. Those religionists who think that to have given the roles in a spiritual drama to such neurotic monkeys is somehow blasphemous might do well to turn to the morality paintings of Hieronymous Bosch, or to the life of Bunyan, or even to the Bible itself." J. S.

+ Sat R 37:34 Je 5 '54 360w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 27 '54 100w

MICHENER, JAMES ALBERT. Sayonara. 243p $3.50 Random house

54-5953

The love story of an American Air Corps major and a beautiful Japanese girl. When Major Gruver sets up housekeeping with Hana-ogi there is consternation among the Americans, for Gruver is engaged to an American general's daughter. Contrary to the course of Madame Butterfly, in this instance it is the Japanese girl who says Sayonara (farewell) to the American.

Booklist 50:222 F 1 '54

"More full-bodied than The Bridges of Toko-ri, this present novel fails, nonetheless, to rise above the level of reporting; its people are types and its situations highly arbitrary." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 179:155 My '54 260w

"Sayonara" will be much talked about and, before long, much sung about, for like 'Tales of the South Pacific,' which became one of the great musical dramas of our day, 'Sayonara' is already being turned into song and story for the stage. By the very nature of its plot and its exotic background it will inevitably rival 'South Pacific.' 'Sayonara' is written with a sensitive feeling for beauty of materials and expressions and it has a quality rarely found in modern fiction—moral conviction." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 31 '54 600w

"Movie producers should vie for the rights to this novel. It is a well told tale with typical characters, a mildly exotic setting, and pathos that borders on tragedy. It is an entertaining work which gives a fleeting glimpse of a problem. The author has greater creative ability than he uses in this novel." Robert Conover

+ Christian Century 71:431 Ap 7 '54 350w
 Cleveland Open Shelf p16 My '54

"The author has a lot of interesting background on the lives of Americans in Japan, and he writes vividly and easily; as a matter of fact, easy is the word for this book, which appears to have been knocked out between drinks in the lovely Imperial Hotel cocktail lounge." William Pfaff

Commonweal 59:480 F 12 '53 550w

Kirkus 21:766 D 1 '53 280w

"The graphic love passages are not likely to offend the mature reader because they are described with delicacy and restraint. Highly recommended for public libraries." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 79:142 Ja 15 '54 90w

"James Michener has an admirable sympathy for alien cultures, and an established reputation for skillfully re-creating them. . . He artfully conveys a sense of the sensitiveness, the artistic quality of Japanese life. . . But because he has not spent a long enough time in Japan to know the particulars through which the general attitude toward life is expressed, he falls into errors which rob his creation of some of its effectiveness." Bradford Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 24 '54 750w

"In this novel Mr. Michener treats of a very real problem. He attempts to show the tragedies involved. In addition, he gives the sights, and sounds and feelings of Japan. Unfortunately, 'Sayonara' is far from being Michener at his best. One can only wish that the author had revised this script a few more times." Vern Sneider

N Y Times p4 Ja 24 '54 550w

"The moral of this dubious piece seems to be that if a writer finds himself unable to deal with real people in real situations, the safest thing to do is to put some figures into uniform and call them Americans, put some others into foreign dress and call them Japanese, and then mix them all up somewhere in Japan during the Korean war and call it a story."

— New Yorker 29:100 Ja 23 '54 240w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ja 29 '54 600w

"Michener's result, besides its valid subject matter, has all the qualities that should make a book (and a movie) a considerable popular success: uncomplicated characters, beautiful girls, and one double suicide. It does not rank with his earlier good books, however, and there are only a few flashes in it of the sympathetic observer and the fine literary reporter that Michener has proved himself to be." Frank Gibney

Sat R 37:11 F 6 '54 800w

"Mr. Michener has fallen in love with big chunks of Japan and its people and is feeling more deeply and truly for them than he ever felt for aircraft carriers or platoons during his long affair with the American armed forces. It is this which makes Sayonara his most serious and accomplished writing yet." John Metcalf

+ Spec p792 Je 25 '54 310w

"In Sayonara Michener mounts a soap opera on a soapbox."

— Time 63:114 Ja 25 '54 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p437 J1 9 '54 160w

Wis Lib Bul 50:73 Mr '54

MICOLEAU, TYLER. Story of Squaw valley; including basic principles of the ski technique; il. by the author. 95p $4.50 Barnes, A.S.

796.93 Squaw valley, California. Skis and ski running 53-12246

Outline history of a ski resort at Squaw Valley in the Sierras. Illustrated with many photographs and drawings. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 50:200 Ja 15 '54

"Chapters on skiing are excellent for beginners. Many fine photographs, and clever drawings by author." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:69 Ja 1 '54 40w

MIDDLETON, ARTHUR PIERCE. Tobacco coast; ed. for the Mariners' museum by George Carrington Mason. 482p 11 maps $5 Mariners' Museum, Newport News, Va.

975.5 Chesapeake bay. Maryland—Commerce. Virginia—Commerce

"A maritime history of Chesapeake bay in the colonial era." (Subtitle) Bibliography. Index.

"The time-honored method of 'letting the facts speak' has many merits, but it also has definite limitations. Preoccupation with gathering and recording facts rather than interpreting them has resulted here in a book that is rich but not easily digested. Many questions well worth asking are not raised at all, either explicitly or implicitly. But from another point of view these weaknesses turn into strength. The wealth of detail, gathered from an astonishing mass of manuscript sources in Virginia and Maryland, is both useful and suggestive. Surely the author was right to present the result of his researches and surely, also, he is too modest in his disclaimer of literary merit for his work." A. C. Land

+ — Am Hist R 59:641 Ap '54 400w

"Among the many interesting contributions, two stand out. One shows how the Chesapeake network of waterways made possible the tobacco industry: the delicate nature of the cured leaf precluded long hauls by land. The second explains how the Chesapeake region was riveted to Britain in trade by virtue of the convoy system that was employed during the Anglo-French wars." C. P. Nettles

+ Ann Am Acad 293:171 My '54 500w

"Spiced with the tang of salt spray and the aromatic smoke of tobacco, Mr. Middleton's history is a work of sound and thorough scholarship that will delight the reader interested in any one of a half dozen aspects of colonial American life." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Times p12 N 15 '53 450w

"From a variety of sources, to which he makes many citations, Mr. Middleton has gone far toward his objective of discussing 'every aspect of the maritime history of colonial Virginia and Maryland,' and he perhaps is too modest when he says that he claims no literary merit for his work." W. D. Gilliam

+ Sat R 37:47 Mr 20 '54 250w

"Dr. Middleton's apology for lack of literary polish represents unjustified modesty. His work is as sound as a seaworthy vessel."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:176 Je '54 200w

MIDDLETON, G. F. Build your house of earth; a manual of pisé and adobe construction. 119p il $4.50 Anglobooks

693 Pisé. Adobe

"A practical, fairly detailed book addressed primarily to home builders in the more arid parts of Australia. The descriptions and illustrations of construction details and construction operations are of potential interest to anyone anywhere who is contemplating the building of a house of rammed earth or of sun-dried bricks. Included is a description of a new type of form work designed by the author which simplifies the building of rammed-earth walls." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 50:272 Mr 15 '54

N Y New Tech Bks 38:82 N '53

MIERS, EARL SCHENCK (DAVID WILLIAM MEREDITH, pseud.) Kid who beat the Dodgers, and other sports stories; il. by Paul Galdone. 190p $2.50 World pub.

54-8171

Twelve action stories for boys of twelve to sixteen.

Bookmark 14:14 O '54 10w

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p50 N 14 '54 20w

"Simple all, but definitely healthy for the addicts."

+ Kirkus 22:364 Je 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by J. T. Marsh

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 12 '54 30w

"Although Mr. Miers' style is lively and his humor sometimes infectious, the reader finds it hard to identify himself with the characters, most of whom are slaves to the story plots." W. C. F.

N Y Times p38 N 21 '54 40w

Reviewed by D. A. Pitt

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 14 '54 40w

MIHANOVICH, CLEMENT SIMON, ed. Social theorists. 521p $6.50 Bruce pub.

301 Sociology

53-1238

"The social theories summarized and discussed in the text are intended primarily as introductions to the 'schools' and trends in social theory. An appendix of 'Who's Who in Social Theory' is designed to supplement the incomplete coverage of different phases of the history of sociology." (Am Soc R) Contents: Ancient social theories, by J. M. Carmody; St Thomas Aquinas, by M. E. Healy; Auguste Comte, by L. F. Cervantes; William Graham Sumner, by M. E. Healy; Lester Frank Ward, by R. F. Bellamy; Henry Thomas Buckle, by John Harrington; Gabriel Tarde, by J. H. Curtis; Émile Durkheim, by J. H. Curtis; Vilfredo Pareto, by John Harrington; Pitirim Alexandrovitch Sorokin, by A. S. Foley; Heinrich Pesch, S.J., by J. B. Schuyler; Leopold Von Wiese, by C. S. Mihanovich; Marxian social theory, by J. J. Burns; Catholic social theory, by J. J. Burns; The sociology of Catholics in America, by Donald Campion; The future of sociological theory, by G. J. Schnepf.

"Written ostensibly for students of Catholic institutions of higher learning by twelve contributors, this textbook is devoted to the analysis of selected social and sociological theorists. Unhappily, the choice of men and materials by Mihanovich has not conferred on Social Theorists the modicum of structural unity achieved in companion volumes by mere reliance on chronological arrangement. . . . The final chapter by Father Schnepf constitutes a highly suggestive effort to isolate the major problems facing sociology in the future." R. C. Hinkle

